Daily Worker Agents Must Come, and Other Live Wires Ought to

The Daily Worker business and editorial offices, to say nothing of the stock rooms are piled up from the floor to ceiling with papers, books, pamphlets—in fact there is no more room to move and the staff will pretty soon (if the weather allows) move up on the roof.. This will be necessary unless something is done and done quickly about getting on the job and selling this tremendous supply of Communist literature, latest editions and important new works never before printed in English.

The Chicago comrades realized this and also the fact that the sub campaign could be pushed a lot faster, and the circulation of the Daily increased, are having a "Literature Conference" tonight, Thursday, 7 p. m. at 19 So. Lincoln Street.

Every comrade taking seriously the matter of securing subs for the DAILY WORKER and selling Communist literature should make it his business to be at this meeting and take part in this important work.

Comrade Sam Hammersmark, the new city agent, will welcome any comrade who is interested and willing to do this work—come up to the meeting and you will be received with due appreciation. Y. W. L. members are especially urged to attend as this conference is held under the joint auspices of the W. P. and Y. W. L.—All W. P. and Y. W. L. branch agents must attend—other comrades should come along if they are interested.

Ambassadors See Crown Jewels.

MOSCOW, May 27.—The officials of the Soviet Union displayed the "crown" jewels formerly belonging to the czar, to foreign ministers and ambassadors, thus removing the belief abroad that the jewels had disappeared.

The estimated value of the collection viewed in the vaults by the diplomats is $50,000,000.

July 4, 1925

So July 4, the anniversary of the founding of the American government, is to be a test mobilization day. July 4 has been substituted for armistice day by President Coolidge as the time to turn the militarists loose for twenty-four hours and let them have their way with the populace.

Coolidge may be dumb in many ways, but no one can accuse him of not being in line with the war plans of his imperialist masters. British imperialism is the real rival of America in the world today and on July 4, the anniversary of the struggle for independence from Great Britain, all of the camouflage can be discarded and an orgy of patriotism indulged in with the hated "redcoats" as the target of 100 per cent American wrath.

This is a clever maneuver and the coming anniversary will be something more than a celebration of past victories—it will be a preparation for a new war for world domination in which our rulers hope, by sacrificing millions of workers, to arise as the unchallenged tyrants of the eastern and western hemispheres.

On this account it is all the more necessary that the class conscious workers to turn this ruling class holiday into a day of demonstration against imperialist war, to expose the murderous use of a revolutionary tradition to further the bloody aims of the ruling class.

Negro Baiting in Chicago

A Negro lecturer goes into a Chicago restaurant with two prominent women social workers. The proprietor refuses to serve him, four policemen are called and throw the Negro out, beat him up and arrest him. The Chicago Tribune gives the story first page space and treats it as a great joke—on the Negro.

The victim of racial prejudice happens to be a citizen of France, a college graduate and an editor of a Negro paper published in Paris. He is in this country to investigate the conditions under which the American Negroes live and by accident of birth he is a lenial descendant of the royal family of Dahomey.

There is no reason why any restaurant should object to his patronage except that he is black.

Incidents such as the above give the lie to the professions of friendship made for the Negroes by the capitalist press. Not only is such treatment of the Negroes made the subject of merriment, but it is directly encouraged in order that the white workers, kept in ignorance of their class interests by the rulers, may have a group, lower in the social scale than themselves, upon which to heap scorn and thereby forget the insults and hardships visited upon them by the rulers of their own color.

The recent outrage should be made the center of a protest in all the Negro sections of the city in which all whites who sincerely want racial hatreds wiped out should be asked to join. Mass meetings should be called, delegations sent to the city and state authorities and such a fuss kicked up that the Negro baiters and their agents will understand that there is a penalty attached to such brutal disregard of the right of Negroes to live as equals in the United States.

Dawes Plan Stabilization

The Dawes plan has brought temporary stabilization to western Europe and checked for a time the revolutionary struggle.

More than this it cannot do.

On this point we have the testimony of no less a personage than Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to America.

The heart of the Dawes plan is the revival of German industry. But this revival is meaningless if Germany cannot sell her industrial products abroad.

Germany owes France and Britain huge sums in reparations. They in turn owe the United States billions of dollars. Germany can pay Great Britain and France only by selling her commodities in their markets. They again can pay the United States only by selling their commodities in American markets.

The Dawes plan rests, therefore, upon the backs of the workers of all nations. It can work only by the American masses being reduced to a new low living standard just as in Germany and Great Britain it has resulted in a lowering of the living standards of the German and British workers. The American capitalists will demand that the American workers meet European competition. A tariff wall is no solution of the problem, in spite of the approval given it by Laurence Todd of the Federated Press in a recent article. If Europe cannot sell neither can she buy and tariff or no tariff, the breakdown of the European markets spells unemployment for the American workers.

The choice which the American workers have to make is the same as that the European workers must make:

Either a stern and militant struggle for a workers' and farmers' government with control of industry by shop councils and unions, or coolie wages, chronic joblessness and slow starvation.

Americanism in Haiti

A Haitian editor has been jailed for printing the story of an ancient Swedish king who was overthrown because of his tyranny. This was claimed by the armed forces of the American government now in possession of Haiti to be direct incitement to violence against them.

We hope it was and also wish to remark in this connection that when an editor has to dig up the sages of the Norsemen in an attempt to avoid prosecution it is pretty good evidence that the government he is attacking needs overthrowing.

More power to our Haitian comrades.

We do not understand the delay in Dayton, Tennessee, in burning at the stake young Scopes who tried to teach a milk-and-water brand of evolution in the so-called schools of that city. He has been indicted for a crime against god almighty and his Tennessee vicars and many a Negro has been tortured to death for less.

It is possible that the leniency extended to Scopes marks a tendency towards progress or is the delay due to the ravages of the hookworm and sleeping sickness locally?

The Third Soviet Congress of the Soviet Union

By MICHAEL KALININ.
President of the Union of Soviet Republics.

I.

DURING the first half of May the regular Soviet Congresses will meet: first the Russian (R. S. F. S. R.) and afterwards that of the Soviet Union.

The main question on the agenda of the Soviet Congress of the R. S. F. S. R. is the report of the People's Commisar for Health. It is the first time since the existence of the Soviet Republic that this question is on the agenda of the Soviet Congress.

I believe that the Congress will support the policy of the People's Commisar for Health, which consists in promoting as much as possibile the publis health in the villages. In spite of our relative poverty, the public service in the towns is more or less satisfactory-; in the village however, it is very much open to criticism. I believe that the Congress will point out the necessity of finding some means in order to enable a number of peasants to visit the sanatoriums in the health resorts. Many comrades will here make the objection that we are not even able to supply the peasants with the necessary quantity of castor oil—how then, can we talk of health resorts. It is true that in many cases the drugs and medicines are sold so dearly that they are almost unobtainable for the peasants. But it is the same case with the workers; nevertheless, the health insurance authorities find it useful to send sick workers to health resorts, and I believe that the trade unions, which determine the line of policy of the workers' health service, are acting rightly.

IT is clear that in this connection it will be only posible to provide accomodation for about two to three thousand peasants, but it is not a matter of indifference whether these 2000 to 3000 places are occupied by the privileged sections of the population, who are able to visit the health resorts almost every year, or by those peasants who are most in need of a stay at a convalescent home.

The question of the seed campaign will have an informative character at the Congress. It was necessary to place it on the agenda, because the unusual winter gave rise to some doubts among the population regarding the results of the autumn sowing. According to the declarations of the specialists, the present condition of the crops sown in the autumn is rather middling. An authorative declaration regarding the results of the autumn and spring sowing certainly would be of great importance.

In addition to the questions mentioned above there stand on the agenda certain constitutional questions in connection with the establishment of the Union of Soviet Republics, of which the R. S. F. S. R. (Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic) forms a constituent part.

II.

THE agenda of the III Soviet Congress of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, which will meet on the 8th of May, is fairly large.

The first question to be discussed will be the question of the inclusion of Turkmenistan and Usbekistan in the Soviet Union. This question, therefor,—contrary to the traditions of the Congress hitherto—constitutes the first item on the agenda, in order thereby to enable the people of these two republics to participate in the work of the Congress and, further, in order to emphasize the enormous importance of the fact that two Eastern Republics have freely joined our Union.

The second question is the report of the government, which will probably furnish occasion for a debate on the general policy of the government

The third question which will be discussed is the position of industry. This item was deleted from the agenda of the II Soviet Congress owing to the death of comrade Lenin. During the two years that have elapsed since the I Soviet Congress, our industry has made great headway. Two years ago the main problem for our industry consisted in keeping the factories employed. The general slogan of our industry at that time was "give orders!" To-day, our undertakings are receiving orders at a much quicker rate than we had anticipated. The time is not distant when our industry will not know what to do with all the numerous orders. Already to-day we see a change of roles between the People's Commissar for Traffic and the Supreme People's Economic Council. The People's Economic Council, which formerly almost had to beg for orders from the People's Commissar for Traffic, has now become an organ that executes the orders of the Commissar for Traffic as if they were the merest trifles.

And in the next few years we shall see the same thing happening along the whole industrial front. This development of industry brings to the forefront quite a number of extremely important problems with which our industry was quite unaquainted even a year ago. I will only mention, for example, the necessity of furnishing our industrial undertakings with new plant and machinery. It was obvious that so long as our industry had only to meet a minimum demand, it was able to carry on with the old technical equipment. At present, however, when the output of the undertakings in many places has reached a hundred per cent of the pre-war output, they cannot, of course, cope with the demand with the old worn out equipment.

THE fourth item on the agenda is the question of rendering assistance to agriculture. The congress will probably adopt a whole number of measures in order to improve the situation in agriculture. These measures will not be confined to measures for improving the soil, but measures will be adopted in the sphere of taxation, co-operative activity, the consolidation of agricultural credits, the encouraging of home industry, etc. A great number of these measures have already been introduced by the government, regarding which a report will be submitted and which will be discussed from all sides by the congress.

The question of the Soviet construction work constitutes the fifth item on the agenda. This question, which formerly had a purely organizatory character, has recently received a profound social and political import. In all probability instructions will be issued with regard to the duties of the higher officials, for the improvement of the Soviet apparatus and for bringing it into touch with the masses.

The sixth item is the Report of the People's Commissar for Finance. Finance constitutes today the blood vessels of industry. Nevertheless, I believe that the dicussion of this question at the III Soviet Congress will not bring anything new or unexpected. If anything new is decided upon this will be in the direction of lightening taxation, and in no way in imposing fresh burdens of taxation.

THE seventh item will be the Report on the Red Army. Formerly, these reports contained statements regarding the conditions on our fronts, which rendered them of very great interest. The Red Army is now leading a more or less peaceful life. During the past year the activity of the Red Army has consisted in developing and strengthening our powers of resistance against our enemies. In spite of our continual efforts for peace, and our desire that the time may soon come when armies will be superflous, the Soviet Union is at present compelled to follow attentively the development of the military power of the capitalist countries and to make its preparations accordingly.

Since the last report our Red Army has made very great progress in the sphere of organization, of discipline, and in learning the art of war. Of course, like other important branches in the life of our state, it needs a considerable supply of material means. There is no doubt that the Congress of the Soviet Union will support our Red Army with the whole of its authority; it will give expression to the love and gratitude of the workers, the peasants and of all honest citizens of the Soviet Republic towards the defenders of Soviet Russia.

Purcell's Visit Alarms the Bosses

Ralph Easley of the Civic Federation, the organization of labor officials and capitalists, in which the spiritual guidance of the American labor movement is vested, has sounded the war cry against world trade union unity.

The occasion for the call to fakerdom and its bosses to be on its guard is the coming visit of A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, to the United States. He has been elected as a fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention by the British Trade Union Congress, the most powerful body of organized workers in the world outside of Soviet Russia, and there is a great fluttering in the dovecotes of American fakerdom in consequence.

Why?

Because Purcell was one of the British trade union delegation to Russia, is a member of the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Committee and one of the editors of a magazine devoted to the drive for unity among the organized workers of the world.

A special meeting of the Civic Federation will be called to devise means of gagging Purcell or of keeping him out of the country if he refuses to keep his mouth shut or say only the things the labor agents of capitalism want him to say. The plan cannot be carried out secretly due to the prominence of Purcell in the labor world and there are first class prospects of the American trade unionists getting a close-up view of panicky labor fakers scurrying for cover when the inevitable exposure of their lies about Soviet Russia, the Russian labor movement and the drive for world trade union unity begins.

They have underestimated the strength of the desire for world solidarity of the workers and they are going to be shown up as the traitors they are. This will not happen overnight, but the fear of the consequence of Purcell's visit marks the beginning of a process of enlightment in the ranks of American labor that will ultimately dethrone the Greens, Wolls, Lewises and other exponents of the gentle art of leading workers into the camp of their enemies.

Stopping the Murder of Miners

Day before yesterday we published a story from Reliance, Wyoming, telling of the fight of the coal miners there for enforcement of safety provisions and the conspiracy existing between the companies and the state inspectors.

Yesterday we carried a story of a gas blast in a Pennsylvania mine that took the lives of five miners, a blast that was the inevitable result either of poor inspection or of neglect to report the presence of gas. It is the second serious accident in this district within a week.

It seems to us that the union officialdom does not use accidents of this kind to put the coal barons on the defensive in the way they could. There is too much of a tendency to accept these horrors as a necessary part of the risks that miners must take and dislike of using them for great publicity campaigns which would arouse both union and non-union miners and form the basis for mine committees that would undertake the most rigid inspection and enforce safety regulations to the hilt.

The reason for this is obvious. The officials fear rank and file committees, especially responsible committees like these would be, just about as much as the operators do.

It is ridiculous to say that the long death roll in American coal mines cannot be cut down, but it is just as ridiculous to say that it can be reduced substantially by co-operation with the coal mine owners. Militant rank and file committees with a union that backs them up uncompromisingly is the only way the murder of miners for profit can be stopped.

Settlements That Settle Nothing

The proposed agreement between France and Spain on one side and the Riffs on the other, looking toward a settlement of the Moroccan war, has in its provision something far more dangerous to the working class of Europe than the war itself. This is a widening of the breach between France and England by the project for a French controlled railway thru Spain to the Mediterranean that brings French Africa into Europe so far as distance is concerned and which is the basis of the proposed agreement.

The project, as it affects Great Britain, is exactly the same as the Berlin-Bagdad railway scheme which sowed the seeds of the world war. Great Britain can no more afford to have France tap her great West African reservoir by a railway than she could afford to have Germany secure a similar short rail route to the Near East.

Settlements of colonial wars by new alliances in these days of high imperialist enterprise can only increase the tension between the great powers just as will this settlement of the Moroccan war.

Educational Possibilities Among Miners.

To the DAILY WORKER:—The miners of the Pittsburgh, Kansas, districts like the miners of the other districts are unemployed most of the time. This forces many into the business of bootlegging, making this social evil a wide-spread menace to the intergrity of the workers. These workers must live and other industries can not absorb them so they revert to this natural result of capitalism.

Working class literature has not penetrated this district. The unions have neglected to take care of this forced idleness for use as education as the other nations do in the way of establishing reading rooms with magazines and books suitable for these miners.

The distribution and sale of the DAILY WORKER, that now leads, the contest being over the top in subs as well as the sale of books, shows the desire by these miners to read working class literature and shows the neglected possibilities of trade unions in this country.

Two Brothers Victims of Bloody Exploitation

To the DAILY WORKER:—In the bloody exploitation of the working class the iron mine field of northern Minnesota is a crossless cemetery of workers bodies. The slogan "Safety First" is a veil behind which the steel lords unmercifully suck the exhausted workers' blood. The death of miners is a usual occurrance, and the capitalist press usually describe it as due to some negligence on the part of the workers.

The two miners, Nick Yiliock, 36, and his brother George, 28, were killed yesterday morning at Stevenson mine, four miles west of Hibbing. The walls fell in while they were working in a small room on the 100 foot level.

Both of the miners resided at the St. Louis location, near Keewatin. Nick is survived by his wife and four children, left at the mercy of the capitalists.

Ziegfeld Follies Show Up American Follies

By ESTHER LOWELL, Fed. Press.

"THANK you, bankers," Will Rogers retorts in the Ziegfeld Follies when he gets a hand for Andrew Mellon in his proopsed cabinet. Rogers claims that Mellon is the first secretary of the treasury we've had who was used to handling money before he took office. "Why, when Mellon comes from one of his own banks into treasury," says Will, "he's going slumming."

Ziegfeld's famous Follies glorifies the American girl as advertised but slips in an assortment of slaps at some other American institutions in comic supplement style. Will Rogers isn't the only dose of social satire in the show. But Will is just himself and wields a wicked rope and swings a tart tongue. For instance he confidentially announces that Coolidge talked to him like an insurance agent and that the real reason the president prefers his iron horse is OATS. Coolidge says the mechanical horse gives him more exercise but Will remarks: Give Cal a real horse that won't eat and he'll take him every time!

Rogers suggests that if Hindenburg disgraces the Kaiser by making him vice-president of Germany, when they want another war let Dawes and Bill fight it out—with pipe and sword. Maybe Dawes can do better with his European plan than with his American plan, Will says,—American plan of reforming the senate. Rogers thinks senate could walk right out on water without sinking. And the cowboy that anyone who could change the philosopher, highest-paid-ad-writer, tells you that it isn't the Volstead agents who are behind this orgy of prohibition padlocking but the Yale lock people!

The Senator as presented by Tom Lewis might by any distinguished political speaker getting rid of surplus hot air. Lewis runs along absurdly stringing connecting phrases and fragments of sentences. You get the idea that he's trying to say something and always suppressing it because he realizes at the instant that it isn't the thing to say aloud. The show is a contribution to American life but priced out of reach of most workers. It is a beautiful production, with a matchless display of legs, and is not so babbity as the usual audience who sees it.

FRE[illegible] COMMUNISTS DEMAND [illegible]ATION OF MOROCCO; SING [illegible]RNATIONAL' IN CHAMBER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, [illegible]ance, May 28.—The twenty-nine Communist deputies demanded in the French chamber that the Painleve government immediately make peace with Abd-el-Krim, the Riffian leader, evacuate Morocco, and end the imperialistic invasion of North Africa.

Deputy Doriot, the Communist leader, in his speech to the chamber, exposed the purpose of the war as an imperialistic move of the Spanish-French North African company, which forced the war in order to control the Moroccan mines, and exploit the natives of that country.

Deputy Doriot's speech was followed by the singing of "The International," which so enraged ex-Premier Herriot, president of the chamber, that he abruptly adjourned the session. Debate on the Moroccan invasion will be continued.

Socialists Refuse to Oppose the War.

The socialist (reformist) bloc, confined its remarks to criticism of the conduct of the war, and refused to oppose the Morrocan invasion.

"The socialists do not demand the evacuation of Morocco," admitted the socialist leader, Pierre Renaudel. He merely declared that the war should be conducted along "defensive lines" and the number of casualties should be published. He said that troops should be kept in France for a possible war with Germany.

Deputy Doriot read a letter from a French soldier in Morocco, which showed that many French soldiers there are bitterly opposed to the attack on the natives. The soldier told how the army officers prohibited the singing of "The International," in the camps, and otherwise restricted and censored the soldiers.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

ONE of the favorite arguments used by the socialists in an effort to discredit the effect of the report made by British trade union leaders on present conditions in Russia, is that the Soviet officials had arranged the tour beforehand, even going to the extreme of building nice, clean model villages to fool the easily duped Britons. This yarn had a historical basis. It appears that such tours were arranged for the Empress Catherine of Russia when she took a notion to go forth and look at where her subjects lived.

OF course, the Soviet officials did nothing of the kind. The British delegates went where they wanted to go and traveling accommodation was provided for them on short notices. But it happens that in England, when the king and queen take a look around their country, things are arranged so that offensive sights do not obtrude on the royal optics. For example. An electrical power station was opened near London a few days ago. The job was done by a private concern. The king and queen opened the station.

IN order to have things look tidy for the royal pair, one hundred workers were laid off so that no new work would be started until after the two [illegible] The editor of the London Daily Herald tells of going down a coal pit with the king on another occasion. Instead of seeing inky black walls and plenty of dust, everything was spick and span. The walls were beautifully whitewashed. The king, no doubt, wondered why coal miners should make so much trouble about wages and working conditions, while enjoying the privilege of working amid such pleasant surroundings.

THE editor of the Daily Herald has as much confidence in the good intentions of the king as Dr. Norman Thomas has in Sir Stanley Baldwin. The Daily Herald editor believes, if the king knew how his subjects are living, he would not allow things to remain as they are. To quote from the Herald's defense of royalty: "They do not understand, they are hood winked, as royalty always has been hood winked, by those whose interest it is to keep things as they are." The king might start a revolution if he only had the facts. So would Balfour, Churchill and Baldwin. So would Rockefeller, Morgan and Coolidge.

TO TRY POLICE KILLER OF RED AT W. FRANKFORT

Clubbed Y. W. L. Member to Death in Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BENTON, Ill., May 28.—According to reports given in a local newspaper, the trial for the brutal murder of our comrade, Boris Popovsky, at West Frankfort, Ill., last July is coming up some time in June in the circuit court of that city. The deceased comrade was arrested on a fake charge of speeding, brought to court, and there murdered in the presence of a presiding judge on July 10, 1924, by a policeman who is still on the police force. He clubbed Popovsky to death with the butt of his revolver.

Realizing that this murder was not done as skillfully as were previous murders of hundreds of active workers in this country and fearing that this, if discussed openly, will cause a great unrest among all intellectual workers, they have been silencing the case for almost a year. It will be easy for anyone to detect at this trial the corruptness used in all capitalistic courts of "justice." Bribery and threats of all sorts will be inevitable.

BRITISH AND FRENCH PATCH UP DIFFERENCES ON NOTE TO GERMANY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, May 28.—The French foreign office announced today that the British and French government had reached full agreement on the reply to be made by the ambassador's council to Germany on the subject of disarmament defaults by Germany.

Allied troops will march out of the Cologne district of Germany "well before September" if Germany satisfied "all demands within a reasonable period," the British foreign office onnounced.

Great Britain and France, the foreign office said, "have reached an agreement on the text of the disarmament note to Germany." The ambassadors' council, meeting Friday and Saturday in Paris will O. K. the draft, which will be sent to Berlin immediately.

'B. & O.' BILL CALLS LAWYER TO AID HIM

Election Steal in the I. A. of M. Brewing

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28.—That "B. & O." bill Johnston is hard pressed to steal the election in the International Association of Machinists from J. F. Anderson, his centrist opponent who was conditionally but effectively supported by the left wing, is seen in the call to Washington headquarters of Frank Mulholland of Toledo, general counsel of the I. A. M.

Mulholland has come to Washington by invitation of the election board to give them legal advice as to which provisions of the union constitution and by-laws shall be rigidly enforced and which shall not be enforced in the counting of the ballots.

Bill Hollers For a Lawyer.

It appears that Johnston is in such a desperate situation for votes that he is compelled to call in a lawyer to claim the most ridiculous technicalities as excuse for throwing out votes for Anderson.

Among these provisions items of sections 12 and 13 of article 2, I. A. M. constitution, the first providing that ballots must be marked in ink or indelible pencil and the second that the ballots, after being tabulated on tally sheets by local lodges, shall be sent within 72 hours by registered mail to the general secretary-treasurer and registered mail receipt slips held by the local for at least sixty days.

In Desperate Straits.

It is evident that Johnston is being forced to use methods he never had to use before to hold on to his job. To avail himself of such technicalities in order to throw out opposition votes is not at all above him, even tho he disfrancise half the membership thru no fault of theirs, and in some cases, thru deliberate action of his local gang who purposely held up the ballots or otherwise mishandled them, in order to throw them out because they were cast against Johnston.

Left wing members point out the injustice of such disfranchisement and the ridiculous position of a labor leader who depends counting out his opponent on whether a letter is registered or not or has the stamp in the right hand or left hand corner. As the crucial nature of the election shows that Johnston is really defeated, the left wing will insist that no election stealing will be permitted.

LEVIN MACHINE FAILED TO JAIL DAVID FOSTER

Jury Brings Verdict of Acquittal

The Hillman-Levin machine of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in alliance with state attorney Crowe's office, yesterday failed for the second time in its attempt to railroad to prison, David Foster, member of the Workers (Communist) Party on a trumped-up charge of "assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill."

The jury, a majority of whom were workers, acquitted Foster after listening to the testimony of Harry Novak, shop chairman in one of the Amalgamated shops, other well-known sluggers and detective Freckel, who took the stand against Foster at the request of the Amalgamated officials.

Prominent in the court room during the trial were the notorious business agents and sluggers, Charley Weinstein and Sol Kramer.

Assaulted By Novak

The trial resulted from the distribution of a leaflet protesting against the illegal expulsion of Local 5 New York from the joint board, by Hillman and company some time ago. Foster with others was out distributing the leaflets as the Amalgamated members were going to work. While doing this he was set upon by Novak and other bruisers and beaten. But instead of prosecuting Novak the states attorney's office held Foster on a charge that provides a penalty of one year in prison and in addition a fine of 1,000.

The first jury disagreed and it was then reliably reported that the prosecution wanted to drop the case for lack of evidence but the Amalgamated officialdom are reported to have told Crowe's office that "they wanted to make an example of Foster and send him away for a year." That they have

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE FRAMES UNION LEADERS

Fitzgerald and Collins Jailed ni Detroit

By EDGAR OWENS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., May 28.—William B. Fitzgerald, vice-president Street Railway Union and W. P. Collins of Yonkers, New York, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor now in charge of the organization drive of the Detroit Federation of Labor, were arraigned in the federal court in Detroit this morning on a charge of conspiracy to dynamite the high speed train on the International Railroad near Buffalo, August 17, 1922.

The specific charge is violating the anti-trust law.

The indictments were handed down by federal grand jury in Rochester, New York, early this month.

Department of justice officials were prepared to make arrests last night at an organization meeting in the Detroit federation headquarters, but arranged for their voluntary surrender this morning. They are held under five thousand dollars bail. The hearing on extradition to Rochester will be held next Thursday.

30 Hurt in Wreck at High Spot on New York Elevated

NEW YORK, May 28.—More than thirty persons were reported injured today in a rear collision between two north bound trains on the elevated structure of the interborough line at 177th street. The scene of the crash is one of the highest points along the "L."

Fourteen injured were removed to hospitals, but there were no fatalities, so far as could be ascertained, altho some of the injured were in serious condition and their injuries may prove fatal.

It was necessary for the firemen to erect scaling ladders against the sides of the "L" to bring down some of the passengers trapped in two telescoped cars.

CALL MERRICK FOR 'SEDITION' TRIAL IN PENNA.

First of Ten Workers to Face Danger

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 28.— The first of ten defendants in the Pittsburgh "sedition" cases, Fred Merrick, has been called to appear for trial on June 15. This marks the re-opening of a case that has been hanging fire for two years and that had its beginning in one of those famous "red raids," this particular raid occurring several days prior to May Day, 1923.

The whole eastern labor movement was revolted by the farcical yet brutal manner in which this "raid" was conducted. The public mind had been prepared by lurid tales of coming bomb explosions and insurrections. Two days before May 1, 1923, the sleuths of Attorney General Daugherty made a dramatic descent upon the Workers Party headquarters and on the homes of members. Over twenty arrests were made in the dead of night in different parts of the city. And not one with a warrant.

The terrible May Day plot had been thwarted. All the prisoners were held from eight to twelve days in default of exorbitant bail. Finally, all but ten were released and these were charged with violating Pennsylvania's famous "sedition act."

Convict for Doctrine.

Under the application of this act scores of workers have been arrested and imprisoned; one for having Marxian literature in his possession, another for being caught with a copy of a legally published program of a Communist Party, others for still more absurd and unsubstantial charges.

In no instance is an overt act of any kind charged against the defendant. He is always convicted of advocating or reading something that advocated, or belonging to a political party that advocated some "doctrine" —nothing more.

Altho these particular cases are two years old and the district attorney in Pittsburgh seems to have shown a disposition to drop them, the usual "pressure" has been brought to bear and the persecution is on again.

Pittsburgh is famous for this sort of thing. Western Pennsylvania is the private property of the steel and coal combines. It has been a traditional battle ground between the highly exploited workers of mine and smelter and the United States Steel Corporation, the greatest scab industry in the world. One has only to remember Homestead, the great steel strike of 1919 and the mine strike of 1922.

Merrick and the other defendants in this case have distinguished them-

LOSE HOPE FOR 61 COAL MINERS AS EIGHT MANGLED BODIES ARE FOUND IN WRECKED N. C. SHAFT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SANFORD, N. C., May 28.—The coal mine disaster here, it is now felt has resulted in the fatal trapping of sixty-one miners. Eight bodies have been recovered.

Two additional bodies, unidentified by the rescue party, have been seen about four hundred feet from the mine shaft. A careful check at the company's office indicates that there are still 51 miners still entombed.

Despair settled down on the families, relatives and sweethearts of the Tar Heel coal miners as the day advanced without uncovering the slightest hope that those traped far below the surface of the ground by three terrific explosions, would be rescued alive.

Families In Despair

Where yesterday hysterical scenes were enacted about the shaft of the oldest coal mine in North Carolina a shaft which has been worked intermittently since before the civil war, agony prevailed today.

Banked behind four strand rope barriers, wives, mothers, fathers, wondering children and tremulous sweethearts waited. Some, too weak to stand after the terrible all-night vigil in that tiny clearing in the low, rolling sand hill country, sat on the ground, or a box or a three stump.

Tears Answered By Long Silence

Patients. mostly elderly mothers and wives, filled the tiny hospital tent, prostrated with the awfulness of the disaster, which had struck without warning among a people not injured to mine tragedies as in the great mining communities of the country. Red cross and hospital nurses hurriedly sent here, presided calmly over the cots.

Those who still retained strength enough to weep, wailed softly and

LABOR REPORTER TELLS STORY OF IRISH FAMINE

Describes Region as Land of Despair

Is there a famine in Ireland? The publicity department of the Irish Free State government says there is not, despite the fact that the Free State government was compelled to appropriate a large sum of money for relief prior to the recent elections. This was a pure election dodge. As soon as the votes were counted the Free State government stopped its relief activities and threatened with punishment newspaper editors who would give the famine situation any publicity.

But while the capitalist press in Ireland, England and America have ignored the sufferings of the workers and peasants of the west coast of Ireland, the labor press in Great Britain has sent special correspondents into the famine region to bring the news direct to the working class of Great Britain.

The following story is taken from the London Daily Herald, official or-

RED VICTIM OF ZANKOV TERROR DIED BRAVELY

Soviet Organ Condemns Fascist Murderers

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 28—The Communist Marko Friedmann, one of the three workers who was publicly hanged by the Bulgarian white terror, was perfectly right in acting as the accuser of the Zankov government, says the leading story in Pravda, official organ of the Soviet Union. Friedmann declared at the military "trial," that the Zankov fascist government itself was responsible for the killing of 160 persons in the Sveti Kral cathedral bombing, as it had incited the workers to acts of individual terror against the wholesale murders instituted by the Zankov regime.

The Pravda exposes the part played by the Bulgarian socialists in the public hangings, the social-democratic press having formed a united front with the hangmen of the workers and peasants.

Communist Died Bravely.

Friedmann met his death bravely, dispatches from Sofia state. Two minutes before the noose was placed around his neck Friedmann smiled bravely, denied guilt in the cathedral bombing, and declared, "I die as a Communist." Friedmann was hanged while thousands of soldiers and workers packing the public square looked on. When priests stepped forward to talk to him Friedmann waved them aside. The others hanged were Gheorglin Koev and Petor Zadgorsky.

Forgeries of White Guards.

Today's leader in the "Pravda" declares, "The hangmen of Sofia have instituted a regular Bartholomew's night; they have murdered 2,000 workers and peasants, and have done everything possible, in order to prove by their sentence that the expulsion in the Sofian cathedral had ostensibly been organized by Moscow. By this means they hoped to justify the brutal Tzankov regime, as well as their demand that the entente permit them to mobilize an extra 100,000 cutthoats. The attorney-general, however, did not dare in his bill of in-

JAPS SEND CRUISERS AGAINST THE CHINESE WORKERS HOLDING JAPANESE MILLS AT TSINGTAO

TOKIO, May 28.—Two cruisers were dispatched today to Tsingtao to protect the Papanese colony there, claimed to be endangered by a strike of Chinese workers in Japanese mills. According to the navy department, it is not expected to land a naval force. Chinese strikers are reported to be still holding the seized Japanese mills.

A RED WEEK OF PARTY BUILDING - - -

By C. E. Ruthenberg,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party

CAN twenty-five thousand Workers Party members organize themselves so that in a week's time they can secure five thousand new subscribers for the DAILY WORKER?

The answer of Communists to such a question should be, "Not only can they secure five thousand subscriber but they ought to secure twenty-five thousand subscribers."

But can they?

That is the question which the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has put up to the members of the party in setting aside the week from June 15th to 21st as a "Red Week of Party Building," during which the party members are asked to secure five thousand new readers for the DAILY WORKER at a special subscription rate of $1 for two months.

• • • •

The DAILY WORKER—Party Builder.

THE DAILY WORKER is one of our most powerful weapons in building the Workers Party. The readers of the DAILY WORKER are reached every day with a Communist interpretation of news events and with the story of the class struggle. There is no more effective medium to open the eyes of the exploited workers to the truth about the capitalist social system than to daily have the capitalist world pictured to them in the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

Our party has not made effective use of this powerful weapon thus far. We have the daily at a great sacrifice and with great executive of energy. We are producing our paper daily with interpretations of capitalist society and the daily news of the workers' struggles.

We have built this powerful weapon. We are maintaining this powerful weapon, but we are neglecting the most essential activity to secure the advantages which this weapon gives us.

We Must Increase Our Circulation.

OUR powerful weapon, the DAILY WORKER is not effective and is not used as it ought to be so long as the number of readers is limited to part of our party membership and a narrow circle of sympathizers. We must have, not only 15,000 readers as at present, but 50,000 and even later 100,000.

That is one of the most important jobs before our party. We must take full advantage and make full use of the powerful weapon for building the Communist Party which we have in the DAILY WORKER, thru enabling the DAILY WORKER to reach the masses of workers and to influence them thru its picture of the capitalist world and enlighten them until they become Communists.

The First Mobilization.

THE first mobilization of the party to reach the goal of making the greatest use of the DAILY WORKER will be in the "Red Week of Party Building" from June 15th to June 21st. During this week, the work of securing subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER must be taken up in earnest by every unit of the party and by every member of the party.

A special appeal and instructions has been sent to every party branch. A special committee must be set up in each branch to direct the work of securing subscriptions during this "Red Week of Party Building."

The goal of the week's work has been set at five thousand new subscribers. That is a very easy goal indeed. Think of it! We have 25,000 members in the organization at the present time. All that is asked by the Central Executive Committee during this "Red Week of Party Building" is that at least 5,000 of these party members each secure on reader for the DAILY WORKER.

If the party organization is really mobilized as a Communist Party organization should be able to mobilize itself, we should secure, during the "Red Week of Party Building" 25,000 to 50,000 readers for the DAILY WORKER in place of the 5,000 which has been set as the aim during this mobilization.

Each party branch has been instructed to assess itself the number of subscribers it will secure during the "Red Week of Party Building." The quota taken up by the various branches will be published in the DAILY WORKER as the branches report.

Comrades of the party, here is the opportunity for constructive work in building our party, strengthening it organizationally, and widening its influence among the masses in this country.

IF we add five thousand new subscribers during this "Red Week of Party Building," and that should be easy, we can then set a greater goal for the next mobilization and build the DAILY WORKER into the mighty weapon it should be for the upbuilding of the Communist movement in the United States. No branch must be missing in the list of those assessing themselves to secure their share of subscribers during the "Red Week of Party Building." No member must neglect his part in securing the quota of his branch.

Comrades, let us show that our party can carry thru an organized, systematic campaign and mobilize its strength for the upbuilding of the DAILY WORKER.

Let us make the "Red Week of Party Building" the beginning of a new stage in the work of our party to build a powerful Comunist Party in the United States.

LEVIN MACHINE FAILED TO JAIL DAVID FOSTER

not succeeded is not their fault.

Jury Disgusted

The jury was plainly disgusted with the crude attempts of Novak to secure a conviction. In the first trial, there were only three holes on the coat, thru which Foster was supposed to have driven his deadly pen knife. The coat belonged to Novak. The peculiar thing about those cuts was however, that they went thru the lining without leaving a mark, yet penetrated a note book inside the lining! Counsel for the defense, in the first trial made three more holes in the coat to show the jury that knives don't work this way since the age of miracles was passed. But lo and behold, when Novak appeared in the role of chief prosecutor against Foster yesterday, the latter was accused of putting six holes in his coat.

Novak said that Foster tried to stab him. His fellow sluggers gave similar testimony. A girl witness for the officialdom said that she did not see the fight at all.

Foster Slugged Twice

Witnesses for the defense showed that the charge was a frame-up. When Foster was assaulted by the sluggers he made no resistance, knowing it would be hopeless. Foster was slugged twice by Novak declared the witnesses.

The jury was composed of: two printers; one milkman; one railshop cleark: one bricklayer and other workers.

The leaflet which Foster was distributing was introduced and the Amalgamated representatives working with the state insisted that it be read, in order to prejudice the court and the jury against Foster. They also emphasised that Foster was connected with the DAILY WORKER. Witnesses for the defense were asked where they worked and when one of them said: "The International Red Aid," the prosecutor said: "Ha! Has that organisation a branch in Leningrad?"

Charges Dropped

The charge of disorderly conduct against Valeria Meltz was dismissed as was a similar charge against Foster.

Amalgamated members who attended the trial contrasted the united front of the Amalgamated officials with State Attorney Crowe's office and the events of only a few years ago when the offices of the Amalgamated officials were raided, their books confiscated by the same states' attorney. This proves better than anything else how the Hillman-Levin machine has traveled to the right and has improved on the system of the most reactionary of the A. F. of L. bureucrats. Most of the latter would hesitate to testify against a trade unionist on the witness stand or turn him over for prosecution to the employers attorney.

KLUXER JAILED FOR ATTACK AND MURDER OF GIRL, ASKS BAIL

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., May 28.—The expected motion of D. C. Stephenson, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry, charged with the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, following an attack on her by Stephenson to be released on bond was filed this afternoon with Judge Fred E. Hines of the Hamilton court who set June 11 for the hearing.

French Communists Fight Riff War

The debate arose on the recommendation of the government that a credit of 30 million francs ($1,500,000) be voted to pursue the Moroccan war.

The Communist deputy, Doriot, showed that Abd-el-Krim was anxious to negotiate peace, the he had on several occasion made offers of negotiations to Marshal Lyautey, which were abruptly refused. "Abd-el-Krim's difference with France was over the limitation of the frontiers," Doriot said, "His statement demanded an answer, but under a stupid judicial pretext, Marshal Lyautey refused to reply."

The debate brought out that there are at least 65,000 French troops in Morocco, costing 340,000,000 francs ($17,000,000).

The Communists called out "Down with imperialistic war!" during Painleve's speech advocating a continued war on the Moroccans.

No change was reported in the military situation along the Ouerglia river and fighting continues.

R. R. Financed by Wall Street.

One of the main points in the agreement reached between de Rivera and Malvy in behalf of the Spanish and French governments, it is learned in government circles, is the construction of a direct railway between Hendaye, on the French frontier, to Madrid and Algeciras on the Straits of Gibraltar. This is being financed by a group of American bankers.

The proposed line will cut the time between France and Africa in half, and is expected to be made a preliminary to a close "defensive alliance" with Spain, permitting French native troops in Morocco, Algeria and Senegal to be transported across Spain, to France and the Rhine in case of military action against the Germans.

At the same time the French trans-Sahara railway from Colombechar to Timbuctu will be completed, giving France an all rail route into the heart of Africa, and tapping. France's 10 million potential native troops.

Say 400 Were Killed.

PARIS, May 28. — Four hundred French soldiers have been killed, thirty are missing and 1,100 have been wounded since the start of the campaign against the Riffs in French Morocco.

These first official figures of the French losses were anounced to the chamber of deputies by Premier Painleve today. Many of the deputies declared that the casualty figures are much too low.

Doriot Demands End of War.

This afternoon, in another speech, Deputy Jacques Doriot insisted that the Riffians were justified in fighting against the French. He declared that the Riffians were fighting for self preservation, and demanded that the French troops in Morocco defy their officers and conclude a peace with Abd-el-Krim.

Premier Herriot on behalf of the Painleve government, which is waging the imperialistic invasion, moved a censure of Herriot, and it was carried, amid uproar. While the vote was being taken, the 29 Communist deputies rose and sang the International. The chamber was then adjourned amid scenes of wild confusion.

The government deputies privately expressed the fear that the British government would bring pressure to bear to keep French out of Morocco.

brokenly into sodden hankerchiefs. Now and then a hysterical shriek and storm of sobbing shook the hearts of strong men grouped about the hole in the ground, as some grief stricken woman realised anew the significance of the long silence which oppresses all those above the ground.

Loses Two Sons

"God wont take all my children, surely he won't take them all," cried one old man, a miner himself for nearly two score years.

Two sons, his only two, and the husband of his only daughter are down in the hole, 2,700 feet, may be 3,000 from the entry.

"My god, do something. Why don't they do something?" shrieks a woman this time a young girl, not out of her teens, yet with two tiny tots clinging fearfully to her skirt.

But nothing can be done. Rescue gangs are working in two hour shifts, coming up black and exhausted at the end of each turn below, striving feverishly to penetrate the tons of coal, slate and jumbled timber which block the main slope, back at 1,200 feet, the farthest point yet reached.

Gas Fumes Fill Shaft

Above ground, the eye witness is struck with the appalling appearance of helplessness. There is only one thing to do—wait. Nature is quiet. The wind is blowing softly thru the pines which clothe the southern hills. The narrow mouth of the mine, a scant twenty feet each way, is silent. No smoke comes forth now, no sound, only a strong odor of foul gas fumes from the explosion.

selves in the long struggle that has been waged to unionize western Pennsylvania—a struggle that is still far from successful. This is the reason why the attempt is being made to railroad them for "sedition."

L. D. C. Fights.

The Labor Defense Council has undertaken to fight for these men. Counsel Rody Marshall of Pittsburgh, has been retained and the legal battle will soon be on. Large sums are needed to carry on a case of this kind. The workers of the country are called upon to help the fight for free speech and the right to organize in "cossack ruled" western Pennsylvania.

Thousands Needed!

A check for one thousand dollars was received here yesterday from the Labor Defense Council, national headquarters in Chicago, to meet the first costs. Five thousand dollars will be needed for the trial at the offset. Send all contributions and make checks payable to George Maurer, secretary, Labor Defense Council, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

MINERS CHOOSE JAIL RATHER THAN PAY INJUNCTION FINES

FAIRMOUNT, W. Va., May 28.—Seventy-three of the 116 striking miners convicted in criminal court here of picketing scab mines in violation of an injunction, were sent back to the Marion county jail today. They refused to pay $10 fine and $3 court cost for contempt of court, preferring to serve 10 days in jail, the alternative offered by the court if they would not pay.

These miners were arrested three weeks ago in Grant Town where they had established a solid picket line around the mine of the New England Fuel and Transportation company.

GOVERNMENT TO SELL HUGE OCEAN LINERS TO SHIPPING TRUST

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Negotiations are progressing at the shipping board for the sale of the Leviathan, formerly the "Vaterland," the German boat seized during the war, and five other trans-Atlantic passenger steamers, to private interests, it was learned today.

The vessels are now operated for the board by the United States lines.

Two New York shipping lines, the United American, a Harriman company, and Moore & McCormack, are "considering the purchase."

Other ships mentioned in the transaction are the George Washington, the Republic, the America, the President Harding and the President Roosevelt. All are now in trans-Atlantic trade under contracts let by the shipping board, to the United States lines.

T. U. E. L. DRAWS LARGE GROUP TO LOCAL MEETING

U. S. Mining and British Minority Discussed

By IDA DAILES.

Chicago's regular monthly Trade Union Educational League meeting held at Northwest Hall on Wednesday was the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of its kind held in many months. Besides the usual reports of industrial groups, there was a talk on the situation among the miners by Alex Reid, and one on the British minority movement by William Z. Foster.

Alex Reid, the Miner.

Alex Reid, national secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, is eminently fit to lead the progressive miners of this country. He was born in Braceville, Grundy county, Ill., and his forebears were also miners. Reid has worked as a miner for twenty-nine years and for the last ten years has held various offices in district organisations, most in Illinois. He has traveled over most of the United States and part of Canada and is personally acquainted with the conditions in all the various districts of the United Mine Workers of America, as well as in the unorganized field.

Describes Mining Conditions.

Reid gave a sketch of the conditions among the miners at the present time, stating that it is doubtful whether these have ever been worse in regrads to unemployment, hours of labor, working conditions and earnings. He showed the decline of the industry since the war, the tremendous overdevelopment of the industry, the drift of coal production from the union to the non-union fields. Also he described the decline of the union, the establishment of company unions and the consequent deterioration of the conditions for which the miners had fought in such a splendid, militant manner.

Reid states that until the mine workers in the United States and Canada are completely organized there is no hope of improving this state of affairs. The so-called organization campaign of the U. M. W. of A. in West Virginia and the other unorganized sections is a joke. Militant leaders are needed to direct the miners in their fight and the U. M. W. of A. officials are more anxious to help the bosses than to furnish fighting leadership to the workers.

Progressive Miners' Program.

The program of the progressive miners to meet the situation in the coal industry must be realized in order that the workers may be relieved of the intolerable conditions under which they now live and work.

This program calls for a six-hour day week to equally divide available work to all miners. Unemployment insurance to care for the unemployed, the same to be taken from the profits of the industry and paid thru the union. Minimum wage to guarantee the miners a living when they do work. Nationalization and workers' control of the mining industry, and a labor party composed of the unions and based on a platform of immediate and concrete demands.

Foster Sees Big Developments in Great Britain.

The second special feature was the report on the Britsih minority movement by William Z. Foster, who attended the minority movement conference recently held in London. He pointed out that this is a tremendous movement of the rank and file which is forcing the more progressive leaders into a left position.

The formation of the Anglo-Russian unity committee, the recently published report of the British trade union delegation on Soviet Russia, and the contemplated visit of Purcell to the United States, will have a deep effect on developments within the American Federation of Labor.

T. U. E. L. Will Grow

The Trade Union Educational League must take advantage of the coming revival of militancy in the trade unions in the United States to build thhe T. U. E. L. into a mass left wing movement.

The response of the 300 militants present at the meeting promises great doings for the future. Every left winger should make it his business to be present at these general group meetings which are held the last Wednesday of each month at the Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western avenues.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT BARS COMMUNISTS FROM ENTRANCE TO ENGLAND

LONDON, England, May 28—Communists will be barred from admittance into England, it was announced by Sir William Hicks, home secretary, in the house of commons. Hicks said that the cabinet had decided not to allow foreign Communists to attend the annual conference of British Communists in Glasgow, Scotland, next Sunday.

Passive Opposition to Militarism Must Become An Active Opposition

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the warmakers are already preparing their alibis for the predicted failure of "Defense Day," now set for July 4th.

Chief among the jingo shouters is the capitalist press which has its doubts whether the July 4th demonstration will succeed. It believes that the masses are more concerned with having a good time on July 4th, than marching in the "preparedness parades" of the war mongers. The New York Times speaks for the lot of them when it says:

> "The Fourth of July has come to be regarded as a universal outdoor holiday. Everybody plays who can and there are many jaunts to seaside and mountains. If holiday plans had to be discarded for the Defense Day test, it is very doubtful whether there would be such a gratifying attendance as marked the exercises that made September 12 last year such a genuine success."

• • • •

It may be charged that the pro-British leanings of the Times may have something to do with its antipathy toward July 4th as a day for whipping jingoism into white heat. July 4th marked the beginning of the revolutionary war, 150 years ago, that wrecked British rule in the American colonies. July 4th is reminiscent of a war that pro-British sheets like the Times, and the pro-British bankers in Wall Street, like J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., American fiscal agent for Great Britain during the last war, would like to forget. So the Times, the organ of the bankers, declares July 4th has its own character as an anniversary, which it urges be strictly let alone, because:

> "If associated with the calling out of troops and the functioning of industrial preparedness for war, would it not be suggestive of the idea that the enemy to be armed against us was that nation with whom America was about to celebrate 100 years of peace on the eve of the war in which she was our ally to save free institutions."

The "free institutions," of course, that the Times worries about, are the "inalienable rights" of American imperialism to plunder wherever and whenever it pleases. Another war to defend these rights of the American imperialists against similar rights demanded by British imperialism is not inconceivable.

• • • •

That the American working and farming masses are not over-enthusiastic about defending these imperialist "rights" of their masters gives cause for seeking some other time for putting over "Defense Day."

July 4th, this year, comes on a Saturday, and where the usual Independence Day programs are carried out to half-empty benches, it is only to be expected that the supremacy of the holiday spirit over the war spirit will result this year in a Defense Day with sadly depleted ranks.

• • • •

But it isn't enough to rejoice over the fast that workers would rather go on a holiday than lend themselves to the militaristic demonstrations of their masters. They can be caught on some other day, as the New York Times suggests. When war comes their opposition can be broken down with a wave of terror. They can be beaten into line.

This will happen unless passive opposition to militarism develops into active opposition; the intelligent opposition of class conscious workers waging a finish fight against their oppressors. That is an opposition that will stand against the attack of the exploiters.

• • • •

It is no accident that the Workers (Communist) Party calls upon all labor to join in demonstrations against capitalist rule during Anti-Imperialist Week, the week ending with Saturday, July 4th. Workers conscious of their class interests will not permit any holiday spirit to divert them from the main task of this week. They will be euthused with a real war spirit; the spirit of war of the working class against the capitalist class. There will be plenty of time for holidaying when the war is victoriously ended in favor of labor.

MINERS' LOCALS ENDANGERED BY SUPREME COURT IN CORONAD CASE FREEING INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The international office of the United Mine Workers of America is clear of the famous Coronado Coal Co. damage suit. The federal supreme court has just decided that the international cannot be held responsible for injury suffered by the Coronado and other non-union mines during the strike of 1914 in Arkansas.

It sends back to the federal district court of western Arkansas the question as to whether District No. 21, U. M. W. of A., which was made a co-defendant in the suit, and its affiliated unions and certain individual members were guilty of causing a restraint of interstate commerce because they conducted the strike.

Bosses Wanted Pay Three Times.

The mine owners claimed that the strike was a conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce, and as such was punishable under the anti-trust law in damages three times the amount of actual loss suffered by the companies.

In a decision rendered in June, 1922, the supreme court held that the international union had not been proven to be responsible for the strike, and that the suit should first have been brought against the district and local unions and their leaders.

Bill Taft's Regrets.

Chief Justice Taft, in rendering that opinion, denounced the alleged violence and destruction of mine property during the strike, blaming the union for it and suggesting his regret that he could not legally hold the international to answer.

At that time the U. M. W. A. had been compelled to put up more than $1,000,000 of its funds as security against the award of damages to the companies that brought the suit.

Robbers Steal Prosecutors' Auto.

PEORIA, Ill., May 28.—Another bold daylight robbery was committed on the streets of Peoria today when Ralph Waugh, cashier of the Standard Oil company, was held up and robbed og $30,000 in money and checks while entering a bank. Three masked men grabbed Waugh's satchel and fled in a machine stolen from Albert Weil, assistant state's attorney.

Strategy of the Communists

The famous letter from the Communist International to the Mexican Communist Party—

In which not only is outlined the policy for the Communist Party of Mexico, based on the facts of the struggle in that country—

But also the strategy for Communists of all countries.

No worker who wishes to understand the fundamental strategy of the Communists should omit it from his reading.

dictment to mention even with a single word the "order from Moscow," —simply because it was proven that the so-called "Moscow orders" were nothing more than a forgery of white guards in Berlin.

The courtmartial condemned the arrested Communists and Agrarians not because of their participation in the act of terror (this was never proven at the trial), but merely because they belonged to the Communist Party and to the left wing of the Agrarian Party.

The indictment shows that the prosecution was not at all interested in proving the guilt of the defendants, but only in furnishing a legal pretext for the crimes of the ruling Zankov gang, on the basis of the political program of the Communist Party and the left wing of the peasants who are combatting the reign of terror imposed upon the Bulgarian people. The Communist Friedmann was perfectly right when he acted as the accuser of the Zankov regime.

The article in the "Pravda" condemns the attitude of the Bulgarian socialist-hangmen, and points out that the solidarity of this social-democratic organ with the ankov criminals breaks the record even of the social-democratic press.

Red Aid Protests.

A manifesto of the First Congress of the International Red Aid of the Soviet Union reads:

"Some of the prisoners of the Zankov government who have ben sentenced to death by courtmartial, will be publicly executed on the square in front of the Sofia cathedral. The trial was so conducted as to make an unbiased procedure imposible.

The First Congress of the International Red Aid of the Soviet Union which comprises 5 million workers and peasants, demands a retrial of the cases and the non-execution of the death sentences. The Congress calls upon all labor organizations thruout the world, to raise their voice of protest in order to save the lives of innocent victims.

Besides speaking on the decisions of the Young Communist International at its last sessions, Comrade Shachtman will report on the problem of bolshevization and Leninist education which were important points dealt with at the last congress.

Many important announcements in connection with the activities of the Chicago league will be made at this meeting. All members are expected to bring their cards and will be given a chance to pay up for back dues at the door.

Steal Quizz Papers.

LITCHFIELD, Ill., May 28.—The study-worm students of the Litchfield high school were thrown into despondency today when it was revealed that the semester's examination papers had been stolen during the night from the school offices. "An invesigation" is under way. If they are not recovered, another examination of an entirely different set of questions will be necessary, it was pointed out.

Fight Danish Fascists

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 28.—A furious fight on the streets here between fascists and militant workers took place when the fascists, carrying banners advertising their newspapers, marched down the Raadhuspladsen, the largest square in the city, and attacked workers assembled on the square. About five hundred took part in the fighting.

HOPE WANES FOR 71 ENTOMBED IN ANCIENT MINE

Six Dead Miners Are Taken from N. C. Shaft

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SANFORD, N. C., May 28.—Small hope was held today that some of the seventy-one entombed miners buried in the Carolina Coal company's mine nine miles from here would be found alive as rescue efforts were redoubled at dawn.

Only six bodies have been brought to the surface. Brothers of some of the imprisoned men were in the line which formed to identify the burned and blackened corpses as three little coal cars, each bearing a rescue crew and two bodies, came out of the mouth of the death hole.

Three Deadly Explosions.

Three explosions below the 1,000 foot lateral entombed the 71 miners in the ancient workings. The first explosion occurred in the second right lateral of the mine, blocking the main shaft with debris and spreading deadly gas. Little hope was held that even many more dead bodies could be reached before late today.

Operatives in the mine said that the fans in the farther end of the shaft were working and this led to a faint hope that some men might be found alive, but others were just as certain that no life would be found in the blasted workings.

A corps of army physicians and surgeons from Fort Bragg were on the scene early today to man the temporary hospital station which was set up.

Rescue work also was speeded up this morning by the arrival of a special car with rescue apparatus from the United States bureau of mines.

Bodies Terribly Mangled.

The first six bodies reached and brought to the surface yesterday are those seen by Howard Butler, assistant manager of the mine, when he went down after the first gush of smoke came from the mine shortly before noon. Butler's attention was called by V. D. Smith, bookkeeper at the mines. Hurrying down the shaft and into the tunnel Butled dashed for a telephone to summon help. A second explosion knocked him down and another helper then called for a doctor. Butler was rushed back and given medical treatment before any further efforts were made to enter the mine.

The six bodies recovered were horribly torn. Other mine workers and members of families of the entombed men stood patiently by while physicians determined that all of them were dead.

The Carolina mine is the oldest coal mine in North Carolina, having been operated since the civil war. It supplied fuel during the war to vessels of the confederate navy.

AUTO COMPANY STOOL PIGEON FAILS TO BREAK UP MEETING TO ORGANIZE AUTO WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., May 28.—An organization meeting conducted by Local No. 127, Auto Workers' Union, before the Towaan Body plant, a part of the Murray Auto Body Corporation, promised to duplicate the situation prevailing at the Briggs plant last week. Frank Brunton, secretary of Local No. 127, and Edgar Owens were conducting the meeting with Owens on the box.

A crowd of four or five hundred employes were gathered around the speaker listening to the message of organization when a company stool pigeon wormed his way thru the crowd and kicked the box from under Owens. A roar of disapproval went up from the crowd and the dick was taken into ungentle hands and forcibly ejected from the crowd. He was told that if he came back interfering with the meeting he would probably meet up with an accident. He indicated that he had plenty for the time being.

Conditions in the auto plants in Detroit are daily becoming more oppressive and the workers are quick to respond to points made by the organizers. Local No. 127 is conducting a series of open meetings every Friday at their hall at 55 Adelaide with excellent results. The noon day factory meetings are taking the factory workers by storm and indicate what could be accomplished if the entire labor movement of Detroit would seriously undertake to assist in this campaign. Wage cuts, overtime, speed-up, and general all around rotten conditions tell the story of oppression far more eloquently than the speakers can in a language easily understood by the workers.

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

Goto, for his frank statement that war with the United States was inevitable. And when the war comes, as come it will, American boys will be dodging Japanese bullets, manufactured by the Dupont company as the Germans from 1924 to 1918 dodged (tho not always successfully) shells manufactured by the Krupps for the British government. And every time a Krupp shell fired from the British lines exploded, one of the Krupps could light another cigar and open another bottle of champagne, confident that he was winning the war, no matter who lost. It's a great game.

WHAT happened to the big conference planned by William Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen? It seems to have gone off the track. We never expected it to materialize, knowing what the other labor leaders think of Lee. They are all welcome to what they think of each other, but if beggars can be choosers, we will give Bill the prize as the scabbiest fakers in the lot. Bill announced that he had invitations written for a conference between the railroad workers and their employers, scheduled for May 27. That date passed yesterday, without a peep from Bill or the conference.

AS the DAILY WORKER predicted, Bill's plan got ditched. He got the front page in the Hearst sheets only. The story was too fishy for the other papers to handle. Hearst will serve up any kind of offal that suits his immediate purpose. It is possible that Bill Hearst has some kind of a scrap with Warren S. Stone, and is boosting Lee to get the labor banker's goat. There is no choice between Lee and Stone, for the workers.

HEARST waged a campaign against Sammy Gompers prior to the Denver convention of 1921. He sent his reporters scurrying around for interviews to every labor leader who would be liable to "talk." Most of them talked, but not for publication. They cursed Sam eloquently, but when the reporters got out their pencils, the labor skates would say: "What what! This is not for publication. Understand now, young man, I haven't said a word." The campaign was a fizzle and Hearst soon afterwards made peace with Sammy.

ANOTHER campaign launched by Hearst against Harry Daugherty, was nipped in the bud. A well known actress, whose pulchritude is entitled to more credit for her success than her histrionic ability, was the innocent cause of the Hearst-Daugherty scrap. One of William's best news hounds was put on Daughterty's track. The first three articles on the famous strikebreaker were in type when Arthur Brisbane, Hearst's handy man arrived in Washington. Arthur had a conference with William J. Burns who in turn brought Daugherty and Brisbane together. The upshot of the conference was that the stories were killed and Daugherty and the well known actress were no longer seen at the opera together.

WHEN Daugherty was the target for attack during the oil explosion, the Hearst papers defended the attorney general. Many people wondered why. Washington correspondents did not wonder. They knew the reason. These are samples of the methods used by the Hearst papers. All capitalist papers are unreliable, but the Hearst sheets are the yellowest of yellow journals. Brisbane fooled the radical workers for a long time, but they are getting wise to him now. Those who complain that there is too much propaganda in the DAILY WORKER should read their capitalist papers carefully, if they read them at all. They will soon learn that all the news that appears in the capitalist press, with rare exceptions is capitalist propaganda cleverly camouflaged. Our news is written by class conscious workers and has a working class slant. You can take your choice.

SOCIALIST IN TEACHERS' UNION 'EXPOSES' REDS

Leftkovitz Works with New York Times

NEW YORK, May 28.— The New York Times in yesterday's issue published excerpts from a letter purported to be written by officers of the Teachers' Union of New York City, in which the charge is made that a Communist fraction exists on the executive committee of the union, and wailing over the election at a recent meeting of the union of "what many people might consider Communist representation of this local to the national convention of the American Federation of Teachers." The delegates referred to are Scott Nearing and Benjamin Mandell.

Progressive school teachers believe the letter is the work of the stoolpigeon Abraham Leftkovitz, tool of Tammany Hall and the socialist party in the Central Trades Council. Leftkovitz is looked upon as a clown by the more responsible Tammany labor fakers, but as he poses as a radical they allow him to perform. This keeps him contented and gives him an exaggerated feeling of importance.

The Charges.

Leftkovitz charges the Communist fraction in the federation with several crimes against the capitalist system and the board of education. Among them are: Affiliation with a labor party affiliation with a teachers' international—an organization similar to the miners' international and other such bodies; contributions to striking workers; demanding the passage of resolutions condemning the class collaboration policies of the official bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor; opposition to the reactionary administration of the board of education—Tammany institution; favoring admittance of all teachers into the union regardless of political affiliations. (Leftkovitz is against the admission of radicals.)

Leftkovitz is against the Communists because he does not want to give the board of education "an excuse for punishing teachers for their opinions." Those teachers whose opinions conform to the Tammany Hall standard or to those of Abe Cahan are eligible to membership in the opinion of Abraham Leftkovitz.

"MOTHER" BLOOR, 60-YEAR-OLD VETERAN, BEGINS COAST-TO-COAST TOUR FOR THE DAILY WORKER

Beginning June first, Ella Reeves (Mother) Bloor, 60-year-old veteran and fighter in the battles of American workers, begins an organizational tour unequalled in this country.

Speaking for the DAILY WORKER she will hold meetings in all the principal cities in this country on a 3,000 mile trip in a direct line between San Francisco and New York.

In all this time, this veteran fighter of our movement insists she will not pay a single penny for railroad fare. Never has there been such an attempt made before and the fact that a woman of 60 years makes the attempt is sure to attract nation-wide attention.

Plan Farewell Meeting.

The opening gun of this campaign will be fired on June 1, when a farewell meeting will be held at Oakland, California, the first of hundreds of meetings scheduled for the tour. According to plans laid, her trip will bring her to the following cities on her schedule: Sacramento, June 3; Fallon, Nevada, June 6; Salt Lake City, June 8; Rock Springs, Wyo., June 13; Cheyenne, Wyo., June 14; Denver, Colo., June 16, 17, 18; Kansas City, Mo., June 21, 22; Chicago, June 26.

In Chicago, she will hold open air meetings for a few weeks and will then continue her trip to St. Louis, thru the mining fields of southern Illinois Indiana, and Ohio; then to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, Washington and New York completing a journey of 3,000 miles and ending with a great mass meeting to be held there on her arrival.

This plan was born after a successful tour in California, where thousands of workers have heard her message of Communism, many new Communist locals were formed and hundreds of subscriptions secured for the DAILY WORKER.

Age is no handicap to a fighter, thinks Mother Bloor.

"I am the oldest and the healthiest member of the Red Guard," she says, "and you can trust me to carry out the plan fully."

Make Trip Real Campaign.

"It is easy," she continues, "for a woman of my age and experience. In many cases, the young fighters in many towns I know, will accompany me to the next city and we will make the trip a real campaign. Before we are thru, many thousands are going to hear of Communism and of the standard bearer of the Communist movement, the DAILY WORKER.

"I am sending my baggage ahead and will wear my hiking clothes."

The progress of this spectacular tour by the well-known veteran will be recorded often, with an account of her experiences and successes in the pages the DAILY WORKER. Greet Mother Bloor at the meetings in your city when she arrives.

Jardine Not to Force Out Gamblers.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine today denied that he would force the Chicago board of trade to clean out its gamblers. Jardine declared that gambling in wheat had taken place, but that he would not ask the board to act.

Getting a DAILY WORKER sub or two, will make a better Communist of you.

FRENCH REDS TAKE OVER TOWN'S COUNCIL; POLICE ARE CALLED

PARIS, France, May 28.—Communists took over the city council at the town of Villeneuve-le-Roi, and the council members who were meeting signed a document dissolving that body, according to reports. The councilmen left the city hall in possession of the Communists.

They later returned with police, who again took possession of the council chambers. The report made no mention of casualties.

Hunt for Witnesses in Shepherd Murder Trial Is Fruitless

The drab proceedings in the court room of Judge Thomas Lynch where state and defense continued their monotonous exmainations of veniremen to complete the William D. Shepherd jury, faded into obscurity today as legal warfare over the possesion of J. J. Kelly took the the limelight in the "germ murder" trial.

Kelly, who, in carefully guarded sessions is reported to have told "plenty" regarding the cirumstances surrounding the disappearance of Robert White, missing prosecution witness, is seeking his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus, execution of which is being bitterly contested by the state.

The hunt for White which for two days has centered in New York City was being continued there, but the state's attorney's office admitted that thus far, word from that city had not been conducive to a belief that White might be found soon.

Final disposition of the contempt of court action against James C. Callan, charged by the state with having attempted to influence a prospective juror, was postponed until this afternoon to give the state time to digest Callan's replies to the 2 interrogatories.

The answer constituted a blanket denial which automatically purges Callan of contempt and it virtually was admtited that the state would not file perjury charges, the only remaining action possible under the Illinois law. Two witnesses are necessary to perjury charges in Illinois and these, the state admittedly has not found.

HUGO, Okla., May 28.— The last bank in Hugo, the City National Bank closed down. Old cotton loans are said to be responsible for the closing of all three banks of Hugo.

UNEMPLOYMENT "REMEDIES" AS BAD AS DISEASE

Arrests Don't Help, or (Work) Reward, Jobless

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—In order to alleviate the suffering of the vast army of unemployed men and women, conservatively estimated at 65,000, the Los Angeles county unemployment league was formed and several meetings held in the Labor Temple.

Because of unemployment, 963 men have been arrested, since the first of the year, on charges of vagrancy. No doubt, this was some one's conception of a remedy for unemployment, but the fact is that in all cases those suffering arrest were in a worse condition after being released than when apprehended.

In another effort the county, city and community chest each appropriated $5,000 to care for the needs of the unemployed, which served, with its taint of charity, to only make harder the existence of the man fighting in every way for the opportunity to earn his own living.

Work was provided in the public parks but when the welfare organizations who have beds and meals for sale, finished manipulating the arrangements it was found that a man who worked 8 hours, at forty cents per hour, had only 50 cents. The balance was put in the purses of people who had shared in the community chest as charitable organizations. Even work, when at such low wages, is no solution for the miseries of the unemployed.

McAndrew Acts Queer.

Superintendent McAndrew is showing signs of the strain of the fight the Teachers' Federation is giving him. It has evidently gone to his head. But maybe it is second childhood. Here are the symptoms. The other day he called together the superintendents to send word around to the teachers that he wants them to dress up in colorful attire. They must discard the black skirt and white shirt waist and black shoes and stockings that most of the teachers wear, according to the superintendent's observations. They should dress up, and be gay. Especially does he object to the black stockings!

Boston Teachers Win a 10 Per Cent Raise

BOSTON, Mass., May 28.—A 10 per cent increase in maximum salaries for the Boston public school teachers has been agreed upon by the city council, ratifying a legislative act. The increase, it is estimated, will total more than $500,000.

3,000 Cloak Makers in Unemployment List

NEW YORK, May 28.—More than 3,500 union cloak makers registered with the unemployment insurance fund in the first week of registration. First benefits will be paid June 8.

Zorin: the Propagandist - - -

By Magdeline Marx

"THE ROMANCE OF RUSSIA" written by Magdeleine Marx and published by Thomas Seltzer, New York, is a new book about Russia. The author, with the skill of an artist and thru eyes of deep understanding presents us with a series of intimate pictures of life in Russia.

Thru her conversation with peasant women, women workers in factories, young student workers, children in school, she succeeds in transmitting to us the feel of new Russia. We meet Masha, the peasant. She is a product of old Russia but she values with full understanding the freedom the revolution has given her and she fits into her new surroundings as one who belongs. We follow breatlessly Lena. In her twenty young years she has lived thru an eternity yet she is the very symbol of that youthful spirit in Russia which blazes the way to the new values in life.

Chapter after chapter we meet and enjoy wonderful Russian workers whom the author thoroly understands and appreciates. We reprint in full one particularly interesting chapter, about the workman, "Zorin, the Propagandist."

ZORIN: THE PROPAGANDIST.

THERE is no need for me to speak of the wonderful intellect of the theorist Bukharin; the eloquence and artistic sense of Lunacharsky; the learning of the absent-minded Chicherin; the profundity of the views of Sokolnikov, Commissioner of Finances; the authority of the peasant figure, Kamenev, president of the Republic, Kalinin. These men have already had their values set upon them and been put into their proper categories. What is not so well known is the contribution that numberless obscure workers have made to the revolution. Of such the perfect type is the workman Zorin.

He was thirty-two years old. Physically, he fulfilled the conventional idea of the Russian type to a detail. He was blond, fairly tall, with dark blue eyes, a g[illegible]sh skin, an apelike mouth, something of a jaw, an athletic appearance, yet with a sort of nimbus —did it come from his forehead, his eyes or his blondness?—a vaguely Nordic look softening the Scythian heredity; an idealistic sadness clouding the upper part of his face and modifying the lower part.

He was the descendant of workmen. He had a wretched childhood, but had shot up straight like a little human plant, and grew large with the breath of rebellion blowing upon him. When he was hardly twelve years old—an age at which most of us are still babies—he was an outlaw and a secret worker for revolutionary organizations. At fourteen he was arrested and put in prison, and spent his year in the cell reading, reading ceaselessly, a regular gourmand. Theory and tactics was what he read. He crammed his mind as full as he could with teachings of the great socialist writers. When freed, he carried on illegal propaganda even more energetically.

THEN he entered a workshop, where he led an existence like that of an adolescent Kim. It was there he learned a trade. Meanwhile he was nourishing himself on dry bread, poetry and social science.

At eighteen he was a man and a good worker—a real one. He had worked at his trade, which was metallurgy, in the government of Kherson, at Odessa, at Kiev, at Moscow and at Petersburg agitating wherever he went. But how difficult it was to accomplish anything in a Russia honeycombed with secret police. One fine day he decided he had had enuf of it and he emigrated to America. Without a cent in his pocket for the passage. But is was not for nothing that he had been where he had been, seen what he had seen.

In New York he almost perished of hunger. As an immigrant he became affiliated with organizations in the city, became a day-laborer and a longshoreman, got himself hired, managed to rub along somehow, learned, observed, hoped, and married. When the glorious news of the revolution came, he jumped on board the first steamer for Russia. His young wife went with him.

At once he went into a factory. For it was stronger than he was, the feeling that the factory was his empire, his native land. He could not quit the workmen's bench, nor lose the daily contact with the mass of workers whose blood was his blood too.

He secured work in a factory about twenty versts from Petrograd where firearms were manufactured. The three thousand workers beside whom he labored were mad with hope and enthusiasm. What work could possibly be more important than the duty that fell to them: that of keeping the proletarian army supplied with ordinance? They worked like people inspired, like madmen, like demons.

BACK-BREAKING labor all day. Then, after work, came evening meetings, then deliberations, committee meetings, councils which lasted all night. They had to get appeals printed, to establish relations with the principles in the movement, with the sailors, with the soldiers—in short to attend to all the superhuman work of organizations. They would sleep about two hours a night, on the earth, or on a bench, without covering: sometimes they didn't sleep at all. Often for whole months they didn't have time to undress. Once a day they ate, a wooden porringer of stinking boiled rice. As often as not, they went without eating, or munched a crust of moldy black bread. They took part in the scattered street fighting, they kept themselves informed of all the latest developments, they went out in trucks to speak to the crowds, miraculously dodging bullets as they passed thru the streets. At night, in a cutter, they would smuggle arms to a secret depot. Theirs were all the victories, just as the attacks were theirs.

They were charged with the direction of the postal and telegraph service. After the success of the revolution, they were commissioned to return foreign ambassadors to their own countries. They were concerned in the military defense of Petrograd and were among the saviours of the city, perhaps were the saviours. After the NEP, they directed for all Russia what was called the Machine Trust. They produced articles for the newspapers, as vivid, as pithy pieces of writing as I have ever read. And in the interims, like homing pigeons, they always returned to the workshop. For they were workmen in spirit, as they were in the flesh.

AND here one touches a thing which is not at all explicable, certainly, but which is carried to the last point of perfection in a man like Zorin. That is the conductibility between him and everything else proletarian.

I saw him in railroad trains. It might be anywhere—on the plains of the Don, among the prodigious harvests that are seen only in the Ukraine, on the red earth of the Crimea, or in the narrow passes of the Caucasus. Almost before he took the seat he had gathered around him railroad employes, travelling peasants or soldiers, every poor and humble person in the train. In some mysterious way this traveler with his boyish face drew them. They crowded around him, they held up their heads and maintained an expectant silence, as if awaiting something from him.

AT the end of half an hour the group assume the proportions almost of a meeting. And as he sat in the center of the hypnotized circle, he'd offer cigarets to one man, slap another on the shoulder, or collar one boy and cut up with another. He made them laugh and he made them think, all the time asking questions and explaining things, and stirring up a swarm of thots in this circle of heads.

At the stations water-carriers might come with jars of water to drink, street-boys might hawk strings of chestnuts, or baskets of berries, or big white raisins, women might thrust slices of watermellon in at the door of the carriage. But no. Zorin was speaking, they were listening, they were neither hungry nor thirsty. When the group broke up, long after the other passengers had retired to their berths, they left slowly, their brows drawn with thot, their eyes dazzled by the goal he had shown them. More than one man, I am sure, dated his life as a militant from that instant.

If you had suggested to Serge Zorin that he was spreading propaganda, he would have laughed. Propaganda? Well, they were talking about anything and everything: the weather, the train, the crops, the child asleep in the coach; and could you talk about all these things without mentioning the name they bore in the world now, legible as a book? Could you isolate the spokes of a wheel from the motion that causes the wheel to turn?

One night on the deck of a submarine that was scudding thru the Black Sea like a shell, I saw him gather the crew about him in ten minutes. He impressed them, convinced them, discussed with them, bombarded them with a fire of argument. He buttonholed one of the sailors and left the fellow gaping.

AND there he stayed the entire night, an unequalled pilot, lifting up to the stars a face as fresh as the wind. A ray of moonlight glistened on his white forehead. His hand clutched the netting; his feet were splashed with foam; and his prodigal tongue scattered a thousand dancing pictures on the trough of the oncoming waves. His talk made the crouching, silent men forget the cold and the coming of the dawn, there off the coast of Asia, in a sulphurous fog, streaked with geranium-red.

I saw his pale blond face with its tinge of blue, and his muscular body like that of a Norse god, rise up in the midst of assemblies of thousands of proletarians at Batum, at Tiflis, at Baku. The sorcery of his presence, his speech—so simple as to be brusque —his choice of a word, an image, a subject; his voice, which sang, vibrated and snapped like a bullet, but which could bark if necessary—these things sent a whirlwind of joy thru the hall and seemed to sweep it clean of all pettiness and fill it with swelling hope.

ZORIN always wore a blouse of black satinet fastened on the side. When he faced an audience he stood perfectly at ease, something a little catlike in his slender form. His eyes sparkled like a child's. His body was completely flexible. His smile was a little gouape. Sometimes he would begin in a happy, familiar, joking vein and tell an anecdote that teased their imagination. Then, kneading his thots with his two granite fists his face flushing, he would advance by insensible degrees to the climax of his argument. It was a delight to follow him, a delight to hear him, a delight to look at him.

"Tell us the story of the revolution!"

He would tell it.

"Tell us why such and such a thing happened at a given moment and why not another thing."

He would tell them.

"In your opinion what can be the outcome of such and such a situation?"

He would explain. He was never taken unexpectedly. From the sly fluttering of his eyebrows you knew it was the very question he was waiting for. He could have thanked the man who asked it. He would wait a second, then two, then three, as a gourmand samples the flavor of a new dish before he eats it; then he would give his answer: to the point, lashing, marked by caustic precision, copious, straightforward. Nothing was ever lacking.

HE was like a rich man who gives his entire fortune to whomsoever asks. And, to the responsive crowd, happy, relaxed, he was not only someone who knew more about things than they did; he was one of their own, who expressed in their own idiom, with gestures they understood, a surprising joyous echo of that hidden force which stirred in their own breasts.

When he had finished, panting and jubilant, he would thrust his hands into his pockets, his cheeks flushed, the collar of his blouse undone. He would point to his perspiring forehead and would brandish his damp handkerchief like a trophy.

"I love that," he would say, lowering his russet fringed eyelids over his blue, slightly bloodshot eyes, and feeling his clenched muscles under his rolled-up sleeves. "Yes, really, I love that."

HE would open his volume of Shelley without reading it. You knew perfectly well that he was not concerned with the applause he had created for himself. As a workman he was pleased at having done a good job and at having helped the cause along a little. And he would have liked—that you knew, too—to begin straight over again.

"It's simple enough. Give me an audience of workmen—nothing but workmen. I don't care whether or not they think as I do, whether they're friends or enemies, Russians or foreigners. I'll take them, I tell you, and I'll make them understand me; I'll drive the revolutionary idea—in there." He would tap his sweaty forehead.

To express manual labor, sinewy words wrung from physical toil must be used. To express the idea of a crouching body getting to its feet again, you must create slowly in that body a chemistry of gestures, of timid intonations, of long-stagnant blood, of inarticulate syllables and re-created impulses. The way that is done is a secret. Zorin knows it. That is all.

MACHINE MAKE MORE PROFITS AND FEWER JOBS

Examples Given by Employers' Papers

By LELAND OLDS.

CHICAGO, May 28—The report of the National Industrial (employers') Conference board showing that in March, 1925, industry was employing 20 per cent fewer workers than in June, 1920, marks the rapidity with which automatic machines are displacing human workers. With production so high that the country could not absorb all the goods turned out, hundreds of thousands of workers were looking for a chance to work.

The Wall Street Journal reports that the B. F. Goodrich Co., manufacturers of tires and rubber footwear, are producing approximately the same number of tires as in 1920 with a little over half as many workers, 15,000 compared with 25,000 in 1920. An important factor in the profitable showing made by Goodrich in 1924, says the journal, was the installation of more modern machinery which resulted in reducing overhead.

More Work in Less Time

The latest issue of Iron Age shows the following examples of modern machinery reducing labor on various operations: A shop cutting bronze driving-box shoes replaced a 10-year old planing machine with a new 48-inch Gray maximum service planer. Operating time was cut from 30 to 20 minutes. The investment of $4,700 is earning annual net profits of 43.6 per cent. A railroad shop reduced the time for grinding crank pins from 45 to 20 minutes by an investment of $2,540 in new machinery. The annual net profit on the new investment is estimated at 108.3 per cent.

480-Minute Job in 50 Minutes

In milk bottle factories the substitution of a jigged up turret lathe for an engine lathe operated by a craftsman of the old school has reduced the time for making molds from 480 to 50 minutes. The additional investment of $4,739 made a net profit of 384.4 per cent though the tools were depreciated 100 per cent a year and the machine was busy only two-thirds of the time.

Development of the internal gear spindle drive in connection with radial drills by the American Tool works reduced the time for boring locomotive side rods from 540 to 58 minutes. The time for one roughing and two finishing cuts on the inner cam surface of a pump body was reduced from 40 to 12 minutes by a No. 2-A Kearney & Trecker Milwaukee milling machine. Allowing 100 per cent annual depreciation the net profits of this equipment were 309.2 per cent.

Pass Compromise Sanitary Bond Bill.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 28.—By a vote of 146 to 0, the house today passed the McClugage bill, increasing the bonding power of the Chhicago sanitary district one per cent and sent it to the senate. The bill carried amendments insisted on by Governor Len Small who vetoed a similar bill and threatened to veto any other that did not modify the authority of the district's trustees, whom he charged with "extravagance, favoritism and despotism."

SLOVAK FEDERATION AFFILIATES WITH WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY; BRINGS IN 250 NEW MEMBERS

By referendum vote of the members of the Slovak Workers' Socialist Federation of America, which has existed heretofore as an independent organization, has decided to affiliate and become a section of the Workers (Communist) Party.

In the application for affiliation sent to the central executive committee of the Workers Party by the executive committee of the Slovak Workers' Socialist Federation, the declaration is made, "Our membership is willing to comply with all disciplinary rules and constitution of the Workers Party and the Communist International. Our members now are thoroly convinced that the Workers Party is the only Party in the United States composed of genuine revolutionists that will lead the class struggle against our enemies, the capitalist class."

The Slovak Socialist Federation, now the Slovak section of the Workers Party, publishes a semi-weekly organ, Rovnost Ludu, which has a circulation of 7,000.

Arrangements are being made to incorporate the branches of the Slovak section into a general party organization by affiliating them with the city central committees of the party and in the month of June the Slovak section will begin to pay dues to the Workers Party.

The action of the Slovak section in affiliating with the Workers Party is expected to inspire other independent groups of workers who stand for revolutionary class struggle against the capitalist system to follow its example and to become part of the Communist organization in the United States, the Workers (Communist) Party.

WORKERS PARTY HAS PICNIC AT GIRARD, JUNE 14

C. E. Ruthenberg Main Speaker in English

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GIRARD, O., May 28.—The annual outing of the sub-district committee of the Workers Party will be held at Avon Park, Sunday afternoon, June 14.

A program of sports by the Young Workers League of the sub-district combined with a fine program of entertainment arranged by the sub-district committee along with good speeches makes up the program of the third annual picnic of the sub-district. C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, will be the principal speaker in English.

Avon Park is located in the center of the Mahoning valley steel district and the committee expects that the attendance of steel workers will be large. The sub-district committee is arranging mass outings to be held in different sections of the sub-district during the summer months.

Readers of the DAILY WORKER are requested to remember that Sunday, June 14, is Workers Party Day and invited to be guests of the party on this day at Avon Park, Girard, O.

Picnic at Lawrence, Mass.

LAWRENCE, Mass.—The Workers Party of Lawrence will hlod their first picnic of the year on May 30 and 31 at Maple Park, a beautiful place five miles away from the mill prisons that encircle Lawrence. On Saturday the German Union Orchestra will give a two-hour concert. Sports of various kinds will also be enjoyed. Comrade Reid of Providence, R. I., will be the speaker on Sunday. Eats there will be of course —aplenty.

LOVESTONE SPEAKS TO STEEL WORKERS MAY 31 AT YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 28—Jay Lovestone of Chicago, Ill., author of several well known books concerning the steel workers will be the principal speaker at a united front mass protest meeting arranged by the city central committee to be held Sunday, May 31, 2 p. m., at the Ukrainian Hall, 525½ West Rayen Ave., Youngstown.

The steel workers will protest against the white terror in the Balkans and several speakers in the different languages will be on hand to see that all understand the full meaning of the capitalist governments' slaughter of workers and peasants in the Balkans.

Cal's Patronage to Reporters Has Magic Effect on Newspapers

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Coolidge has invited the Washington correspondents of the press to take a Saturday trip with him down the Potomac on his official yacht, the Mayflower.

Hitherto that vessel has been employed—at very high expense to the public treasury—to convey the Coolidge family and their private guests, including a judicious selection of politicians and friendly newspaper men, on week-end voyages. Eating a sandwich and drinking a cup of coffee on board the Mayflower has had an almost magical effect on the subsequent behavior of some veteran correspondents. Much the same effect is secured by the French government by conferring the legion of honor on foreign press representatives. The Coolidge plan is economical and inconspicuous.

Oregon Farmers Cut Wage as Unemployment Ebbs in Lumber Work

PORTLAND, Ore., May 28.—Along with the usual agricultural layoff after spring planting, comes a further reduction in timber operations. Cutting has been greatly reduced, more mills and camps closed and many night shifts abolished. Operators claim 50 to 75 per cent normal conditions and the 4 to 5-day week prevails, with more lowering of wages and a rumor of entire cessation in the lumber industry. At last the capitalist press here notes a "marked decline" in employment.

The serious unemployment in Oregon prompts the farmers to offer as low as $25 a month for general work. Spring wages had been $40 to $50 a month.

Plan Reserve for Wild Life.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 28.—By a vote of 70 to 54, the house today killed the Booth bill providing examination and licensing of chiropractors. The house passed the Thon bill transferring to the federal government swamp land along the Mississippi river north of Rock Island to be used as a reserve for wild life.

STATE COSSACKS IN PENNSYLVANIA WAR ON WORKERS

Swabeck's Arrest Part of Persecution

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., (By Mail.)—The state police and the state anti-sedition law, the darlings of the Fayette county "open shop" coal operators, were used to interfere with a regular Workers Party meeting at Brownsville, Pa., last Sunday. Arne Swabeck, the district organizer of the Workers Party, was placed under arrest and informed that he was held for federal investigation for alleged violation of the state anti-sedition law.

Fear for White House Flag.

Altho the arrest took place before the meeting was called to order the little local sheet, controlled by these coal operators, on Monday morning treated its readers to a story of the red organizer having demanded that the stars and stripes be taken down from the White House and the red flag substituted.

On the following Tuesday, however, it changed its headline to announce that Swabeck had been released for lack of evidence and the justice of peace before whom the case was heard was compelled to state that the Workers Party was within its rights to hold meetings.

Police Close to Coal Barons.

State cossacks have been gathering in numbers in Brownsville to help smash the only stronghold of the miners' union in the Fayette county. The Hillman coal company, one of the companies which recently put a $3.00 a day wage reduction into effect conveniently has one of its offices right alongside the state police headquarters.

The attempts to smash the union, as usual, is first directed against the militants. On Saturday, May 16, when the film "Polikushka" was shown at West Brownsville a moment when certain parts of the movie projector broke down was used as a pretext to pinch the operator as the balance of the reels to be shown may contain seditious material.

On the following day the films were returned after having been run off by the operator at the local movie theater and no seritious material found.

Only Fight the Workers.

While the state police is keeping itself busy harassing arrangements made by the Workers Party and helping weaken the union, its supposed function of upholding "law and order" seems to be of less importance. For two years a blind pig has been thriving and expanding its business just two squares away from the center of the city. Many affidavits have been sworn out to the effect that booze is being sold at the place yet the cossack captain, Pierce, consistently refuses to take any steps whatever, claiming that he has no evidence.

To the "open shop" operators, of course, such trifles and even greater abuses of established regulations matters little as long as the cossacks can maintain their efficiency in striving toward the goal—the smashing of all working class organizations.

Anti-Injunction Bill Passed Ill. Senate; May Not Pass House

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 28.—The so-called anti-injunction bill sponsored by the Illinois State Federation of Labor was passed by the state senate yesterday by a vote of 28 to 16. It now goes to the lower house, where the employers' organizations are confident it can be killed as the last similar bill was killed.

The vital spot in the bill is its provision prohibiting courts from issuing injunctions forbidding strikers from attempting to "persuade or advise" scabs so long as such picketing is "peaceable and without intimidation or threats."

PREPARE RELIEF EXPEDITION TO FIND AMUNDSEN

North Pole Flier Is Still Lost in Arctic

COPENHAGEN, May 28—The United States will be asked tomorrow to send an air expedition to the polar regions to search for the Amundsen-Ellsworth North pole flyers, it was believed in Copenhagen today.

The flyers have been missing a week today, and in that time no word has come from the ice locked north into which they dashed.

The Norwegian government has asked the air shipping union for an opinion as to whether it is desirable that steps be taken to search for Amundsen.

Directors of the union are meeting tomorrow and are expected to recommend that preparations be made to send two naval aeroplanes to Spitzbergen and will at the same time ask that the United States send aeroplanes to Cape Columbia. This would take the American searching party 250 miles north of Greenland.

Believe Explorer Safe.

NEW YORK, May 28.—"If I was a betting man, I'd give heavy odds that Capt. Roald Amundsen and his party will return safely from the pole.

"We can't give up hope for him until next September or October

"Leave Amundsen alone. He knows the game."

These words came out in short, staccato syllables today from Capt. Robert Abram Bartlett, commander of Admiral Peary's ship the "Roosevelt," in 1905-09, when Peary discovered the North pole.

Captain Bartlett is conceded to know as much or more about the polar regions than any other man alive.

"I have perfect faith that he'll come back."

It Was a Good Story But it Wasn't True

By LEN DE CAUX.

LONDON, May 28—That the Russian embassy in London is overstaffed and that numbers of Russian subjects enjoy diplomatic immunity in Great Britain whose only object can be to carry on revolutionary propaganda against the empire is the latest red scare story to be punctured—this time by two over-zealous Tory members of parliament who did not realize that red scares have to be handled very carefully and cannot endure exposure to the facts.

The reply of Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, to Col. Gretton and W. Davison, the outraged innocents who raised the question in the house of commons, reveals that there are only four Russians enjoying diplomatic immunity in Great Britain and that the staff of the Russian embassy is smaller than that of any other great power. It is 22, as against 39 at the German, 36 at the French, 28 at the Italian and 64 at the U. S. embassy.

The allegation that the staff of the Russian embassy exceeds that of any other in London formed the basis of a series of anti-Russian and anti-labor articles with which the Daily Mail and other London dailies have been filling their columns for the past few weeks.

Our Readers' Views

Comrade in Iowa Prison.

To the DAILY WORKER: Yours of the 18th inst. has been received. It had been wrongly addressed and went to Cedar Rapids, instead of to Ft. Madison directly.

From here I am allowed to write in English, only. As a rule, I am not allowed to receive any letters except those written in English, and only what the authorities would approve of.

The reason why I am here, perhaps, is not one, but many. The main reason, however, is not entirely for being class conscious, but for being impecunious and not able to employ counsel for defense.

It was during the "open shop" drive in Cedar Rapids, some four years ago, that I became a victim of "special privilege," and the reactionary machine of the carpenters' local union; illegally expelled, and finally arrested by one who could not appear against me, or substantiate any charge. Nevertheless, I was held; four times illegally raided by the police, who deliberately took and carried away, my legitimate things, including my naturalization papers, and my liberty bonds, expropriating all my money in the banks, giving no account for the same. So, after considerable delay, and much publicity in the local press, I was convicted, Dec. 12, 1921, in Marion, Linn Co., Iowa, on a circumstantial evidence, by a prejudiced jury and senttenced to not less than one and not to exceed fifteen years, in Ft. Madison prison for a substituted and technically put up charge of forgery, consisting of one $28.00 check, which has never been proven, nor decided on any one day, week or month, when the alleged crime took place, but contradicted, while there was no handwriting expert to testify.

The theory advanced by the prosecution was that I am a foreign red; a menace to the special privilege, the peace and dignity, etc., and that they must imprison me if they could not deport me.

I was told that I could not appeal my case alone, without attorney and money, and that I would have to serve only one year in prison, and that I would finish up the sentence sooner than the supreme court could render a decision, as to what constitutes a forgery in Iowa, and if sentimental reason, that one should be imprisoned is a legal reason. I have served nearly four years on this put-up charge, denied all and every benefits of the parole law so far and also pardon for the third time. So, if there is any remedy and any hopes for me it could only come thru a legal aid, which I was unable to secure so far.

Hoping you would realize my position, and let me hear from you as often as possible, for I would surely know how to appreciate your kind efforts. Fraternally yours, Joe Drazich.

BRITISH UNIONS MEET JUNE 4 TO FORM ALLIANCE

Plan United Front to Defend Unions

LONDON, May 28—Plans for a huge industrial alliance of the unions covering Great Britain's basic industries have reached the stage of an agreement between the union executives for a joint conference in London, June 4. It is intended at this meeting to appoint a subcommittee of representatives from each union to draft an alliance program for mutual help in time of trouble and for the defense and improvement of labor standards.

The initiative was taken by the Miners Federation of Great Britain, whose executive committee will meet at the conference with those of the National Union of Railwaymen, the Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, the Transport Workers Federation, the Transport and General Workers union and the metal trades unions. The assistance of the general council of the British Trades Union congress in coordinating the work of the alliance with all other organizations will be sought.

This proposed alliance of the biggest unions which cover the key industries is labor's reply to the campaign by the employers to extend working hours. The defeat by the government on May Day of the Labor party's bill to ratify the international 8-hour day lends impetus to the attacks the bosses are making successively on hours and conditions in different industries.

All the unions concerned are facing attack. On the railroads the bosses are showing that their counterclaim to the union national program are seriously meant by trying it out on the Great Western, where the company approached its employes direct, demanding that they shall either accept reductions in pay, the abolition of the guaranteed week and other rights or suffer drastic restrictions in the numbers employed. The mine owners are also holding the club of unemployment over their workers to make them accept a longer work day. In the metal trades the bosses have met the union's demand for $5 a week increase with proposals to increase the working week from 47 to 50 and 52½ hours and reduce overtime rates.

John Knockton had seven children, one eight months old and still breast-fed, while the mother had only potato offal and bread to feed on. Around his humble dwelling was laboriously tilled land, but the potatoes were all rotting. All that was left to eat was seed potato, with the seed-eyes cut out for planting.

Old Mr. McGrath said he had only food to last four or five days more, and that was only potato offal. He had not known what it was to possess any money for the last two yers at least.

In a hut where two families, Burke and Hogan, lived, I saw a baby of 18 months, who had been breast-fed till four months ago because there was no food to give it. It could not yet walk, and its poor little stomach was puffed out in a manner reminiscent of the Russian or German famine babies. The dread scourge of tubercule had already shown its mark on its small victim.

No Doctor

There was no doctor in the place. the guardians' doctor has to come from Belmullet, 21 miles away west.

Another Port-a-Cloy child, on whom I had a medical report, but did not see, was in the family of Michael Doherty. Only 18 months old, it was suffering from marasmus, a wasting disease due to malnutrition. It was living on flour and water, when, according to the doctor, it ought to be having virol. Every rib in its body was clearly defined, and it was evident that the hand of death was on the child.

A grim joke they played on themselves in this place was to make a meal off "blind herring" and potato offal. The "herring" was a handful of brown salt in water. The pot is put on the peat fire at noon, and a lean cat would climb on to the hearth-stones and look into it hungrily for food. The people are also picking "bornods," or limpets, from the rocks in the sea and eating them.

Poachers' Ravages

A poor hunchbacked woman I saw lived with her daughter, aged six, in a hovel, with no food. She came begging piteously for assistance. She has to depend entirely on her neighbours' bounty, she said—and they have not enough for themselves. She had been told by the guardians of the district to go to the workhouse when she asked for relief.

The grievance about the poaching of the trawlers, said to be English and French was very acute among the men, who told me also that macherel nets were offered them by the Free State fishery department in return for a payment of 30s., which is untold wealth in this poverty-stricken community. The nets were not put into use, but remain locked up in a shed, I understand.

Conditions worse than those of Port-a-Cloy were to be found, I was told, at other places further on, but the distance between these scattered places are considerable, and in my limited time was impossible to cover, but I can vouch for a few facts as having been gathered in Port-a-Cloy.

NEW YORK, May 28. — John D. Rockefeller, jr., has purchased the block on Morningside Drive, from 117th to 118th St., to build a new Park Ave. Baptist church for Dr. H. E. Fosdick. Fosdick is a "modernist," but Rockefeller knows that he can be relied upon to philosophize about the bible and keep the minds of the workers from their troubles with the bosses, and the "silk stocking" crowd entertained.

PREMIER TAXI DRIVERS WIN IN BOSTON STRIKE

Out 3 Weeks Against Non-Union Conditions

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

BOSTON, Mass., May 28.—A strike against the open shop and commission system was won by drivers of the Premier Cab Manufacturing company of Massachusetts. The strike was won after a hard and bitter fight put up by the Taxicab Drivers' Union Local No. 126. The strike lasted three weeks and the company acceded to the demands of the drivers for a closed shop and a guaranteed wage of $4 a day.

Offers by the company executives to the drivers for a straight commission was flatly rejected by all the drivers.

Taxicab drivers of New York and other cities should take this example of their comrades in Boston, and organize a powerful and militant union. They should fight to the bitter end the bosses' friend, the commission and sweating systems.

There is only one way that these systems can be completely destroyed, and that is for all drivers join hands together. The motto of all taxi drivers should be: "Every taxi driver a union driver, and every garage where taxicabs are stored, a union garage."

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

John Reed Juniors Have Good Time at Workers Home Affair

The affair given by the John Reed Junior group of Chicago last Saturday night at the Workers' Home was a success. Up till about 7:30 p. m., there were all kinds of games for the children. The real program started at 8 with the singing of the International. Then there was a short talk by the former organizer of the group who graduated into the Y. W. L.

The musical program consisted of piano, violin and harp solos and singing by the group, and a solo dance by a small girl, Lydia Esaevich. Then there was a beautiful tableaux representing Communism. It was composed by a member of the group and was enacted by nine children each holding one letter and reciting the meaning of it. It brought forth a storm of applause. There was also presented a short play of the Russian revolution in which the members of the group participated under the direction of the Russian actress, Mrs. Pokatilov.

Cheer Soviet Scenes.

And then came the big surprise: pictures of the Russian revolution. The children wildly cheered Lenin, Trotsky, and the Communist International which was shown in session. They greeted with applause the Russian Pioneers who were shown marching in a parade. They almost raised the roof when Bill Foster was shown as leader of the steel strikers in 1919, and they went wild when they themselves, the John Reed Junior group, were shown on the screen.

Max Shachtman, editor of the Young Worker, who recently returned from Soviet Russia brought greetings from the Russian Pioneers.

After the program was over there was some dancing. The soft drinks bar was sold out and some money raised which will be used by the group to help their paper, The Young Comrade, and for other similar purposes. All who attended the affair enjoyed themselves.

More About Los Angeles May Day Fight

May first as you all know is an International Workers' Holiday. The Juniors of Los Angeles celebrated the workers' holiday with an outing. On Monday, the children brought notes to school, reading as follows: "Was absent May 1st. on account of International Workers Holiday," tho a few who are not so Communistic brought notes that they were ill. This happened in a Junior High School of Los Angeles.

When the attendance teacher saw our notes, I saw by the looks on his face that he became angry. He told us to report after school every day, until further notice.

The children got together the same evening with the Junior director, and decided to call a meeting of the parents. When the parents met the following day, they drew up a petition to which each one signed his name and three parents were elected to go with the petition to the principal and demand that the punishment be taken off. The principal told them that they had to go to the board of education. On the following day, when they were prepared to go to the board of education, the teacher let all the children off, saying the reason was because they kept good attendance. But of course, that was just capitalistic bunk.

So comrades, you see our activities are getting on the minds of the capitalists. They are becoming afraid of our power. This incident will give us new hope and we will keep up our struggles with the thought that we are going to win.

Fascist Troops to Form Strikebreaking Post Office Agency

ROME, Italy, May 28.—The fascist troops are extending their control of Italian institutions by forming a new branch of the fascist militia to supervise and control the Italian post office. It will be similiar to the organization now controlling the railways and ports, it is planned. The militia will so organize to act as a strikebreaking agency in case of strikes of the post office workers.

Murdering Miners

Another coal mining disaster in Coal Glen, North Carolina.

With monotonous regularity the press has been chronicling these holocausts for the last six months and each new accident adds further horrors to the history of coal mining in the United States.

The mine in which the explosion occurred is non-union and the unconcerned attitude of the company for the lives of the miners is well shown by the fact that they do not know exactly how many workers were in the mine at the time of the explosion or how many are entombed.

We quote from a dispatch to the capitalist press:

> Records showed that 59 men, 39 white and 20 Negroes, had comprised the mine crew, but mine officials reported that 71 miners' lamps were missing, and it was believed that the figure might represent the number entombed on a final check.

This is an unheard of thing even in American mining annals filled as they are with incidents of criminal carelessness and disregard for the lives of the workers. It can only be a result of the great supply of workers and the absolute power of the coal capitalists over them. The employes of this concern have evidently been herded into the mine like sheep and but little attempt was made to comply with the first rule of mining—to know the number of men in the mine and their location in the various workings at any hour of the day.

Only in the United States could such criminal neglect be accepted as a matter of course. It shows that enjoying immunity from any union regulation the coal capitalists are literally sprinkling the coal with the blood of workers.

With such damning evidence of the utter brutality of unchecked exploitation on their hands the United Mine Workers of America have an opportunity to invade the non-union fields and bring these workers into the union. Only an officialdom concerned more with war on the left wing militants in the union than with the welfare of the coal miners in the United States will neglect such an opportunity.

More Suppression

The registration and finger-printing of foreign-born workers is being urged by the steel trust Secretary of Labor Davis, a convention of police chiefs in New York is urged to centralize the machinery used to hound revolutionary workers and now the suggestion is made to the convention of the California division of an international identification by the chief of detectives of Los Angeles that all the unemployed be finger-printed.

These occurrences show a very definite trend in a certain direction—that of hampering the freedom of movement of the workers and bringing them under the strictest possible supervision of the capitalist state. The basis for legalized blacklisting and restriction is already laid by the various employment and "personal record" schemes of the big industries. It only remains to give these a legal veil and the thing is done.

Unemployment for about two million workers, and the number is increasing constantly even in the most prosperous times, is a chronic condition in the United States. Specialization, standardization and piece work are turning out more and more commodities with less and less workers. The international markets are becoming more and more narrow. Further expansion, without the impetus given by war, is impossible.

Unemployed workers are a menace to capitalism. They are living proof of its failure to function. The natural thing for capitalism is to suppress them. Finger-printing is one of the methods by which suppression is made easier. If revolutionary workers, foreign-born workers and unemployed workers can be cowed into submission, capitalist government has greatly weakened the whole labor movement.

To be without a job always has been a crime since chattel slavery, followed by feudalism and capitalism, replaced the communal tribal society. Landless men have been synonomous with lawless men and with the coming of the machine age the jobless man has had to suffer the persecution meted out formerly to the landless and therefore masterless man.

It was not many years ago that landless, jobless and masterless men in England were whipped at the cart tail for the first offense, had their ears cut off for the second and were hanged for the third. In the American colonies they were whipped and branded.

The system of persecution today is somewhat more refined, but the bullpens, stockades and jails of capitalism, reinforced with the proposed finger-print system, are intended to show the workers their place just as were the bloodier punishments of the earlier period.

The Workers (Communist) Party alone points out to the workers the trend of events. It alone urges them to organize, solidify their ranks on the basis of the class struggle and oppose American capitlaism at every point. It alone points out the need for a labor party based on the trade unions which will bring all working class problems on to the political field and thus unite the scattered units of the working class movement in the struggle which is becoming ever sharper as the incidents we cite show with irresistible force.

Further evidence of the counter-revolutionary activities of the American government, which we mentioned in connection with the deportation case framed up against Mrs. Kannasto, is contained in the suppression of the Esthonian Workers Party paper Uus Ulm by the department of justice of Esthonia with the aid of the United States postal department.

It is a poor counter-revolutionary government indeed that cannot get aid and comfort from the state power of the American capitalist class. The only requirement for assistance is relentless warfare on the workers.

Japan is sending a warship to intimidate the Chinese strikers in the districts where Japanese capitalists own the mills. This will arouse much indignation in American anti-Japanese circles, but it is well to remember that American warships take a trip to Tampico and other Latin-American ports when the workers strike against American oil capitalists.

The methods of imperialism are the same the world over

The Split in the Social-Democratic Party of Hungary

By QU. (Budapest)

THE split in the social-democratic party of Hungary occurred sooner than had been anticipated. Nevertheless no one was taken by surprise.

A serious organized opposition arose in the socialist party of Hungary a year ago at the party conference. This opposition took its stand against the party leadership on principle. Their slogans, passed by a unanimous resolution of the opposition as much as a year ago, were: "Down with the bourgeois coalition! Long Live the alliance with the landless peasantry! Down with the sham parliamentary fight! Parliamentary action must be reinforced by the action of the masses!" The opposition further demanded that the Bethlen agreement be published and that measures be taken against the persons responsible for this shameful document.

THE party leaders of the Second Socialist International, being utterly corrupt, have for the past year made every effort to muzzle the opposition. For this purpose they have made use of every means at their disposal. They tried to corrupt the leaders of the opposition and offered them desirable posts. As this was to no purpose, they disciplined those leaders of the opposition who held office in the party. Later they expelled leaders of the opposition by the dozen from the party and from the trade unions. Neither did they hesitate publicly to denounce the expelled leaders as Bolsheviki by raising a campaign against them and declaring that the funds of the opposition had been obtained from Moscow thru the Red Aid.

All this however, was in vain. In spite of changes in the leadership, the opposition gained ground day by day. The discontent with the party leaders and with trade union bureucracy as well as with the treacherous policy which they continued to pursue, increased in the most important proletarian party organizations, in the various great factories and in the trade unions. Sanitation was accompanied by a fearful crisis. Unemployment, the systematically introduced working on short time, the cost of sanitation and the constant rise of prices which continued in spite of the "stabilization" of the crown, caused such distress that it became impossible further to support the Bethlen government in its original treacherous form, since it did not even guarantee a special unemployment allowance.

IN order to lead the discontented and indignant working people astray, the swindling social democratic leaders acted the comedy of parliamentary passivity and, after the rascally Bethlen agreement, they concluded an equally treacherous pact with the reactionary bourgeois parties. They formed a "democratic block" with the legitimists, war agitators and Panamists, for better or worse, and resolved to carry thru the municipal elections which were to take place in Budapest on May 15, in common with these reactionary bourgeois parties in such a way that, according to agreement, the great majority should be left to the bourgeois parties regardless of the fact that in 1922 at the elections in Budapest, the social democratic party had gained 40 per cent of all the votes.

The social-democratic traitors wished to make the workers believe that they were not strong enough to fight alone, but that the counter-revolutionary supremacy could be defeated with the help of the bourgeoisie.

In vain was it pointed out that the very bourgeois politicians who now figure on the common list have already betrayed the workers innumerable times on similar occasions. In vain was it pointed out that large capitalist and directors of the large banks cannot be expected to fight in the interest of the proletariat, that manufacturers who exploit their workers so cruelly that they have for several years been boycotted by the trade unions, will certainly not fight in the town council for labor interests and against reaction, which is their support. It was in vain that the leaders of all the large local groups in Budapest issued a warning, that in no circumstances could they support the central committee unless the latter broke off its connections with the enemies of the workers. The leaders of the socialist party of Hungary did not put an end to their alliance with the bourgeoisie, they preferred to risk losing their proletarian adherents!

This decision of the central committee of the socialist party of Hungary roused a very natural indignation in labor circles. From all sides it was demanded that the matter should be cleared up, from all sides the demand was made that the newest treachery should be prevented even though it could only be done by a formal breach of discipline, and demands were made that the party leaders should be made to pay for theid old crimes.

THE leaders of the opposition had no reason for avoiding the fight which was so passionately demanded. They made a final attempt and, as this failed, they decided to strike out.

In accordance with their slogan "Down with the bourgeois coalition!" the organized opposition resolved to enter the election campaign independently and to form an independent labor party.

The "Hungarian Socialist Labor Party" was actually founded on April 14th.

The traitors to the working class used every means in their power to prevent this or, if this should not be possible, to discredit the new labor party from the beginning.

On April 8, when the opposition held its inaugural meeting, the heroic social-democratic leaders succeeded in smuggling into the gallery of the old house of parliament, which was filled with workers, 200—300 of their followers; these, under the leadership of social-democratic deputies, caused such confusion with trumpets, drums and shouting that the police dissolved the assembly.

IN order to prevent the possibility of another meeting, the official social-democrat press introduced a pogrom spirit against the former opposition. Day after day, in leading articles and in other articles several columns in length, they wrote that the new party had been founded by the Bethlen government and was in the pay of the "awakened Hungary" movement. When, in spite of this persecution, the inaugural meeting of the labor party was a brilliant success and the members of the new party even succeeded in causing a thoro disturbance in a meeting of the block, other underhand means were brought into action.

The leaders of the Socialist-Labor party who a week previously had been branded as "awakened Hungarians," were suddenly denounced as "Bolsheviki" who "had received an advance of 50 millions for the creation of the party." Not only the Nepszava, but also the bourgeois papers connected with it, daily make denunciations of this sort and demand severe measures.

KARL PAYER, the Hungarian Noske, even went as far as to state at a public meeting in the presence of the police, and to publish in the papers, that Vagi, the leader of the labor party, would not long be able to interfere with the party, as he, Payer, was in possession of a photograph which proves that Vagi was a "terror-rough" during the dictatorship.

At the same time the partisans of the Socialist-Labor party are constantly being expelled from the trade unions, and the party leaders of social-democracy are working provocatively to bring about a split in the trade unions, so as to be able then to denounce the Socialist-Labor party as the originators of this crime.

In such circumstances, the newly founded labor party has no easy work in the land of the white terror. Although at its fundation it already has workers in the provinces immediately followed the example of the workers in the capital, although the new party is entering the municipal elections with good prospects in spite of the fact that in every electorial district 1,000 signatures are necessary to several thousand members and the make a candidature valid, it is impossible to foretell what success will be obtained against the utterly corrupt and unscrupulous social democracy.

IT is hopeless at present to speak of an ideological solution in a country in which the Hungarian translation of Marx' "Capital" has been placed on the index, in which even the Vienna Arbeiter-Zeitung has been interdicted, in which Argus eyes watch lest the most innocent literature should enter the country, where anyone in whose possession such literature is found, is threatened with 5 and 10 years hard labor and in which the Communist leaders and non-commissioned officers who were not able to escape, have been exterminated. It is also questionable whether a solution or clear-sighted leadership in the fight will be found. It is also certain that the Communist if ever they are free once again to appear on the field of battle in Hungary, will have to fight out a severe fight with the newly formed socialist labor party. In a country in which the leaders and non-commissioned officers of social democracy have, with few exceptions, sold the dictatorship in agreeing to a "Socialist-Communist party," the Communists must, from the beginning, meet the newly formed Socialist-Labor party with reservation and distrust.

This however by no means signifies that the importance of this turn of events is to be undervalued. If we must admit that the split in the treacherous social democractic party of Hungary has been called into being by the elementary discontent and indignation of the working masses, and partly thru a class antagonism on principle, we must, in spite of all reservations, regard this foundation as a step forward.

New Interest in the Philippines

The increase of tension between the United States and Japan can be guaged with some accuracy by the amount of attention that the capitalist press is devoting to the Filipino independence movement. The Philippines are needed in the campaign for supremacy in the Pacific by the American imperialists. They are of comparatively little value as fields of exploitation, altho this enters into the question. It is their strategic value that is causing all the furore over composition of the population of the islands and the same thing can be remarked in the deluge of articles dealing with Hawaii.

The strategy of the American ruling class in the Philippines is exposed, unconsciously, of course, by the capitalist press. It consists in driving a wedge between the Filipino proper and the islander with Spanish or Chinese blood in his veins. It is remarked by one correspondent that Quezon, the leader of the nationalist movement, is a Spanish half-caste and aspersions are made on the islanders of this blood mixture. The Filipinos, it is said, are very friendly to America, but no explanation is made as to the reason for the recent slaughter of so many of them by the armed forces of the American government.

The social divisions among the island population as a result of the mixture of races are carefully analized and the conclusion arrived at that it is the islanders of mixed parentage who are the backbone of the independence movement.

This is the old game of divide and conquer combined with the policy of blaming outlanders for anti-ruling class agitation. It has been used very successfully by the British imperialists and our rulers seem to have taken a leaf out of their book.

The way to meet this attempt to divide the Filipino population against themselves is to give greater force to the agitation for independence while at the same time stressing the common needs of the Filipino workers and peasants for abolition of robbery by capitalists, native and foreign.

The working class and peasantry in all colonial countries are the only solid foundation on which to build liberation movements. Any attempts to make their problems a side issue results in defeat and betrayal of the whole movement. The middle class can always be bought off by the imperialists and when continued activity results in puppet governments, as in the case of the Irish Free State and the equally servile Egyptian national government, the workers and peasants find they have received nothing but necessity for continuing the struggle.

If the Philippine nationalists will raise such slogans as the division of the big estates, abolition of peonage, the right of peasants and plantation workers to combine and administer the land, etc., they will find that the attempts of the American exploiters to divide the islanders on the basis of nationality and race will fail.

The Furriers' Election

The election of the slate of the Furriers' Union composed of candidates of the left wing and the progressive bloc is not only a defeat for the Kaufman machine, one of the worst in the needle trades, but marks the advance of the fighting elements in the union to a position of leadership.

On the New York joint board the left wing will undoubtedly have important places and in this key body will be able to initiate organizing and wage campaigns that the Kaufman machine has either neglected or sabotaged.

The defeat of the leadership follows a long period in which the left wing has been met with opposition of the most unscrupulous kind. Expulsions, blacklisting and the use of gunmen have featured the offensives against the left wing, but thru it all its forces have stood solid. It has been the machine forces that have suffered demoralization, not the left wing.

The progressive bloc, with which the left wing made an election alliance has all the usual characteristics of the pure and simple opposition to a union machine. It is timid and hesitating and can be expected to do little in the struggle to stamp out the remnants of Kaufmanism in the union. For this reason the future tasks of the left wing, if they are to be successful, and by successful we mean the permeation of the whole union with the spirit of class consciousness and militancy, are of a very difficult nature and will require much skill, understanding and courage.

The left wing, we feel sure, will approach their new responsibilities in the true revolutionary spirit and maintain and extend the left base in the needle trades that has been strengthened by the results of the recent election.

CANADIAN PAPER NAILS LIE OF RELIEF REFUSAL

$5,000 Sent by R. I. L. U. Was Accepted

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

TORONTO, Ont., Can., May 28.—As many workers both in Canada and the United States have been deceived by widespread capitalist propaganda into belief that the executive board of District 26, Nova Scotia United Mine Workers, refused the $5,000 sent to the relief of the strikers and their families by the Red International of Labor Unions, "The Worker," organ of the Communist Party of Canada, publishes the following in an editorial of the current issue:

"It is manifest that there is considerable misunderstanding as to what happened to the five thousand dollars donated by the Russian workers to their comrades in Nova Scotia. There is an impression that the money was refused by the officers of the district.

"That is not the case. 'The Worker' hoped that had been made quite clear when the letter accepting the money from Jim McLachlan was published in our columns under the signature of the secretary of the district, Alex. McKay.

"What happened was that Comrade McLachlan at first offered the money for distribution to the Citizens' Relief Committee where it was refused. The middle class gang of sob sisters sabotaged on the money because that gift stood for workers' international solidarity. The kept press at once seized on this action to represent it as coming from the miners themselves. The organs of the yellow Amsterdam International were delirious in their joy at what they conceived to be a slap in the face to Russian labor.

"Where the officers of the district played the interests of the miners false was in not immediately protesting against this action of the Citizen's Committee when they must have known that their silence would be open to misinterpretation.

"But the rank and file were not silent. Protest after protest poured in from the locals demanding that the money be gratefully received. By this time Comrade McLachlan offered the money direct to the executive and they immediately acknowledged its receipt."

Richards, who seeks re-election.

N. Y. PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASS STARTS NOW TO TRAIN COMRADES FOR NEXT ELECTION CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, May 28.—The Workers' School, recognizing the necessity of training a corps of speakers for participation in the summer and fall campaigns, will give a course in public speaking at the headquarters, 108 East 14th street, on Saturday afternoons, 3 p. m., beginning June 27. This is not to be merely a general course with no concrete aim, but is designed definitely to prepare comrades to speak at street meetings. All comrades are eligible to take this course who speak English without difficulty and whose voices have some carrying power.

This course is of special importance at this time because our party in this district will soon participate in a local and state electon campaign which will require the service of the entire membership. Our election campaign last year put the party on the map in this city and made our name known to thousands of workers. This year we must increase our efforts. We do not have enough speakers and must develop more of them. Under the slogan, "Prepare for the Election Campaign" we must mobilize the membership for this work, and see that all qualified comrades take the course in public speaking.

Registration is now on any day or evening at the office of the Workers' School, 108 East 14th street. Do not delay.

MILITANT MEMBER OF PROLETARIAN PARTY LINES UP WITH COMINTERN

That the Proletarian Party is paying the penalty for its sectarianism in the loss of its militant elements, and is fast becoming a home for tired and cantankerous radicals, is shown by th efollowing letter which is typical of many received by the DAILY WORKER from former members of the P. P.

The DAILY WORKER:

As an ex-member of the proletarian party and now a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, I wish to state some of the fundamental reasons for my leaving the P. P.

For the last several years of its existence the P. P. directed its principal efforts to criticising the Workers Party for carrying out the decisions of the Communist International in the changing situation confronting the American working class.

A Bunch of Camels.

No Communist Party on the globe is free from mistakes, but the P. P. not having done anything stands a good chance of retaining its virginity, which means sterility.

A party that is in constant touch with the working class in every phase of its struggle is bound to come to wrong conclusions in analyzing certain situations. These mistakes are inevitable and a sure sign of activity. But those who remain within the circle of narrow minded squabbling and hair splitting; experts in memorizing chapters of capital, like the good christians who know the "holy bible" by heart.

While the proletarian party pretends to be a supporter of the Communist International, it has refused to support the slogans of the C. I., but attempts to ridicule the Workers (Communist) Party for attempting to carry them out.

Disgusted With P. P.

What disgusted the trade union elements in the proletarian party with the policy of that organization most, was the resolution passed at its last convention, instructing its members who are active in the trade unions (which is very rare) to work in opposition to the Trade Union Educational League. Being an active member in my union I refused to obey these orders and worked in co-operation with my comrades of the Workers Party in the union.

In closing I will say that here in Philadelphia we had a good militant local of the P. P. It is now reduced to three members, as the former members of that local are now in the Workers (Communist) Party. I am writing this so that the militants who are still in the P. P. will join the party in America that is fighting capitalism; the Workers (Communist) Party.—Lewis J. Braverman.

Coal Camp Women and Children to Be Made Into Textile Slaves

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., May 28.—The Morgantown chamber of commerce is raising $40,000 subscriptions for the Tyron Silk Fabrics Co. It is considered good for business to put miners' wives and children to work in the towns—it means cheap labor all around.

THE Riffians are leading France a merry dance. In the days when the imperialist powers were confronted only with bows and arrows and warriors whose only assets were calm nerves, the job of assuming a new slice of the "white man's burden" was comparatively easy. It was comparatively easy to kill the black men or the yellow men who insisted on carrying their own burdens. But the conquerors nowadays face weapons equal to their own and men trained in the art of war, trained by the conquerors themselves in their wars upon other capitalist competitors.

FRANCE has no picnic in Morocco. The Riffians are putting up a good fight and are not slow to take advantage of the complications in which France finds herself in at home. Strange that our volunteer lovers of liberty and the "rights of peoples to determine under what form of government they should live" have nothing to say in behalf of the Riffians. The Communists alone stand out as the allies of the beleaguered natives. In the chamber of deputies Communists rise and demand the withdrawal of French troops from Morocco. What do the socialists do?

THEY follow the same cowardly policy they adopted in the German Reichstag. When an important question came to a vote, the socialists absented themselves. In France they promised to support the Painleve government claiming that the Moroccan war was a defensive one, that is, a war to hold all the loot that the French imperialists already had. But the socialist politicians feared that this attitude would ruin their chances in the next elections, so they decided to absent themselves when the vote

First Break Appears in the Government Coalition in Japan

TOKIO, May 29.—K. Inukai, minister of commissions, resigned today. The resignation was the first break in the present cabinet since the merger of the Seiyukai political party and the Kakushin club.

Selection of Inukai's successor is expected to involve great difficulty as his post is the pivotal one in the balance of power between Kato's coalition Seiyukai-Kenseikai cabinet.

BILLY SUNDAY MISSING FROM S. P. REVIVAL

Thousands Invited to Hit Sawdust Trail

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

CLEVELAND, May 29.—One of the biggest revival campaigns since Billy Sunday retired to his farm, opens here tomorrow, with 'Gene Debs taking the place of Sunday. Aside from this substitution, there is no fundamental differences between the two revivals.

It is true that the socialists have not put up an arena specially for the occasion; neither is there a sawdust trail for the penitents to walk on as they proceed to purge themselves of sin by shaking hands with Debs. But Billy Sunday had stronger backers than the socialists and even the Jewish Daily Forward, which is financing the campaign, draws the line somewhere. Abe Cahan is undoubtedly anxious to see his bedraggled army marching towards Zion, but his pawnbroker soul loves the dollars hardly less than he loves yellow socialism.

The Democratic Socialists.

The socialists are making a virtue of necessity. Why must they have "mass conventions"? Because they are "democratic" of course. In reality because they have not enough members in Cleveland to hold a branch meeting. Anybody can participate in the mass convention, provided he has a dollar to pay for a red card and provided he is not known to be a Communist. Christian scientists, bush-baptists chaw thumpers, crystal gazers, palm readers, clairvoyants, and chiropractors—all are welcome. But no revolutionists must be allowed to enter the sacred precincts. The old socialist party is dead, the socialist party of pre-war days, that used to participate in strikes and talk about the class struggle is no more. Enter the revamped socialist party, jazzed up with the hope of class collaboration.

SAILORS SCRAP WITH OFFICERS ON OIL STEAMER

Fuel Intended for War on Riffs

By L. P. RINDAL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, May 29—(By Mail)—Two sailors are in irons on board the French naval oil tanker Merope and one more is in the San Pedro jail for their alleged refusal to man the ship after they discovered that she was bound to this port for a load of oil for the air fleet that is bombarding the villages of the Riffians in Morocco.

This is all that can be gathered from the fragmentary stories of the affair given by the captain.

Captain Robert Andrade, declared that the ship was only to sea a few hourse when the crew mutinied. Two of them were Frenchmen, one a Moroccan and one a Norwegian. The latter had made good his escape. The others may be taken back to France for court martial proceedings.

CHINESE TROOPS JOIN JAPANESE WARSHIPS IN ATTACK ON STRIKERS AT TSING-TAO MILLS KILLING TWO

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TSING-TAO, China, May 29.—Two Chinese strikers were killed and ten were seriously wounded here today when Chinese troops descended on several Japanese owned cotton mills held by the strikers and opened fire following refusal of the strikers to evacuate the mills. Many minor casualties were inflicted. The situation continues serious but so far no Japanese sailors have landed. Two Japanese warships are standing by in the harbor.

SOVIET SHIP GREETED BY URUGUYAN REDS; INTERNATIONAL PLAYED

BUENOS AIRES, Argentine, May 29.— The arrival of the Vatzlav Vorovsky, the first Soviet ship to appear at Montevideo flying the red flag, was greeted by an enthusiastic crowd of workers among whom were many Communists. A band played the Internationale as the ship appeared.

A Uruguayan Communist boarded the ship and gave a welcoming speech.

The ship's cargo was American lumber, loaded at Pensacola, Fla., and consigned to an English firm in Montivideo and Buenos Aires.

WOLL SPEAKS IN DEFENSE OF CAPITAL

"Union Drive" Leader Attacks the Reds

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., May 29.—The much heralded organization drive of the Detroit Federation of Labor under the leadership of Wm. Collins, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor was launched Wednesday evening, May 27 at a well attended meeting held in the Detroit Federation headquarters.

The platform was occupied by many of the national figures of the American Federation of Labor including Mathew Woll and William Fitzgerald, vice president of the Street Railwaymen's Union. Collins acted as chiarman. The meeting was chiefly taken up in a discussion of plans and details of the drive. The only set speech of the evening was delivered by Mathew Woll.

It Is a Marvel, Indeed!

In his opening remarks Woll implored those assembled not to be concerned about or interested in what methods groups of workers in other countries were using to solve their problems. It was obvious that the back of Brother Woll's mind was the spectre of the dictatorship of the proletariat of Russia solving the problems of the Russian workers in a manner not considered kosher by Brother Woll.

He said: "We believe the trade union method is the best designed instrument and that the accomplishments of the American labor movement was a standing marvel of all countries in solving the problems of labor." In the next sentence he admitted that this marvel of achievement included the organization of less than one fifth of the workers eligible to membership.

Capital Combines—Therefore—What?

His concern for capitalism found expression in various ways. He said: "It ill becomes us to condemn capitalism for our ills." He then proceeded to hold the rank and file of the workers responsible for the deplorable conditions they find themselves in.

He pointed out that capital combines in gigantic organizations, but that labor did not adopt the same

STRIKE HUNG ON BOSTON BUILDING BY FIVE UNIONS

But Painters Go Back as Others Walk Out

BOSTON, Mass., May 29.—(FP)—Ranks of striking building tradesmen are swelled by the building laborers whose 5,000 members have walked out on all but the few construction jobs that are meeting the laborers' demands for 80 cents for the semi-skilled and 77½ cents an hour for the rest.

Conference Settled Nothing

The strike follows an unsuccessful eleventh hour conference between the Building Contractors' Association and union representatives, consisting of a committee from the five local unions of Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union, and Dominic D'Alessandro, international president of the union.

Bosses stood pat at the conference, offering to sign a 3-year pact, continuing present wages of 70 and 65 cents for one year, with arbitration in 1926 and 1927. Union representatives refused, and the strike, sanctioned already by a strike referendum, was called.

Unskilled Eat Just As Much

Building laborers are resentful of the fact that their wages have not risen in proportion to that of other building tradesmen. They say that the solidarity in the ranks of their union and the boom in construction gives them confidence of success.

Many of the 2,000 striking painters are back on the jobs at the scale of $1.25 an hour, which they demanded.

EXTRADITE A. F. OF L. LEADERS TO BUFFALO ON DYNAMITE CHARGE

DETROIT, Mich., May 29.—William B. Fitzgerald, vice-president of the street and electric railway employes of America, and William P. Collins, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, both of Detroit, were to be extradited today to Buffalo to face charges of complicity in wrecking the Niagara Falls high speed international train with dynamite three years ago during the Buffalo street railway strike.

Fitzgerald and Collins, indicted with six other national officials, surrendered to the United States marshal's office here after learning of their indictments. They will have a formal hearing June 11.

MOROCCAN WAR IN INDORSED BY 'PINK' TRAITORS

Reds Alone Oppose French Foreign War

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Mya 29.—The socialist (refomist) bloc in the French chamber of deputies, supported the Painleve government in its invasion of North Africa, and the premier was given a vote of confidence in his conductance of the Moroccan war by a vote of 537 to 29 today. The 29 Communists were the only group to oppose the imperialistic invasion.

Side by side with the socialists, who, after their mild criticism of yesterday capitulated and openly supported the colonial exploitation of foreign peoples by French imperialism were the nationalist, right wing parties. The coservative, imperialist deputies found common ground with the socialists in indorsing the murder of the native Riffians.

Communists Demand Peace.

By the vote of confidence the socialists gave approval of the coming French-Spanish alliance for the exploitation of the rich natural resources of North Africa, and for a war of aggression against the native North Africans to wrest their land from them and divide up the spoils.

The Communists bitterly opposed the foreign invasion, called upon the French troops fighting in Morocco to fraternize with Abd-el-Krim's native forces, and attacked the imperialistic policy of the Painleve government, supported by the socialists.

The Painleve government has announced a war to the end against the North Africans, and Painleve is aiding the North African syndicate of capitalists to secure mining and other properties and exploit the native workers.

The indorsement by the socialists was assured earlier, when a delegation of the majority party deputies called on Painleve and announced their unanimous adoption of the text of the order of the day.

Corruption in State Office During War Disclosed by Probe

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 29—Legislative investigation of irregularities charged to Dr. F. A. Laird's conduct of the state veterinarian's office during the war was scheduled to be resumed next week as the committee pondered today over "peculiar proceedings" brot to light by preliminary examination.

The committee is probing allegations that thousands of dollars were paid to persons by the state in reparation for the slaughter of glandered horses, and that there was considerable uncertainty as to the disease of many animals killed and also to whom they belonged.

Pershing in Another Outburst

WEST VIRGINIA JAILS PACKED WITH STRIKING MINERS; JAILED BY GUNMEN IN DEFIANCE OF LAW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 29.—Iron heel terrorism by West Virginia authorities against the United Mine Workers members in the Fairmount-Morgantown coal strike zone is protested by the American Civil Liberties Union in a telegram to Governor Gore, demanding that the constitutional right of peaceful picketing shall be permitted.

The Union's wire follows a report from a New York writer, arrested at Grant Town for "intimidating non-union miners." He told the Union:

Private and Official Armed Force.

"In Northern West Virginia counties affected by the organizing drive of the United Mine Workers, civil liberties for union miners and sympathizers are non-existant. Heavily armed deputies, private guards and state police patrol the roads leading to non-union mines and make wholesale arrests of unarmed miners under blanket warrants charging intimidation or contempt.

"These arrests are directed by operators' counsel, who on Saturday ordered the arrest of miners' counsel and myself standing on the public road apart from the picketers at the open shop mine at Grant Town.

Jails Packed with Strikers.

"We are held for the grand jury on charges of intimidating non-union men, tho we spoke to no strikebreakers, and I had identified myself as the correspondent of a New York newspaper.

"We were jailed in Fairmont county jail, where 200 union miners are imprisoned on similar charges. The jail is so full that many sleep on the bare floor, and other county buildings are being prepared for more prisoners.

Judge Makes His Own Law.

"The Marion county grand jury has indicted 142 union miners for picketing, on instructions of Judge Schwenk, who interprets the law to read that not more than three can picket at a mine, despite the peaceful persuasion ruling of Federal Judge Baker.

"Sheriff Rigging says he will arrest all newspapermen found near the mines in Marion county without permits from his office."

An immediate executive investigation from the governor's office is called for by the union, with action that will check violations of civil liberty by arbitrary court orders.

One Killed, Three Injured, When Train Jumps Into Ditch

WORCESTER, Mass., May 29.—The ditching of the locomotive and three mail cars of the State of Maine Express today, with the loss of one life, the injury of three men and the shaking up of passengers, is undergoing the usual "investigation."

Much of the stock in the railroad is owned by Ogden Reid, also owner of the New York Herald-Tribune.

'ECONOMY CAL' SPENDS $10,000 TO JAIL WORKER

Postal Clerk for 22 Yrs. "Stole" Rhubarb

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.—President Coolidge announces today that his aim is to effect a 10 per cent reduction in the operating costs of the United States government, and on the same day comes word from Kansas City that the United States government has spent ten thousand dollars in sueing postal employe Max Rope, because he took home nine stalks of rhubarb that had fallen out of a bundle.

Rope had served 22 years faithfully in the United States postoffice at Kansas City, and was looking forward to receiving his pension. He has already been discharged by the government, and his chances of a pension have been cut off.

Rope found a bundle of rhubarb one day that had come untied. He rewrapped and readdressed the bundle to its destination. As he was leaving for home, he noticed that nine stalks of rhubarb had fallen out of the bundle on the floor. He picked them up and took them home. Now he is penniless and jobless.

"We are sueing Rope because of the principle involved," said C. C. Madison, United States district attorney. He did not say whether the principle had anything to do with Coolidge's much written about "economy program." Madison demands that Rope be sent to prison for five years for "stealing" the rhubarb.

Meanwhile, Coolidge announces a two per cent reduction in appropriations to government departments, which, if possible, will come from the payroll of government employes. Already many workers have been discharged by the government, and the added burden placed on the already overworked and underpaid government workers.

Coolidge's "ecemony" mania is being used as the opening wedge in his drive before the next congress to abolish the surtax on high incomes.

BILL LEE, ANGERED BY FOSTER SPEECH TO LEFT WING RAILWAY MEN, IS CONSOLED BY BOSSES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—Angered by William Z. Foster's address to the radical bloc of delegates to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen convention in Cleveland, Preident W. G. Lee fired his answering broadside at a luncheon of the Hi-Noon Club.

Addressing a thousand bond salesmen, bankers and industrialists, Lee denounced his accuser, who had charged him with collaborating with railroad magnates, and admitted that he was working toward class harmony. He aroused a salvo of applause when he declared that the trainmen's union "always has and always will believe in the open shop."

Bankers Applaud Attack on Foster.

The aged labor official shouted his defiance of "Foster and my other enemies," including with a vague sweep of his arm the officials of the other standard railway unions with whom he has refused to co-operate in labor and political affairs for years.

Applause was unrestrained except from one table where officials of the engineers' labor banks felt obliged to temper admiration with sagacity. Lee and Pres. Warren S. Stone of the locomotive engineers, have been at swords points since Lee assumed the presidency of the trainmen.

Neither Stone nor D. B. Robertson, head of the firemen, has given the slightest heed to Lee's overtures. If there is to be harmony between rail labor and the rail executives, the olive-branch will have to be waved by some figure in better grace with labor officialdom than Lee.

CHICAGO LABOR DEFENSE CALLS FOR BAIL FUND

To Rally Ex-Service Men for Crouch

Two important decisions of the Chicago conference for labor defense at its recent meeting took in the local situation as regards bail money and the need for energetic action on behalf o fthe imprisoned "Red" soldiers, Crouch and Trumbull.

The local secretary reported that the labor defense council bail fund had been exhausted. When the first arrest, that of D. E. Earley, took place, only $25, the customary bail, was demanded. But when, a week later, Thurber Lewis, Karl Reeve, and Paul Hacker were taken in, $100 each was set. This money was raised, but it wiped out the fund already depleted by the need for surety for Comrade Zinich, editor of the South Slavic paper, Radnik, and for those arrested for leaflet distribution. Last week the weather made it impossible to continue the fight, but if it is to be carried forward additional bail funds must be raised.

Plan Mass Meetings.

Money given or loaned for this purpose is never spent, it is kept in a separate bail fund to free arrested comrades pending their trials. When the trial ends the bail is returned and can be used for the next case. Party branches and other organizations with good-sized treasuries are appealed to for loans to this fund. These loans will be returned within a reasonable time and in special cases, on demand. Individual comrades should also make such loans whenever possible. Get in touch with Labor Defense Council at 19 S. Lincoln St., Seeley 3562.

In anticipation of an energetic nation-wide campaign on behalf of the imprisoned soldiers Crouch and Trumbull, the committee decided to enlist the aid of every ex-service man in the movement or friendly toward it. Names and addresses, name and number of unit served in and rank held, of every friendly soldier, sailor or marine of any of the entente armies in the world war, must be collected by every branch secretary, or by special committees elected for this purpose.

A mass meeting is planned, in collaboration with an "Ex-servicemen's committee for release of Crouch and Trumbull"—as well as outdoor agitations, petitions, resolutions by organizations, etc.

Funds Needed.

The need of winding up current financial drives to clear the way for the next campaign, was pointed out. All funds for Irish Relief and Miners' Relief must be sent in at once.

Delegate Marek reported on the excellent success of the committee for relief of the political prisoners of Poland. Several trade unions as well as fraternal societies are represented, and an attack by white guard socialists was turned about into a glowing triumph for the committee. Representatives went right into the white meeting and debated the issue, utterly discomfiting their adversaries.

The next meeting will be on call, probably, Friday, June 5, at 722 Blue Island Ave.

Fights Schools for Sending Children Home for Religious Training

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 29.—A fight is on here started by Lawrence B. Stein, a tax payer of Mount Vernon against permitting children to get off from school 45 minutes earlier each week to receive religious instruction. Stein has petitioned the supreme court to issue a permanent injunction to refrain the board of education and the superintendent from releasing children in the fifth and sixth grades proving that it is a violation of the federal and state constitution.

Stein is being opposed by the board of education members, all business men in Mount Vernon, and by the superintendent who demand that the case go before the commissioner of education.

Rainstorm Stops Flight.

PEKING, May 29.—The two Japanese airplanes in the Tokio-Peking flight were forced down in a heavy rainstorm at Shanhaikwan, a gate city along the great wall of China, some 200 miles north of Peking, it was reported here today. Planes and aviators were unharmed.

FIFTY BILLIONS PRODUCTION IN 1925, IS HOOVER'S ESTIMATE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover estimates that the industrial output of the United States this year will be $50,000,000,000. Aid from the government in increasing production or in improving the handling of the product has been sought by business interests representing three-fifths of this total.

Hoover's department has become a clearing house of information for big business, and employes of many of the most important industrial corporations have been given desk room in the department's own office building.

ENGLAND, FRANCE FRAME GERMAN NOTE ON ARMS

Prepare Excuse for Further Extortion

PARIS, May 29—The French government today approved the final draft of the note to Germany regarding her alleged failure to carry out certain disarmament clauses of the treaty of Versailles. The council of ambassadors will formally adopt it tomorrow. The German government claims it has lived up to the disarmament clauses.

Foreign minister Briand announced at the session of the French cabinet that great Britain fully agreed to the terms of the note.

The allies are keeping troops in Cologne at German expense in violation of previous agreements and are endeavoring to shift the blame to Germany.

Negotiations for the Anglo-French security pact were progressing satisfactory, he said, all "fundamental differences" having disappeared.

The German government is seeking an extension of her frontiers at Poland's expense.

A joint delegation of allied ambassadors will formally bring the note to Berlin early next week.

The reparation commission, following a request from the council of ambassadors, affirmed that Germany thus far had fulfilled all her obligations under the Dawes plan.

A. F. of L. Executive Doubts That "Serious Minded" Would Listen

WASHINGTON, May 29—Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor announces that no action toward establishing a broadcasting station at Washington headquarters will be taken at this time. A special committee appointed by the executive council has found that the cost of maintenance, which would be $45,000 a year, is prohibitive.

Doubt was also felt as to whether cheaper methods of radio transmission might not soon be developed, and as to whether the radio audience would include enough serious-minded adults to make the expeenditure a wise one.

Russian Church to Show Revolutionary Workers' Aid Film

The All-Saints Orthodox Russian church of Wolf Run, Ohio, will give a showing on June 10th of the first I. W. A. film, "Russia Through the Shadows." This film, which has not been run very often during recent months, shows the Russian Revolution, the fight against intervention and blockade, the famine as the result of unprecedented drought, the activity of the American "Friends of Soviet Russia" first to fight the famine and then to extend technical aid to their Russian comrades in the form of tractors and farm machinery.

Conditions are bad in this little mining town of about 60 families. The mines have been closed down for thirteen months, and there is no prospect of improvement in the near future.

Find Evidence of Ancient City.

EAST ELY, Nev., May 29.— Evidences of a complete city which may have been of Chinese origin, are today being traced by the national cosmographic society, 25 miles west of Pioche, near White Horse Springs. Two and a half miles of obsidian cliffs are literally covered with ideographs and Chinese characters of the pre-ming dynasty, according to the scientists.

AS WE SEE IT

on credits for Moroccan campaign takes place. They may change their minds again.

JOHN BULL is looking at Morocco with an anxious eye. France is dickering with Spain. Should France succeed in making an alliance with the decrepid Spanish government and secure a road to Gibraltar along with a position on the north coast of Africa, the road to India would not be so safe for Britain. Fireworks between England and France may be confidently looked forward to over Morocco.

IN the meantime Britain is working might and main to get a new offensive against Soviet Russia started. The papers tell us that no foreign delegates to the Communist Party congress will be allowed into the "tight little isle." Copies of the London Daily Herald, advise us that the tory government has sent emissaries to every foreign office in Europe and even to Washington for the purpose of arranging for the sending of a joint note to Soviet Russia, warning the workers' republic that the Communist International must be suppressed, else diplomatic relations will be broken off.

AT the same time this news leaked out, the general council of the Trade Union Congress was publishing a report of the invesigation made into the incident of the famous "Zinoviev leter" by its delegation to Russia. It unhesitatingly branded the letter as a forgery and demands a public inquiry into the matter. The report will be found in another section of the DAILY WORKER.

THE British trade union movement is today torn between two tendencies; one that stands upon the basis of the class struggle; the other for class collaboration. This is an internatoinal phenomenon. The concrete question which reveals the true inwardness of the division is Soviet Russia. For or against the workers' republic? The trade union leaders like Cook, Tillet, Bromley, Swales and Purcell, not to mention thousands of others, are going to bat gallantly for the Soviet Union, while fakers like J. H. Thomas, MacDonald, Hodges and Snowden spend their time finding fault with Russia.

LaFollette Group May Combine with Johnston's C. P. P. A.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Progressives who supported the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket last year are stirred by a report—as yet unconfirmed—that Sen. LaFollette has brought about a peace parley between Rep. John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, who was chairman of the LaFollette campaign organization in Chicago, and William (B. & O. Bill) H. Johnston, national chairman of the conference for progressive political action. Each has maintained a "progressive headquarters" since last November.

Johnston was authorised, in February, to name a temporary national executive committee of five persons who should arrange for a national convention and state conventions leading up to the creation of the new party. Thus far he has not named the committee.

Sen. LaFollette has remained in seclusion in Washington since his rest-cure in Florida following a long illness due to pneumonia. He is reported to be nursing his physical strength for the senate next winter.

Steel Workers Spend $2,000 on Broadway Chorines by Proxy

BOURGEOISIE IN FEAR OF ITS OWN VIOLENT PHRASES

Wants to Conceal Its Revolutionary Past

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.—July 4th is going to be mobilization day and war demonstration day. There is an advantage of getting the workers to think of the day on which the declaration of independence was signed as a day of flag-saluting and sweaty marching under shouting and booted and suprred officers. It serves to make 'em forget that the declaration of independence states flatly that whenever a government fails to serve a people satisfactorily, they have a natural right to overthrow it and try a new one.

The Constitution Only

In congress, last February, the administration forces made it clear that they wanted only the federal constitution taught in the public schools. They voted down overwhelmingly an amendment that called for teaching the declaration of independence. Even the phrases of their own bourgeois revolution in the days of its infancy smacked too strongly of treason to present day imperialist government. So the 4th of July will be a day to inculcate obedience to authority rather than even a bourgeois suspicion of it.

Unpublished "War Measures"

Last year the editorial staff of a big eastern paper which began a campaign of ridicule against mobilization day was suppressed by the business manager just before it was to publish a program of "war measures" which logically should accompany the day. In this program were included:

1. Names of war profiteers for the new war—what the various big corporations could be expected to get out of it in inflated prices and in normal profits on supplies of various kinds.
2. Names of radical labor leaders to be jailed or mobbed for holding anti-war views. Names of prominent patriots who would denounce them, and epithets to be used to fit the new war.
3. Names of crooks whose records were cleared by their volunteering to hold high executive offices in the war-machine.
4. Establishing of breadless days, meatless days, shoeless days, shirtless days, salties days, etc., which would run concurrently during the demonstration. Gasless day would be essential to the test.
5. Lists of army officers killed, maimed, gassed and wounded.

This program never got into print.

FORREST, Ill., May 29.—Three passengers were slightly hurt today when the fast St. Louis-Chicago train of the Wabash railroad was derailed a short distance outside this city. A broken rail caused the derailment, railroad officials said. The train continued to Chicago, however, arriving several hours late. The injured received first aid treatment on the train.

Another Case of Let the Big Thieves Escape But Chase the Little Thieves

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the Chicago police department frantically broadcasts warnings to the property-owning populace of the nation's second city. Chicago leads the cities of the world with its homicides, but that doesn't bother the police department; it takes a day off to spread the warning, "Beware of pickpockets!"

The big thieves must be pretty busy if the police are taking the trouble to raise the cry of catch the little thief. The warning of the police says:

> "The sneak thief known as the pickpocket or dip is always waiting for an opportunity to relieve the citizen of the valuables he may carry on his person. Invariably they operate as a mob—two, three or four together, and in appearance are no different than the average citizen."

• • • •

Which should remind the police, but it won't, that Secretary of Agriculture Jardine is in town. It is rumored that he is to "investigate" the big thieves on the local board of trade, who have been stealing millions thru manipulating the price of wheat and other grain. These millions come out of somebody's pockets. The trend of wheat prices at this time of year is downward so the victim of this pocket-picking is the working farmer with his crops to sell. These multi-millionaire dips also operate in groups, as brokerage firms and grain dealers, being supported in their manipulations by the best banks, in which they are usually directors. Receiving stolen goods is a crime charged only against the little fellows. It has never yet touched a bank or other financial institution.

Jardine did not call the police to pinch the food gamblers at the board of trade, jam them into foul police station cells and then hawl them before a judge at the South Clark Street station.

Not at all! Jardine just had a heart to heart talk with the directors of the Chicago board of trade, in which he offered the opinion that when there is a spread of 15 cents a bushel in the price of grain in one day it is "gambling"; which is polite for pocket-picking. Then Coolidge's secretary of agriculture gave a talk over the radio assuring farmers that agricultural conditions were better this spring than they have been since 1920. But the farmer is worried more about "price conditions" fixed by the gamblers, than he is about "crop conditions" determined by the weather, which usually gives him an even break. The food profiteer never does.

• • • •

Says the Chicago "P. D." warning:

> "Do not display a large sum of money in public when it is not necessary."

The warning is perhaps unnecessary. Workers do not have large sums of money. If they did, it would be ridiculous to bring such charges as the one launched against a veteran postal employe in Kansas City, Max Rope, aged 40, 21 years in the service, who, it is claimed, stole 25 cents worth of rhubarb from a package at a postoffice station. The government has spent $10,000 in prosecuting Rope, trying to put upon him a penalty of five years' imprisonment or a fine of $5,000 or both.

The hypocritical district attorney says, "It is not the value of the property but the principle involved."

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine leaves Chicago headed for Kansas City, but this same prosecuting attorney will forget all about this "sacred principle" as it applies to the food speculators that reap a rich harvest of plunder from the grain growers and stock raisers of the southwest. This prosecutor, C. C. Madison by name, will make no kick to Jardine. The big thieves are respectable. Only the little thieves must be sent to prison.

• • • •

Another Chicago "P. D." warning:

> "When in a crowd or getting on a street car always be on the alert for anyone attempting to jostle you."

Which can be made to apply very concretely to the big profiteers, the industrial kaisers, who jostle and push the millions of underpaid workers into the shops, mills, mines and factories, robbing the pay envelopes thru low wages, depriving workers of their health and happiness thru the long workday and bad conditions of labor, and finally being thrown on the industrial scrap heap, like an empty pocket book emptied of its contents.

The extreme care with which the Chicago police department advises against petty pickpockets, forgetting the great criminals, betrays the class nature of this arm of the capitalist state. Since the big bucaneers of business dominate this capitalist state, they will always escape the police attack, which they direct. It is only a crime to be a little thief; and then the only crime is in getting caught.

Communism would abolish all thieves, both big and little, by placing in the hands of the producing many the results of their labor, for their own enjoyment. This can only be achieved thru the abolition of thieving capitalism and its oppressive class rule. That is the next step in human progress.

Foster's Speech Angers "Bill" Lee

within the trainmen's convention to Lee's autocratic rule over the brotherhood. "I made the convention come to me here in Cleveland this year, altho they had voted to go west," he told the Hi-Noon boss lunchers. Strategy figures on shoving Lee to one side gently as "honorary president" with pomp but no power, rather than making a direct fight on him.

Younger men in the vice presidencies aspire to the leadership of the brotherhood, desiring to place it in hearty co-operation with the other rail labor organizations. Strong sentiment is running thru the convention that Lee has made the organization look foolish by his obsequious attitude toward railway magnates. They compare their conditions with other crafts and cannot see how the sacrifice has been balanced by any gain in wages or rules.

Lee In Bad With Cleveland Labor.

In addition Lee has brought upon himself the fiery denunciation of local labor men and women. Because union waitresses believe in the closed shop, their business agent was refused the floor of the convention to make an appeal for patronage of union restaurants.

Lee used insulting language in denying her request, Kitty Donnelly told the Cleveland Federation of Labor. Other federation delegates denounced Lee for deliberately encouraging the open shop crowd in their campaign against union labor and union label goods.

Special Consideration.

The conference agreed to show special consideration to nations bordering on Soviet Russia. This means that the big capitalist powers intend to use them as bases against the workers' republic.

Britain proposed that the signature of Soviet Russia to the decisions of the traffic-in-arms conference should not be considered essential. This was seconded by Representative Burton on the head of the American delegation, who scored Russia for not attending. On Burton's suggestion a committee was appointed to consider the results of Russia's non-participation in the conference. This was understood to be a cloak under which to hide a new offensive against the Soviet power.

Chamber of Commerce of U. S. Likes the Esch-Cummins Law for R. R.

WASHINGTON—(FP)—May 29.—In its final session at Washington the U. S. chamber of commerce convention adopted this declaration on railroad policy:

"The transporation act of 1920 expressly provides for the preservation of our transporation systems in full vigor. Proposed amendatory legislation creates uncertainty in the public mind, tends to retard business, and thus interferes with the growth and development of our transporation system. . . . The record of the interstate commerce commission is such as to commend that body as the proper agency thru which all laws governing the common carriers should be administered."

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 29.—The Soviet Union has thru Soviet ambassador to China M. The chairman recently repealed an order of the Russian chairman, dismissing 200 counter revolutionary employes of the railway.

Karakhan's note states that the action of the Chinese chairman violates the agreement governing the management of the road.

BROOKLYN SHOE WORKERS FIGHT COMPANY TRICK

On Strike Over Plot to Wreck Union

By SAMUEL W. LEVICH
(Workers Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, May 29.—The B. W. S. Shoe factory, 235 Powel St., Brooklyn, N. Y., is at a stand still. All of the forty-six workers, who were coining profits for the four bosses, who own the factory are out on strike.

The history of the strike runs as follows: On April 30, 1925, as a result of an argument, one of the four bosses threatened the shop chairman with a hammer. On the same day all the workers walked out in protest. The bosses asked for a settlement, the shop crew held trial and forced the bosses to pay two hundred dollars for the two days lost time.

A Nice Little Conspiracy

In the meantime, the bosses framed up a neat little conspiracy, which exploded on May 10. On this day the four bosses called twelve workers whom they hoped they could seduce and use as scabs to smash the Shoe Workers' Protective Union in their shop.

The sneaky bosses presented to the workers a neat little plan offering them partnership in the business on condition that they (1) invest one thousand dollars each in the business; (2) They accept a reduction in wages in order to put the business on a more sound basis; (3) Increase the hours of work for the sake of expediency and (4) they should abstain from participation in any strike. Should any one of them join in a strike called by the union, he automatically loses his one thousand dollars investment in the business.

The same day the workers discovered this conspiracy, thanks to the efficient and live shop crew. On May 11 the workers met, the whole conspiracy for breaking the Shoe Workers' Protective Union in this shop and the trap set by the bosses for the twelve workers in order to be able to use them as scabs against the interest of the union and particualrly against the interests of the workers in their own factory, were discussed by the workers.

On May 14 a strike was declared which became immediately effective one hundred per cent. The main demand of the workers is for a new agreement, since the bosses violated the old agreement by a conspiracy against the workers. This new agreement demands protection and security against a repetition of such a conspiracy on the part of exploiters.

The writer asked the shop chairman why [illegible] has not presented a demand in his new agreement for reinstatement of all workers. The shop chairman only smiled saying that such points are unnecessary since the bosses know very well that if even one worker were fired, the workers as a whole would not return to work under any consideration. The writer further inquired from the shop committee as to what assistance they got from the press.

He was told by the strike committee that the only paper giving them support in their struggle in the Freiheit of New York. They said that they sent a committee to the Forward asking that an article on the strike be placed in their paper, but the yellow socialist Forward of New York true to its role as a traitor to the workers and a lackey of the bourgeoisie refused to support them on the flimsy ground that Comrade Cosgrove, a member of the Workers Party is their organizer.

The strike committee told the writer that so far as they are concerned the yellow Forward can go to hell with its yellow sheet together.

Stand By These Fighting Workers

The workers of the B. W. S. Shoe factory appeal to all shoe workers of Greater New York for support in their struggle against the conspiracy of the bosses to smash their union.

World Farmers' Congress Maps Action

ternational, greetings were given by delegates from several countries, including America and speeches delivered by Orloff and Dumbal, respectively president and secretary of the International. The general idea expressed by all emphasized strongly the necessity of organising the farmers against the capitalists in all countries and that the farmers cannot hope to win in their battle against the bourgeoisie without making an alliance with the workers.

Communism Peasants' Friend.

Kalinin, the farmer president of the U. S. S. R., is a very busy man, but nevertheless he found time to address the conference. His speech was roundly applauded. Comrade Kalinin stressed the thought that it was necessary to educate the farmer to realise that he is being robbed by the capitalist system, that the farmers of all countries are exploited by the bourgeoisie, and that Communism is the farmers' best friend.

The presidium of the Enlarged Executive submitted some principles and programs for the conduct of the work in the various countries, which were unanimously adopted by the plenum and a brief outline of which is given below.

Effects of War.

1. The imperialist world war constituted the beginning of the breakdown of world capitalism. The capitalists have now emerged from the war stronger in monopolistic organisation, and are making desperate efforts to shift the burden of the war upon the working class. This means reduced wages, longer hours, worse conditions of labor for the workers and increased taxation, bad terms of credit and ruinous fluctuation of prices for the farmers.

2. The farmers of the world were the greatest sufferers in the war: In loss of life, requisition of farm products for war purposes, low prices, bankruptcy and destruction of agricultural areas.

3. The post-war crises have led to a shrinkage of agriculture in Europe and to its expansion outside of Europe, with over-production in agriculture and a diminished demand for agricultural products, which, outside of Europe, lead to the collapse of farming, to the bankruptcy of millions of farmers who in great numbers move to the already over-crowded industrial centers.

Rapid Economic Changes.

4. The crises in agricultural production and consumption, the rupture of the world's economic relations, the military occupation of certain districts, the Dawes plan, create a situation of rapid economic changes, from revival to severe crises and clearly show the instability of capitalism.

5. The poor farmers have gained little or nothing from the increase in prices of agricultural products, owing to their heavy indebtedness to the banks and burdensome taxation, and the instability of the present period is not conducive to a continuation of high prices.

Competition Keener.

6. Competition among the world's capitalist powers is keener than ever and the imperialists seek a solution of the crises in the exploitation and oppression of the colonial peoples. Capitalism also endeavors to attain stabilisation by subjecting the workers to reduced wages and longer hours of labor and the farmers to increased taxation and low prices.

7. The war has led to a colossal swelling of the foreign debts and increases of the state budgets and the interest on these debts are shifted by the capitalists to the shoulders of the workers and farmers.

Revolutionary Sentiment Among Farmers.

8. The impoverishment of the poor farmers is causing revolutionary sentiment amongst them and drives them to active political work. The example furnished by the U. S. S. R. is a great source of inspiration to them in the conquest for political power.

9. The war and post-war crises have concentrated and centralized capital which rules ruthlessly over the unorganized farmers, producing reduced prices of agricultural products, worse credits and the increase of prices of industrial products.

10. In order to quiet the discontent among the poor farmers the capitalists promised them reforms, but these reforms were, for the most part, carried out in the interest of the well-to-do farmers, big landowners and banks.

Farmers Cannot Rule Alone.

11. The farmers, owing to their lack of organization and inexperience in the struggle, cannot by themselves maintain the power of the state. This is shown by the agrarian party now in power in Czecho-Slovakia which rules in the interest of the bourgeoisie and the landowners and in Bulgaria, where the farmers did rule but lost their power to the fascisti. For this reason the farmers need an ally and this ally must be the workers.

12. The tenant and mortgaged farmers and farm workers are beginning to become convinced that they have nothing in common with the big landowners and the banks and the bourgeoisie, and they are therefore now organizing themselves into unions and organizations of their own. The adherents of the International Farmers' Council should enter into these organizations and work in them, but without causing splits. If no organization exists thru which the ideas of the I. F. C. can be propagated then new organizations must be created for this purpose. These organizations should be both political and economic, based upon a program of concrete demands, affecting the mass of farmers.

Should Start Farm Organizations.

13. In many countries, as for instance, Poland, U. S., Canada and Mexico, farmers' organizations are being started, striving for the unity of interests with the city workers. Adherents of the I. F. C. should accelarate this process.

14. The active committees, embracing the whole population of farmers in the various localities, should be organized to fight for such demands as the land for the users, against heavy taxes and for cheap, long term credits.

Farmers' Councils.

15. When confronted with the question of the direct fight for power, the farmers, in alliance with the workers, should create farmers' and workers' councils to take charge of the work, in solidarity with the city workers.

16. Energetic work should be done in the farmers co-operatives, linking them up with the consumers co-operatives of the workers.

17. Work among the farm women is very necessary, organising them separately, but joining them to the general farmers' organizations.

18. The young men and young women on the farms should be be organized and linked up with the farmers' organizations, influencing the young on the farms away from the leadership of the half-hearted progressives.

Close Ties with Workers.

19. Farmers must establish the closest ties with the organisations of the city workers and the city workers should participate in farmers' organizations.

20. The program of action for the farmers must be suited to the actual situation in each country and such a program should include: (1) land for the users; (2) against high taxes; (3) better credits; (4) campaign against the banks and trusts; (5) against reparation in the vanquished countries; (6) against militarism and imperialist war; (7) defense of the U. S. S. R.; (8) for self-determination of all nations, including the colonial peoples; (9) close alliance of exploited farmers with the city workers.

Pamphlets and Newspapers.

21. Joint meetings and conferences of farmers and workers for the purpose of fighting the capitalists are very desirable. Pamphlets and newspapers, dealing with the problems of the tenant and mortgaged farmers and farm workers must be published.

22. It is necessary, when the occasion demands it, to point out the reactionary role of the clergy, but this should be done without offending the religious feelings of the farmers.

23. The aim should be to get as many farm organizations as possible, both political and economic to affiliate to or brought into contact with the I. F. C.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

The Shop Nuclei Training School

By A Student.

THE Chicago Young Workers' League is taking the reorganization on shop nuclei basis seriously. We know that only under the shop nucleus basis will we become a mass organization. Knowing this, we are doing as a good general always does; we have gone in for training.

On Monday evening, May 25, 25 students appeared in class for a course of 6 weeks in shop nuclei work.

This school is unlike any other school conducted by the league. In this school every student has the responsibility of organizing a nucleus in a factory, whether or not we have our comrades working there.

The first lesson has taught each and every student how to organize a nucleus only, but we will know how to conduct a well-functioning one.

This is the beginning of practical and systematic training of young Communist leaders and organizers.

This marks a great step forward for the bolshevization of the Chicago league.

BILLY SUNDAY MISSING FROM S. P. REVIVAL

sion of the 50th anniversary of the services and sacrifices of "this unique lover of the common people," Eugene V. Debs, bring about the resurrection of the socialist party, now so peacefully at rest, with flowers on its chest and everything? The corpse looks mighty yellow, but then, it's understood that this is its natural complexion.

Is the socialist party dead? In Cleveland, where Debs will speak shortly, that old vote-catching war-horse, John Willert, chants its dirge every chance he gets. At the metal trades council, at his union meeting, he constantly harks back to the good old days when he was elected a socialist councilman. He was thrown out of the council upon order of the chamber of commerce. But this is not considered an honor by him. This was an awful mistake. Willert still holds that eventually he will sneak up on the chamber of commerce, grab a seat in the city council unbeknownst to it, and make the revolution.

That the sneaking-up policy is being tried out is proven concretely. In recent elections in Cleveland the socialist party candidates were, the same as all other capitalist candidates, just a picture and a name to the workers of this industrial center. Nothing appeared upon any election literature which would give any one to understand that the socialist party was operating for either reform or revolt. Its name did not appear.

The Party Is Hidden.

And now comes this revival, or rather an attempt at it. There are cards in the windows. There are sheets upon the billboards. The name of Debs is flashed in big red letters. But the name of the party he wants to bring back to life is not mentioned. Then look at the literature, the letters of the Debs meeting committee. Mind, it is not the socialist party that is conducting the meeting. There is a local Debs meeting committee. It has sent out hundreds of letters, asking all and sundry to come and see and hear "the best loved man in America." In these letters there is much talk of the tremendous heart, of weary souls, of social wrong, of oppressed humanity, of liberty and justice loving people—but not a word about the class struggle, or the working class and the capitalist class, and not a word about the socialist party. Its name does not appear.

This gumshoe method of trying to rope in votes and members will not prove successful. Workers who are for the revolution know that there is an enemy, that there is a struggle ahead, and this attempt to obliterate class lines and to soften and humanize the conflict will not win any adherents that are worth a whoop.

Nice gentlemen and ladies will go to the meetings and take a look and feel, for a moment, real sympathetic with the aged spiritual leader of this decrepid party, but there will be nothing more to the party, no more red blood in it after the meeting than before.

The socialist party all over the world, has accepted the job of handmaiden to the capitalist class. In Finland it helped to defeat the revolutionary masses in an attempt to establish the Soviet. In Germany Liebknecht and Luxemburg, the leaders of the revolutionary workers, were murdered under a socialist regime and that arch monarchist Hindenburg is president there today because the German social democracy believed in stabilizing the bourgeois order rather than in establishing the proletarian dictatorship. In Hungary they helped to overthrow the Soviet government and then, to save their own skin, entered into an agreement with that murder Horthy, promising to be good little boys under the Horthy regime, if Horthy only would allow them to play a bit in their usual yellow way.

Hillquit For the Bosses.

While the spiritual leader holds forth in Cleveland, Hillquit, the theoretical leader, writes a memorandum in New York. As counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to the New York governor's advisory commission, investigating the garment industry, he speaks as follows: "The union emphatically denies that charge that it persues a policy of antagonism towards the employers. On the contrary, the whole record of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in this city is a continuous effort to co-operate with the employers on the basis of justice and fairness."

This is what we would dubb the trade union policy of the socialist party. Class collaboration in the unions. No class distinction in politics. We are all one human race looking for freedom and liberty. This is the reactionary, counter-revolutionary program of that handful of yellow evangelists who have begun a campaign to resurrect a corpse, now resting so peacefull, with flowers on its chest and everything.

The Workers Party in Action

LABOR HAS OWN 'MEMORIAL' DAY CELEBRATIONS

Workers Ignore Bosses Military Propaganda

The militant workers of America will celebrate the successful assaults of their class on the loosening grip of the exploiters, and will pause to commemorate the memory of those workers slain by the cruelty and greed of the employers on this Memorial day.

The advanced guard of the workers will not take part in the sickening glorification of pre-digested past capitalist wars which is being served up by the Coolidge officials and bloated bankers to "educate" the laboring population.

Militarists Out In Force.

In Chicago the odor of the carnations which are profusely to be spread about will not be strong enough to hide the stench of the utterances of the majors and colonels sent to preach war to the public school children during the next few days by Lieutenant P. J. Rundle, of the Cook county grand army of the republic.

The workers will celebrate their own victories in their own way. On May 30, the annual Trade Union Educational League picnic will be held at Altenheim Grove, at the end of the Forest Park "L" line. The motif of the occassion will be recreation. However, William Z. Foster will speak on his recent experiences in Russia and William F. Dunne will have a conspicuous part in the program.

Working Women March.

In New York, the women's committee of the Workers (Communist) Party district 2, in co-operation with the United Council of Workingclass Women and other women's organizations will gather at 12 noon, on Sunday May 31, at 108 E. 14th Street, to march with banners to the graves of victims of the Triangle Waist factory fire, where 146 working girls were burned to death in March 1911.

The working women will remind the workers of New York how the greedy chase for profits of the clothing bosses cost the lives of these girls, who were burned like rats in the ancient firetrap.

Novy Mir Steamer Ride

A more joyous aspect of the observance of "Decoration" day by the New York workers will be the round trip excursion of the Russian Communist newspaper Novy Mir. The steamer Ida will leave New York May 29 at 8 P. M., and innumerable ways of enjoyment on the week end trip have been provided.

There will be dancing, fishing, and concerts. A camp 2,000 miles above sea level near Saugertise, 100 miles from New York, will provide a delightful place to celebrate. The fare will be $4.25 a round trip, and tickets may be secured at the Novy Mir office, 30 Union Square.

The bosses' organizations on the other hand will flood the country with military propaganda for preparing the workers to get killed in the next war.

West Side Branches in New York Start New Party Center

NEW YORK, May 29.—The new garment capital in New York city, in the Thirtieth street and around Seventh Ave., has grown in the last seven years at the rate of one building every month, each building averaging 15 floors, and giving employment to almost 100,000 workers.

It is of great importance that our party have a center and meeting place in that section. We opened a headquarters there, located at 375 Seventh avenue (near 31st street); and we offer our headquarters to shop nuclei, shop committees, etc., for their meetings.—The West Side Branches of the Workers Party, English, Greek, Jugo-Slav, Italian and Shop Nuclei.

Seattle Celebration Raises $110 for Labor Defense Council Aid

SEATTLE, Wash., May 29—The tabulation made on the Paris Commune Day celebration in Seattle shows a profit of $110.45. This sum has been forwarded to the Labor Defense Council national headquarters for defense of class war prisoners.

Participating in the affair were all branches of the Workers Party in Seattle including a Caucasian branch, the Lithuanian Literatry Society, the Lettish Workers Club, the Russian Dramatic Club, the Seattle Labor College and the local branches of the Workmen's Circle.

STATEMENT OF THE C. E. C. ON REPORT OF DELEGATES TO THE ENLARGED MEETING OF E. C. C. I.

The statement of the Workers (Communist) Party Central Executive Committee on the report of the delegates to the meeting of the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International is as follows:

* * * *

HAVING heard the report of the party delegates to the Enlarged Executive of the Communist International, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America fully approves the work and decisions of the Enlarged Executive and pledges wholehearted support in carrying these decisions into life.

THE Central Executive Committee is in complete agreement with Comrade Zinoviev and with the Enlarged Executive that the period in the development of the world revolution demands especially that Communist parties intensify and extend their work in Bolshevizing the parties ideologically, politically and organizationally.

THE Central Executive Committee supports wholeheartedly the determined struggle of the Communist International to defeat and liquidate the right wing in the Communist International as expressed by Bubnik in Chechoslovakia, the Brandler group in Germany, Loreism in Amreica and Trotzkyism in the Communist International generally.

THE Central Executive Committee endorses the stress and emphasis placed by the Enlarged Executive upon the agrarian question. It sees in it a timely reminder to the parties of the Communist International that the Communists must energetically engage in work among the peasantry (farmres) in accord with the principles of Leninism.

THE Central Executive Committee also subscribes fully to the position formulated in the Bolshevization thesis on shop nuclei and trade union work and all other provisions for the Bolshevization of the parties.

THE Central Executive Committee feels that this meeting of the Enlarged Executive marks a historic epoch in the life of the Communist International and enables the Communist movement to proceed more effectively along the road of struggle that leads to the conquest of power by the working class and the establishment of a World Soviet Republic.

A Call to Action!

MOBILIZE FOR A RED WEEK OF PARTY BUILDING JUNE 15 TO 21

To all party units and all party members.
Dear Comrades:

In the resolution of the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International on the American Question, our party is told that "UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES SHOULD IT UNDERESTIMATE IN ANY WAY THE IMPORTANCE OF SUCH "MINOR" TASKS AS THE CIRCULATION OF THE DAILY WORKER."

Our party members have been underestimating the importance of the task of increasnig the circulation of the DAILY WORKER. The circulation of the DAILY WORKER is not as large as the membership of the party. Every member of the party should be a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER and each member should secure at least one additional subscriber.

If that were true we should have 50,000 readers. WE MUST MAKE IT TRUE.

The first mobilization of the party to reach this goal, which the Communist International has emphasized, will be from June 15th to 21st. The Central Executive Committee of the party has called for A RED WEEK OF PARTY BUILDING TO SECURE FIVE THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE DAILY WORKER.

Special subscription cards at $1.00 for two months subscription are being issued for this "RED WEEK," which will make is easy to secure subscriptions.

WHAT EACH BRANCH MUST DO:

Every party branch, upon receipt of this letter, shall set a quota of subscriptions for itself and send in the enclosed blank to the DAILY WORKER. This quota should be at least at large as the membership of the branch.

If you want sample copies for free distribution during the "RED WEEK" fill out the order on the blank. Also order the special subscription cards.

THE NEXT STEP is to organize the branch to secure the subscriptions it assesses itself. A COMMITTEE should be appointed to take charge of the campaign. Every member should be assigned some special place to solicit subscriptions during the "RED WEEK," in his shop, in his union, to attend public meetings, to canvass a list of friends—all the avenues of securing subscriptions must be covered.

Comrades! Our party must learn to work as a unit. We must be able to carry thru organized effort of this character. We must be able to mobilize our party for such a "minor" task as adding FIVE THOUSAND READERS TO THE SUBSCRIPTION LIST OF THE DAILY WORKER.

WE ask you to make "RED WEEK," June 15th to 21st, the first example of such mobilization. Five thousand new subscribers should be a minor task for our party, but five thousand new subscribers will be a big boost for the DAILY WORKER both in circulation and financially.

Send in your branch quota so we can publish it in the DAILY WORKER and inspire other branches to action. Organize your branch for the work of the "RED WEEK OF PARTY BUILDING."

Fraternally yours,
WM. Z. FOSTER, Chairman,
C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary,

French Communists on the Job

French Communists have shown to the world, and the world today includes hundreds of millions of colonial workers and peasants, what the Communist parties and the Communist International mean when they say they are for the liberation of all colonial peoples from the imperialist yoke.

The Communist deputies demanded the immediate withdrawal of all French troops from Morocco and the immediate ending of the imperialist war. They defended the right of the Riffians to possession of their country and called upon the French troops to refuse to fight for the French imperialists.

The socialists raised their yellow banner, as usual. They deplored the cost of the war, regretted the sacrifice of lives, but did and said nothing in behalf of the colonials whom the French government is murdering that it may retain its control of northern Africa and more efficiently enslave the millions of Negroes in its West African possessions.

In France is shown the application of the united front tactics of the Communists in sharp contrast to the betrayal of the colonial peoples by the socialists. It is a united front from below, unity of the most advanced section of the working class with the most oppressed of the millions under French rule and the tremendous value of this demonstration of solidarity will be seen more clearly as the colonial liberation movements gather momentum.

The Pittsburgh Sedition Cases

The sedition cases against the ten Communist defendants in Pittsburgh have been brought to life after two years. Two reasons probably prompt the authorities in renewing these prosecutions arising out of a May Day celebration two years ago.

The first is the activity of the Communists in the steel and allied industries and among the coal miners, the second is the general disposition shown to press such cases, particularly against foreign-born workers, as evidenced by the revival of deportation drives.

Pittsburgh without the Communists is fairly peaceful. That is, there is no other determined working class group that takes the lead in the struggle against the steel trust and its government and they have decided to try once more the method of suppression.

The Pennsylvania sedition law is more vicious than most of the similar laws in other states because of another measure which makes it compulsory for judges to sentence offenders to serve not less than one-half of the maximum sentence. In the Pittsburgh cases this means that the victims will get a miniumum of something like ten years in the penitentiary.

The defense of our comrades in Pennsylvania will be a heavy burden on our party, but such work is one of our most important tasks. The savage sentences these comrades must serve if they are convicted make it absolutely necessary that the party respond quickly and generously to all calls in their behalf.

From Guatemala

It is with the greatest pleasure that we publish the following letter received from a far away region we hear of very little but where American imperialism has reached and where the Communist press has followed:

> Guatemala City, April 12, 1925.
> William Dunne,
> Editor of the DAILY WORKER.
> Comrade:—In the name of this group I send you a cordial greeting, wishing that each day your work goes steadily forward.
> We receive your periodical, the DAILY WORKER, which pleases us very much, but we would prefer it in a Spanish edition.
> We hope that by means of you, we may be put in contact with other groups that follows the same ideal.
> Without further particulars, I am happy to sign myself, your comrade in the struggle.—Antonio Cumes, Secretary of the
> SINDICATO ROJO DE ZAPATEROS
> (Red Uunion of Shoemakers).

This is not the first letter from Latin-American countries we have published and this fact shows the keen interest of the Latin-American workers in the progress of the Communist movement in the United States. They would prefer to have the DAILY WORKER in Spanish, as they say, but they find someone of their number who reads English and it is translated for them.

By many methods the workers of the two continents are being brought together in the common struggle and of all these methods the circulation of the Communist press is most effective.

A Martyr of the Revolution

The death of Marko Friedman, hanged by the Bulgarian murder government, is an inspiration to every revolutionist. He died as he had lived, an uncompromising foe of capitalism.

At his trial he accused the Zankov government of the slaughter of thousands of workers and peasants and laid upon it the responsibility for the Sofia explosion.

He was sent to the gallows as a victim of the insane blood lust of the Bulgarian rulers and their imperialist backers. He had no part in the bomb explosion, but he defended bravely the workers and peasants during the countless and horrible persecutions inflicted upon them. As a Communist he had carried out the Communist policy of building a mass movement and no one knew better than he the futility of individual acts of terror as a means of freeing the working class.

Friedman is another name added to the long, long list of the martyrs of the revolution. Unlike the early christian martyrs, however, ours die fighting and this is the way Communists want to die.

The new order is appearing and its foundation stones are cemented with the blood of the bravest of our class in Bulgaria and every other country.

A Marxian Criticism of Art and Science

The Newer Spirit, a sociological criticism of literature, by V. F. Calverton, publisher, by Boni and Liveright.

A YOUNG scholar, 25 years old, V. F. Calverton by name, has just published a book of essays, "The Newer Spirit." The sensation that attends a new novel by Sinclair Lewis or a harlequinade by H. L. Mencken, has not followed Calverton's book. It has received long and puzzled reviews in many capitalist papers, but the "young intellectuals" who speak for bourgeois America today have not made any great fuss over Calverton. Why should they? The young intellectuals who half-believed that czardom would last forever did not make much of a fuss when Plechanoff wrote the first book of Marxian assays in Russia. Russia today realizes, however, that Plechanoff was the intellectual forefather of the ideas behind the Russian revolution.

HIS book, to the best of my knowledge, is the first serious attempt in this country to apply the touchstone of Marxian interpretation to every phase of human thought. We have had a few Marxian propagandists and economic theorists in America, Daniel De Leon first of all, but Calverton seems the first to have reached out into domains hitherto considered sacred to the cultured college bred bourgeoisie. He has not allowed himself to be confined to economics and history alone; Marxism is a key to the riddle of all human thought.

Imagine a Marxian bringing his stern eye and steely technique of criticism into the muddled and troubled worlds of psychology, anthropology, literature, art, ethics, esthetics, science in general. Here, for many years, the college professors have felt themselves safe from revolutionary thought; and American Marxians, hitherto, have not had the boldness, the desire or the equipment to challenge the bourgeois professors in their own fields. Calverton, following in the footsteps of the European and Russian giants of Marxism, walks fearlessly into the bourgeois temples, however, and with cool, dispassionate, and almost dull determination proceeds to smash idol after idol.

THE very titles of his essays reveal the important and far-reaching tasks this young Marxian critic has set for himself:

1. The Sociological Criticism of Literature.

In this essay Calverton proves how mystic and mushy most American literary criticism is. It is based on whim and class prejudices. Calverton gives a miniature history of literature, and shows how it has in every age reflected the life of the predominant class. As the proletariat rises to power, it is also becoming the theme for fiction and art, he says.

2. Sherwood Anderson, a Study in Sociological Criticism.

In this rather lengthy essay Calverton analyzes the work of one of the best of modern fictionists in America, and shows the proletarian coming to consciousness in some of Anderson's stories. He also shows the social sources of Sherwood Anderson's many defects—his adolescent mysticism, his peasant-like fear of machinery and large cities. A searching Marxian study—one of the first ever attempted in this field in America.

3. The Impermanency of Esthetic Values.

THIS essay is a very cool and scientic demolition of all the the theories of the art-for-art-sakers. The favorite illusion of artists is that tho all other values in life are inconstant, and change with the centuries, art has certain values that are immortal. Calverton destroys this obsession.

4. Proletarian Art.

"The proletarian motif have introduced a new psychological element into art," this essay begins. It traces the rise of the proletarian minded writers in America. It should have been the longest and most important essay in the book, but Calverton has been rather weak here. Perhaps one needs a full book to cover this subject. I should like to see a critic like Calverton discuss the youngest proletarian writers, those whose work appears in only the revolutionary journals—and who have not yet published books. It is in such work that a critic creates and inspires a new world, also proves his ability to pick for the future.

5. Critique of American Criticism.

THIS, to me, is the most delicious chapter in the book. The pompous windbag bourgeois critics who write for the American Mercury, The Nation, the Dial, et al, are here handed some of the solidest wallops they have ever received. Nothing personal or petty—just clear scientific analysis, crueller with its lancet-thrust than any club.

H. L. Mencken, the newspaper Neitzchean, a college boy's dream of a supremacy, is disposed of as neatly and completely as even the most ardent enemy of his brand of near-beer supermanliness could wish. The conclusion reads:

"YET Mr. Mencken is representative of our present generation. He is representative of an era that precedes collapse. His verbal antics and inconsistencies of logic vividly reflect the chaotic indecision and contradiction of our time—and nation. Our mind is still afflicted with dubiety and myopia. It revolts against bourgeois ethics, but not against bourgeois economics. It is feverish and frenetic, insurrectionary of mood, but without knowledge of direction. It is content with superficial remonstrance. It realizes deficiencies but prefers to laugh at them—not to lessen or eliminate them. And so Mr. Mencken thrives!"

6. Morals and Determinism.

A shrewd and scholarly study, from the Communist-Marxian viewpoint, of this tangled central theme of most classic philosophy.

7. The Great Man Illusion.

A fine bit of original thinking.

8. The Rise of Objective Psychology.

What has happened in economics, is happening in the less established science of psychology. The materialist viewpoint is unlocking many a riddle here.

9. The Quantitative Conception.

A study in scientific method, and how it has begun to affect all modern thought.

10. The Trend of Modern Psychology.

Another assault on the philosophic idealists, who so long have obscured confused and corrupted the young thinkers who might have helped in the social struggle.

TEN essays in all; not a well-rounded book, but a collection of scattered essays. Yet there is displayed a viewpoint—a philosophy—and it is the new, scarcely emerging world philosophy of world Communism. Here and there, in Europe and Russia and the orient, young thinkers are arising to do this important work of destroying the old bourgeois values in art and science, and erecting the new proletarian world on the ruins. Calverton is one of the first to attempt the job in America. That is why he is so interesting.

His book has faults. Calverton becomes wordy and pollysylabic at times—his weight of learning cramps the swift, youthful spirit of his thought, which is forced to limp, when it should run. He should learn how not to write for the wide audiences interested in "the newer spirit," and the books it produces.

There are marks of provinciality in some of Calverton's ideas, also; he has a naive awe of successful writers like Sherwood Anderson. Calverton has not enough self-consciousness to realize that he belongs to another generation than Anderson's, and that his task as critic—is to search out, and gather the young men of his own generation in battle against the Andersons and Carl Sandburgs, whose work is already finished, great as that work was.

THERE are not many, perhaps to gather; the skilled artists and writers in America who are bolsheviks and are trying to create proletarian art can be counted on the hands. But Calverton is one of them; and he should stimulate and criticize and cast in his fortunes with the rest.

For I believe he has the makings of a great intellectual leader, this young Calverton who pursues his scholarship in the city of Baltimore, and his book to me is a wonderful signal from the future. It is a proof that thinking has not died in the revolutionary movement here—I mean philosophical thinking, which so many of the "hard boiled" profess to despise, like the old-time wobbly.

In Europe or Russia, Calverton will be understood and known a great deal better than he will be here, but that is because there have been real revolutions over there—and men know that a new world is in birth—with more problems than that of trade unionism.—Michael Gold.

DOHENY WILL FIGHT CAL, OIL LEASE DECISION

Judge Rules Lease Must Be Returned

LOS ANGELES, May 29. — United States Judge Paul J. McCormick late today rendered a decision declaring illegal the E. L. Doheny leases in the Elk Hills, California, naval oil reserve and cancelling the Doheney contracts for construction of navy fuel storage facilities at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The Teapot Dome lease in Montana is still held by H. F. Sinclair.

Case Not Yet Ended.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The decision of Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick in ordering the Pan-American Petroleum Co., to give up its leases at Elk Hills, Calif., and its storage facilities at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on the ground that they were obtained from former Secretary of the Interior Fall, thru "fraud," was described by Frank J. Hogan, one of the Doheny attorneys, as only the "first step" in the oil lease litigation.

Hogan said that an appeal would be noted by counsel for Doheny in Los Angeles in June.

Fraud and Conspiracy

LOS ANGELES, May 29.—Covering more than 105 typewritten pages, the decision includes the following outstanding findings;

Each of the contracts and leases held by the Doheny interests is "void and illegal" because of fraud and conspiracy of Fall and Doheny and further because of transfer and delegation of power from the secretary of the navy to the secretary of the interior.

Fall and Doheny were guilty of conspiracy and fraud and acted against "public policy" thru Doheny's $100,000 "loan" to Fall while the Doheny interest were negotiating leases and contracts.

Reports, however, indicate that the famine is as bad as ever, and the American workers are called upon to show their solidarity with their comrades in Ireland.

All sympathetic organizations are invited to participate in the Tag Day in order that the whole city may be covered.

Find the Multilated Corpses of 34 No. Car. Mine Victims

Members of the rescue party that found the bodies said it was their opinion that every one of the entombed men was dead.

Six bodies were recovered last night four of white men and two Negroes.

AMUNDSEN MAY BE EXPLORING, BELIEF OF AIDS

Not to Search for Pole Flier for Week

OSLO, Norway, May 29.—Continued fair weather in the Polar zone and the knowledge that Captain Roald Amundsen expected to make more extensive observations at the Pole than was at first believed served to allay the fears that have been expressed as to his safety.

Latest dispatches from Spitzbergen, where Amundsen and his companions hopped off on their daring aerial dash to the Pole last Thursday stated that members of his base party did not favor starting any search for the missing explorer until at least two weeks have elapsed.

Amundsen's instructions, according to Lieut. Horgen, a member of the party still at Spitzbergen, were that if he has not heard from him for fourteen days, the steamer Hobby was to go eastward and the steamer Farm, westward along the ice barrier. If a six-week search produced no result, the ships were to return on the presumption that Amundsen was directing his course to Cape Columbia, approximately 250 miles north of Greenland.

These instructions indicated that Amundsen started out on his spectacular dash with the firm intention of making observations that would require considerable time.

principle. T. U. E. L. members present leaned forward breathlessly awaiting the amalgamation message, but Mattey failed to draw the conclusion.

Waxing eloquent the disappointed crown prince orated, "There are those who say that capitalism must be destroyed. No, No! There are those who say we must take possession of the tools of production, No. No!" He then waxed sentimental and described the human hands as the greatest tools and that control over them was all the control that labor needed, and petered off into vague generalities on organization.

Fakers and Wobblies Agree

Speaking on the open shop drive in 1920 he said that labor had in most places withstood the onslaught, but that in certain places "flexibility" was necessary.

Although Woll is on the political committee of the A. F. of L. lined up with the I. W. W. in an attack upon working class political action and joined the syndicalists in worshipping at the shrine of economic power. In vesting "economic power" with corporeal being he portrayed it as riding rough shod over a political instrument, namely the Sherman anti-trust law.

Bring On Your "Economic Power"

It transpires as grim humor that after the meeting Woll's chairman Brother Collins and Brother Fitzgerald were pinched for violation of the anti-trust law and that Brother Woll must resort to this dispised political action to free his "economic" agents.

"Harmony and order" were invoked much as the chamber of commerce invokes law and order and obviously against the same militancy which disturbs the tranquillity of the babbitts in both camps. The only "disturbing" note was sounded by Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, who spoke of the bosses "driving slaves." Brother Woll and others had used the more euphemistic term, "wage earners."

An organization committee was selected consisting of Wm. Collins, chairman; Brothers Coach, McCoy, Loughead, Fitzgerald, Martel and Batt. The meetings are to be held the 2nd and 4th Wednesdays of each month. An enlarged organization committed consisting of three members from each local union will participate in these bi-weekly meetings.

Charging price fixing and curtailing of production in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, two hundred and sixty nine indictments were returned in federal court here against furniture and refrigerator manufacturers all over the country. Their annual business totals $600,000,000.

Books and records of the suspected companies were laid before the grand jury. Radiograms were employed to serve subpoenaes.

The central point at which the price of the product was fixed is said to have been Grand Rapids, Mich.

STOCKHOLM, May 29.—The Swedish riksdag, after a bitter debate voted to accept the defense commission's proposal reducing the size of the army from six to four corps.

250 Telephone Girls Lose Jobs.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., May 29.— At midnight tonight the Home Telephone company switches over to the automatic system and 250 telephone operator girls will be out of jobs.

Van Sweringen Has No Records of R. R. Merger, He Claims

WASHINGTON, May 29.—O. P. Van Sweringen, creator of the plan to merge five railroads into a single system was subjected to a searching cross-examination before the interstate commerce commission today by Henry W. Anderson, counsel for dissenting minority stockholders of the Chesapeake & Ohio, one of the roads involved in the proposed consolidation.

None of the memoranda, studies, reports and letters bearing on the merger has been preserved.

I. C. Would Issue Bonds.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Illinois Central railroad and two of its subsidies, the Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans and the Canton Aberdeen and Nashville asked the interstate commerce commission today for authority to issue $7,094,000 of Illinois Central and Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans joint first refuding mortgage bonds.

Killed at R. R. Crossing.

Getting a DAILY WORKER sub or two, will make a better Communist of you.

'SYMBOLISM' TO BE SPOUTED BY SCOPES' DEFENSE

Will Not Dare Expose Nonsense in Bible

DAYTON, Tenn., May 29.—The report here that Rev. George Craig Stewart of Evanston, pastor of the fashionable St. Luke's episcopal parish and a trustee of Northwestern University, may be called as a witness for the defense of John Scopes, adds further proof to the statement that the defense will not deny the truth of the bible.

The attorney defending the right of Scopes to teach evolution in the public schools of the state, despite the state anti-evolution law, will try to reconcile the statements of Darwin with the statements of the bible. They will not be bold enough to state plainly that the bible is a mixture of history and fantastic fairy tales, but will call on Stewart and others to declare that the bible may be interpreted "symbolically" to include the theory of evolution.

Dr. Stewart claims that the bible is "spiritual" and cannot be contradicted by physical science.

Jardine Harmless, Gamblers Find After Flood of Mealy Talk

Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine believes conditions in the board of trade here would be much bettered if there were limitations in grain price fluctuations. He wants also to see established a clearing house for trades.

Secretary Jardine thus expressed himself today to President Carey and directors of the board of trade. Jardine would not say, however, that he would take definite steps to "regulate" stock-gambling.

End Revenue Probe.

WASHINGTON, May 29—The Couzens committee of the senate, which has been conducting an investigation of the internal revenue bureau, including prohibition enforcement, today ended its formal hearings.

Deport Workers to Africa.

LISBON, Portugal, May 29—Thirty workers accused of revolutionary activity were placed aboard ship today for deportation to Portuguese Guinea in Africa.

Blast in Chop Suey Parlor.

Calles Fights Farmers in Mexico

By Bertram D. Wolfe

MEXICO CITY.—One of the phenomena that accompany the personal dictatorships disguised in democratic forms so typical of many Latin-American countries, is the rapid progressive disintegration of the political parties or groups to which the presidents of Mexico nominally belong.

This disintegration was covertly fomented both by Calles and Obregon, as it is the only alternative to his fortifying such groups and thus having to share with them his power and perhaps even submit to their discipline.

THIS constitutes the immediate political cause of the disintegration of the so-called "socialist" bloc in the present chamber of deputies which manifests itself in the form of a conflict between its constituent parties, the Agrarista and the Laborista (Agrarian and Labor parties.) Moreover, there are deeper-lying social causes which determine both the personal dictatorship and the conflict between the parties in question.

In Mexico, where every movement tends to take the form of a crystallization around a personal chieftain or caudillo with the consent of or in revolt against the "big chief" who is head of the army and president of the nation, the labor party cannot be explained without great emphasis upon its own caudillo and the particular presidents that it has supported or fought.

THE labor party, like the Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana on which it tries to base itself, grew up around the personality of Luis N. Morones and a little group of followers (about a half dozen.) At the same time, its name, "labor" and its pretended socialist program are explainable as filling certain vague aspirations of the masses.

The labor party first became a political force in the petty maquinations that center around the president and the chambers while Carranza was the supreme chieftain of the nation. All of its leaders, including Morones, were then in the pay of Carranza. However, he elected to aid in its disintegration in favor of other parties and Morones joined forces with Obregon, Calles and De la Huerta who prepared a revolt which overthrew Carranza within one month after it started. Morones then became the representative of the Obregon government in the labor movement, being in the pay of Obregon as he had formerly been in that of Carranza.

THE political majority of the then parliament finding that Obregon and Calles elected to reinforce the labor and agrarian parties as the more easily controlled group, changed from support to hostility and engineered with the aid of the military and some support from English capital and Mexican landowners, the De la Huerta rebellion. The rebellion crushed, the labor and agrarian parties remained as the sole administration parties, and the forms of an election were gone thru on behalf of their candidate, Calles.

From the moment that Calles assumed power, it became obvious that he was going to eliminate the agrarian party from the political arena. His very cabinet appointments foreshadowed it. It had been a foregone conclusion that the agrarian party would have the ministry of agriculture and the labor party the ministry of commerce, industry and labor. Morones was the candidate for the latter position, Ramon P. De Negri for the former. De Negri was not appointed, and in his place was named a non-member of the agrarian party, Luis Leon.

THE agrarian party had come to be an inconvenience. Calles did not intend to prosecute his land program actively "for reasons of economy." An uncomfortable left wing was developing in the agrarian party which wing was preserving some contact with the Communists. And the rank and file of the peasants were far to the left wing of the political organization. Moreover, there was a manifest tendency on the part of the peasants (supported in this by the Communists) to form non-political organizations of economic attack and defense. (Non-political in the sense that they existed to get land, not to make deputies.)

THE agrarian party presented the additional disadvantage of organizing both political locals and peasants' leagues, and using its control of the local agrarian committees of the government to distribute land in such a way as to strengthen its political influence.

In April, matters came to a head when Morones, in the presence of the president and no doubt with his approval, attacked the agrarian party, agrarian congress in the state of Zacatecas. From then on, the friction has grown continually, until an open rupture has become inevitable. Conciliation commissions have been named, but the labor party remains inflexible in insisting that the Mexican Federation of Labor (C. R. O. M., which has the same leaders as the labor party altho the majority of its masses are without political affiliation) should be the only organiaztion to organize workers and peasants on its policies and its "politicians" in an the economic field, whereas the labor and agrarian parties are to limit their activities to the parliamentary field. The negotiations continue, but the labor party continues seeking new allies in the agrarian field.

IN the meanwhile, the agrarian party is disintegrating rapidly as does every organization here that has lived from the government treasury when the government withdraws support. The fate of the labor party would be similar but much more rapid if Calles withdrew his support from it, for it has less masses, less social root and has done nothing for its members except distribute jobs.

The left wing of the agrarian party is disintegrating along with the rest, a few of its elements gravitating toward the Communists but the rest, strangely enough, preparing to ally themselves with the next reactionary revolt that comes along.

THE dissolution of the agrarian party, the frankly anti-land-seizure policy of the labor party and the Federation of Labor leaves the peasants with only one leader, the Communist Party of Mexico. This already has control of the two most powerful and best organized peasant leagues and is actively pushing its program of a national peasant economic organization not subordinated to any political party, the securing of land as its central objective. The national organizing committee and the League of Vera Cruz which is its backbone are affiliated with the Peasant International at Moscow. Its president is Uruslo Galvan, member of the executive of the Peasant International and member of the Communist Party of Mexico.

The Ministerial Crisis in France

By Albert Trient (Paris)

THE ministerial crisis in France is only the expression of a crisis of the capitalist regime itself. The ministerial crisis has been solved for the time being; the crisis of the regime is still developing.

The Enlarged Executive of the Communist International has characterized the present international situation as corresponding to a period of temporary stabilisation of capitalism, a period which constitutes an interval in the present historical era, which is an era of the decay and collapse of the capitalist regime and of the extension of the proletarian revolution which had its commencement in Russia.

It must not be forgotten that France constitutes an exception. The regime here is not entering upon a period of stabilisation but is leaving one behind it.

IT is in the first place a financial crisis. It is a question of a floating debt of 80 milliards francs, 25 milliards of which are repayable in the course of this year. In addition to this, and having far profounder effects, there is the economic crisis. The stabilisation of the franc is hampering exports in view of the competition of German, American, English and even Norwegian industry on the world market. If the stabilisation of the franc is maintained it will lead to the progressive limitation of exports, which means the partial restriction of production and increased unemployment. For the big and middle export industry, it is vitally necessary to resort to inflation.

The basic industries, and especially the coal industry, the banks which finance them, and on the other hand the deposit banks such as the Credit Lyonnais and the Comptoir d'Escompte which have no interest, or at least no immediate interest, in inflation, are offering resistance, even if it be weak. This weak resistance is being supported by a section of the national bloc.

The prevailing tendency, which at present represents the interest of the capitalist class as a whole, is the inflationist tendency. The big metal industry, the textile industry, the manufacturing industries, the bank "L'Union Parisienne" of the national bloc and the "Banque de Paris and des Pays Bas" of the left bloc are unqualified apporters of inflation. The socialists are maintaining a non-committal attitude.

INFLATION means an increase in the misery of the workers, the ruin of the petty bourgeoisie and the progressive expropriation of the small peasants. Inflation means progressive bankruptcy at the cost of the workers. The example of Germany from 1918 to 1923 affords a tragic lesson for the French masses.

Caillaux, the new finance minister, and his official organ, L'Information Financiere, openly speaks of paying back the floating debt of 80 milliards by the issue of paper money. It may mean issuing new bank notes or special tokens which are only valid for commercial transactions; it may mean adopting an open policy of inflation or a veiled inflation. At any rate such an operation would mean threefold increase in the note circulation in France. This involves a depreciation of the bank notes and fearful and rapid increase in prices. Inflation means a stimulus for exports, with industry working at full pressure. It means that the capitalists increase their profit at the cost of the proletariat, of the petty bourgeoisie and of the peasantry.

The slogans of our party must be: Against Inflation!

For the stabilization of the currency at the cost of the capitalist! Workers' and peasants' control of production!

The setting up of a net-work of factory councils! Proletarian unity committees and peasants' committees!

Tax on capital and on profits. No taxes for the workers, employees and working peasants.

In order to ensure that the taxes derived by the state from the capitalists shall be expended in the interest of the workers, the slogan must be raised:

A workers' and peasants' government!

IT is only with the setting up of workers' and peasants control and the workers' government that we can talk of nationalizing the banks. Nationalisation only leads, as Jules Guesde has already irrefutably shown, to the strengthening of the state. To speak of the nationalization of the banks without workers' and peasants' control and without the workers' and peasants' government would be a dangerous form of opportunism.

The French bourgeoisie is not only confronted with a crisis at home. Soviet Russia is rapidly restoring its economy. It constitutes an increasingly dangerous example for the exploited of the whole world. Fresh masses of reformist workers in France, in England and in America are turning their eyes to it. The oppressed and exploited colonial peoples in Morocco, Egypt, India and China are turning to Moscow. Thus the stronger Russia becomes, the greater danger it will be to the privileges of the ruling capitalists of the whole world. And in spite of the imperialist rivalries, England and the continent are realizing the necessity of a united offensive against the national revolutionary movements, against Communism and the Russian revolution.

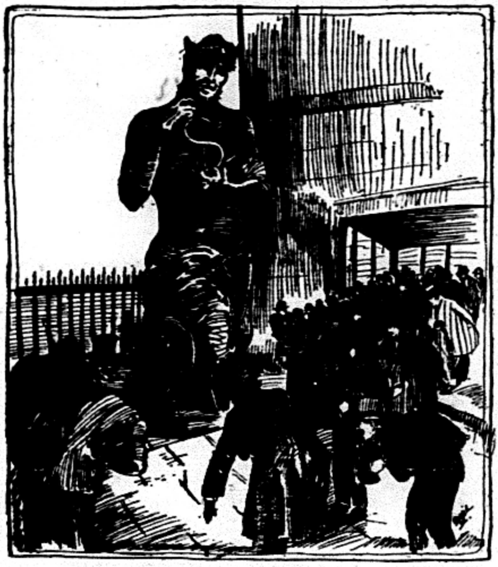
ENGLAND is abandoning its "splendid isolation." England is conducting a policy which aims at breaking Germany away from the treaty of Rapallo, and is endeavoring to enter into an Anglo-European bloc under British leadership which will take up the offensive against the revolutionary dangers and the defensive against American imperialism. Such a policy leads to the revision of the treaty of versailles, especially as regards Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. The idea of the English conservatives of a treaty between England, France, Germany Belgium and Italy is making headway. Sooner or later the new ministry, or its successor, will abandon Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

It must not be forgotten that Briand is the man who, at Cannes, defended the Anglo-European understanding, that Caillaux is the man who favours the continental bloc, and that at present England cannot be excluded from the continental bloc.

This policy we must oppose by a clear slogan. This slogan can only be: the workers' and peasants' government and an alliance with the Soviet Union.

The Communist Party of France must more than ever seek to win the proletariat and draw into the anti-capitalist struggle the allies of the proletariat the peasants and the suppressed colonial peoples.

The God of Capitalism



Howat in the Camps - - -

By J. E. Snyder

THE call for unity has come out of the necessity of the hour. Most leaders find it difficult to adjust themselves and get into many difficulties.

Recently a new board and a new president were elected in the Pittsburg, Kansas, coal district. The new "brooms," as usual, started in to sweep the district free of non-union mines and to establish a hundred per cent district. They appealed to "everybody," and of course the everlasting and forgetful radical thought that he was included.

ALEXANDER HOWAT was among these "radicals." He led a procession in autos down the highways and byways of the camps, thus causing much concern among the mine bosses and owners. The newly elected president, Mat Walters, was filled to bursting with the importance of his new office, and was with Howat the full hundred per cent the first trip out, but on the second trip, "Old John Law" stepped in and stopped the parade right on the highway, and Walters advised that the procession disperse and go home.

Howat was called on to make a few remarks on this occasion, and did, but told the boys that he really had no heart in the matter any more, for he wanted to march on, but advised the miners to stay by their leaders and thus make it a united front as long as they possibly could.

IT was thru the speeches of Howat and his leadership that the mines closed down in the "Doubleday Sector" of the mine war. This Doubleday has fought the unions for twenty-five years, off and on. He has been licked before, but seems to want to go to bat once more.

To get the right slant on Howat one needs must be around the district and talk with the men. "HE NEVER BACKS OUT," that seems to be the thing that makes Howat beloved among the miners.

BUT, "leaders is leaders," and having closed the mines down by making talks at the camps where the non-union men lived, Howat suddenly got lost in the shuffle.

A district picnic was called and when the program was announced, the man who was good enough and needed enough to perform the hard work was not included among the speakers, or, in fact, even consulted or invited to take part.

BUT all was not lost. The Mulberry local was a storm center on Wednesday night and the news got to the "leaders" so on Saturday Howat was "invited" to speak for "twenty" minutes. So when Sunday, the picnic day, arrived Alexander Howat was given an ovation by the United Mine Workers.

The leaders had done, for once, the most sensible thing that has been done in any mining district for some time. Of course it was no doubt the voice from the camps that caused the board to act, but some say that Mat Walters is really trying to do the right thing, altho a little weak in his ground-standing ability.

FIVE THOUSAND people stood for over two hours and a half and listened attentively to the speakers because of the sensible act of the officials. It would have been far different if Howat had not been invitod. As it was, all went home as United Mine Workerst in reality, to fight against the common foe.

Howat sat on the same bench with the board members and altho some of them looked "sour grapes" while he was speaking they survived and I am sure are better men today for having heard a real militant speech from the real leader—the one the men love because he "NEVER BACKS OUT!"

The parade on picnic day, when peace was restored was not headed by Alexander Howat. I guess it is appropriate that he should not lead peace parades anyhow. It keeps him fresh for the "war" parades for there are more no doubt to come before the open shop drive ends.

I RODE in the parade. It was silent —"Americans never sing"—but still impressive. Six hundred automobiles wended their way thru all the camps that tried to work but changed their minds. It was at once a bid for comradeship and a threat if not complied with. Not a single uncalled for remark was made and the union miners waved at the men who were working in non-union mines not many days ago and bid them, by kindly smiles, to come and join the grand procession.

I say—it was impressive.

Sitting on the porches of their board shacks, ill-clad and no doubt, in many cases, in need of every comfort of life and sustenance these men, we hope soon to become comrades and brothers, hoped down deep in their hearts that this show of unity is the real stuff that builds for the co-operative commonwealth, and we in our turn saw dimly the vision of the social revolution manifest here.

ON this day, the races mingled in "race equality." Negro and white man communed together. They paraded together. They picnicked together and they resolved together to make this camp a hundred per cent. They cheered their old leader together and went with him for the "twenty" minutes back over the days when the district was ten thousand strong—yes, a hundred per cent fighting.

Long live the spirit of unity manifested on this picnic day!

The Struggle for Labor Unity in England

By GEORGE HARDY

LONDON.—On Friday, May 15th, the National Transport Workers' Federation met in annual conference at London. There had been a good deal of speculation as to its future. Some affiliated bodies could not decide as to its justification for existing while discussing instructions to delegates who were to attend the conference. It will be decided when they report back. However, it will continue, and F. J. Maynard has been elected secretary in the place of Robert Williams.

One proposal decided upon gave power to the executive committee to discuss the need for a united front with miners, engineers and railwaymen. And this decision we can welcome. If the federation has any justification at all this is about the only one. To bring the few isolated unions into contact with other powerful unions to achieve unity.

ITS failure on that vital day in the history of British trade unionism—Black Friday—leads us to believe that this limited resolution, sincere as the delegates may be, can be only a gesture if not an act to resuscitate the federation.

Some of the elements are still there that composed it in 1921. The National Union of Railwaymen have a small body affiliated. The N. U. R. made up part of the triple alliance. Its secretary, J. H. Thomas, said in court, while suing the Communist Party for libel, that he participated only to prevent action. It will be interesting to know who voted for joint discussion, which we hope will help unity.

THE federation is made up by several small unions. The only real important unions are the National Sailores' and Firemens' Union and the Associated Society of Locomotive Enginemen and Firemen. Others are groups of transport workers or small unions whose conditions and wages etc., are mostly governed by the national agreement entered into by the Transport and General Workers' Union. In some case the conditions are worse, and in only one isolated instance has it been brought to our attention that wages are higher than the T. & G. W. U. rates for similar work.

The Transport Workers' Minority Movement asks is it not time that the Cardiff Coal Trimmers, Liverpool Carters, Amalgamated Marine Workers, National Union of Distributive and Allied Workers, Transport groups of the Workers' Union and the National Union of General and Municipal Workers, the N. U. R. dockers, and other isolated groups realized that their place is in the only natural center—in the union that can and will continue to regulate wages nationally.

OF course there are many factory and other workers in the Transport and General Workers' Union, which should be handed over to their proper union.

We know it is hard for a conservative official of a small union, even insignificant so far as power is concerned, to give up his position of apparent power in a union in which, probably, he has played the chief part in organizing. But these days of powerful combinations of employers make their continuance a menace to the whole organized workers. And the continuation of the National Transport Workers' Federation gives added excuses for their existense. It furnishes a national center for them, without any added power to the workers. The federation is helpless and like all loosely connected federations, it will fail in a crisis. Even should the officials agree on united action, and we have not guarantees yet, all will depend upon the big union. But we are not aware of that. J. H. Thomas has changed his mind. As for Havelock Wilson well, "nuff sed."

FROM Robert Williams' report to the International Trade Union on the failures of federation during the triple alliance crisis in 1921 we quote the following:

> "Dealing with a federation of somewhat loosely joined unions, as I do myself, has compelled me to realize the inherent weaknesses attached to federations and alliances which do not compare with more closely knit organizations like central national unions with one responsible and central executive council. In consequence of the lack of any will or determination to strike in support of the miners' claims, we have, each party to the alliance, been attempting to pass the responsibility for non-success on to the other two, and this applies all round."

HOW we cannot question the ex-secretary of the National Workers' Federation who went thru the triple alliance negotiations. But are we asked to believe these obstacles are removed? Of course they are not! Havelock Wilson is no more under control or even influenced by the federation. Browley's executive and the N. U. R. officials are living in the harmonious atmosphere of a pair of Kilkenny cats. The other officials just kid themselves they belong to a national organization.

The rank and file of these unions must speak out. Demand that all sit down and draw up a basis for unity or amalgamation in the way men should who are not seeking to perpetuate divisions, and who are not trying to be Napoleons over each other, but who are willing in the spirit of no victors or vanquished to sit down and thrash out a policy. There should be no thought of one union absorbing another: Unity, amalgamation and industrial unionism should animate the membership and officials of the federation.

The rank and file should prepare a united front with the miners, railwaymen and engineers, but at the same time keep your mind on uniting the transport workers.

A Historic Step - - - - -

By A. B. SWALES

The following article in the current issue of Trade Union Unity, by A. B. Swales, chairman of the Trades Union Congress shows that there are powerfull influences at work in England to defeat the unity movement initiated by the Russian and British trade union movements. The most implacable foes of international labor unity are the social democrats. Of course nothing different could be expected from the capitalists.

American trade unionists will be particularly interested in reading Swales's article, not only because he occupies such a commanding position in the British movement but also owing to the fact that he was a fratrenal delegate last year to the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor. Swales is strong for a united trade union international. His article follows:

THE readers of Trade Union Unity can hardly have failed to notice the importance of the Eccleston Square conference of Russian and British trade unionists and of the decisions reached thereafter. But amongst sections of our trade union membership its significance has not perhaps been fully grasped. On the other hand we have had no lack of articles and editorials in the capitalist press, particulalrly in such organs of our governing class as the Times and the Manchester Guardian, abusing and attacking our trade union leaders for participating in this conference. At a Europe, when wages, hours and conditions are being forced down in every country, the capitalists understand very clearly the significance of a conference which in its promise of a United Trade Union International contains a challenge to their domination. Since the capitalist press is so busy fabricating its visions of the dreadful things that will happen as a result of these meetings held last month, it may be useful to state what appears to me the important features of this meeting.

Perhaps the most important thing is the fact of the conference itself, the fact that two great trade union movements, the British and the Russian, totalling together some twelve million workers, could meet thru their representatives and could reach an agreement. Despite the difficulty of the difference of tongues, the difference of tradition and history, those two movements could find a common language in the needs and hopes of the working class. This fact alone is full of promise for the future: a promise that we try to express in plain, simple, working class terms.

In our Joint Declaration that was drawn up there are many points which are of interest and importance, but the most important of all are the clauses dealing with the danger of war. We say:

"So long as the capitalist system continues there is danger of war. The merciless struggle for supremacy between the conflicting vested interests of competing groups of exploiters will, as in the past, eventually evoke a new crisis, plunging the workers of the world into another disastrous war."

"There is but one power that can save mankind from being plunged into another universal catastrophe. There is but one power which can defend the workers of all countries against political and economic oppression and tyranny. There is but one power which can bring freedom, welfare, happiness and pease to the working class and to humanity. That power is the working class if well organized, properly disciplined, self-devoted and determined to fight all who would oppose and prevent its complete emancipation."

The fact that two such trade union movements as the Russian and the British have so plainly taken up their stand against this danger really means something that gives us a real hope for the masses of mankind.

The declaration and the resolutions passed are of such a character that they must needs appeal to workers in every country of the world. The appeal they make is bound to be heard and will be responded to notwithstanding the prejudices of small groups or of individuals who oppose unity either thru lack of understanding of its necessity or because they have not sufficient devotion to the cause of labor.

Finally, let me say these concrete proposals can mean either nothing or something of tremendous importance. They will mean nothing if they remain simply the conversations and decisions of a few leaders. They will become something of tremendous importance on the other hand if those leaders and the proposals they have made are backed up by the workers in Britain and in Russia and in every land thruout the world.

Workers Lead in Palestine

Writing to the Federated Press from Palestine, Harry Jaffe says, "I thought you might be interested in the elections held in Tel-A-Viv, the only town on this earth that is 100 per cent Jewish. The result was a sweeping victory for the Workers Party that received 2,727 votes, more than three times the number of votes the capitalist party or any other party received.

"There were over a dozen parties. For every 200 votes a party receives, one candidate on its slate is declared elected. Men and women over 20 who have been here 6 months are entitled to vote. The Jewish worker here is class conscious. He acts, talks and dresses like a worker."

Jaffe enclosed a leaflet giving the election returns printed in Hebrew characters. The 2727 votes for the workers party were a walkaway. The next highest party got 882 votes. The party of the shopkeepers and merchants drew 748 votes.

MASTERS AND SLAVES (A Story of the Working Class)

By John Lassen

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Nickles and Joe Vavas, migratory workers, meet under a freight train while beating their way west. They get off at Colorado Springs. Joe Vavas is a barber by trade, and Nickles has no fixed trade. In Colorado Springs Vavas buys second-hand clothes for the two of them and they go to look for jobs. Vavas gets a job as a barber. Nickles manages to get work as a footman at Broadmoor, the mansion of the Broidins. His work is constant drudgery. Vavas is class conscious, and Nickles is not, but they are staunch friends nevertheless. An attachment springs up between Nickles and Marguerite, the maid at the Broadmoor mansion. One day Joe Vavas tells Nickles and Marguerite that a barbers' union has been formed to fight against the intolerable conditions. Joe Vavas has formed the union with the help of William who is an American by birth and not an immigrant like Joe. The younger elements in the union, led by Joe and William forces a strike against the bosses. The strike is won by the barbers, but the union delegate from Denver sells out at the last moment, and the strikers are deprived of most of the fruits of their victory. Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER IX.

AUTOS tear thru the city.
Black is the night.
One looks out of the window.
Shuts it with a bang.
A child runs across the street.
Ghosts!
Autos tear thru the night.
What is that?
Who is that?
Who is in such a hurry?
In the night?
The autos tear over the mountains.
A woman trembling: "Ghosts!"
But the man: "The ku klux klan!"

• • • •

White hoods in the night.
A businessman: "Justice is on the way!"

• • • •

It is quiet otherwise.
The city sleeps.
It has gone to sleep at nine o'clock.
The city of the ninth hour.

• • • •

The autos whirr off.
That way.
Always higher.
To the peak.
The headlights glare.
New autos.
Nothing but autos.
Otherwise it is still.
The city sleeps.
The silent city.

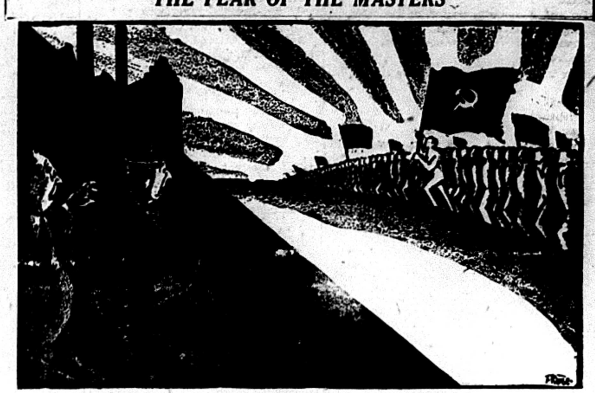
• • • •

Pikes Peak.
In the distance.
No lights are necessary.
The peak shines.
In the distance.
The mountain peak.
Pikes Peak.

• • • •

Bonfire.
Dispelling the darkness.
And above the fire, high up, against the sky: the cross.
The peak shines out of the distance.
The flood of autos empties into the fire.
The fire crackles.
The flames shoot high.

THE FEAR OF THE MASTERS



Hooded figures move thru the night.
At the foot of the cross is the platform.
A red star on every hood.
But on that of the wizard is a death's head.
A death's head.
Eclipse of the moon.
Only the fire shines.
It seems foreboding.
And the death's head.
High up on the peak.
In the black night.
And the wind whistles.
Out of the distance sounds the horn of an automobile.
Words are spoken.
There is whispering.
The fire is dying down.
The embers glow.

• • • •

The wizard rises.
With the death's head.
As if out of the fire.
They all flow into each other.
The cross. The wizard. The bonfire.
The flames tremble.
The voice breaks forth.
Bellowing in the night.
This is no place for a long speech.
Short, cutting words are sufficient.
There is only command here.
A program?

• • • •

Only one thing:

"Our city, peaceful Colorado Springs, is in danger. The red menace is within our walls. The American laws are not effective enuf . . . We must establish one hundred per cent loyalty. The American spirit must not perish . . . Our enemies? The catholics, the Negroes, the Jews, the foreigners . . . and most of all the Reds!"

The Reds.
A cry in the night.
Wild.
Fearful.
Awful.

As tho wild beasts were in the hoods.
That is their real voice.
The cry in the night.
"The Reds!"
The hood with the death's head sways from side to side.
"Death to the Reds!"—say the hooded figures.
In endless rhythm.
At the foot of the cross.
And they take the oath.
The hooded figures march into formation.
The bonfire crackles.
Pikes Peak shines.
The darkness of the black night is lit up.
The dark brains are lit up.
In the name of the new member one hood speaks:
"Death to the Reds!"
That takes.
Always.
With undiminished force.
It is a good slogan.
And the white hoods bellow.

• • • •

And once more the man with the death's head:
"What joy, to see such a fighting bunch!"
They all feel the same way.
What joy!
And the fire blazes up.
The flames crackle.
The night?
In the east glimmers a faint red.
The white hoods avoid the light.
Automobiles roar off.
They dash thru the night.
In haste they wind down into the deep.
So as to get ahead of the dawn.

• • • •

The fire dies down.
The automobiles dash away.
At the cross-roads a wagon shrinks to the side.
A milk wagon.
The white hoods fly out of the night.
And the milkman: "A bad sign."
The fire is extinguished.
The dawn breaks.

• • • •

"The ku klux klan"—says the businessman that morning.
And is happy.
And the master barbers are also happy.

• • • •

John at breakfast:
"Do you hear Nickles? Mr. Broidin went out on an auto ride last night."
"That so? Then breakfast will be served late today."
"I don't think so, he didn't say anything."
And breakfast was not served any later.

CHAPTER X.

DINNER.
John and Marguerite waited on the table.
The dogs were unmanageable.
Mr. Broidin's eyes had a far-away look.
He ate hastily.

In order to break the nerve-wracking silence, his wife says:

"Is the chicken good?"
The husband starts.
His gaze meets Marguerite's eyes.
The eyes of the fresh, healthy girl. The embodiment of youth.

Once more his suppressed, lascivious man's desire was aroused.

"The roast chicken . . . ? Yes . . . Very good . . ."

And he stares at the girl.
He seeks Marguerite's eyes.
Has she understood him?
She blushes.
Mr. Broidin is happy at that. And he repeats:
"The chicken is good . . . Very good . . . "

Then there is silence again. The two human machines eat.

• • • •

Mr. Broidin goes into the library.
In the afternoon there will be guests.
"Make a little order"—he says—"I have scattered cigar ashes."
Marguerite comes.

Outside the sun pours an abundant brightness. Mr. Broidin leans back in the arm-chair and in that way can watch the girl. Marguerite's hands glide over the table with quick movements. She takes care not to move anything from its place. She moves about on her tip-toes, in order not to disturb the master. The library is a cool room. Thru the window trembles the fragrance of the garden.

"It's fine to be young!" Broidin thinks to himself.

And he thinks of his dried-up wife.

He decks out the body of the girl in fine clothes. He does that in his thots. And he wraps her in a cloud of fragrance.

How fine the girl would fit here.
Marguerite comes near him.
"Am I disturbing?"—she asks.
"Not at all."
He gets up.
He can no longer control himself.
"Are you engaged to anybody yet?"
"Yes"—answers the girl.
"He must enjoy you, I should think."
And he pinches her cheek.
The girl crimsons.

She does not know whether this is part of her duty. But she is a bit elated over it.

She runs out of the library.

• • • •

IN the music room she looks at her face to see if the mark of fingers can be seen.

For the master had not pinched her gently.
The cheek was red.
The rest of the roast chicken went to the servants.

Marguerite tried to eat with knife and fork. Oh, but it was a hard struggle. What is very simple and natural for the master and mistress is an impossibility for her. The tendons and sinews offer stubborn resistance.

The cook with the kindly eyes encourages Marguerite to take the bones with her hands and not to mind, because it was best for the health that way.

Mary, the chambermaid, informs them that it isn't up-to-date any more to eat chicken with a knife and fork. She herself worked for people who took the fowl in their hands and ate that way.

But Marguerite resisted all temptation. Mr. Broidin does not eat chicken with his hand, and she won't either.

She stated this loudly, which made everybody laugh.

Nickles took his portion in his hand, in his paw, and devourded it.

It was a painful sight. His hand, his face, were greasy up to the ears.

"Look here, this is the way to eat chicken."
Marguerite almost broke into tears.
"If Mr. Broidin would see!"
"What have you got to do with Broidin?"

Marguerite blushed. Her hand went to her cheek. She felt the pinch again . . .

After the meal Nickles showered questions upon the girl.

"What happened?"
Marguerite told him.

An insane rage arose in him. What does the man want with her?

There was no end to the dishes.
And there was no end to the dishes.
The table service piled up before him higher and higher.
The table service had to sparkle.
The knives had to be sharpened.

And while Nickles cleaned the knives and forks he thot about the whole affair. Why does he desire the wife of another?

And just his wife?
And he cleaned the table service.

Then it occurred to him that it might not be true. The girl invented it only to tease him. This seemed to him the best solution.

The work exhausted him.

CHAPTER XI.

THE servants lived one floor above.

The architect had built the house in such a way that from outside it did not look like more than one floor. There were arches on top. And within the arches were the "windows." But one would have to be very good-natured to call them windows. They were at the bottom of the upper floor. Very little light penetrated. And as for ventilation, that was impossible. The rooms were always filled with a musty smell.

Nickles lay on the bed.
The heat was unbearable.
The misery of life had got hold of Nickles.
His gaze fell on the polo field opposite.
The masters are playing.
But he is tired.

The horses gallop like mad to and fro. It is impossible to see the ball from here thru the dormer-window. Only the galloping horses can be seen. The horses galloping off without direction or goal.

He is so tired.
"I don't need to play polo to get an appetite."
And suddenly he thinks of Joe.
He thinks of conversations that he had with his friends.
One of the conversations flitted thru his mind:

Joe: How many servants are you?

He: John, I, Mary, Lillian, Marguerite, the chauffer, six gardners, two to take care of the poultry. Together that makes fourteen.

Joe: And they?
He: Two.
Joe: So for two people there are fourteen?
He: Yes.
Joe: And who is stronger?
He: (laughing) John could throw both of them out with one hand.
Joe: Why doesn't he do it?
He: Because it isn't right.

Joe: And if it is decided everywhere, in Broadmoor, and New York, that it should be done?
He: I can't answer that question.
The horses rush by in a gallop.
Another conversation flits thru his mind.
Joe: How many rooms have they?
He: Very many.
Joe: How many people would have room in all that space?
He: At least a hundred.
Joe: And where do you live?
He: In a hole with half a window.

And there was no denying it. It was a fact. But why? Why? Why? . . . Joe can only ask. It is true, he answers himself. But his answers are not from entire conviction as yet.

How fast the horses ran. The masters are riding. They don't get tired. They are well nourished and healthy. Full of energy.

And are always playing polo.
Polo every day.

They chase after a ball which is not visible from here. How fine it would be if they would help level the path. With so much energy wonderful roads could be built.

But they are playing polo.
They let the poor build the streets.
The masters prefer to play polo.
That's what they call distribution of labor.
It occurs to him:
Joe: How many books has this Broidin got?
He: Don't know, but there's a whole lot.
Joe: And how many books does he read?
He: None. He sleeps in the library.
Joe: How many people would like to read the books?
He: Lots of 'em.
Joe: Why don't all these take away the books from this one?

That is a ridiculous question of course. But the funny thing is that, from what Joe says, that's just what happened in Hungary. . . . And yet, now a disgraceful white terror rages there . . .

Once he boasted how he fooled them with that story about Propapapadakis.

Immediately Joe asked: How many hours do you work?

He: Sometimes ten, sometimes twelve, often thirteen.
Joe: What is your wage?
He: Forty-five dollars and maintenance.
Joe: What does your maintenace cost them?
He: Nothing, because we eat what is left over.
Joe: How many days a week do you work?
He: Seven.
Joe: Well then who benefits by it? You? Or they?

A hard question. Joe always asks intricate questions.

How hot the sun burns.
The masters are playing polo.
From below:

He has to go down. Guests—how many guests there are in Colorado Springs!

REVOLT IN NEW ENGLAND

Academic Boston was struck by a gale of modernism this week, when a new play by John Dos Passos, author of the radical war novel, Three Soldiers, was produced at the Fine Arts theater by the Harvard Dramatic society.

The play, which is highly futuristic, is named "The Moon Is a Gong." It tells the story of a young man and woman of New England in revolt against their stuffy environment of Back Bay. There is a delicious satire on the family pride of Boston's upper circles in the first act of the play. In the second act there is much drastic and startling criticism of American capitalism. One of the features of this act is the introduction to the stage of such modern devices as the radio, over which the usual prosperity speech is delivered by a banal governor. "Lynch the labor unions! Lynch the foreigners!" he cries, and the author shows the ignorance which inspires these slogans.

The play was well received by the younger generation of Harvard and Boston, but some of the old timers agreed with the radio speech of the governor, and felt like yelling, "Lynch all young modern authors!"

Stalin Reports to Active Russian Party Workers

MOSCOW, May 12.—(By Mail):—COMRADE I. STALIN, secretary of the Russian Communist Party, delivered the following report on the results of the fourteenth party conference of the Russian Communist Party to the active party workers of the Moscow organization:

The new element in the present international situation is the temporary stabilization of capitalism and the simultaneous growth of the economic and political power of the Soviet Union.

Lenin's analysis of the new epoch of revolution is still fully applicable. The speaker cites examples from the development of the Russian revolution, and shows that the revolution does not develop according to a simple rising curve, but thru an intermittant rise and fall.

This is the historical significance of the present period. The present liquidators are committing the same mistake as the liquidators of old, when they think that the present stabilization means the end of the world revolution.

A CERTAIN stabilization exists: the temporary stabilisation of capitalism and the stabilisation of the Soviet system. Stabilisation under capitalism leads to sharper conflicts and creates the basic conditions for the overthrow of capitalism, whereas the stabilization of the Soviet system leads to improved conditions for the final victory of the proletariat. This is the difference between the two kinds of stabilization.

THE stabilization of capitalism assumes the following concrete forms:

1—The pact between America, England and France for the plundering of Germany thru Dawesation. Such an agreement cannot be lasting, for it requires the double enslavement of the German proletariat—by the native and by the foreign bourgeoisie. Even the reactionary factor of Hindenburg's election shows that the temporary alliance against Germany cannot last long.

2—British, American and Japanese capital have succeeded in effecting a temporary agreement in regard to their respective spheres of influence in China. But this agreement also cannot be lasting, because of the imperialist conflicts and the growth of the revolutionary movement in China.

3—The stabilization of capitalism also assumes the form of an agreed non-interference of the imperialist countries in the exploitation of the colonies; it is obvious that due to the imperialist conflicts and the growing revolutionization of the colonies, this agreement cannot be lasting.

4—The stabilization of capitalism may also assume the form of attempts at a united front against the Soviet Union. Such a united front cannot be durable, because the very threat of it will consolidate the whole country more than ever before about the Soviets, and transform it into an unconquerable fortress; for, an attack on Soviet Russia would unchain a revolutionary movement in the rear of the enemy, and because Soviet Russia is no longer isolated, but possesses allies in the western proletariat and in the oppressed peoples of the East. A war against the Soviet Union would mean a war of the imperialists against their own workers and against the colonies.

THE task of the Communist Parties in the capitalist countries is, to utilize the period of depression for the consolidation of the Communist Parties, for their bolshevization, and their transformation into real mass parties. One of the fundamental tasks of the Western Communist Parties is to link up with the trade unions. The pillars of the social-democratic power in the West are the unions, whereas the weakness of the Western Communist Parties in the circumstance that their own elements refuse to link up with the trade unions. Hence the campaign for the unity of the trade union movement must be carried out consistently.

The new element in the colonial countries consists in the disturbance of the old social and political conditions, the growth of the proletarian forces and of the revolutionary labor movement, and in the will to compromise on the part of the national bourgeoisie. The liberation of these countries from the clutches of imperialism can therefore be effected only thru the struggle against the national bourgeoisie.

THE question of an alliance of workers' and peasants, and the question of the hegemony of the proletariat, are becoming as important in industrially developed countries today, as they where in Russia before 1905.

As to the question of the fate of socialism in the Soviet Union, i. e., whether socialism can be established in one country, Leninism answers in the affirmative. Besides the difference between the proletariat and the peasantry, there are common interests between them in important questions, which furnish the basis for an alliance of workers and peasants. The development of agriculture may proceed in two ways: the capitalist way of impoverishing the majority of peasants for the benefit of a handful of land and city capitalists; or the socialist way of improving the condition of the majority of peasants. The peasantry is interested in the latter method of development. Citing Lenin, the speaker criticises Trotsky's view of the insurmountability of the differences between the workers and peasants. He then shows the possibility of developing socialism in one country,—otherwise the October revolution was superfluous.

THERE are other conflicts, namely those between the Soviet Union and the capitalist countries. As long as Russia is surrounded by capitalist countries, there is the danger of a restoration. Only the common efforts of the workers of the different countries, or, still better, the victory of the proletariat in some of the countries, can furnish a guarantee against a restoration. Whoever confuses the internal conflicts, which can be fully overcome, with the second group of conflicts, which require the efforts of the proletariat of different countries, is an opportunist.

The bourgeois press claims that our criticism of the Soviet land policy is a sign of deterioration. Our self-criticism is a sign of the strength of our party. The new factors on the land are: the necessity of selecting the most painless method of developing socialism in common with the peasantry, and the growing political activity of the peasantry. Our main task at present is to win over the middle peasants on the side of the proletariat, to raise the general material and cultural level of the great mass of the peasantry, in order to build up socialism together with the peasantry. The co-operatives are the instrument for drawing agriculture into the general system of socialist reconstruction. It is further our task to extend the Soviet democracy to the land, and to attract to the party a great mass of active non-partisan peasants. The main task of the Communists on the land is: to link up with our economic structure.

THE economic plans in the Soviet Union are behind the economic development. The budget had to be thrice raised, because the revenue rose continually. The growth of the metal industry is especially characteristic. Compared with last year, production in the metal industry has been doubled. This shows that in the industry the basis of socialism is fully growing, and that the proletariat is capable not only of destroying the old, but also of building up the new. Western European workers are coming to our country to convince themselves that the proletariat is capable of building up a new society and a new industry, and that the world revolution has thereby been advanced.

TODAY we already possess forces sufficient to build up socialism and to defend our country. When we shall have 15 to 20 million industrial workers, when we shall have achieved complete electrification and the organization of our agriculture on a co-operative basis—we will have triumphed on a world scale.

MAY DAY IN RUSSIA

By ERIC VERNEY.

THIS year the May Day celebration in Soviet Russia exceeded all records not only in numbers but also in the enthusiasm of the workers and the splendor of the decorations. The spring sushine also added lustre to the red brilliancy.

Early in the morning crowds began assembling in the outlying districts of Moscow to march to the Red Square with bands playing and with the red banners flying in the breeze. The joy with which the Russian workers sung their revolutionary songs this May Day was not only an expression of their improved material conditions and physical well-being but made one feel that they were really singing of their freedom and were conscious of their great moral conquest.

But the Russian workers have not forgotten their struggling brothers of the West. Among the hundreds of slogans adorning the red banners the most conspicious were "Down with the white terror of the bourgeoisie" and "Long Live the International Trade Union Unity."

IN Red Russia it is not only the workers and peasants who take part in the celebrations, but also the Red Army men, for the Red Army itself is composed of workers and peasants.

Before the huge processions of workers began marching thru the Red Square, there was a great parade of the Moscow garrison. There were infantry, detachments of Budienny's famous cavalry, artillery, tanks and just as the last troops had marched past squadrons of aeroplanes soared overhead. One glimpse at this exhibition of Soviet Russia's military strength was sufficient to convince one that although the Russian workers have celebrated this year's May Day under peaceful conditions they are ready to defend the Soviet Republic from capitalist attacks at the first call. And the diplomatic representatives present seemed duly impressed. Then came the workers, marching by in two endless parallel processions, waving a flaming sea of red banners. From early morning until dusk they marched, surging in past Lenin's mausoleum, 1,000,000 of Russia's best workers.

One of the brightest features of this year was the large number of children's Communist groups (Young Pioneers) taking part in the processions. They marched in orderly ranks, picturesque with their red neckkerchiefs. There were also thousands of red physical culture groups, wonderful examples of how the Soviet government is caring for the physique of the younger generation.

THERE were many placards and caricatures in the procession including effigies of Zankov and Hindenburg, banging from lamp-posts. There was one tableu representing Herriot and MacDonald sitting in a huge galoche. This is all the more humorous if one understands the Russian expression "sitting in a galoche" which means, put in a awkward position.

In the evening although the workers had been marching in the processions all day long they still swarmed the streets after dusk singing revolutionary songs, taking advantage of the spring night air.

This picture of May Day in Moscow is but a replica of what occurred thru all Russia. In Leningrad alone over 600,000 took part in the demonstration while in Kharkov 300,000 took part in this yearly mobilization of the revolutionary forces.

It is only in Soviet Russia that there is a reel May Day of the workers.

Last Testament of the Patriarch Tikhon -:-

By M. Raffes (Moscow)

THE entire Moscow press has published the last testament of Tikhon, patriarch of the Russian orthodox church, who died a few days ago. In this testament this erstwhile irreconcilable enemy of the Soviet power calls upon all believers to be at peace with the Soviets as "there is no government that does not come from God."

Patriarch Tikhon recognises the Soviet regime as the real government of the people, strongly condemns all counter-revolutionary religious groups and also appoints a special commission for bringing to trial all these orthodox bishops who have been carrying on a struggle abroad for the restoration of the old order.

Patriarch Tikhon asserts categorically that all the decrees and practical measures of the Soviet government are quite compatible with complete freedom of all religions. He therefore summons his followers to adjust the regulations of external church life and activities to the new state order.

PATRIARCH TIKHON'S renuncia- of counter-revolutionary ideas and his recognition of the Soviet power took place already a year ago, and since that time he has again been able to be at the head of the orthodox church. Nevertheless this last appeal of his, written when on his deathbed, by the very nature of its contents is of enormous political significance. What falsehoods have been spread by the bourgeois and menshevik press, particularly in connection with the question of the church!

Here we have a man who is undoubtedly an authority in that connection, and who announces to the whole world that there is complete freedom of conscience in the Soviet republic. This alone is a blow for the whole counter-revolution, which thereby loses yet another argument in its agitation against the Soviet republic. But this blow is of still more serious significance.

Tikhon and the many tens of thousands of urban and rural priests who follow him (and indeed, the overwhelming majority of the orthodox church), become finally reconciled with the existing government. Clinging to their old bigoted, formulae, they also declare the Soviet power to be established by the Lord God, exactly in the same way as capitalist power in Europe.

We Communists, of course, may reproach Patriarch Tikhon with not having an international point of view and that in his heart he is too easily reconciled to such entirely contradictory governmental systems as the Soviet and bourgeois regimes. But we need not look far to find an explanation for this. Patriarch Tikhon and his entire church organization are becoming adapted.

They desire to conserve their influence over the toiling masses and are thereby compelled to adapt themselves to the political views of these toilers. So that they may still be able to carry on religious propaganda, they have decidedly broken with all their past political ideology. The Patriarch Tikhon and the whole of his huge church organisation were indeed only of value to the counter-revolutionaries insofar as the authority and extensive connections that this church had among the masses could be utilized for the struggle against the Soviet regime. In Kolchak's army there was a whole detachment of orthodox "fathers." Generals Denikin and Wrangel made connections with the kulak elements in the villages thru the intermediary of the orthodox priests. The various scattered kulak risings even in 1921 always had a group of orthodox priests within their midst. Whoever has placed hopes in an armed struggle against the Soviet power—even including the theoretical leader of the international mensheviks, Karl Kautsky—has up to now always sought his allies for counter-revolutionary blows against the Soviet government among the orthodox clergy.

HOW, then can the relations between the Soviet government and the Communist Party on the one hand and the orthodox church on the other be subsequently consolidated? There is no better way than on the basis of the decree separating the church from the state and the schools from the church. Those "golden days" when the church was an official part of the government will never return. Church ceremony and the clergy have once and for all been thrust out of the state institutions. The Soviet school and the Red army will never see a priest within their precincts nor will they hear his sermon. There is only one territory left on which the priests may preach the "word of god" and that is in the churches.

But, just as in the past, the energetic persistent and uninterrupted fight against religious dope which has been carried on thruout the length and breadth of the Soviet Republic, will be continued. During the years of revolution and civil war the orthodox church lost tens of millions of its followers. These were lost as a result of the revolutionary fervor of the masses. They had no need whatsoever for any lords or gods. The church also lost these masses as a result of its counter-revolutionary activities, which helped the people to understand the class character of the orthodox church. What has been lost will never return. And the orthodox church in its attempts to entice back those who have once left, can only meet with failure. At the same time we must not lose sight of the enromous difficulties in uprooting religious beliefs in a huge peasant country, where for the overwhelming masses of peasantry, god still represents an all-important factor in their life, bestowing upon them rainy or dry weather as required. "Religion is the opium of the people."

But to stamp out this opium, a persistent and lengthy struggle is necessary. Following Tikhon's appeal the orthodox priests will do all in their power to strengthen their influence among the masses of the town and still more among the village population. They are carrying on their activities and will continue to do so on the basis of the decree on liberty of conscience. But there is yet another decree in the Soviet republic, the like of which is known by no other state in the world. This is the decree on the state propaganda of Communism. As against the propaganda of the church there stand in fully array the entire organization of state power, the whole apparatus of the Communist Party, the Y. C. L., and Communist Children's Sections, and a whole network of Soviet Red Army schools of all degrees thru which 600,000 of the peasant youth pass every year. The whole of this organised force is by no means neutral on religious questions, nay, it is a fighting organisation of struggle against religion and against the church. Under the guidance of the Communist Party mass anti-religious propaganda still increases. A wide network of atheistic circles will, during the next few years, embrace the entire working class and peasant youth, not to mention the children who already, long ago have been lost to the church.

LET us now draw the necessary conclusions: Patriarch Tikhon's appeal is a blow to the counter-revolution and in itself is a sign of the ever growing strength of the Soviet regime, in fact the appeal still more strengthens the Soviet power.

The organs of the Soviet power and the Communist Party, in the future as in the past, will still more consistently carry on their struggles against the opium of religion, so as to prepare for the time when priests will have no connection whatever with the toiling masses of the Soviet republics.

FILM LIFE OF LENIN PRAISED AS FINE 'MOVIE'

Workers' Aid Plans to Show "His Heritage"

A foreign staff correspondent of a big Chicago daily reports from Berlin that a new Russian film has just been shown there. It is called "His Heritage" and deals with the life of Nicolai Lenin, but it is interwoven with a charming love story and some excellent acting by members of the Moscow Art Theater.

The story runs about as follows:

"A working girl's father is shown as a revolutionist fighting on the barricades. The girl is shown carrying him food in the street. Then he dies shot by a foul bourgeois. The girl and her grandmother flee to the country and the entire development of the Russian revolution is shown in beautiful pictures."

"The girl becomes a worker in a library and is wooed by a worker but the bourgeois murderer of her father returns from Paris to dig up his fortune which he buried before leaving. The working girl is charmed by his gentlemanly airs, but as he digs in his former garden he is caught and killed and the heroine marries the worker."

The picture is reported to be technically first-class. Efforts are being made to bring this and other late Russian films to this country for next fall's showing under the auspices of the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON, May 29.— Heavy seizures of rum vessels and liquor in the government's new law enforcement campaign, have so congested sea and lake ports that official instructions were issued today to relieve what was described as an "emergency situation."

First Local Formed in New York

NEW YORK, May 29.—Local New York of the recently organized photographic workers has been received into the American Federation of Labor, Louis J. Baum, secretary and organizer announced. The local is chartered as a federal local but the A. F. of L. promises its aid in creating a national organization.

Do You Belong? Then Here's Address.

Baum is circularizing all photographic workers in the nation whose names he can secure and is sending notices to photographic journals calling for the names of union prospects, with the intention of building the national movement as speedily as possible. The address of The Photographic Workers of America, Local New York (the first local formed) is 443 St. Anns Avenue, Bronx, New York City.

With the passing of Decoration Day and the coming of the summer and vacation season the photographic workers' lot becomes a harder one under the present open shop plan. The amateur finishers, who develop the films left at drug stores and other points of kodak call are sometimes compelled to toil 36 hours on end without sleep.

Some Objectives For Union.

A 44-hour week, with a minimum wage of $45 is the objective of the union. In the course of the union drive special attention is being paid to agitation against the labor of school children who are taken into the studios after school hours and worked several hours for a dollar or less. Members are joining steadily, says Baum, 35 coming in at the last mass meeting.

The Imperialist Movement in Syria and Jerusalem

By J. B.
(Jerusalem)

THAT which distinguishes French imperialism in Syria from English imperialism in Palestine is its militant character. The commissar and commander of the military forces has acted ruthlessly towards that section of the population which did not submit to the French commands and was hostile to the foreign occupants. As a result, the national revolutionary emancipation movement in Syria in general has assumed an equally sharp character, which is reminiscent of the time when the Arabs defended their independence in the fight against the Turkish despots. Right up to recently, Syria has remained a country of constant revolutionary ferment, continual outbreaks, raids and conspiracies. In September, 1924 during the daring raid upon Damascus by a "band" which seized possession of some police depots, for some time held a whole section of the town in its hands, and then were able to conceal themselves in the town unhindered, created a great sensation. As this attack was not accompanied by any plundering, this event, like the revolts which broke out at the same time in the Southeast of the country, bore a purely political character.

The anti-French movement is of course developing under illegal conditions. The most powerful organization in the country "Hisan-el-Wataniel-Arabi" (Arabian National Party) —carries on its work by illegal committees and has no possibility of coming out into the open. The French system of suppression is seen to be still more harsh as regards its treatment of the press. The opposition press is throttled (for example, the big bourgeois newspaper "Of Makkikech," ("Truth") has been suppressed.) A number of people who had played a leading part in the national revolutionary party were sentenced to terms of imprisonment or expelled from the country.

IN spite of the repressions the Arab revolutionary movement in Syria is constantly growing. The Arab national movement is gradually assuming the character of a movement of the broad masses of the people. This is chiefly due to the difficult economic situation in which Syria finds itself at present. The peasantry of the most cultured district in the Lebanons are emigrating in masses as their situation is intolerable. The wages of the town workers are lower than those of pre-war times, while the cost of food has considerably increased. Syria formerly constituted a trade route for Turkey, but it is now isolated and its trade is almost entirely crippled. The native Arabism industry is dying out; on the other hand the French capitalists are enjoying every sort of privilege. The government has not moved a finger in order to improve the existing state of affairs. Not only that; the budget is loaded with the burden of the repayment of the Turkish debts (in the interests of the French finances), with the enormous parasitic official apparatus, and with public undertakings which are not in any way for the benefit of the national economy of Syria, but are necessary to the French for their strategic aims.

The national emanicpation movement itself is gradually changing its character. In the past this movement for emancipation formed an integral part of the Pan-Islamic movement, chiefly uniting in its ranks the Mohammedan elements of Syria and aiming at the creation of an All-Arabism state with Sheik of Mekka, Hussein and his son Feisal at the head. This movement is now becoming a movement of the whole people. Broad circles of one-time mutually hostile Mohammedan and christian intellectuals are uniting together in a common struggle against France. At the same time, with the defeat sustained by Hussein, there have also been dispelled the hopes of an All-Arabian state under the protectorate of any European state. At present the movement has lost its bearing and has no clear aim. But the number of supporters of the liberation movement is growing. It is also gaining confidence in its own powers and we shall probably witness in the near future the powerful growth of a national insurrectionary movement in Syria, arising from the profound discontent with the imperialist domination.

FAR more clever and refined is the behavior of the English in the English mandatory area in Palestine. In the first place they refrain from relying solely upon the bayonets of their troops. Just as in the other colonies, they prefer to create a support in the country itself. The French in Beyrout rely upon the rule of their own general, the English in Palestine, however, impose the task of consolidating their power upon the liberal Zionists. Compared with the policy of Gourand or Weygand in Syria, the policy of Sir Herbedt Samuel in Palestine bears a "conciliatory" and "peaceable" character. The English act as if they were not occupying the country in their own interest, but in order to fulfill a solemn and repeated "promise" to the Jewish people to "set up in Palestine a national home for the Jews."

In Syria it is the imperialist government itself which appears as the leader of the struggle against the native population. In Palestine, however, the English have created a buffer in the shape of the Zionists. The policy of the Zionsts in Palestine is aggressive and absurd, and is regarded by the Arab population as a serious threat against their existence. The Zionists enjoy various privileges and advantages from the English government. A minority, amounting to not more than 13 per cent of the population, enjoy special privileges from the government thru the executive organ of the Zionist organization, and determine along with the government the number of Jewish immigrants to be admitted into Palestine, etc. In order to provide settlements for the Jewish immigrants the Zionist organization and other Jewish capitalist concerns are purchasing land from the Arab big landowners and expelling the Arab peasants from their little plots of ground.

IN Palestine the government is directing its persecutions mainly against the young, but well organized Communist Party, which is conducting the most active and successful fight against imperialism and against Zionism. The connection of this party with the national revolutionary elements and the growing popularity of its slogans among the Arab working and peasant masses constitutes a serious danger for English imperialism in the Near East, as it threatens it with the collapse of its cunning policy in Palestine.

The campaign against the union miners in the bituminous coal fields.

1. Illinois, Indiana and Ohio are amongst the most strongly unionized coal mining states in the country.
2. The coal barons have been conducting a campaign to destroy the miners' union as shown by their shutting down of coal mines in the fields where the United Mine Workers of America has won a foothold and transferring the operations to non-unionized coal fields.
3. Thus, in the first half of 1924, at least

a) 29 pct. of the unionized bituminous coal mines in Illinois quit business
b) 36 pct. of the unionized bituminous coal mines in Indiana quit business
c) 40 pct. of the unionized bituminous coal mines in Ohio quit business

4. In these three highly unionized coal mining states production has been maintained at a level of about forty per cent.
5. More and more bituminous coal is coming from the Southern non-unionized coal fields as shown by

a) Since 1900 the output of coal in the South has been increasing at a much higher rate than for the rest of the country.

b) In 1923 the production of coal in the Southern non-unionized was estimated to be about one-third of the total coal output of the country.

200 WORKING [illegible]EN AND WOMEN HELD IN CO[illegible] BARONS' BASTILLES IN WEST VIRGINIA MINE WAR

More than 200 men and women in northern West Virginia are in jail for defying the courts that restrain the organizing efforts of the United Mine Workers of America.

It is predicted in the region that further injunctions will place the entire coal section under control of the courts which are lined-up with the operators in the class war.

Northern West Virginia was picked by the union as the strategic position for breaking the open shop offensive which has been slowly pressing it back since 1922. The strike is successful enough to persuade the operators that they cannot win without the courts.

Judges Do Boss-bidding

The injunction granted by Judge Kittle at the request of coal companies illustrates how far the courts will go in denying the fundamental rights of organization to workers who oppose oppression by employers.

It enjoins the unionists from interfering in any unlawful way with the coal companies; from making any threats or suggestions of danger or creating the appearance of danger, and from any show of force in numbers of assembly in the vicinity of the mines; from threatening or intimidating any persons going to work in the mines and from the use of insulting names or any insulting words and especially the word scab.

It enjoins the miners from gathering in groups, crowds, single file formation on or about the mines and properties of the operators or upon the public roads, rights of way, railroads, railroad rights of way, fields, woods, public places or other places of any kind for the purpose of persuading any person to quit work, and from picketing any of the mines; also from influencing or persuading any person to quit, cease or refrain from working, from doing any acts whatsoever in the furtherance of any combination or conspiracy or other unlawful acts for the purpose of preventing the mine owners from operating their mines.

This injunction makes it possible to arrest and jail any miner doing anything in furtherance of the strike or seeking to organise the district. It belongs in a class with the Daugherty injuction against the railroad shopmen.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Roumanian government must dig up $9,000,000 to pay the Baldwin Locomotive Works for services rendered. Roumania hasn't got the dough and doesn't know where to get it. But the queen of Roumania, a very resourceful lady might place her talents at the disposal of her government provided she is as patriotic as some of the allied ladies who threw away their virtue during the war in order to secure valuable information from amorous German officers.

THE queen has just consented to write several spicy articles for the British and American press; articles that should prove as exciting as anything Elinor Glyn got off her chest before she squeezed the last dollar out of her ability to tease the erotic. The queen of Roumania is getting well paid for those articles. They tell of her affairs with men, and her majesty drops the gentle hint that she is not yet thru; that even tho she is advanced in years, the dangers that she liked to flirt with in her youth are still enticing.

SURELY, such a situation cannot be allowed to pass the notice of our American capitalists, on pleasure and publicity bent. There is a typical representative of the second generation in Harry K. Thaw. Harry, when not taking care of pet rabbits is a most enjoyable companion, they say, and might bring joy to the queen of Roumania and consolation to the government's treasury. The Baldwin Locomotive Works might be able to bring pressure to bear on Washington, which in turn might induce Harry to place himself at the services of humanity. This is his specialty, and as virtue is not required in these given circumstances, we cannot think of a more appropriate way to get Roumania out of a very tight hole. By all means let her majesty and Harry get together.

THIS is the way a female parasite of the bourgeoisie breaks into print. A queen is driven to the extremity of—figuratively speaking—flashing her ankle in the public press in order to make a living. Before long she may have to go washing dishes. While the royal parasite is thus engaged and the morons are licking their chops in anticipation of the erotic journalistic feast, the DAILY WORKER carries a story of a veteran woman of the working class, who, in her sixtieth year has planned a coast to coast tour to carry the message of Communism to those who toil and also the push the DAILY WORKER.

ELLA REEVE BLOOR never wore a crown and her path thru life has not been thru banks of roses or rows of monocles. She has been more associated with the grimy hands of workers than with the perfumed "fins" of the male parasites who have helped to keep the queen of Roumania from dying of ennui. Comrade Bloor keeps young by leading a useful life, bringing the message of social and economic emancipation to the masses and helping to abolish the system which parasites like the queen of Roumania and the male drones who cater to their whims. Long may she reign.

MEXICAN LABOR OFFICIALS FIGHT TEACHERS' STRIKE

Line Up with Governor Against Unions

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

PUEBLA, Mexico, May 31.—When the governor of the state of Puebla in March of this year tried to put into effect in his state the national policy of economies at the expense of the workers and employes of the government which Calles has inaugurated with the federal employees, he struck an unexpected obstacle in the teachers of the state. They were suffering already from the non-payment of thirty decennial salaries that is to say, of 300 days of back pay owed since the state went bankrupt during the De la Huerta uprising. The governor proposed to fire many and reduce the pay of the rest and continue to forget the back pay. The teachers, indignant, formed a union and called for the aid of the labor federation of the state affiliated with the Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana (C. R. O. M.) which is the principal labor organization of the nation.

Knife Workers Behind Closed Doors

The state labor federation promised aid to the teachers and appealed to the national body. The national federation, of which the real leader is the Secretary of Labor Morones, answered with a declaration to the effect that: (1) the teachers are not

HOOVER'S DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE HEARS ABOUT THE BIG STRIKE OF THE TRANSPORT WORKERS IN DENMARK

WASHINGTON—Cabled reports to the department of commerce from Copenhagen declare that "Conditions during the past month have been entirely influenced by the continuance of the nation-wide industrial labor disputes which are exerting an advance effect on the economic situation."

"This situation," the reports set forth, "has been aggravated by the strike of harbor and transport workers. Shipments of farm products will be stopped until relief work by the co-operative societies is organized. Efforts are being made to effect settlements but results so far have been negative . . . Economic losses to the country as a result of these conflicts are estimated at about 90,000,000 crowns to date. With domestic industries unable to deliver, orders are to a considerable extent being deflected to foreign countries, principally Germany."

Another cable dispatch says that a new wage agreement, giving a 5 per cent raise in pay to the seamen, has been signed by the shipowners and the seamen's union, to run for two years.

40 PER CENT OF MEAT NOT INSPECTED, SAYS MEDICAL AUTHORITY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 31—Uncle Sam needs such another jacking up as he got when Upton Sinclair's "Jungle" appeared, it developed at the convention of the American Medical Association when Dr. W. H. Lipman of Chicago said that 40 per cent of the meat offered for sale is not inspected.

Tuberculosis and typhoid infections are thus unchecked at the source to that extent, he pointed out. The non-inspected meats are those sold in the states where they are produced.

TAXI DRIVERS DEMAND UNION TO HIT YELLOW

Low Wage, Long Hours Exposes Sugary Dope

The Yellow Cab company, which boasts that it never hires a driver who is known to belong to a union, has just conducted a series of banquets at the Furniture Mart, 666 Lake Shore Drive, to "inculcate a family spirit among Yellow Cab company employes," according to John Hertz, president of the company.

The drivers interviewed by the DAILY WORKER declare they are not interested in being given one good meal a year by the Yellow Scab company as many of the drivers term their employers' organization when they are out of earshot. What the drivers want, they say, is decent working conditions, and an assured living wage. A union would give them just that, many of the drivers state.

Wait For Cabs

"The Yellow Cab drivers work in two shifts," said one driver. "The day shift starts at 7:30 in the morning and ends no earlier than 4.30 in the afternoon. The day shift works at least ten hours a day on the average. Then there is the night shift."

"The night men have to be in the garages at 4.00 o'clock and wait until a day driver comes in so that they can have a cab. It it mighty unpleasant hanging around the garage for two or three hours waiting for a cab to come in so that you can start to try to scrape up enough fares to get your bread and butter. We get paid

Delegate Demands Labor Conference Aid Starving India

GENEVA, May 31.—One-third of India is under the system of forced labor, the workers are destitute and verge on starvation, and both men and women work in the coal mines for an insignificant wage, an Indian delegate told the international labor conference.

The Indian, Chamanlal, contradicted the statements of the delegate of the British government. "India is a land of slaves," he told the league of nations government. Chamanlal demanded that the conference take some action to better the pitiable plight of the Indian natives, but the conference did nothing.

RED BAITING BRITISH CANNOT CATCH WHITE GUARD MURDER AGENT

LONDON, May 31—It is reported that white guard Russians in Holland have recently dispatched an agent to England to assassinate Christian Rakovsky, charge d'affairs of the Soviet government in Great Britain.

A Holland Communist overheard the assassins conversing of their plans in a cafe and notified the Soviet embassy in London.

Considerable criticism has arisen in English labor circles over the fact that the British government has permitted the assassin to enter England, in spite of the alleged wall against aliens put up by the home secretary, Joyson-Hicks.

The activities of the British government in deporting "reds" and announcing a bar against all Communist visitors, while permitting white guard Russians to enter on a mission of assassination, is not received with favor by the British workers. In spite of Scotland Yard's announced diligence, the assassin is still uncaught. Communists are doing their own guarding at the Soviet embasy, not relying wholly on the official "protection" of the British government.

BRITISH UNION QUIZ SAYS 'RED' NOTE WAS FAKE

General Council Asks Public Inquiry

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

LONDON, May 18.—(By Mail)—The trade union council delegation's report on the Zinoviev forgery was approved by the general council and was released for publication today. It contains the result of the investigations made in Moscow by Tillett, Grenfell and Young, who were permitted to inspect the archives of the Comintern in order to satisfy themselves regarding the authenticity or otherwise of the "Zinoviev" letter.

Comenting on the report the Daily Herald says: "It contains a critical analysis of the document itself and of the available evidence of its origin—an analysis which also leaves no doubt that the letter was a clumsy forgery."

General Council's Statement.

The statement by the general council of the trade union congress, on the report of the delegation to Russia regarding the "Zinoviev letter" is as follows:

REVOLUTION A SUCCESS, SAYS FOSTER

T.U.E.L. Picnic Speech Hails Soviet Victory

The picnic Saturday of the Chicago Trade Union Educational League attracted a large crowd of working men and women who enjoyed themselves thoroly from the beginning until long after nightfall. It was the first picnic of the season for radical workers, and the fine weather blended with the pleasure-seeking desire of the crowd to give the militant unionists of Chicago a memorable time.

In the afternoon the chief item of interest was the speech of William Z. Foster, secretary of the T. U. E. L. and but lately returned from a trip to Soviet Russia. The subject, "Russia in 1925" was developed around the fact that the success of the Russian revolution in attaining a better life, both materially and culturally, than they could have dreamed of under the old regime, is positively proven.

Soviet Success Cannot Be Concealed.

The inability of the propagandist forces of capitalism thruout the western nations, longer to conceal the success of the workers' revolution, is well illustrated, said Foster, by the conversion of the conservative British trade union leaders, who visited Soviet Russia, to a complete approval of the Soviet government and the methods of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

"The report of the British Trade Union delegation to Soviet Russia should be earnestly studied by every member of every union in America," declared Foster, "as it is destined to make a revolution within the organized labor movement of the world. Especially, when the British unions, joined with the Russian unions in the Anglo-Russian committee for international trade union unity, carry the message of the success of the Bolshevik revolution into every union in the world."

Not Only Understanding—But Action.

Foster urged that the members of organized labor who are connected with the Communist movement as members or sympathizers not only inform themsleves of this great wave of revolution sweeping out over Europe, but that they, as left wingers in the unions, vigorously carry on the struggle against reaction and class collaboration, and bring the backward American labor movement into the ranks of a workers' and farmers' government.

Chang Tso-Lin Army Officer Killed at Opium Conference

SHANGHAI, May 31—Gen. Li Kwei-Yuan, chief of staff of the first Fenftein army, who was sent to Shanghai by Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, war lord of Manchuria, to investigate an opium scandal in this city, was killed, and two other high military officers were seriously wounded, in a fight here yesterday that broke out at the opium suppression conference.

ITALIAN COMMUNIST DEPUTY OPPOSES GIFT TO ROYAL PARASITE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, May 31.—The chamber of deputies voted 2,000,000 lire ($80,000) as the annual honorarium for crown prince Humbert, against the determined opposition of the Communist deputy Bendini. Comrade Bendini declared such an outlay of money to keep one man a year, while thousands of unemployed workers were starving, was a disgrace.

Fascists who packed the galleries, and the fascist deputies interrupted the Communist and cheered the king.

FRENCH PREPARE RIFF OFFENSIVE AIDED BY SPAIN

Moroccans Break Thru Lines of Invaders

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TANGIER, Morocco, May 31.—The Riffian troops, hiding behind rocks, brought down several French airplanes near the Oeurgha river, with their rifle fire, it is learned here.

The generals heading the invading French army, held a conference here at which the plans for a combined Spanish-French offensive against the native Moroccans were discussed. Those taking part in the conference were Gen. Daugan, who recently arrived in Fez, Gen. de Chambrun, Gen. Billettet and members of the French general staff.

The Riffians have broken the line on the Wessan front, where fierce fighting is taking place. Bands of Riffians are also penetrating the Bibane and Kiffane lines established by the French invaders.

Abd-el-Krim has renewed his attacks on the Spaniards in Spanish Morocco. Over 1,000 Riffians have crossed the road between Tetuan and Tangier, and several thousand are concentrated in the south, indicating that Krim is preparing at attack on Tetuan from two directions.

Hard fighting is also taking place on the Bibane plateau, where Col. Frydenburg's columns were attacked.

Spanish airplanes are bombarding the Yebala villages.

MURDER STRIKERS AND STUDENTS IN SHANGHAI STRIKE

Police Fire on Crowd in Protest Parade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, May 31—Because the so-called "international mixed court" of alien imperialists convicted seventeen strikers against the Japanese textile mill owners of "conspiracy" a riot broke out when the united forces of the strikers and Chinese students attempted to march in a protest demonstration thru the international settlement.

Police Kill Paraders.

The police blocked the way and took the offensive by arresting the leaders of the parade, upon which the mass of workers and students became angry and tried to rescue their comrades. The police then began to shoot into the crowd and eight were killed and four wounded. Thirty were arrested. But the whole working population and the student body of the city are in ferment against the tyrannical action of the police in the international settlement.

Armored cars and tanks furnished by the imperialist exploiters are patrolling the streets to prevent a mass assault to rescue those arrested, the Chinese asserting that these workers and students will, also, be condemned by the international court without the slightest resemblance of justice.

MACHINISTS' UNION BALLOTS ALL COUNTED, BUT JOHNSTON MACHINE FEARS TO ANNOUNCE THE RESULT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—The election results in the International Association of Machinists are plainly so against the Johnston machine that "B. & O. Bill" is hard up for ways to steal the election.

The most amazing fact confronting the Machinists' Union today is that, altho the ballots are all counted—no decision is being announced. The ballots were all counted last Wednesday, May 27, but the secretary-treasurer's office, presided over by Davidson of the Johnston machine, has failed to make any official statement of the result.

Anderson Claims Victory.

Anderson, the centrist, who won by the qualified support of the left wing, says, "My watcher has a record of all the votes cast, and even if those ballots are counted that are clearly illegal, I shall still have a small majority. If these illegal ballots are thrown out, I shall have a majority of 1,500 to 2,000."

H. L. Brunson, watcher for "Bill" Johnston claims that if all the challenged ballots are thrown out Anderson will lose by 6,000. But the fact remains that the Johnston machine gets its vote from "blue sky" locals, and the total number of ballots cast—first supposed to be only 35,000, is found out to be nearly 40,000. This indicates some fancy padding by "Bill" Johnston's machine of the membership, according to reports.

Since the DAILY WORKER released the news that Johnston has sent for general counsel, Mulholland, in an effort to pick flaws in the Anderson vote enuf to elect "B. & O. Bill," a revulsion of feeling in the membership against the union election being adjudicated by lawyers, has caused Johnston to deny that he sent for Mulholland to come to Washington from Toledo. However, the law shark is here, and the union funds are unquestionably being used to pay him for counting Anderson out and Johnston in, if humanly possible.

Secretary Must Make Announcement.

The mischief of all legal advice and legalist rulings, is that when the machine wants it applied to throw out Anderson votes, it boomerangs back and slices off more Johnston votes than Anderson ones.

Secretary-Treasurer Davidson is supposedly compelled by the consitution, to make an announcement, but if he does he has also virtually to make rulings on the legality of ballots. The machine faces a revolt if Davidson dares to announce that Johnston is elected, as such announcement can be made only by the grossest discrimination in allowing illegal Johnston votes to be counted and equally flagrant outlawing of Anderson votes.

Like Lewis in Miners' Union.

Left wingers call the attention of the militant trade unionists of the country to the similarity of Johnston's predicament to the situation of John L. Lewis in the United Mine Workers, where Lewis has not dared, altho the miners' union constitution demands it, to issue a tabulated return of the union election, but has brazenly held on to his position merely

WHITE TERROR PACT MADE BY GREAT POWERS

United Front Against Revolutionary Labor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 31.—It is learned from Scotland Yard sources that the governments of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany have recently interchanged communications and agreed upon a united front against the Communist movement.

Each government has pledged to give the fullest co-operation to the others in spying upon suspected Communists of the other nations, in deporting without trial and in violation of law if need be, the fugitives from the white terror practiced against workers in fascist Italy, monarchist Germany or—let it be understood—all the white guard puppet nations dependent on the great imperialist powers.

Explains Deportations

This reveals, for example, the reason for the outrageous deportation, in plain violation of German law, of Bulgarian refuges from the murderous Zankov regime, living in Germany until recently, when the German government deported them into the bloody clutches of the Zankov assassins.

The agreement is understood to have been reached since the return from Soviet Russia of the British trade union delegation, whose report favoring the Soviet government and the methods of the Communist movement, has sent the British ruling class into a frenzy of fear.

It is expected that the full force of all these robber powers will be exerted to prevent the tremendous effect that the report of the British Trade Union delegation and the new movement for international trade union unity thru the Anglo-Russian unity committee, is bound to have upon the organized labor movement of the western countries."

The fact that the conservative type of trade union leaders in Great Britain, comparable to the Gompers group in the United States, and with immense influence in the international Union movement, has openly approved of the Russian revolution and asserted that it has been successful as an emancipative step of the Russian workers and peasants from capitalist exploitation, has caused consternation in the ruling class of all countries. This is looked upon as the reason for immediate application of the united front against the Communists.

Will Involve All Labor Unions

While the organized Communist movement is first to feel the blow of the capitalist offensive, the more "respectable" unionists who wish to carry on the struggle effectively for the advance of wages, the shortening of hours and other moderate demands of the organized labor movement, will be threatened also. In fact the necessity of rigid suppression of the German workers if the Dawes plan is to come anywhere near success, will have direct effect in aid of the open shop movement in all western nations. Thus the drive supposedly aimed at the Communists will involve the whole of the labor movement as it proceeds.

MINERS' WIVES FIGURED AS NEW TEXTILE SLAVES

Chamber of Commerce Makes Labor Survey

WILKES BARRE, Pa., May 31.—The Wilkes Barre chamber of commerce says it wants more female workers in Wilkes Barre so that more silk mills and other concerns using women workers can be started. The chamber desires to attract wives and daughters of miners to the proposed new industrial concerns.

It is believed that such new workers would be partially dependent on their husbands and fathers in the coal mines and consequently would not make embarrassing wage demands.

A survey of available labor is now being conducted by the chamber with the idea of attracting more capital and employers to the city.

COOLIDGE BOOSTER RETURNS FROM HAPPY HOURS SPENT WITH POPE AND MUSSOLINI IN EUROPEAN TOUR

BOSTON, Mass., May 31.—Frank W. Sterns, Boston millionaire merchant, and bosom friend of Cal Coolidge, has returned from a European tour in which, according to his account, he had some happy hours with Mussolini and the pope. Sterns tells approvingly of France and Italy where "every man, woman and child in those two countries is working, working, working—as long as daylight lasts."

commission, and the time spent in waiting around the garage is lost time."

The night shift starts as soon as the driver can get a cab, another employe explained, and then the driver works until two or three a. m. the next morning.

High Profits Last Year

It is by these methods that the Yellow Scab company was enabled to pile up a net profit of $3,223,929.34 in Chicago during 1924, a lean year for the taxi companies.

"It was the loyalty and efficiency of our employes" say John Hertz, the president. "That has enabled this company to increase our earnings during a period of business depression. It was the courtesy, decency and efficient driving that built up this business and was directly responsible for our big earnings last year."

This sounds very polite but it does not increase the earnings of these "courteous drivers." There are approximately 4,000 Yellow Cab drivers on the streets of Chicago, including the two shifts. On January 1 of last year 2,798 cabs were on the streets doing double shift, and 272 have been added since that time, in addition to 535 new cabs which replaced the old ones.

Of these 4,000 Yellow Cab drivers, only 24 are receiving average earnings over $35.00 per week. The average income of a Yellow Cab driver is estimated at around $25.00 to $30.00 per week. The average is nearer $25.00.

Displaces His Drivers

The hypocrisy of John Hertz's interest in the "courteous" drivers is exploded by the employes themselves, who inform the DAILY WORKER that Hertz is putting his energy into boosting the new "Drive It Yourself" taxi company, which is promoted by funds supplied by the Yellow Scab company, and is according to the drivers, aimed to displace them and make the customers their own chauffeurs.

The "Drive It Yourself" company charges 12 cents per mile for its cars, whereas the Yellow Scab cars charge 20 cents per mile. In this way Hertz is making a cut rate in order to enable the Yellow Scab company to get along with less employes.

And so the Yellow Scab company had to pad out its banquets with friends and relatives of the officials, and employes conscripted from the offices. A large number of the drivers were indifferent to the affair. Many of those who did go were given to understand that their bosses required attendance.

Don't Hire Union Men

Officials of the company questioned about their ideas on unionism, were, of course, unanimous in speaking against organization. T. Kenney, editor of "Taxigrams," the magazine printed to instill loyalty into the employes, declared "I don't think the Yellow Cab company would prosper if it hired union men."

David MacLean, the employment manager of the company, thinks a union is "dictatorial." He declared that "former union men" are being hired by the company, but "of course, they cannot belong to a union at the time of their employment."

Mrs. F. Phelps, head of the "welfare" department of the company, who is in charge of keeping the drivers contented, and who conducted the banquets, paused between bites of white fish long enough to say sweetly, "I don't think the men really want to organise a union."

Drivers Demand Better Pay

One driver showed an article in the April 15 issue of the "Taxigram" dope sheet, written by C. W. Gray, vice president of the Yellow Scab company. "You men know this company," the article said prophetically. "You men have made it what it is, and you are the ones are maintaining its enviable (?) reputation."

"The drivers are waking up to the fact that they are the backbone of the company," said this employe. "We are told so often how much our work means to the company that we are beginning to believe it. And we want adequate compensation for this work we do for the company. They tell us we make them their profits. Well—we want these profits if we make them, and we want a union organization to force the company to give us those profits which belong to us."

Pick Super-Patriot as Commissioner to Rule Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Maj. Gen. Eli A. Helmick, inspector general of the army for the past four years, has been urged for appointment, at the hands of President Coolidge, as one of the two civilian commissioners who have charge of the government of the district of Columbia. An army engineer officer is always the third member of the city commission.

Helmick rose to fame recently when he declared, at a super-patriotic meeting that the French revolution was incited to its terror and its general upsetting of Europe by "a German Jew by the name of Karl Marx."

HUMPHREY, COOLIDGE REACTIONARY, UPSETS FAKE GAME OF "FAIRNESS" PLAYED BY U. S. TRADE COMMISSION

WASHINGTON—So much anxiety has ben created in the republican strongholds in the west because by the rule of secrecy and refusal of investigation which Comissioner Humphrey has brot into force in the federal trade commission, that President Coolidge is now worried over its outcome. Paticularly is the executive alarmed at the declaration by Sen. Borah that he favors Sen. Norris' plan of abolishing the commission rather than permit it to be used to protect the brigands of big business.

Accordingly, the White House has begun to leak rumors that Coolidge will take up the whole issue of federal trade commission policy before congress shall have a chance to begin a debate on Humphrey . performance. Coolidge, who nominated Humphrey and insisted on his confirmation with the enthusiastic approval of the U. S. chamber of commerce, did so with knowledge that Humphrey had always been a derisive enemy of the purpose of the commission—the alleged safeguarding of so-called "fair" competition. Now he is back-tracking, apparently, and will disclaim all responsibility for the secrecy rule and the general scrapping of the functions of the commission.

That he will demand Humphrey's resignation is not suggested. Humphrey is a wily politician who might sting even the chief executive if provoked too far. He is doing what he was selected to do.

ASK COLLEGE ATHLETES TO SCAB ON BUILDING LABORERS IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Mass.—Stars of the gridirons, the baseball diamonds and the running tracks of Harvard and other New England colleges and universities will be sought as strikebreakers to replace the building laborers who are striking for a few cents an hour more in Greater Boston.

So Colonel William H. Root, president of the Building Trades Employers Association announces. He thinks the college athletes will be glad to earn summer money at the rates of 65 and 70 cents an hour that fail to satisfy workers with families to support.

Steps to head off the employers' attempt will be made. University campuses will be circurlarized by union men so that no student athlete can go scabbing without knowing that there is a strike.

Nearly 5,000 building laborers are striking, following a referendum taken by the five locals of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers union with which they are affiliated. The men are demanding 77½ to 80 cents an hour in place of the 65 to 70 cents an hour previously paid.

House painters are back at work under a 3-year agreement, calling for a continuance of the present $1.10 an hour for another year, with arbitration to fix the scale in the ensuing two years of the pact.

Even in France where a left government is nominally in power, it holds its lease only by carrying out the policies of the extreme right. One of the amusing results of the rejuvenation of reaction is the manner in which it is giving the rassberry to its very good friends, the social democrats.

IN Germany the late President Ebert's son is fined for speaking disrespectfully of certain members of the government. Still worse, the offices of the Vorwaerts are raided by detectives of the investigation branch of the public prosecution. This is the first time since 1908 that such a thing happened. Vorwaerts was the official organ of the "royal" German republic since Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht were murdered by Scheideman and Noske and the social democrats were in power in Germany. The excuse for the raid was the refusal of Vorwaerts to publish in full a reply made by a nationalist leader to charges of corruption made against him by the socialist organ.

THE German law provides that all denials must be published in full whether the editor approves of them or not. But the usual course to adopt in such cases is a summens. But the office of the public prosecution is now in the hands of the nationalists and they show no gratitude to the socialists whose policy makes it possible for the nationalists to be back in the saddle. This is rank ingratitude. The most amusing feature of the raid on the Vorwaerts office is that the official directly responsible for it, the Prussian minister of the interior, Herr Severn, is a socialist.

THE French socialists changed their minds and voted for the Painleve government on the Moroccan question. That is, they decided to support hte present war of aggression carried on by the French capitalists against the Riffians, whose offense is a strong desire to run their own country. It is true that the socialists explained that their reasons for supporting the government were different to those of the Poincareists for doing the same thing. The socialists thot French prestige must be upheld. The right opposition—thought—well, you can think up as good an alibi as I can for the French socialists.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN was unceremoniously shoved off the front page by the indecent act of a Chicago bootlegger in getting assassinated without due and sufficient notice, thus causing big headlines in the Chicago press and the usual predictions by the police force that they would have the murderers "within twenty-four hours." The murdered man was a catholic but the cautious church would not give him credentials to heaven, officially. So a priest was detailed to slip him the necessary letter of introduction surrepitiously.

IT took twenty-five limousines to carry the mountain of flowers that accompanied the deceased bootlegger to the grave. The dead man has four brothers—all handy with the gat. A policeman standing on a street corner reading the headline which announced the murder. "Wait until the four brothers get into action," he chuckled with evident satisfaction. Several city officials were visible at the hooch merchant's funeral who had a large following among the Italians. Such is respect for law in this big city. It is a joke until a worker gets caught in its toils.

AN actress offered a trained chimpansee for use in the fight between the evolutionists and their opponents in Dayton, Tenn. This is a reflection on William Jennings Bryan. Isn't one monkey sufficient? Bringing such a zoological specimen to any place disgraced by the presence of the perennial presidential candidate is like bringing booze to Bermuda. That Dayton mixes business with its desire to satisfy its avatistic craving for seeing people punished, is shown when a public meeting of indignant citizens protested against the announced intention of Chattanooga school teachers to court indictment for the same offense that brought Professor Scopes into the toils of the law and William Jennings Bryan onto the front page.

THE Daytonians declared that unless the Chattanoogans desisted, they would boycott the hostile city. The people of Chattanooga might come and watch the proceedings and in the happy event of the young teacher being burned at the stake, a representative of the competing burg might be allowed the privilege of pouring the oil on the faggots or applying the lighted torch. At a mass meeting, a Dayton barber assaulted an evolutionist because the latter held that man sprung from a lower order of family life. The barber took it as a personal insult. We have not seen the barber's picture, but he probably needs a shave and haircut.

Strike Continues in 35 Ice Plants in Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 31.—As Local 56 of the Steam and Operating Engineers Union continues its fight in 35 ice plants of Brooklyn for the 8-hour and $9 day and the 6-day week the other workers have formed an Ice Plant Workers' Union that is seeking admission to the American Federation of Labor. The new union is supporting the strike and demands $6 a day.

5,000 COMMUNISTS IN GERMANY VICTIMS OF WHITE TERROR RULE

NEW YORK, May 31.—There are between 3,000 and 4,000 Communists in Germany already sentenced and 1,000 more awaiting trial for political acts, says Louis Fischer in the Nation of June 3. Greater Berlin alone has several hundred political prisoners. Communists are sometimes kept in prison for a year without trial and many brutalities are committed. Prisoners are frequently beaten and forced to sign confessions they have not read. Men are chained hand and foot. In 1924 the International Workers' Aid helped 18,000 German politicals.

MEXICAN LABOR OFFICIALS FIGHT TEACHERS' STRIKE

affiliated with the C. R. O. M.; (2), no organization of the C. R. O. M. can declare a solidarity strike with a non-affiliated organization or with one that has been affiliated less than six months; (3) the C. R. O. M. will not give aid and forbids the state federation of Puebla to do so. The governor of the state had already sent the C. R. O. M. a statement declaring: (1) that he did not recognize the teachers union; (2) that government employes cannot organize; (3) that his plan of economies could give the teachers no grievance since it was the plan of Calles and had nothing to do with the workers; (4) that the teachers were only striking to serve his political enemies which are also the political enemies of the C. R. O. M. The general secretary of the C. R. O. M., far from repudiating the concept that government employes cannot organize or strike, answered with the decree above-mentioned.

General Strike Breaks Out

All thru April the teachers continued negotiating and the workers of Puebla, in spite of the government-controlled C. R. O. M., continued preparing a general strike. On the 22nd, it broke out. The strike was complete. It included light, water, transport, bread, factories—everything. The schools, of course, also closed.

Troops and police patrolled the streets. The first bloodshed occurred on the twenty-fourth, Leonardo Paleta, former secretary of the state federation was killed and various workers wounded. Other encounters followed. Police, to protect scabs, fired on pickets. Several workers were wounded but the police were disarmed by the strikers. One policeman was killed and another wounded.

Send C. R. O. M. Envoy to Break Strike

The strike spread steadily thruout the state and to the neighboring state of Tlaxcala. The C. R. O. M. sent Eulalio Martinez to Puebla to pursuade the strikers to betray the teachers and abandon their strike. (Eulalio Martinez was the delegate of the C. R. O. M. to the second congress of the Red Labor International in Moscow, where he accepted the conditions of affiliation which he and his organization repudiated upon his return. He has since attacked Russia repeatedly. He has just been chosen by the government as "labor attache" to the Mexican Legation in Moscow in accord with the decision to send labor attaches to the embassies of various important countries in representation of the Calles "labor" government.)

Martinez accomplished nothing. The strike become more complete, newspapermen, chauffeurs, electricians added to the list of strikers. The government mobilized 8,000 troops near the capital city of the state, the city of Puebla. President Calles issued a statement attacking the strikers and ordering the troops to protect scabs. Eulalio Martinez secured from the governor of Puebla a promise of recognizing the teachers' union but no other concessions. This he wanted the strikers to accept but they rejected it. The C. R. O. M. thru the mouth of its general secretary then declared the strike "illegal" unconstitutional, the work of agitators, etc.

Union's Support Teachers

The textile workers of Atlixco seconded the strike on the 28th first deposing their general secretary who opposed it. The workers of other states, also affiliated with the C. R. O. M. but also engaged in the textile trade (Puebla is an important textile center) voted to strike as well but the leaders of the C. R. O. M. were in general successful in preventing the execution of these decisions. The strike lasted till the first of May but the C. R. O. M. gradually isolated it driving the workers in other states and in other parts of the state of Puebla back to work and leaving the capital of the same name as a strike center. On the first of May the federal government greatly augmented the number of troops there. At the same time, the governor promised to take back all teachers and make no reprisals for the strike. By Monday, May 4 the strike was definitely ended.

As an immediate consequence of the treachery of the leaders of the C. R. O. M., the State Federation of Labor, thru its executive committee, has voted to sever its connections with the parent body. They will probably reaffiliate shortly.

The general strike is interesting in that it exposes the "socialist government" of Calles and in its exposure to the workers of Mexico of the true nature of the leaders of the C. R. O. M. strikebreakers at the service of the federal government and the governor of the states, where these are political friends of the labor party. Moreover, it demonstrates palpably the fact that who plays with large masses of workers plays with revolutionary tinder. The government, thru its paid agents, the leaders of the C. R. O. M., has sought to organize the working masses in conservative organizations. But the Puebla general strike has demonstrated that the control of these leaders over their masses is not as secure as they had hoped.

Sham War in Tennessee Over "Evolution" Holds No Promise for Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, let workers and poor farmers keep uppermost in their minds, in reading about the so-called Scopes' "monkey trial," at Dayton, Tenn., that the result of the legal battle will not affect the capitalist class domination of America's educational system. "The Goose-Step" will be in force then as well as now in the schools where America's youth receives its instruction. Even the United States supreme court, headed by that most arch-reactionary, William Howard Taft, can with an easy conscience permit the teacher, John Thomas Scopes, and other instructors, to go ahead teaching evolution as they see fit. No tremor will shake the capitalist structure build on the rights of private property.

• • • •

Yet the legal proceedings will serve some purpose. They will show the stone age conservatism in which the democratic South is bogged, altho Dayton, Tenn., is claimed as republican territory. The mould of reaction fits alike upon both the old political parties in Tennessee, as elsewhere.

Take Clarence Darrow for instance. He is willing to line up with the defense lawyers. Darrow was an accredited delegate to the last democratic convention in New York City. His politics ought to help him big south of the Mason and Dixon line. But word got around that Darrow is an infidel. The clever Chicago lawyer announced that he was neither infidel nor atheist, but an agnostic, which left the Southerners more bewildered than ever. They are not accustomed to such hair-splitting distinctions. What is more, however, they are not going to allow any battle they may make for the right to teach evolution in the schools of the state destroy anyone's belief in the teachings of the bible. It looks as if Darrow, who has struggled so hard within recent years to become respectable in capitalist surroundings, will find himself black-balled by the Tennessee defenders of "evolution."

Dudley Field Malone may have better luck. He has been able to live down the fact that he wandered so far afield from the donkey democratic fold as to run for governor of New York, in 1920, on the farmer-labor ticket. Within recent years Malone has specialized in Paris divorces for some of America's best, in the sense of aristocratic families, which has developed into a recognized industry.

Then there is John "Wallstreet" Davis, former private counsel for J. Pierpont Morgan, legal aid of the West Virginia mine barons, the phone trust and other "open shop" interests, who is also trotted out as a defender of the right to teach the doctrines of "evolution."

Charles Darwin must surely shudder in his grave to think that lawyers such as these are mentioned to defend the principles he espoused.

• • • •

Private ownership of the nation's wealth and natural resources will not be touched by this discussion of the evolution of the human species. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is considered a "liberal" in the church because, among other tenets, he is opposed to complete immersion in baptising the victims included in his flock. But John D. Rockefeller, Jr., thinks him safe enough to be head of a church to cost millions of dollars, that the heir of Standard Oil will see that he gets. Fosdick's friends are contributing "morally and financially" to the defense of evolution in Tenessee. But religion does not cease in the least, therefore, to function as "the opium of the people."

But let some instructor arise demanding his right to teach social evolution driving toward the final emancipation of the world's last oppressed class,—that Communism comes on the heels of capitalism with giant strides. It is one of capitalism's greatest fears that even the smallest taint of Communism should raise its head in the nation's school system. Freedom of teaching that does not permit the message of Communism to be heard is a liberty gagged and shackled. It is a fraud par excellance like all liberalisms.

The American Federation of Teachers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has pledged itself to stand by Scopes. It is in the Teachers' Union, in New York City, allied with this organization, that the so-called "liberals" have started a war on the Communist teachers, fearing their influence in developing in the minds of the workers and their children a desire for real enlightenment. Again the terror of "the Russian example" is invoked as a nightmare in defense of capitalism. The teacher-heresy hunters in New York City are neck and neck with the witch-burners of the Cumberland mountains in Tennessee. But the Soviet educational system, gradually developing and broadening, with its loyal staff of instructors—loyal to the Workers' Republics—is already an inspiration to workers in many lands.

But it was only thru a tremendous upheaval, that dethroned capitalism, that gave the Russian workers and peasants the right to think for themselves, in the interests of their class. So even in the United States this righ will come to life only in the thunder march of the millions in the social revolution, erecting the banners of the Proletarian Dictatorship in the struggle for the conquest of all power. No peaceful combat here within the dull confines of dusty court rooms, but the open clash on the far-flung battle fronts of the class war, where the toiling masses march to victory against capitalist oppression.

• • • •

The sham battle over "evolution" at Dayton, Tenn., holds no promise for the working class. The workers must still fight the real class battle for their own liberation.

COTTON BOSSES CONSPIRING TO CUT PRODUCTION

Less Work for Labor and Higher Prices

NEW YORK—Announcement of the Southern Yarn Spinners' Association of a deliberate plan to curtail production is being interpreted by textile unionists in terms of less food, clothing and shelter for the workers this summer.

The association reports that mills operating more than one million spindles have agreed to curtail operations for at least a week in the period between June 1 and August 15, provided similar agreements are made for the rest of the industry, with a total of ten million spindles.

Manufacturers are signifyinng their intention to reduce production by signing pledge cards sent out by the editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin. The Yarn Spinners' Association says its action follows decisions of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers Association—of which Morgan Butler, son of the United States senator from Massachusetts, is president.

That this organised conspiracy to reduce production and thereby raise prices to the consumer may be a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law is a subject that has been carefully considered by manufactunrers' attorneys, but the consensus of opinion is that the Coolidge administration will not interfere with the plan.

COOKS TO TALK OF CONDITIONS AT JUNE 6 MEET

Scorn Bill Now Before State Legislature

By PASQUALE RUSSO.

Members of the Cooks' and Pastry Cooks' Cosmopolitan Social Club are distributing a handbill announcing an educational gathering to be held at the Hotel Morrison, June 6, 8:30 p. m. On this occasion they will discuss the merits of a bill introduced into the general assembly of the State of Illinois.

Theodore D. Smith of the 13th district is the author of the bill and he will be in attendance at the gatthering to show reasons why cooks should be required to have a state license.

From our meager information it appears that the bill will not benefit the cooks. However it is plain that it will increase the revenue flowing into the pockets of crooked officials. Smith, as a politician, can be trusted not to introduce a bill that will benefit the slave toiling in a filthy and unsanitary kitchen. To provide for the health of the workers would be inimical to the interests of the food barons and this Smith will studiously avoid.

Workers' Health Comes First.

The bill states: "It shall be unlawful for any person to follow the occupation of cook or chef, unless he shall have first obtained a certificate of registration." From this we are led to believe that registration is of prime importance. But is it? We think not. The first and most important item is the cook's health.

Since Mr. Smith is to attend in person, and since the seance is to be held in the Morrison Hotel, a notorious sweatshop, he will have an excellent opportunity to obtain some first hand information. The conditions at the Morrison are filthy and if Mr. Smith chooses he may study the situation, and if he does he will be forced to conclude that health should be considered before registration.

Let us enumerate some of the conditions actually existing at the Morrison Hotel right at this very moment. The main kitchen is located in the third basement, below street level, and here the heat is terrific. On this same floor there is a large, well-kept toilet with plenty of soap and towels. Unfortunately its use is restricted to that of guests. It is a violation of the rules for any employe to use the toilet. Frequently they use it but at the risk of their jobs. Other times they use the less frequented places behind the range or stock pot.

The toilet for the use of kitchen employes is in the basement below. There are two, one for men, one for women; no soap or towels and the odor is nauseating. On the second floor there is another, but here the conditions are even worse.

No windows, no fresh air, no ventilation. The smell is offensive and all the employes complain, tho no heed is paid to the complaints. There is no provision made for shower baths.

Bad Food Served Public.

Come-backs and scraps are all used and worked over. As a rule chicken skin is mixed with the other scraps. The cook takes this and molds it with his hands, smearing it with bread crumbs. Each day it is served and reserved under the following names:

First Day: "Chicken cutlet with green peas."

Second Day: "Capon cutlet with sweet potatoes."

Third Day: "Turkey cutlet with green peas."

Fourth Day: "Sweatbread cutlet with cream sause."

In most cases these cutlets are sour but are served to the public. On May 22,. Waitress No. 19 served several orders of capon cutlets that had soured. Is this fraudulent or not?

The soup pot contains all manner of scraps; it is not covered and roaches and flies have free access to it. On May 19, Waitress No. 1 had her attention directed to a roach in the soup by a customer.

The bread dressing served to the public is handled in the same manner as at the Hotel LaSalle. It is soaked in a filthy sink where pots and pans are washed.

Not infrequently food is actually taken from the garbage can and served to guests. This seems incredible, but the following are the facts:

On May 22, a cook whose card number is 1180 received an order from a guest for "pot roast with potato pancakes." The cook in looking about saw that the potato pancakes had disappeared. Turning to Frank Purdy, the steward he inquired: "What has become of the pancakes?" The steward answered by saying: "Look in the garbage can." Again the cook queried: "What do you want me to do?" to which the steward replied: "Take them out of the can, they are all right and use them." Needless to say, the cook obeyed orders. Incidentally, we challenge the management of the hotel to disprove or deny any or all of these charges.

In short, this condition is not confined to the Morrison Hotel. It is general and applies to all hotels. No bill conjured up and proposed by an assemblyman can remedy such barbaric conditions. There is only one remedy to meet the situation adequately and that is for the workers to organize and remake the conditions suitable to their own health and welfare.

WALL STREET JOURNAL SHOWS WAGE CUTS BASED ON FALLING PROFITS WHOLLY UNJUSTIFIED

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Profits of $128,390,00 made by 81 industrial corporations in the first quarter of 1925 disprove the propaganda that good profits are impossible with the present level of wages. These same corporations made $129,008,000 in the same period of 1924 so that the decline is less than one-half of one per cent.

After deduction of preferred dividends the profits for three months remaining for common stockholders in these corporations represented a return of three and one-half per cent. On an annual basis this is a profit of fourteen per cent.

This is Wall Street Survey.

The 81 companies were chosen by the Wall Street Jounral indiscriminately and comprise practically all that have made comparable reports thus far thru Dow, Jones & Co. They show the general tendency. The owning class is gettting away with profits nearly equal to the generous ones of 1924 in spite of a material reduction in the general level of employment.

Out of 11 industrial groups all but two showed larger profits than in the first quarter of 1924. The amount of profit and rate of return by industries in the first quarter of 1925 were:

Groups	Profits	Pct.
Utilities	$42,680,000	2.81
Steel	24,641,000	2.72
Oil	13,729,000	3.31
Automobile	27,261,000	7.54
Motor accessories	1,894,000	6.20
Metals	5,490,000	5.90
Miscellaneous	7,366,000	3.61
Leather	66,000	.11
Chemical	2,849,000	5.84
Chain stores	2,276,000	9.21
Tobacco	233,000	3.38
Total	$128,390,000	3.50

Profits Not All Low.

These profits represent only three months' operations. For a full year they would mean more than 10 per cent for the stockholders of every industry except leather. The automobile industry would make over 30 per cent for its stockholders; motor accessory concerns approximately 25 per cent. The chemical industry, which among other things supplies farmers with fertilizer, would present common stockholders with more than 23 per cent.

And this Profit Rate is on Water.

Generous stock dividends in the past have capitalized the excess profits of previous years in many of these industries until the present par value of the stock has little relation to the actual investment of the owners. In some industries the common stock was originally all water. So the return on actual investment would be far greater than the percentages shown.

At the beginning of 1925 these corporations had undivided surplus profits of $1,652,057,381, amounting to nearly half the entire $3,657,984,000 par value of their common stock.

Ruin of Toledo Labor Unions Symbolized in Debris of Terminal

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 31.—The Toledo Terminal R. R. Bldg. was destroyed by fire yesterday. It was in this building in May, 1919, that the 12,000 workers who were locked out by the Willys Overland Co. held their daily meetings.

Within the walls of this building were uttered the words that disorganized the Overland workers when Business Agent Quinlivan of the C. L. U. declared that "We will win this strike by the organization of the skilled workers."

For the first time in their history the Overland workers were together enmasse, 12,000 of them, enthusiastic, full of fight, and feeling the power of their numbers. Then they were told to return to their respective halls and each union to take whatever action it could constitutionally take as regards the lockout. The fight lasted for nine months.

Holland Furnace Company is Still on the Unfair List

The molders' conference board of Chicago denies the report appearing in a number of labor papers that the Holland Furnace Co. has been taken off the unfair list. Negotiations are still under way, molders' union officials say, to restore the eight-hour day and other union conditions at the Holland plant. Chicago molders recently renewed their agreement with union employers for $1 an hour, with the 44-hour week in the summer months and the 48-hour week in winter. The contract, which runs to May 1, 1926, affects 2,000 union molders.

Press Feeders Still Waiting.

The press feeders and assistants are still awaiting the outcome of conferences with employers in Chicago initiated by international officials of the pressmen after Franklin Union No. 4 had asked strike sanction. The union wants a $2 a week raise for day work and $4 nights, the same as has been granted the pressmen.

CAN'T FIRE SCHOOL TEACHER BECAUSE SHE GOT MARRIED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—Women teachers in New York state and city schools who marry cannot be ousted from their jobs for that reason, Dr. Frank P. Graves, state commissioner of education, rules.

The ruling was made on the case of Mrs. Davis Thomas who lost her job as teacher in Albany when school authorities discovered she had been secretly married. Mrs. Thomas is reinstated. Every teacher is secure in her position, the commisioner says, after the three year probationary period unless removed for cause and then not until she has had a hearing.

The attempt of New York City school authorities to make the already burdened teachers "volunteer" for playground service before and after school hours is apparently failing, judging by the statement of Dr. William J. O'Shea, superintendent of schools, that the request for volunteers is only temporary. The Teachers' Union has been investigating the working out of the volunteer playground system in school yards and investigators have found that more children playing unsupervised outside the yards than inside, altho the purpose of opening school yards is avowedly the protection of children from street dangers.

Unsuspected Water Underlies Canadian National Railways

MONTREAL, May 31—How and why the capitalization of the Canadian railways jumped up by over $1,000,000,000 in a year or two is worrying railway employes. In 1922 official railway statisttics gave all Canadian roads a total capitalization of $2,159,277,131. The latest official returns give the roads a capitalization of $3,264,674,000, the increase being due to a jump in the bonded debt of over $1,100,000,000. Apparently when the government took over the roads now forming the Canadian National it acquired liabilities which were not revealed at the time.

Norwegian House Defeats Government on Confidence Vote

OLSO, Norway, May 31—The cabinet of Premier Mowinckel, will defer resignation until after the Norse-American centennial celebration, despite its defeat in the lower house of parliament. The government lost by a vote of 56 to 51 on a bill to reduce the expenses of mail service, which the premier had made a question of confidence.

Lars Oftedal is now enroute to America as official representative of the Norwegian government at the Minneapolis celebration, and if the government resigned Oftedal would lose his power to represent the government.

WOOD'S TROOPS SLAUGHTER TEN MORO PEASANTS

Cossacks Kill 3 in Cold Blood

MANILA, P. I., May 31.—Gen. Leonard Wood's constabulary, have killed ten more Moro peasants, bombarding a cottage where they were assembled, with shells from two field guns and one mortar, and bombs dropped from two seaplanes. The constabulary, armed with modern American rifles, entered the cottage and found seven dead Moros.

Three more peasants then entered to see what had become of their comrades, they were immediately slain by Wood's cossacks.

The Moro leader, Saraya, for whom Wood's men are searching, has escaped to the mountains. He will probably be shot on sight, as he refused to obey the American puppet governor, Torres, who ordered Saraya to give up valuable real estate belonging to the Moros.

Dispute Between Building Trades Still Unsettled

BOSTON, Mass.—The national board of jurisdictional awards, representing building trades unions, employers and architects, concluded its sessions here without settling the dispute between the carpenters and sheet metal workers that has played such a part in the disruption of building trades councils thruout the nation for several years.

The issue involved is the work of installing hollow metal doors and metal trim. In 1920, when both unions were affiliated to the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor and to the national board for jurisdictional awards they brot the issue before the board, each claiming jurisdiction of this work. The decision went against the carpenters: soon after they quit the building trades department. Turmoil followed in many cities— the carpenters in some cases getting the work from local contractors despite the decision. Three years ago the board was asked to settle the issue afresh but took the stand that it could do nothing so long as the carpenters were not affiliated thru the building trades department. This year the Building Trades Employers' association asked the board to adjudicate the question again but the board again refused.

No decision was reached on another perplexing matter—as to whether the sheet metal workers or the electricians shall install "conduit bases," metal baseboard used as conduits for electric wires in office buildings. The sheet metal men were awarded the work two years ago but there has been continued objection from the electricians and this year they demanded a review.

In the controversy between plasterers, carpenters and lathers regarding work on substitutes for lath, plaster and sheathing the board ruled that "any form of plaster board which serves as a base for plastering is the work of the lather."

If You Want Your Demands Cut in Two, Agree to Arbitrate

SEATTLE, May 31—Fifty cents a day increase is awarded Seattle truck drivers in Local 174 by arbitrators. The union had demanded $1.

CHILDREN CROWD OUT MEN AND WOMEN IN SOUTHERN COTTON MILLS

LOW wages, enabling southern cotton mill owners to snatch the bread from families dependent upon the England textile industry, are reflected in a study of the employment of men and women in the industry by Commissioner of Labor Statistics Ethelbert Stewart. His figures show that in 1924 New England cotton mills paid an average of 48.1 cents an hour for labor while southern mills got their labor for an average of 28.6 cents an hour.

Women's Pay Lower.

Women workers in southern mills in 1924 averaged 25 cents an hour. This would give them $15 for a full 60-hour week and only $13.50 for six 9-hour days. In New England mills the average woman worker earned 43.2 cents an hour or about $20.75 for a 48-hour week. Men in southern mills averaged 30.6 cents an hour compared with 50.9 cents in New England mills.

This wage differential has been tempting northern capital to build mills in the unorganized south for a considerable period. The development has been pronounced since 1920. The situation since 1914 is shown in the following figures on a number of employes and average hourly earnings in identical mills:

	Employes		Wages
Men	New England	South	New England	South
1914	22,038	16,751	18.7c	12.9c
1916	21,314	17,733	22.5	13.0
1918	20,051	15,009	33.7	21.1
1920	10,977	13,370	57.6	45.4
1922	11,520	14,436	44.0	26.8
1924	13,789	19,893	50.9	30.6
Women
1914	19,683	8,468	15.7	10.9
1916	19,765	8,401	19.2	14.4
1918	20,349	8,395	28.3	17.4
1920	13,742	7,470	49.1	38.2
1922	12,853	8,006	37.9	22.6

Children Compete With Adult Workers.

The New England mills show failure to recover from the post-war slump. In 1924 they had 27,037 employes comparde with 41,721 in 1914. The southern mills show 30,361 employes in 1914 cmoparde with 25,219 in 1914. The advance of the south has been greater than this indicates as the establishment of new mills is not here reflected.

In New England mills the proportion of women workers was about 60 per cent. Southern mills show a much smaller proportion, approximately a third. Stewart judges from the comparative wages that this is due to the large number of boys employed in southern mills. In the south men face the competition of children as well as women.

Taxicab Drivers Win in Fight for Increase Against Quaker Corp.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

NEW YORK,—About two hundred taxicab drivers employed by the Quaker Holding corporation, went on strike this week for an increase in their commissions. Before the strike the men were receiving thirty five per cent and now they are receiving forty per cent. The strike lasted about four hours and the men struck to a man.

The Quaker Holding corporation, is a new Taxi company in this city, its cabs, being new, notes therefor must be paid on time, the same being true of tire, garage, gasoline, and other bills and the officials knew, that to prolong the strike meant defeat at the hands of their drivers.

There are over thirty thousand taxicab drivers in New York City, and they should follow the example as set by their comrades employed by the Quaker Holding corporation. Amongst the thirty thousands drivers, are about three thousand who are employed by the open shop Yellow Taxi corporation, who are the lowest paid drivers on the streets of this city. Yellow drivers receive only thirty-three and one third per cent, while the drivers working for the independent bosses receive forty per cent.

Yellow taxi drivers wake up! Organization is the only remedy. You cannot improve your conditions unless you solidify your forces and fight for your rights.

"Tavicab drivers of this city unite!" This should be your slogan.

Scrap 200 Ships So Profiteers Can Get Contract in Next War

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Two hundred vessels of the government's merchant fleet will be sold in order that they may be scrapped, under an order voted by the shipping board, Chairman O'Connor has announced. Henry Ford is expected to buy a large proportion of the lot, since he wants to cut them up and use the steel.

Among the remaining ships, are 11 refrigerator vessels, and Ford is understood to have an eye on nine of these for operation to South America. They would carry automobiles to Latin American markets and would bring back fresh fruits. The board is ready to permit their use in commerce if the buyer would guarantee their operation for at least five years under the American flag.

All of these sales of government ships represent a big loss to the treasury and an abandonment of the field of public operation of ocean carriers.

TEAPOT DOMERS INDICTED; BUT IT MEANS NOTHIN

May Get Away as The Did Before

By LAWRENCE TODD
Federated Press Service

WASHINGTON, May 31.— Albert Fall, who was Harding's secretary of the interior, has once more been indicted by a grand jury in the District of Columbia in connection with his giving away of the naval oil reserves to Doheny, Sinclair and Standard Oil interests. With Harry Sinclair, who got the Teapot Dome Oil reserve, and Edward L. Doheny, who received the Elk Hills reserve in California, Fall was held for trial on charges of conspiring with these two oil magnates to defraud the government of its property.

Earlier indictments of Fall, Sinclair and both the elder Doheny and his son, on charges of bribery, had been declared void by Justice McCoy in the district court, on the ground that special prosecutors had the assistance of certain representatives of the department of justice in the grand jury room. Young Doheny, who carried the $100,000 from his father to Fall in the little black satchel, was let go at this stage.

D. of J. Has "Doubts"

Congress enacted a law some time ago with reference to fraud cases, extending from three years to six years the period, after the commission of a fraud against the government, during which prosecution may be begun. The department of justice is not sure whether this oil fraud bribery can be considered to be covered by that law. If so, a bribery indictment may be secured later; if not, the three-year period has expired and Fall has the $100,000 safe and secure.

"Justice" the Blind—Smells Oil

When the Coolidge administration, which is filled with friends of Fall and Doheny and Sinclair, will venture to put the oil fraud conspiracy cases on trial has not been decided. Long delay is expected, as Fall has never wanted to face a court and Sinclair and Doheny are equally jury-shy.

In view of the persistence with which Coolidge stood by the oil crowd to the very last, until the Senate revolted and overrode his decisions, the little man from New England cannot see why Fall and Sinclair and Doheny should not trust him now to give them the justice that business men give one another.

The longer the trial is delayed, the more difficult will be the bringing of withnesses sufficient to convict. And the less will the public become indignant at the release of the oil land grabbers.

Government Firing of Union Men Condemned Also by Veteran

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(FP)— Veterans' organizations have again demanded of the White House the removal of public printer Carter, who dismissed 170 printers at the government printing office, late in February, without other reason than a plea of economy. Protest by the Typographical union to which all of them belong have failed.

Attorney General Sargent has advised Coolidge that the dismissals were legal. But there were a number of war veterans in the lot, and they have made the issue one of justice to war veterans. They threaten to make it a political matter all over the country next year.

British Trade Union Probe Shows "Red" Note Was Fake

sia on the affair of the "Red letter" have decided to comply with the urgent representations of the trade union organizations that it should be published forthwith.

It is now six months since the "Red letter" was officially acted on and published, and the refusal by the present government of all requests for an official inquiry from those most concerned—the late labor government and the Russian government—so far from hushing up the scandal have made it the source of suspicions that daily become more widespread and deeply rooted.

These suspicions are quite possibly unfounded, and some are at present unfair. Thus the late labor government has become suspect of a reprehensible disregard for its principles by risking a rupture with the largest state in Europe, and the first socialist federation, that would have been disastrous to the peace of the world and the unity of the world's workers, and this on the strength of an unattested and untested forgery.

The present government is suspect of a no less reprehensible disregard for its principles in having falsified a general election by a political plot, with results disastrous to the preservation of constitutional government and the prestige of British public life.

Hits MacDonald.

While the foreign office, by dispatching a critical note to a great power over the signature of a member of the staff, without express authority from the foreign secretary, by publishing that note without communication with the power concerned or with the acting cabinet, and that too in the crisis of a general election, and by basing all these proceedings on a document even less authenticated than others that had previously proved to be forgeries, has become suspect of a disregard for the first principles of its own routine of the rules regulating international relations and of the great traditions of the civil service.

Such suspicions as these strike at the very root of our political system and poison the very springs of our public life. And until they are removed the labor party is prejudiced in its task of uniting the workers of the world in the rebuilding of Europe; while the present government is no less seriously prejudiced in the eyes of Europe as being held to owe its term of power to a secret service coup d'etat.

Public Inquiry.

Wherefore, the trade union council, whose position gives it peculiar advantages for gauging the opinion of the electorates both in this country and the continent, considers that it would be most regrettable, if any considerations of party interest were to prevent parliament and the two parties concerned from clearing the air by an official and public inquiry.

The trade union delegation in Moscow has investigated fully the authenticity of the "Red letter" in so far as the Russians are concerned. But authenticity is really a minor matter compared to the question as to how this document came to get its authority.

For, as the present home secretary pointed out to the house, it was the official action on and publication of the letter that made a crucial general election turn on this affair.

This responsibility is shared between the labor party and the foreign office. The latter cannot demand a hearing in its own defence. This can only be done for it by the labor party.

Demand For Showdown.

The objections advanced against a public inquiry do not carry conviction. The safety of secret agents can be secured by their withdrawal, and has in any case been guaranteed by the Russian government. If the Russian authorities can expose the officials and archives of the foreign office and Comintern to a foreign inspection, a refusal on our part to subject those of the foreign office and Scotland Yard to parliamentary investigation cannot but he held highly suspicious abroad.

At home a persistence in opposing this public demand cannot but create growing contempt for and an ever-decreasing confidence in parliament and public life.

The general council, therefore, urges that the government permit representatives of the labor party to carry out an investigation on this point in association with officials of the foreign office.

The report of the trade union delegation to Russia on its investigation into the "Zinoviev letter" begins with a description of the Communist International and its relations with the government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Their inquiries, the delegation say, have convinced them that this organization is not of such a character that its activities should be allowed to affect the relations between two world powers such as the British empire and the U. S. S. R.

The Comintern, like other internationals, is a co-ordinating and controling authority—not a world-wide conspiracy. It enables a central Communist organization to discuss and direct a common policy with national organizations.

Further, they (the delegation) have good evidence that the influence of the Comintern in respect of England is at present exercised for moderation and for action on constitutional lines. They are satisfied that the commissarlat for foreign affairs has both a position and a policy that would prevent any action by the Comintern in breach of treaty engagements; and that the Comintern has not committed or even contemplated any such breach.

Inspected the Archives.

These views have been formed partly at the result of the report of the deputation that inspected the archives of the Communist International. Permission was obtained in the course of a conversation with M. Zinoviev and no previous notice was given of the inspection.

The deputation consisted of Messrs. Tillet, Grenfell and Young, of whom one had a good knowledge of Russian man—the secret records being found to be mostly kept in German.

The deputation first asked to be shown the file of correspondence with the British Communist Party. This was produced from a locked press and was a loose file of typewritten duplicates in English. It was read thru and leave was asked to take a copy of one confidential document.

The deputation goes on to describe how it was given full information with regard to the method of drafting and registering of important documents, and was shown the daily register of all outgoing correspondence.

All entries which might conceivably concern England were inquired into, and the documents produced. It was impossible, says the report, that this record, a large volume in many different handwritings, bearing every evidence of having been daily written up, could have been tampered with.

Read Executive Minutes.

Finally the minutes of the Executive meetings of the Comintern were examined, and this, says the report, gave a very complete knowledge of the whole recent activities of the Comintern between June and October, 1924.

It is enough to say in regard to these activities that there was good evidence that in respect of England they conformed to the international agreement as to propaganda, and that the main operations of the Comintern have of late been given a very different objective.

Before leaving, the deputation satisfied themselves that there was no other channel in the Comintern departments by which a letter signed by M. Zinoviev could have been either discussed, drafted or issued.

This inspection convinced them, so far as a negative can be proved, that no "Red letter" ever left the Comintern.

Never a "Red Letter."

And this conclusion that there never was a "Red letter" is corroborated, continues the delegation, by the little that has been divulged in London as to its origins. Thus Mr. Chamberlain in the house (December 15), in reply to Mr. MacDonald, admitted that the foreign office had never had an original and that it was "wholly immaterial whether the signature of Mr. McManus was put by him or not." While Mr. MacDonald stated: "I never had a particle of evidence."

On the other hand, Mr. Chamberlain positively maintains the authenticity of the document as a result of his cabinet inquiry, while Mr. MacDonald considers it "not proven" as a result of his.

So that the inference drawn by those who still believe in a Comintern conspiracy is that while the "Red letter" may not have been a formal signed dispatch, yet that its contents were communicated in some form or other. And the explanation generally accepted by such believers is that the substance of it was contained in a speech of which a summary was sent to the British Communist Party.

The delegation has, therefore, to deal with the further question as to and another of both Russian and German whether M. Zinoviev could have said anything like the substance of the letter in his periodic addresses to the Comintern, which had subsequently been sent to England. They found that it was a procedure of the Comintern to circulate information to committees abroad in the form of summaries of speeches made by M. Zinoviev to the Central Committee.

But that instructions such as the "Red letter" purports to be were never sent in this form but always in signed dispatches. Further, that under date of September 12, summaries of a speech of M. Zinoviev to the Central Committee were sent to the British Communist Party in coverers marked "secret," and signed by Mr. McManus.

The substance of this speech was quite unobjectionable and dealt mainly with matters on the continent. Full notes were made of it during the inspection and a copy obtained of the covering dispatches.

After criticising the "Red letter" from the point of view of internal evidence, the delegation concludes that it has produced evidence that should satisfy all open-minded opinion that the "Red letter" was a forgery. It further claims to have exposed the probable sources used by the forger. And, finally, that enough of the information in its possession has been published to convince any reader open to conviction that if a similar investigation were undertaken in London it would certainly expose who the forger was.

NEGRO STUDENTS WIN STRIKE AT HOWARD COLLEGE

Will Not Be Punished for Drill Absence

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(FP)—Three points have been won by the students of Howard University who went on strike against punishment for non-attendance at military training classes. After a week of discussion as to whether faculty or students in the federal government's great college for the Negro race were responsible for the strike, a partial settlement has been conceded.

Students are henceforth not to be suspended for "cutting" military drill and other classes until changes in the rules are made. No student is to be charged with absence or made to bear other penalties for participation in the strike.

Seven other demands of the students are still under discussion by the faculty. Among these is the abandonment of compulsory military training.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

Boost Library in the Bronx.

NEW YORK, May 31.—The Bronx library committee is going to arrange a comraderie, get together, sociable and housewarming to celebrate the opening of the Bronx library. The affair will be held the last Saturday in June at the Bronx headquarters, 1347 Boston Road. Admissioon will be absolutely free. Refreshments will be served and good talent arranged for; music—plenty of good jazz will be saxaphoned; and indications are that those attending will long after remember the rip-roaring good time that the Bronx library committee furnished them just to show that it appreciates the necessity of fun and frolic—of tripping "the light fantastic toe" as well as reading solemn Milton.

Remember the date comrades—the last Saturday in June, and all be there. Come formal, informal, or any other way you please, but come enmasse.

And now, don't forget that the Bronx library is on the map—on the Bronx map. Come over to the headquarters, 1347 Boston Road, and drink deep of the fountain of wisdom and learning; or come as a mere spectator and see what's doing. Bring us your old books and pamphlets, and if you have a few dollars to spare, throw them in for good measure.

Wednesday, June 3, at 8 p. m., at 1347 Boston Road, the organization meeting of the Workers' Sport Alliance will take place. All Workers Party and Y. W. L. members and sympathizers interested in upbuilding themselves physically as well as building the Communist movement should attend this meeting. Our sports will consist of field and track work, class exercises, calisthenics and swimming.

The Role and Tasks of the Agitation and Propaganda Work In the Bolshevization of The National Sections of Communist International

By BELA KUN.

IF we understand under the Bolshevization that the sections of the C. I. are to be rendered capable, in ideological-political and organizatory respects, of leading and organizing revolution (or, to speak more accurately, of leading and organising the present period of international revolution, that is, the period in which the majority of the proletariat, and of those decisive social strata forming the reserves of revolution, are to be won over) successfully by the use of those methods which have led the Russian Communist Party to victory, then the role and tasks falling to the Agitprop work as part of Bolshevization may be easily and definitely ascertained. Leninism made the party of the Bolsheviki capable of recognizing the Russian objective revolutionary forces, and of making use of the whole of the given factors, thus enabling it to organise the revolution and lead it to victory.

That teaching which has developed the theory and practice of Marxism by Marxian methods, and applied it to the post Marxian period of economic and social development, by means of the experiences gained in three Russian revolutions and in the various forms of revolution passed thru by the international proletariat, and by generalising these experiences into a theory, renders the party capable, both as regards politics and organization of winning over the masses for the revolution. This theory serves the masses as guide for practical and successful revolutionary action.

Bolshevization Defined.

BOLSHEVIZATION does not thus merely mean the recognition of the lessons learned from the experiences undergone by the Bolshevist Party, nor merely the acceptance of the forms of organization of this party.

The theory of Bolshevism cannot be separated from the experience won by the Bolshevist Party, or from the forms of organization resulting on the three Russian revoltuions. But on the other hand it would be equally wrong to separate the methods from the results—as is done by some who call themselves Marxists and even belong to the Communist Party—and entirely wrong to degrade Bolshevization from a theory which leads revolutionary action to a mere aggregate of practical experiences. The real import of Bolshevism consists of having the Communist Parties take over Leninism in its entirety, and apply it in actual political and organizatory practice. It is only within the confines of this theory as a whole, and in their character as its constituent parts, that the differentiated political and organizatory measures applied in the various countries, at different times and in different forms, can become a Bolshevist policy, that is, can become a policy adapted to winning over the masses for the purposes of revolutionary action at any given stage of revolution. It is only within the limits of this theoretical entirety that we can avoid the two dangers constantly threatening the Communist Parties: 1. The danger of regarding the Communist Party as "object in itself," as a party isolated from the masses, and 2. The danger of taking the "winning over" of the masses to mean that it is not the Communist Party which leads the masses, but that this party gives way to the spontaneous will of the masses, and permits itself to be led by it.

During the present period of revolution both these dangers may become very acute, and are already acute in many places. For this reason the fundamental task to be carried out by the propagandist work of the Communist Parties consists of rendering the leading cadres of the party and the masses ideologically capable of leading political organization and agitation of a nature competent to maintain a constant connection with the masses—and not only to maintain this connection, but to penetrate more deeply into the masses and to comprise them on a broader foundation.

The Two Main Spheres of Work of the Agitprop.

STARTING from this viewpoint, we see that Bolshevization demands that the work of the Agitprop be concentrated in two closely connected main lines, both aiming essentially at the same goal:

1. The education of the leading cadres of the parties in the spirit of Leninism; Leninist mass propaganda on broad party lines.

2. The extension of the agitative power and influence of the party press by means of the creation of a Communist mass press—we must not be afraid of the term: "Communist people's press."

Work must be carried on everywhere in these two directions. And tho the measures employed for the attainment of these objects may be different in every party, these aims and tasks must form, internationally, the concrete goals aimed at by the concrete Agitprop activity of every Communist Party.

Propaganda for Leninism.

Up to the present day, propaganda for Leninism has scarcely got past the point of agitation in favor of this propaganda.

The reason for this may be approximately found in the following circumstances:

1. The majority of our parties have not yet discovered the best way of combining propaganda for Leninism with the actual political questions, struggles, and organizatory work of the party. In other words: the propaganda has been more or less abstract.

2. The absence of Lenin's works among the Leninist literature in the majority of the European languages.

3. The complete lack of organs leading the working propaganda during the period immediately following the Fifth Congress or the existence of such organs in an embryonal state only, both in the C. I. and in its various sections. As a result of this, propaganda cadres have been lacking in the various parties, or the employment of the existing propagandist forces has been unorganized.

THE experience of six months now looked back upon by the Agitprop Department of the C. I., tho extremely incomplete, suffices to show that these difficulties can be overcome by energetic effort, tho not within a very short time. The indispensible connections between the propaganda for Leninism and the struggles and organizatory work of the party, in other words: the working out of the import and methods of propaganda work—at least in the most important and largest sections—will be rendered possible by the co-operation of the separate sections and the Agitprop organs of the C. I. The translation of Lenin's most important works into foreign languages is a much greater technical and financial difficulty. The lack of suitable translators and of a book publishing apparatus, the political conditions obtaining the various countries—illegality—greatly delay the publication of Lenin's works. The creation of organs leading the propaganda work has also been greatly delayed, chiefly for tho reason that the decisions arrived at by the Fifth Congress on this question have not immediately assumed the position of importance due to them in the consciousness and the work of the parties. It will be the task of the Enlarged Executive to make the parties fully conscious of the importance of this theory.

Leninist Clubs and Schools.

The six months which have passed since the Bolshevization slogan was issued have matured the question of propaganda for Leninism to such an extent that at least the most important and best developed sections of the C. I. have been able to take up the following tasks, and to issue the following slogans:

1. The establishment of a Central School of Leninism in the course of the year 1925.

2. Short elementary courses of instruction are to be arranged in every local organization, a Leninist club is to be formed in every large party nucleus, and in the individual parties the whole of the members (as in the English Communist Party) can pass thru a certain course of instruction within a certain time, say two or three years, with the aid of these elementary classes, or can be united in Leninist clubs.

Besides this, provision is to be made within this year for a really thoro study of Leninism, if only for a limited few, by means of the organization of international Leninist courses of instruction (by the German, French and English sections) in Moscow.

The Agitprop Section of the Enlarged Executive is faced by the task of working out all the practical and differentiated activity involved in this propaganda work.

The slight initiatives already observable in this sphere of activity—modest but none the less worthy of praise—as for instance the Lenin School and the district instruction courses formed by the French party, the efforts made by the American party for the formation of Marxist clubs, similar endeavors within the German party, and especially the initiative taken by the English party in gaining influence over the whole of the party members by means of elementary courses of instruction at which attendance is obligatory, show that the definite aims pursued do not reckon with political and organizatory circumstances only, but—at least in the case of a part of the sections—with actual possibilities also.

The Bolshevist People's Press.

THE other offensive point of Agitprop work in the sphere Bolshevization is the fundamental reorganization of the Communist press, its transformation into a Bolshevist people's press.

The propaganda for Leninism does not serve solely for the internal strengthening of the party, but at the same time for the purpose of party expansion and of enabling the party to Bolshevize the masses outside of the party. The Bolshevization of the parties with respect to agitation must first find its expression in the press, and in the following manner:

(a) The Communist press is to be reorganized in purport and form in such a manner as to be able to fully satisfy the widest interest taken by the broadest working masses for questions of political and social culture. It must form the daily reading matter of not only the party members, but of the broadest masses of the workers, and must not only be read by shop and factory workers, but by the members of their families.

(b) Distribution must be so organized that the party is enabled, by means of its press, to reach those strata of the working class which it cannot reach by other methods and forms of agitation.

(c) The Communist press is to be freed from all professionalism, so that the worker is not merely the reader of the Communist newspaper, but at the same time its contributor and distributor. This raises the question of the Worker Correspondents, a question which inevitably arises with elementary force wherever the Communist press has found a fairly wide circle of readers. The settling of this question is the more imperative as certain sectarian tendencies can already be observed with regard to it, caused by the limitation of the Workers Coorespondents to the Communists.

Importance of Communist Dailies.

In connection with these questions the problem of the international press may here be mentioned as belonging to our general tasks; our international press may safely make it its aim to double the number of readers of the Communist press.

In a great number of Communist parties the creation of a daily newspaper is a burning question. The lack of a Communist daily newspaper is greatly felt in a number of countries, especially in England. Without a daily newspaper the Communist Party cannot form any adequately important factor in any country. The initiative taken by the American Communist Party, by which the publication of a daily Communist paper in the English language has been made possible, shows that the issue of a daily paper is not an impossible taks for a Communist Party which has passed beyond the stage of mere agitation, or approaching the end of this stage.

The Organization of Agitprop Work.

THE Fifth Congress impressed it upon every party, as special task, to create special organs for Agitprop work. This task, closely bound up with the prerequisites of successful party work—and in general with the differentiation of party work and of party apparatus—has been carried out to but a very slight degree up to now. Even in the central party apparatus only the first steps are being taken towards the formation of the organs required for Agitprop work. (Germany, France, Czecho-Slovakia, and Italy are taking the lead in this direction, and the English party is not remaining behind.)

Where these leading organs are lacking, the organization of Agitprop work is impossible. The party cannot accomplish the task of Bolshevisation which is set it if there are no organs for the distribution of Bolshevist ideology. The central organs themselves are merely suspended in the air, so to speak, if the Communist labor organizations do not furnish them with such organs, that is, with organizations holding a grasp over the members, and keeping up the connections between the party centers and the periphery. The reorganization of the party on the basis of factory nuclei remains deficient and inadequate unless we succeed in imparting the spirit of Communism into the work of the factory cells. A not inconsiderable part of this Communist spirit is supplied by the propaganda for Leninism, by the dissemination of the Communist press, and by the systematic agitation among the non-party masses. In connection with this the question of the Agitprop organization is raised, that is, the question of the creation and development of that type of party worker whose task consists in organizing and leading the ideological work of Bolshevization in the immediate circle of party members, and among the broad masses outside of the party.

These organizatory questions await their solution, at least in general, if we are really intent upon realizing, in a manner promising actual success in the near future, the two prerequisites indispensible for the Bolshevization of the Communist Parties, the two most imperative tasks: the propaganda for Leninism and the creation of a Communist people's press.

Our Readers' Views

Victim of Bosses' "Law."

I was going to receive initiation into the party, and my application is filed at the Los Angeles English branch, I wish to state that I feel better toward becoming a member since I have been incarcerated. I have learned more about class organization than if I had attended many schools.

I can't give you details as you underdstand my position. It's not allowed, since I am a prisoner.

Bought Book—Jailed.

The "crime", comrades, is so atrocious that I am really afraid to describe it. But being one of you, well, what is shame to us anyway, so let me say it.

The book agents were after me to buy a book, and let me name the company, Merriams & Co., who sells dictionaries at $2.00 down and monthly payments. I ordered that book thru the mails with the $1.00 and later, owing to long unemployment, I hadn't paid any, and that book was stolen from my room, so the company instructed the government's postmaster to arrest me for "using the mails to defraud." I thought is was nothing, and the public defendant advised me to plead guilty so I wouldn't get more than sixty days.

I thought then it might be quicker than to plead not guilty, so I pleaded guilty, and the protector of bills, due to the ruling clan, Judge Benjamin Bladsoe of Los Angeles, sentenced me to ten months.

This was a trap, as I have been 15 years in the U. S. A. and all that time in California, full citizen and an honorable discharge from the army.

In my fury I addressed a letter to the secretary of labor, demanding the cancellation of my citizenship and an immediate deportation at the expiration of my sentence, to which his honor advises me that it's impossible as the crime is not big enough to grant me that wish. I have been working 18 years and have no fare to leave.

So this is the crime, exactly that the bills were not paid, and to punish those like me who don't pay bills, they have revised the old law of debt imprisonment as "using the mails to defraud."

Anyway, I am here, and glad for the great strength it gives me. This incarceration shows me more of the true face of the system and it cost me ten months without sunlight.—T. K.

Pittsburgh Membership Meeting Wednesday, June 3, at Lyceum

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 31—The Pittsburgh membership meeting of the Workers Party will be held on Wednesday, June 3, 8 p. m., at the International Labor Lyceum, 805 James street, N. S., main floor.

Arne Swabeck, district organizer, will report on the party conference held in Chicago recently. The second order of business will be the question of Worker Correspondence and the circulation of the DAILY WORKER. All members are urged to attend.

Chicago University Fires 17 of Faculty Because of "Old Age"

Sixteen men and one woman will be dropped from the faculty of the University of Chicago at the end of the present term, it has been announced, because they have reached the 65 year age limit set by the board of trustees.

One of those who is being retired is Prof. John M. Coulter, head of the botany department. " Ihave reached the age of retirement, it was inevitable," Coulter said. He will head the Boyce-Thompson institute for plant research at Yonkers.

FIVE SHOP NUCLEI ORGANIZED BY THE PARTY IN PULLMAN

Five shop nuclei were organized in Pullman last week when Comrades Abern, Johnstone, Dunne and Gomez, representatives of the district executive committee, came before a membership meeting of the Pullman city organization.

The shop nuclei organised were Shop Nucleus No. 1, Pullman car shops, 17 members; Shop Nucleus No. 2, Wisconsin Steel company, 4 members; Shop Nucleus No. 3, Illinois Steel company, 4 members; Shop Nucleus No. 4, Ford Motor works, 11 members, and Shop Nucleus No. 5, Illinois Central Hospital, 3 members.

Comrade Martin Abern, district organizer presented the problem of shop nuclei organization to the membership meeting at which some 40 members were present. He outlined briefly the historical necessity of shop nuclei organization, the need of correct organization in order to carry out a correct Communist policy. Comrade Abern then detailed the work of a shop nucleus, the matter of industrial activity, the picking up of issues of the shop, trade union work, development of shop committees, literature distribution, educational work and hundred and one things that will aid in reaching the workers in the shops with a Communist message.

Our party members, he pointed out, do not have real contact with the workers in the shops when they are organized in territorial branches. Shop nuclei organization, organization in the shops, of our party members gives us possibilities of really getting mass contact, of being bolsheviks, men of the masses.

A number of questions pertaining to the work were asked and then the meeting got down to the business of organizing the shop nuclei. The members who worked in these various shops were divided at once according to the place of work, then the district executive committee each took a group of the party comrades into a corner of the hall and proceeded to the organization of shop nuclei. Officers were elected, work laid out and plans laid for early meetings of the nuclei. Shop nuclei delegates to the city central committee were also elected.

Possibilities for complete re-organization of Pullman on the shop nuclei basis are good. About one half of the party membership was present. The district executive committee is calling another membership meeting at an early date. Many of the comrades who were absent work in the shops where the nuclei were organized and these comrades will at once be attacked to the shop nuclei, then a drive for new members will commense.

The comrades were enthusiastic about the possibilities of Communist work on the shop nucleus basis.

The slogan is complete reorganization of Pullman party organization on a shop nucleus basis.

Machinists' Ballot Results Held Secret

by a general claim that he won against the leftwinger, Voyzey.

The evident defeat of John L. Lewis and of "B. & O." Bill Johnston, is held up as the most important developments in the trade union movement, as these two reactionaries represent the threacherous type of labor leader, the open and flagrant traitor to the union that Lewis is, and the even more dangerous class collaboration tendency of Johnston, who is responsible for the infamous "co-operation" scheme put into effect on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad—a scheme which turns the union into a company union by official sanction.

The Successful Maneuver of the Left Wing.

The influence of the left wing, which has been gathering strength steadily as the discontent among the rank and file with these treacherous policies grew, is undoubted. In the case of Lewis it sent him to certain defeat in an open struggle between reaction and the revolutionary left wing. In the present case of Johnston, the left wing, altho formally eliminated by the primary election, has maintained an independent force and defeated Johnston by an election alliance with the centrist Anderson group, which it has pushed forward to shatter the grip of the Johnston reactionary machine.

Whatever the announcement of Secretary-Treasurer Davison, this maneuver has proven eminently successful.

LONG DISTANCE CLINING STUDIES PATIENT'S HEART

Physicians 1000 Miles Apart Make Diagnosis

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 31—A novel feature of the American Medical association convention which is being held here for three days and the first of its kind in the history of the medical profession was the long distance clinic at which 1,500 physicians were present. A diagnosis was made in the case of a heart disease patient with the diagnostic specialist many miles away from the patient.

Diagnostician 1,000 Miles Away.

Two photographs of heart beats which had been sent to Chicago by the new telephoto process for diagnosis were shown on a screen while the gathering listened to Dr. James R. Greer, a Chicago heart specialist over 1,000 miles away giving the diagnosis.

There is how it was done. One of the photographs gave the heart beat of a patient who was examined with a stethoscope in Atlantic City in the morning. By the use of a new apparatus a "stethogram" or chart of the patient's heart beat was produced. This was mailed to the American Telephone and Telegraph office in New York City from which place it was sent to Chicago by wire thru pictures.

The diagnosis was made by Dr. Greer in the afternoon. In the evening the stethogram was thrown on the screen in Atlantic City. The New York specialist, Dr. Samuel Lambert, called up the Chicago specialist, Dr. Greer, from a telephone in the meeting hall. Thus tho separated by 1,000 miles, the two physicians, the patient and the physician attending the convention were brot together by the long distance clinic.

Discuss Latest Discoveries.

Among the subjects discussed by the convention at its many meetings were the latest discoveries in the use of radium and x-ray in medicine and surgery, the cure of some forms of cancer, the latest achievements in the fight against infantile paralysis, the use of artificial sunlight in the cure of rickets and the possibilities in the treatment of all physical ailments thru knowledge of the ductless glands.

WORKERS' SHOULDERS MUST CARRY THE HEAVY LOAD OF THE HIGH CAPITALIZATION OF DODGE PLANT

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

The cleanup put over in reorganising Dodge Brothers, the auto concern, by Dillon, Read & Co., is typical of the financial deals surrounding the formation of practically every big corporation in the country. The millions of profit realized by the Wall Street financiers thru the capitalization of prospective profits assures the continuance of low wages and high prices.

The securities of the Dodge company were sold to the public for $159,250,000 or $13,250,000 more than Dillon, Read and Co. paid the original owners for the entire property. But the financing capitalists also kept for themselves $14,000,000 in cash which was in the treasury when they bought the concern. This makes a gross profit of $27,500,000 to start with.

Big Financiers Keep Control

The public's $159,250,000 bought only a portion of the securities issued against the property, specifically the $75,000,000 funded debt and 850,000 shares of preferred stock sold at $100 a share. With this proferred stock were given 850,000 shares of Class A common stock as a bonus which immediately took a market value of $25 a share.

There remained for division among the financiers who put over the deal 650,000 shares of Class A common stock which at $25 would have a market value of $16,250,000. They also retained the entire issue of 500,000 shares of no-par value Class B common stock. These Class B shares are the only voting shares, which means that the financiers keep the entire control of the corporation in their own hands.

Altho these Class A and B common shares are assigned no-par value they are entitled to the generous profits which remain after 6 per cent has been paid on the bonded debt and $7 a share on the preferred stock. The two prior claims will require $10,500,000 a year. But last year's net profit was $19,965,440 and the profits of the first half of the present year will be at least $14,000,000.

Capitalization Based on Profits

The huge capitalization which will be carried as a burden on labor and the consuming public is thus largely based on the profits which financiers hope to wring from the business. The $146,000,000 paid by Dillon, Read & Co. bought actual property appraised at only $94,658,682. The financiers took $14,000,000 of this, kept a majority of the common stock, and sold the public the balance of the securities which rested on property appraised at $80,658,682.

Thus the public paid at least $79,341,318 for no property except the prospective earning power of the corporation. The actual assets involved do not exceed the funded debt by more than $5,658,682. And yet against that $5,658,682 have been issued $85,000,000 of preferred stock and 2,000,000 shares of common stock.

Real Investment Small

Only $47,619,687 of the $80,658,682 value given the concern by Dillon, Read & Co.'s appraisers represented physical plant. The value of this plant on the books of the old concern was only $26,247,663 which probably represents all the real investment including reinvested profits.

Coal Gas Leakage Cause for Pupils Fainting in Class

The truth has finally leaked out in the cause responsible for the fainting of a score of pupils in the Southport avenue school auditorium. When the accident occurred hints of gas asphyxiation were obviously smothered with attempts to put the blame on poor ventilation. The final report of Fire Chief Seyerlich, however, shows a leakage of coal gas fumes came thru from the furnace room into the auditorium.

The children had just completed gym exercises in the outdoors and were assembled in the auditorium when one boy fell to the floor immediately followed by ten or twelve others. The cases were so severe firemen worked with pulmoters over the boys for some time before they were brot around. Four had to be taken to the American hospital for treatment.

Protest School Rent Increase

Protests have come to the board of education from nine lessees of school board property against the additional sum of $250,000 fixed by appraisers of school board property in the loop.

The protesting lesees are occupants of school board property in the square block of State, Madison, Dearborn and Monroe streets. The protests grow out of an increase in rentals made on May 8 after the re-appraisal of school property had been made. The lessees charge the appraisers have been influenced by the school board's need for more money in reaching their conclusion.

The protestants will appear before the next meeting of the finance committee.

RUSSIAN MOTHER TESTIFIES IN BABY FARM CASE

Owner Boasted Treating Unruly Babies Rough

NEW YORK, May 31—Mrs. Irene Meroff, a twenty-one-year old Russian mother of a child which she was forced to keep in the infantorium while she was out of town earning her living—is an important witness in the manslaughter case against Mrs. Helen Geisen-Volk, owner of the infantorium at 235 East 86th street.

Ad Promised Mother's Love.

Mrs. Meroff told her story to Assistant District Attorney William P. Ryan before whom she appeared in the homicide bureau. She is a dancer. She must earn her living and care for her baby. When she got a job in Chicago it became necessary for her to board her child at some home and one that was reasonable in price. She looked into the newspapers and saw an "ad" which read:

"Home for babies; mother's care and love; outdoor system. Geisen-Volk Sanitarium, 235 East 86th St."

She took her little baby girl, Luba, to Mrs. Geisen-Volk. When she returned to New York in November she hurried to the baby farm to see her daughter but Mrs. Geisen-Volk would not let her see her baby. She returned with a doctor but still the farm owner refused to allow her to see her baby. She was told that only her own doctor was allowed there by the board of health.

The young mother went back again the next day to demand to see her child. This time she had better luck. Mrs. Geisen-Volk was out and the nurse, Mrs. Frances Hirsch, who accompanied Mrs. Meroff to the district attorney's, allowed Mrs. Meroff to see Luba.

"I found Luba had lost eight pounds," Mrs. Meroff said. "The very next day I came with my physician and we took the child away. My doctor said Luba was a victim of bronchial pneumonia, acute indigestion and auto-intoxication and he showed me several black and blue marks on her body."

Mother's Love Defined.

Mrs. Meroff said when she returned to get Luba's clothes, Mrs. Geisen-Volk in the presence of Mrs. Hirsch, the nurse told her that babies and animals should be disciplined the same way. "When the babies become unruly I hold them under could water or push them into closets or bang them. That's my method of training them."

Mrs. Meroff said she wrote a letter to the board of health authorities that very night telling them about the treatment her baby received at the baby farm and of her conversation with Mrs. Geisen-Volk but she received no answer and nothing was done about ti.

Will Leave Porto Rico Rather Than Pay More Than 20 Cents a Day

NEW YORK, May 31.—(FP)—Storyk Bros., dress manufacutrers, who are among the leading American capitalists profiting by the home work of women and children of Porto Rico, have voiced their alarm at the bill forbidding home work which Senator Santiago Iglesias has introduced in the Porto Rican senate.

Iglesias' letter to officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union said that the average wage of the home-sweated women and children of his island was only 20 cents a day.

Storyk does not attempt to meet the attack on the bad industrial wage rate but falls back on the old-excuse that he and his fellow employers cannot afford to pay any more. If home work is banned by law, says the American firm, it will quit the island.

Safety Laws Mean Nothing Without Union Enforcement

NEW YORK, May 31.—(FP)—Lack of a strong national union of silk workers limits the usefulness of safety laws in their industry. Silk manufacturers, representing 14,000 looms in Pennsylvania mills met in the rooms of the Silk Association of America, to consider ways of meeting, with the least expense, technical requirements of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor for shuttle guards.

Textile unionists say that in many mills the barest presence only is made of fulfilling the safety laws demands—in contradiction to the clothing industry where strong unions insist on adequate enforcement of such rules.

A SUGGESTION COMRADES! From Workers in the Shops

Detroit, Mich.

Dear Comrades:—The Shop Nucleus No. 1 is interested in the DAILY WORKER sub getting campaign. It has a suggestion to add to the many that already have been offered by the militants thruout the country. The experience of an active comrade in the shop nucleus is worthy the attention of all comrades who are organized in shop nucleus.

In the shop where the nucleus is organized, workers must write their name and address on their time clock cards, when new cards are issued. The comrade copies the names and addresses of his fellow workers whom he only knows by the badge numbers displayed on their outer garment and then mails them the Daily Worker with important articles marked with red pencil to attract their attention; also incloseing leaflets and announcement of mass meetings. Few days later the comrade makes it his duty to see the worker whom he sent the paper and talks on the very subject which was marked in the paper. From the conversation it will be known whether there is any use to follow it up or not. Thru this method the comrade has received seven three months subs to the Daily Worker in as many weeks. Other comrades in the nucleus are adopting the method because it bring results. If it's impossible to get the addresses of the cards then get next to the time clerk and he will help you out. The best part of the above suggestion is, when you get the name and address you do not have to chase around to his home, you see him daily at the shop. Comrades try out the above suggestion and lets hear yours.

Yours in building our paper.

What other way can comrades suggest to build a bigger Communist movement? Send in your methods to build our party by means of the DAILY WORKER—tell us especially what you are doing IN THE SHOP—and let others learn from your experience.

PIECE WORK BEST SCHEME TO MAKE MEN WORK HARDER

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Piece-work pay is the best all-around scheme for making men work harder, said W. C. Dickerman, vice-president of the anti-union American Car and Foundry Co., ally of the steel trust, discussing "Incentives For Individual Production" before the U. S. chamber of commerce convention in the capital.

"Leaders of industry desire the men's unrestrained efforts and have for centuries addressed themselves to the cultivation of what may be termed the 'Will To Work'" he stated. "In contrast with the incentives of the past five thousand years, we find today an approach directed to the physical, intellectual and financial development of the workman; a full appreciation of the mutual obligation of the workman by methods sometimes paternalistic and frequently amazingly generous."

These amazingly generous methods he listed as thrift plans, mutual benefit associations, pensions, piece work systems and the step-up bonus, production bonus, profit sharing, stock participation plans and industrial representation.

"The piece work system," he concluded, "probably will alway remain the prime incentive; easily understood, it stimulates the individual; protected on guarantees as to the sanctity of the rate, the rewards are evident to all."

This anti-union executive, whose concern has had experience of labor unrest in its McKees Rocks plant, assured his fellow employers that "Justice, knowledge and generosity are the handmaidens of the present day industrialist."

The British Trade Union Conference

On June 4 there will convene in London a conference that is of the most vital importance for the British labor movement, the most militant in the International Federation of Trade Unions and consequently of tremendous significnace for the world trade union movement.

The conference is for the purpose of setting up a solid front of unions in basic industries against the British capitalists. Far more powerful than the old triple alliance which collapsed on Black Friday principally thru the treachery of Frank Hodges, then secretary of the Miners' Federation, the new alliance will be composed of the Miners' Federation (which took the initiative in calling the conference), the National Union of Railwaymen, the Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, the Transport Workers Federation, the Transport and General Workers Union and the metal trade unions.

The Minority Movement in Great Britain has been working for a conference of this kind at which ways and means will be devised for centralizing the efforts of the unions in the basic industries, adopting a common policy and thereby strengthening the whole labor front. The calling of the conference and the belief that the General Council of the Trades Union Congress will assist in bringing the whole British labor movement into line with the powerful group of unions forming the new alliance, is a victory for the left wing and proof of the rapid advances made by the British working class.

Capital in Great Britain is on the offensive. The MacDonald government failed the workers and not only failed the workers but it failed even to fight for them. It continued the policy of the imperialists abroad but refused to enact even such mild reforms as a miners' minimum wage bill.

What is taking place in Great Britain is a new alignment of the forces of labor. The workers in the basic industries and their unions, suffering the most from the breakdown of British industry, are in no mood for further compromises. These masses are in revolt against the cowardly leadership of the MacDonalds and Thomases. They are coming closer to the Communists, close enuf to join with the All-Russian unions in the drive for world trade union unity.

The British labor movement has hoisted its anchor of conservatism and is beginning to move down the broad stream of the class struggle, gaining momentum rapidly. Great developments are in prospect and the coming conference is an indication that they will be in line with the rest of the world revolutionary movement which is making breaches in the walls of capitalism in a dozen different countries.

Framing Union Organizers

As an aftermath of the street railway strike in Buffalo and the other great strike movements that took place in 1922 two labor officials have been arrested in Detroit and charged with dynamiting railroad property in the former city.

The two officials, William Fitzgerald, international vice-president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, and W. P. Collins, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, were in charge of an organization campaign launched by the Detroit Federation of Labor.

There is probably a direct connection between their organizational activities in Detroit and the revival of this three year old charge. The case itself has some peculiar aspects. Involved in it originally were some of the most reactionary officials of the Buffalo labor movement and it is rumored in union circles that the whole case is a frame-up engineered by the Buffalo employers' association working with some of its tools in the local lavor movement.

The federal authorities, after a delay of three years, arrest the two union officials at the time when the organization campaign is beginning to worry the Detroit bosses. If the case does nothing else it certainly furnishes an example of how convenient the machinery of the government is to the capitalists when they want to check the activities even of two such conservative labor leaders as Fitzgerald and Collins. It may be mentioned in this connection that, while Fitzgerald is a conservative vice-president of a conservative union, that in purely trade union struggles, organizing campaigns in particular he displays considerable militancy. In 1915 he was in charge of the organization of the streetcarmen in Seattle and was brot into court by the local bosses on a framed charge. The strike failed at the time but one year later the union succeeded in building a permanent organization.

The case of these two organizers is a class case and shows quite clearly that the most reactionary union leaders cannot get away from the class character of the struggle when they are really trying to organize.

The Detroit labor movement should and doubtless will, give these organizers all the support possible in their fight for acquittal.

A Real Famine

The story, taken from the London Daily Herald, official organ of the British Trades Union Congress which we published Friday, dealing with the famine situation in Ireland, should settle once and for all the question of whether there is a famine in that long-suffering land.

The facts of actual starvation, secured at firsthand by the correspondent of the London Daily Herald, give the lie direct to the glowing statements of the spokesmen of the puppet Free State government. Men, women and children, with their livestock, are actually dying for want of food and the small amounts needed to relieve the acute distress, but which have not been forthcoming from the government, bear eloquent testimony to the callouusness of a regime which deliberately condemns these workers and peasants to starvation by sabotaging efforts for their relief.

Babies eighteen months old living on a little flour and water, old men and women keeping a spark of life in their wasted bodies by eating potato peelings, whole villages living on limpets picked from the rocks at low tide, are a few of the things the Herald correspondent saw and these things surely are not conditions that prevail in any but famine districts.

Yes, there is an Irish famine and relief, steady and generous, must come from the workers and farmers of the United States. Let us answer the lies of the tools of British imperialists in Ireland with money, food and clothing for these stricken workers and peasants.

Speculations of Japanese Imperialism in China

By TANG SHIN SHE

THE foreign imperialist press in China and the foreign representatives are raising a great outcry regarding the bad conditions in China, and are constantly demanding that law and order be finally established and that China be made a unified state. As a matter of fact, however, war and unrest mean good business for the imperialists. They are supporting the generals with all their powers and are smuggling arms into China in order to sell them to the military chiefs. The Japanese in particular have been very active recently in this respect.

When in 1917, China entered into the world war it received large military credits from Japan. From this time on Tuan She Sui become a slave of Japan. Even now he is working not only in the interest of these imperialists but also in the interest of the French. Tchang Tso Lin is likewise an out and out supporter of Japan. In the October war of 1924—at Shanghaikwan—the Japanese supported Tchang Tso Lin not only with aeroplanes and money etc., but in Tsin Huang Dau Japanese troops fought directly against those of Wu Pei Fu.

ON the 6th of March last there took place in Mukden a military conference of the supporters of Tchang Tso Lin which was even attended by the local Japanese consul. The following decision was arrived at: 10 million Chinese Dollars are to be devoted to improving and increasing the army of Tchang Tso Lin; half of this sum is intended for the air fleet, the remaining half for the artillery and for the erection of a gas factory (for war purposes). Among the artillery and the air officers of the Manchu troops there are a great number of Japanese, as well as their friends, white guardist Russian and French.

It was further decided at this conference that Tchang Tso Lin's air fleet should undertake a flight to Japan in the spring. During this year many branch lines, for the greater part for military purposes, are to be added to the Southern Manchurian (Japanese) railway. The Japanese are treating Tchang Tso Lin very defferentially not only because they wish him to work for their interests in China (against the Chinese people,) but also because they wish to have him as a point of support against America and Soviet Russia.

The above measures are a direct means of insurance for Japan. But the Japanese also like to indulge in speculations. All the defeated Chinese generals are received with open arms in Japan. They not only gave asylum to their own supporters such as the Anfu people, who were defeated in 1922, and General Lu, who was driven out of Shanghai in October 1924, but also to their opponents, the Chili people, as, for example, Chi Schu Yuan. According to the report of the Peking Morning Post of March 14, Chi Schu Yuan has now returned to Hankou, under Japanese protection (!) where he will again co-operate with Wu Pei Fu.

KALGAN is the headquarters of the Americans in Northern China. The ally of the Americans, the Christian General Feng Yu Hsaing has now also his general staff in Kalgan. He has the entire Kalgan-Peking and the Peking-Hankau railway lines in his hand. Using Hankau as a base, he is trying to establish connections with the South-West provinces, while from Honan (the central portion of the Peking-Hanau line) he is trying to get into touch with the two North-West provinces Kansu and Shensi. Of course this plan of Feng Yu Hsiang runs couter to the interests of Japan. Tchang Tso Lin is therefore endeavoring to thwart the intentions of Feng Yu Hsiang. The Honan war in February of this year arose solely from this cause. In the middle of March this war came to an end and the opponent of Feng Yu Hsiang (that is the friend of Tchang Tso Lin) suffered a defeat.

When, at the beginning of January last, Wu Pei Fu had to flee from Honan to Hupe and his supporter Chi Schu Yuan was obliged to flee to Japan, he possessed nothing more than two warships. In spite of this he still had an immediate influence in the upper Yangtse provinces. The chief enemy of Wu Pei Fu today is likewise Feng Yu Hsiang. This again provides a good speculation for Japan. On the one hand there is now Wu Pei Fu and Tchang Tso Lin in close connection, on the other side Wu Pei Fu is assisted by a Japanese Lieutenant Colonel as adviser. In January Wu Pei Fu wanted to start a revolt in Hupe; for this purpose the Japanese adviser attempted to procure him a war credit. The plan however was discovered and, on the demand of the citizens of Hankau and Wuchang, the Japanese adviser was expelled from the place. Since the middle of March Wu Pei Fu has been staying in Hunan; according to reports from Peking of the 17th of March, the Japanese adviser is again with Wu Pei Fu, but under another name. Wu therefore has the same master as Tchang Tso Lin.

THE Japanese are not conducting any policy in China for the moment but they have an eye to the future. They greatly fear that Tchang Tso Lin, whose power in Manchuria is not quite secure, will be overthrown, and then what will become of their privileges in Manchuria? In October last the Chinese emperor was driven from his palace by Feng Yu Hsiang and was compelled to renounce the title of emperor. The Japanese are endeavouring to make use of this for their own advantage. In November they invited the emperor to move from his private residence and to come and reside at the Japanese Embassy. There they treated him as a real emperor. On February 23, the ex-emperor went secretly to Tientsin under Japanese protection. From thence he was to travel to Japan. Discussions took place in Japan as to how best to receive him. The matter was not only dealt with in the press but the foreign minister declared in the upper house on the 3rd of March that he must be accorded a worthy reception.

The Chinese people are very indignant at the action of the Japanese. A rumor is current that Japan at a given time, if Tchang Tso Lin is unable to retain Manchuria, will place the emperor on the throne of Manchuria, exactly as was done with Korea in 1897. Many pamphlets have appeared in Japan dealing with the restoration of an empire in China. Out of regard for the Chinese people, which means in reality in order not to lose the friendship of the Chinese (by means of which the Japanese have obtained an ally against America) Japan altered its plans at the last moment and will not permit the ex-emperor of China to come to Japan but will send him to Dalny.

WE see how the Japanese imperialists are working in China, how they wish to dismember the country and to suppress the Chinese people. On March 20, a great Japanese newspaper in Tokio mentioned in a leading article the extraordinary expenditure of the government for military purposes for the last ten years from 1914 to 1924. This amounted to a milliard yen. Of this amount 300 million went to the navy and 700 million to the army. The paper in question fiercely attacked the government (it is said that no Japanese government had ever been so attacked in the press before) and stated:

"300 million yen for extra naval expenditure, this appears credible, for during the world war the Japanese had to maintain order in the Indian Ocean and in Tsingtau; but the 700 million yen for the army; to what purpose was this devoted? There has not been a war in the meantime?"

To this question one can calmly reply: the money was required for speculations in China.

OFFICIAL TENN. SCHOOL BOOKS TELL OF DARWIN

Scopes Taught Text Provided by State

DAYTON, Tenn., May 31.—"If I have been violating the anti-evolution law so has every teacher of science in Tennessee," said John T. Scopes, who will go on trial here in July for teaching evolution in the Dayton high school in violation of the recently passed law prohibiting the teaching of evolution. Scopes produced the official text book of biology which was furnished by the state.

The book, "A Civic Biology," which the state of Tennessee has not barred from the schools, altho it contradicts the bible, contains passages which contradicts the story of the creation of the world in six days found in genesis.

The book states:

"We have now learned that animal forms may be arranged so as to begin wtih very simple one-celled forms and culminate with a group which contains man himself. This arrangement is called the evolutionary process. Evolution means change, and these groups are believed by scientists to represent stages in complexity of development of life on earth. Geology teaches that millions of years ago life upon the earth was very simple and that gradually more and more complex forms of life appeared, as the rocks formed latest in time show the most highly developed forms of animal life. The great English scientist, Charles Darwin, from this and other evidence explained the theory of evolution.

"Altho we know that man is separated mentally by a wide gap from all other animals, in our study of physiology we must ask where to place man. If we attempt to classify man, we see at once he must be placed with the vertebrate animals because of his possession of a vertebral column. Evidently, too, he is a mammal, because the young are nourished by milk secreted by the mother and because his body has at least a partial covering of hair. Anatomically we find that we must place man with the apelike animals because of numerous points of structural likeness. The group of mammals which includes the monkeys, apes and man we call the primates."

NORWAY RUSHES RELIEF PLANS FOR AMUNDSEN

Will Send a Search Party in Few Days

OSLO, Norway, May 31.—The Norwegian government is rushing preparations for sending a relief expedition to search for Roald Amundsen, who left with his party in two airplanes to fly to the north pole. Amundsen has been missing for nine days.

Relief will not be sent to find Amundsen for 14 days from the time of his departure, as the artic explorer left word with his assistants that they should wait 14 days before sending out a searching party.

Amundsen is expected to return to either Spitzbergen or Cape Columbia, unless he has met with disaster.

Amundsen's steamer Fram is at King's Bay for supplies, while his other steamer, the Hobby, is watching the cie edge for Amundsen's return.

Max Beer: "General History of Socialism and Social Struggles"

By HERMAN DUNCKER
(Berlin)

Note—The terms socialism and Communism are here used interchangeably.

A HISTORY of socialism has been a long felt and urgent want in the modern working class movement. However, it quickly proved itself to be an undertaking demanding great preparatory study and above all the possibility of prolonged and undisturbed scientific work. When even bourgeois writers in their peaceful studies have not been successful in completing such a work how is it to come from the ranks of a fighting party? In the beginning of the 'nineties the at that time still revolutionary German social-democratic party had already made a great step towards the issue of a comprehensive history of socialism. It as to represent the collective work of the best Marxists of the international. Plechanov, Lafargue, Kautsky, Mehring, Bernstein and others were won for the idea, but the work remained a torso, tho a very valuable one. Kautsky's "Pioneers of Socialism" and Mehring's "History of the German Social Democracy" developed later from this.

There existed also various historical monographs—very unequal in their execution, dealing with persons, events and movements in the history of socialism in the German language (whith which we are exclusively dealing here, but there was lacking a comprehensive history of socialism, setting itself the task of following the whole development of socialist ideology and social revolutionary movements thru the history of mankind.

Condemns S. D.'s

BY extremely industrious and conscientious work in the years 1920/23 a work has been completed which fills this gap. M. Beer, known as a Marxist writer by a series of capable works upon the history of socialism, has issued a "General History of Socialism and Social Struggles" in five volumes published by the Verlag fur Sozialwissenschaft (Berlin). In 1924 these five parts were issued in one volume of 540 pages.

This work which we can conscientiously recommend to all comrades, caused one or two surprises in the form of its appearance alone. First of all it is astonishing that precisely the Verlag fur Sozialwissenschaft in the midst of the trivialities with which it is in the habit of feeding the book market, and having regard to the social democratic camouflage manoeuvers, with which this house usually accompanies its publications, should have issued such a serious and scientific work. But much more astonishing is the fact that this publishing house, behind which Parvus and other fiery anti-Communists stand—a semi-official publishing house of the German social-democratic party—presents in the Beer book a positively annihilating Communist criticism of the German S. D. P. and the Second International.

"Money Doesn't Smell"

WE do not know whether perhaps the Barmat orgies in Schwannenwerder or such like pleasures indulged in by the publishing house directors, and with them the whole party leadership of the German social-democratic party, have so much fogged their brains that they simply failed to notice what a Bolshevik cuckoo's egg was being hatched in their otherwise so respectable nest, but for this good joke we are prepared to forgive Comrade Beer for having so long delayed in taking up an open attitude for Communism and the Third International!

It is also possible that the directors of the publishing house, in the atmosphere of corruption which surrounds the German social-democratic party, simply said to themselves: "Business is business; we shall get a profit on the book even if it should expose our political sins. Non olet, money doesn't smell!" Beer is right when he speaks in his book of "the internal moral weakness of the social-democratic party" (Page 500) or of the "unprincipled and opportunistic Second International" (Page 514).

The work of Beer—to a certain extent a world history from the Communist point of view—deals, in a capably arranged division of material, in the first and second parts with ancient society and the middle ages, whilst the three last parts are devoted to socialism in the later ages (from the XIV century on). Although not all the sections are dealt with in the same manner from original sources, yet important epochs are seen in a new light by the arrangement of the material and apart from this Beer has worked detailed original studies into his book.

On Ancient Society

THE presentation of pre-historic and ancient society is the least satisfactory. The origin of private property and above all the class tendency of certain forms of special property should have been more clearly dealt with (for instance page 4-35). Military conflicts between the tribes precede the formation of classes within the tribes. It is an exact reversal of the process when Beer says of slavery (page 17): "in the beginning it was compatriots who were made slaves and later prisoners of war." In the utilization of the material supplied by antiquity, Beer makes too little distinctino between saga and legend and actual historical facts, (See for instance Lycurgus, Page 40, or Christ, Page 101, and others). The psychology of the people has always had a tendency in looking back on social movements to regard them in the light of the heroic actions and wonders of superhuman personalities. The social historian has, therefore, the extremely agreeable task of presenting such legends attaching to personalities once again from their original sources as "legends."

Beer does justice least of all to the Platonic social critic. He contends that the "Politeia" is no utopian description (Page 52). But Plato with his "ideal state" nevertheless tried to hold the mirror to his generation. It is by no means an accident that even in the middle ages Communist thinkers and poets returned ever and again to Plato "Politeia" (Campanella, More, Muenzer and others). On the other hand Beer has represented in this first part many movements with the care and accuracy of the Marxist, for instance, the prophets' movement in ancient Palestine, the descriptions of Cataline and particularly of Spartacus.

Beer presents very basic studies in his description of the social thought of the middle ages and the social-heretic movement from the IV to the XIV century. The author has dealt with this religious ideology in an astounding and living manner (see the proof for the connections with the Gnosis). The economic foundation is however dealt with rather too briefly. It is just as actually present as the "earthly aims" in the Chiliast and ancient Christian tendencies. It has been argued recently (see A. Wittfogel!) that the word Communism cannot be extended to movements which strive only for a Communism of consumption. Certainly, scientific Marxist Communism begins first with the slogan of the socialization of the means of production and the recognition of the class struggle. But there exist nevertheless also a "development of socialism from utopia to science!" And thus Beer is right when he describes as Communism those efforts and systems of thought in economic epochs in which the struggle of modern Communism could not be conceived of, but in which nevertheless a "new society" was demanded in which the common property or the social control over the necessities of life should ensure the well being of all.

Modern Communism.

COMRADE BEER has been most successful in the history of socialism since the dawn of modern times. We are given in bold outline the first great German revolution from 1518 to 1535, in which Beer sets forth the reformation, the movement for national unity, the peasant wars and the Anabaptist movement. That the fine sense of Beer for the economic and moral history of England would ensure him success in those chapters dealing with the history of socialism in England was obvious (see the chapters dealing with the English utopians and the English social critics etc.). Beer's studies also draw other persons and movements into the history of socialism in an original manner. We do not agree with Beer who stamp the historian of the Babeuf conspiracy Buonarotti as the leading spirit of the movement, so that finally it is somewhat unintelligible why the chapter is still entitled "The Conspiracy of Babeuf and Comrades" (Page 342). Beer is however right when he unearths the leader of the German enlightenment movement, Professor Weisshaupt (1748-1830), and also the social criticism of the Rhinelander Gall in the year 1825, and other similar material. Thus for instance, amongst the older French socialists, Pecquerer receives a detailed valuation. Pecqueuer, like the German Moses Hess, is often unjustly ignored.

We then come to the presentation of the socialism of modern times (up to 1920). Beer gives us in an exemplary manner, always upon the basis of historical and economic sketch, the history of ideas and the political movements. A great amount of material and reflection is presented in the smallest space. Everything is clearly and correctly dealt with in the light of the materialist conception of history. Only upon one point must we take up a definite attitude against Beer, and that is in his judgment of Engels (Page 240). Beer should do justice to the significance and unique spirit of Engels precisely because of the extraordinary modesty with which Engels always placed himself behind Marx. The original form of the Engels foreword to the "class struggles" and many letters show clearly that Engels cannot be counted among the "reformists." For the rest, Beer presents the gradual victory of reformism in the German working class movement and the progress of the German S. D. P. towards a petty-bourgeois party very well.

"THE Second International could not stand the great test; nationalism and revisionism bound it to the existing order and dragged it into the vortex of war." (Page 514.)

And of the period following the war Beer says just as succinctly and appropriately: "The socialist party of Germany ruled, but militarism, bureaucracy and capitalism were dominant." Beer shows the internal dissolution of the socialist party of Germany, how it "paved the way for the reaction," unfortunately, however, he pays too little attention to the building up of the new Communist movement in the Communist International. Let us hope that Beer will still deal in detail with this most important period in the history of socialism.

CHINESE CALL GENERAL STRIKE

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

AN Indian delegate to the labor conference of the league of nations at Geneva took issue with the British government delegate on the question of labor conditions in India. The Briton defended the empire's rule in India and claimed that the Hindoos were being taken good care of, by J. Bull. The Indian, on the contrary, declared that his people were slaves, living under a forced labor system which compels the workers to live in a living standard berdering on starvation. He wanted to know what the labor bureau intended to do about it. Any one of you could tell him.

IT is the custom in England for prominent politicians to make week end speeches during which current events are discussed. The leaders of the British labor party indulge in this relaxation. It is interesting to note that in the great majority of cases the speeches of the labor party leaders do not differ materially on imperial policy from those of the liberals and tories.

A. FENNER BROCKWAY, general secretary of the independent labor party speaking in favor of universal disarmament, said "no nation would ever again seek a quarrel with the Anglo-Saxon race or any part of it." This is sheer nonsense. The fact that daughters of American millionaires have a penchant for marrying brokendown British aristocrats and that socially the British monarchy is a god-send to our female parasites of the upper classes, is no prevention of war between the "two Anglo-Saxon countries." They have fought more than one war in the past, on opposite sides of the painted bunting, at times when both were much more Anglo-Saxon than they are now.

THE British labor fakers know very well that nations don't fight each other because their population came of different racial strains. The reigning families of Russia, Germany and England were of the same breed but that fact did not prevent the capitalists of the different countries from fighting over foreign markets and spheres of influence. There is nothing surer than that the United States and Britain will fight for the hegemony of the industrial world; a hegemony which is already captured by the United States, but is not conceded by the jealous pirates of the "tight little isle."

THE millions of citizens of German and Irish descent in the United States did not prevent this country from declaring war on Germany in 1917, when Germany had beaten her foes to a frazzle and when the surrender of France was but a question

OWNERS OF MINE WHERE 60 DIED BLAME WORKERS

But Miners Declare Shaft Was Unsafe

COAL GLEN, N. C., June 1.—The Carolina Coal company officials, in whose mine at least sixty workers met death when gas in the shaft exploded, are attempting to blame the disaster on the miners.

A report has been given out by the mine company that "smoking in the mine, a practice forbidden by the owners, may have caused the explosion." They declare that Dr. John L. Scott, Sanford physician, in charge of the temporary morgue, "found matches in the pockets of the miners."

Miners who have worked in the shaft however, declare that a disaster was bound to occurr sooner or later as the workings were very ancient, and filled with deadly gas.

ANTHRACITE REGION IN BIG REVOLT

Grievance Committees Back Local 699

By PAT OOHEY.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WILKESBARRE, (By Mail)— The miners' assembly, composed of all general grievance committees of the anthracite coal companies, meeting in Wilkesbarre last Saturday night made arrangements to wage an intensive fight in the interests of the 1,700 expelled miners of the Woodward colliery, and in doing so challenged the renegade Cappellini to do his worst.

Arrangements for a mass protest demonstration to be held in the Savoy Theater, largest of local theaters, were completed for May 31. The delegates present were instructed to return to their locals and get their membership to turn out in a body at the meeting, to raise finances to assist the Edmunds faction of the Woodward colliery to take the case to the civil courts.

Edmunds Going to Court.

Edmunds and his lawyers are preparing a petition for an injunction to be issued against John L. Lewis, International president, restraining Lewis from disfranchising the membership of Local 699 from all the privileges accorded under the union's constitution. Money is being collected by the anti Cappellini faction for this purpose.

Lewis revoked the charter of 699 on the eve of the tri-district convention, thereby eliminating the rebellious Edmunds group from participating in the convention. It is understood Edmunds will send delegates to the convention and the fight of the convention will be over their being seated.

Cappellini, fearing the wrath of the miners who will gather at the Savoy theater has issued an order prohibiting any member of the U. M. W. A. from attending the meeting, stating expulsion will follow. Local unions are instructed by circular letter that dire results will befall any local collecting money for Edmunds' proposed action. Cappellini is using every ounce of power at his command in order to solidify his ever crumbling regime.

The assembly adopted a resolution scoring Cappellini and Lewis for their disruptive tactics. Cappellini has ordered the dissolution of the assembly on the grounds it is "dual." The assembly refuses to disband, maintaining that this is the only means of rank and file expression, the only means whereby the conditions of the miners will be bettered.

No Dual Organization—Sometimes.

Altho classifying the general commitees as dual organizations Cappellini very beautifully accepted the endorsement of the general committee of the Penna Coal Co., for district president, after Cappellini's supporters had packed the meeting. This was pointed out and emphasized in the resolution adopted by the assembly.

The general grievance committees are being used extensively as political machines by the various candidates. The committees are in dire need of the presence of several militants who would fight to bring them back to what they were organized for. Instead of endorsing this and that faker adopting this and that factional resolution, lisenting to orations "exposing" this and that faker they should have their heads together formulating a set of demands to be presented at the coming tri-district convention, something which would benefit the miners.

End Sirdar Trial

CAIRO, Egypt, June 1.—Judgement will be pronounced Tuesday on these accused of murdering Sir Lee Stack, sirdar of the Egyptian army and governor general of the Sudan. The trial ended today.

FOUR JUGO-SLAV REDS GET LONG PRISON TERMS FOR ISSUING PAPER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, June 1.—Micha Piade, has been sentenced to twenty years on the charge of issuing a Communist newspaper and other Communist literature.

Two of Piade's assistants have been sentenced to ten years each and a third Communist to six years. The charges were brought under the "defense of the realm act" which gags all expression of opinion opposed to the government.

Anthracite Miners! Fight in Union, Not in the Bosses' Capitalist Courts

The miners on the Anthracite region are going thru a crisis in which their ability to control their union, the cherished possession of every organized coal miner, is put to the test. In their efforts to throw off the treacherous officials who have repeatedly betrayed them to the coal operators, the tactics they use may have a profound effect upon their failure or success.

The news is given in another column of the DAILY WORKER, that all the Grievance Committees of the Anthracite region have approved of the Edmunds faction in the Woodward Collieries going into the capitalist courts for an injunction against the arbitrary and unconstitutional actions of the reactionary officials, the Progressive Miners' Committee, representing the left wing, has issued the following statement.

The charter of Local No. 699 has been arbitrarily revoked by John L. Lewis. This is clearly an attempt to disfranchise the 1,700 members of Local 699 and to penalize them for refusing to recognize Dunn, a tool of the Lewis-Cappellini machine, who was illegally thrust upon the local which had overwhelmingly elected Edmunds, who is opposed to the machine.

The miners of the Anthracite have every reason to detest Cappellini. Time and again he has betrayed them, defied their demands, ignored their needs and turned them over to the operators who were allowed to violate the agreement with impunity and against whom the miners found their Grievance Committee—a form of organization that every progressive miner will support as an organ of rank and file rule.

But, justified as the indignation of the Woodward Colliery miners is, and desperate as the whole mass of miners may be in the Anthracite. The Progressive Miners Committee warns their brothers who are going thru this bitter test in the Anthracite, to use the greatest care lest their tactics in the struggle worsen instead of better their condition.

The Progressive Miners Committee feels that the miners of the Anthracite have other and better means to protect their rights than to appeal to the capitalist courts for an injunction against Lewis and his machine. The capitalist courts are a part of the capitalist government created by and functioning for the interests of the capitalist class alone. An appeal to capitalist courts would put you in the position of appealing to the enemy and would give the reactionaries a weapon to discredit you before the eyes of the working class.

In this matter, The Progressive Miners Committee, feeling as it does that the Edmunds group is fully justified in their fight against the Lewis-Cappellini machine, nevertheless asserts in the most emphatic manner, its disagreement with any program of asking the capitalist courts to grant an injunction against the Lewis-Cappellini-Dunn gang. That is not the effective way to fight these fakers.

Just as the desperation of the membership of the U.M.W. of A. has at times led to a revolt in which some elements begin to cry out for a union outside of and dual to the U.M.W. of A., and just as The Progressive Miners Committee has as often warned against any dual union to the U.M.W. of A., so in this instance does The Progressive Miners Committee caution the miners of the Anthracite against either dualism or appeal to the capitalist courts.

INSTEAD of appealing to the capitalist courts, the Anthracite miners should appeal to the wide mass of members of the U.M.W. of A. and rally their union brothers to struggle with and for them. The fight against the Lewis machine is not limited to the Anthracite region. On the contrary thruout the whole nation, the rank and file of members of the United Mine Workers are in revolt. And furthermore, they are following the policies and program of The Progressive Miners Committee.

Miners of the Anthracite! Realize that The Progressive Miners Committee program and candidate were tremendous factors in the last international election. Realize that even Lewis' machine admitted that Voyzey polled 66,000 votes. Realize that Voyzey actually won the election, and that Lewis has refused to issue tabulated returns of the vote by local unions. Realize that your fight must be made an issue thruout the international, but that to do so you must make the fight within the international and not in the capitalist courts.

The fight against the Lewis machine cannot be successful in the capitalist courts. The mass of miners of America have had bitter experience with capitalist courts and will not approve of an appeal to this enemy institution to settle union affairs.

Instead of such ill-juidged action, The Progressive Miners Committee points out that the method for ultimate victory is to fight within the union. To rally the rank and file in ever broader masses against the traiterous officialdom until it is impossible for them longer to cling to power.

Instead of injunctions—a hated word to every miner—the miners must call mass meetings, mobilize every miner to support their fight, elect delegates to the convention, fight on the floor of the convention for re-instatement of the membership and for seats as delegates.

The progressive miners counsel the Anthracite miners to retain their Grievance Committees, to call mass meetings of the local unions and where possible to march in a great body to the convention, demanding the seating of delegates and the re-instatement of the membership. This will compel a hearing by demonstration of overwhelming force—the only argument the machine will yield to. Anthracite miners do not let the crimes of the reactionaries drive you to the capitalist courts.

Carry your fight, along with and in support of the Progressive Miners' Comittee to the membership of the whole international!

Fight for the union and within the union!

This is the way to victory over the corrupt Lewis-Cappellini machine.

Progressive Miners' Committee,
Alex Reid, Secretary, 7020 So. Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill.

16 DEAD AND 30 WOUNDED IN BIG INDUSTRIAL WAR

Fight Both Native and Foreign Bosses

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

SHANGHAI, China, June 1.—With sixteen dead, thirty wounded and a general strike declared by all Chinese against the bloody autocracy of the foreign police in the international settlement, the clash between the allied imperialists and the exploited and oppressed Chinese who are shot down by alien bosses in their own land is assuming the proportions of war.

The imperialists in the international settlement have declared martial law and tank and armored cars are patrolling the foreign settlement together with detachments of foreign armed forces.

Strike Against Japanese Bosses.

The strike which started the whole affair was directed against the Japanese textile mill owners, and the demands were headed by such elementary justice as abolition of whipping of workers by foremen and similar moderate questions.

When the international mixed court, acting in the interests of the Japanese and other imperialist exploiters living on the sweat of the Chinese workers, convicted seventeen Chinese, some of them college students who had aided the strike, of conspiracy, 3,000 students attempted to march in peaceful demonstration thru the foreign settlement.

Marching down Nanking road, carrying banners, they were set upon by Sikh police of the British forces and those carrying the banners at the front were arrested. The students attempted to rescue their comrades and the British opened fire, killing ten students and wounding a great many. Still more were arrested merely for possessing literature concerning the textile strike.

This morning crowds of Chinese students and workers packed the Nanking road and were attacked again by the police detachments. The crowds becoming angry at the use of fire hose turned upon them by foreign oppressors, tore up the pavement and charged their attackers with stones and were driven back only after three were killed and many more wounded by the police who fired without compunction into men, women and children.

General Strike Called.

Large forces of the British Indian military and allied imperialists occupied the whole district and drove every Chinese out of it. But the whole city was aroused at the brutal murders and the unions began to issue strike calls to all workers, mill hands, water works employes, telephone operators, electric and tramway workers and all other Chinese workers to strike, until the foreign imperialist authorities both apologize for and pay compen-

STREET CARMEN WAR ON WAGE CUTS

CARMEN WILL FIGHT AGAINST WAGE DECREASE

Demand Five Per Cent Raise in Wages

The street carmen of this city will turn down the wage cutting proposition of the Chicago Surface Lines, according to a statement made by William Quinlan, president of the union.

The proposal that the men accept a five per cent cut in wages was made by Guy F. Richardson, vice-president of the company and superintendent of operation. The men are demanding a wage increase of five cents an hour.

These demands are very modest, considering the hard work required of motormen and conductors. Their hours are irregular, until after they serve several years, when they may secure steady runs. It is a nerve-wrecking task, particularly the work of a motorman in this age of reckless automobile driving and congested streets.

Should Have Held Out.

It is the belief of many of the union carmen that they could have won their demands at the time the present agreement was signed if they held out for another while. The rank and file of the unions have no confidence in the company officials. They know that President Blair is paid by the big stockholders to make as much profit out of the street car system as is possible. The profits must come out of the labor of the men who operate the lines. Blair's business is to make the employes work as cheaply as possible. Unless he can do this somebody else will have his job. Therefore those carmen who believe that Blair is a friend of the union are mistaken. Blair would like to smash the union, if he could. But he knows that the carmen will fight for their union.

Union Smashing Tactics.

The Chicago carmen have seen the result of working with the company officials in the smashing of the union in Cleveland. After the company pulls the fighting guts out of the union, it

DOHENEY ORDERS CALLES TO PUSH DRIVE ON REDS

Standard Oil, Calles and Catholics Unite

MEXICO CITY, June 1.—On his visit here as an agent of the Standard Oil company E. L. Doheny, president of the Huasteca Petroleum company, held long conferences with Senor Morones, secretary fo labor in the Calles cabinet, on how best to curb the growing influence of the Communist Party among the Mexican workers.

Doheny urged Morones to take drastic action against the Communists. He advocated, among other things, it is reported, that the Communist newspaper El Machete, which has a wide circulation among the oil workers, be suppressed.

Calles Smeared With Oil.

The Calles government has been working hand in glove with the American oil companies to keep down the standard of living of the oil workers, and assure the Standard Oil company a cheap supply of labor.

The workers employed by the Corona, Tuxpam, Huasteca, and other American-owned oil companies are threatening strikes, and the Standard Oil company, thru Calles, is attempting to suppress the Communist movement.

OREGON BAN ON PRIVATE SCHOOL RULED ILLEGAL

'Unconstitutional,' Says Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The Oregon School law, requiring all children between eight and sixteen years of age to attend public schools exclusively, was declared unconstitutional today by the United States supreme court.

Validity of the law, passed in 1925, was attacked by the society of sisters of the holy names of Jesus and Mary, a catholic educational corporation, and by Hill Military Academy, a nonsectarian educational institution.

Lower federal courts held the state law void because unconstitutional. An appeal was taken by the state, which the supreme court over-ruled in its decision.

Protects Private School

The decision of the court was head by Justice McGreynolds:

"The inevitable, practical result of enforcement of the law will destroy these private schools," said the justice. "These schools have long been recognized as filling a lawful need and purpose."

The attack on the law in the supreme court here was broadened by challenges of its constitutionality in general by the American Jewish committee and the north pacific union conference of seventh day adventists.

State Overruled

The state contended the law was valid under its police powers to enforce school attendance, and denied there was illegal confiscation of property in that it did not prohibit attendance of children at private educational institutions, corporated or un-incorporated, within the state.

VAN SWERINGENS MADE MILLIONS IN R. R.'S BY STOCK MANIPULATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1.—The Van Sweringen brothers made a profit of $16,812,000, in the railroad transactions leading up to the consolidation of the Nickel Plate railroad system, O. P. Van Sweringen admitted before the interstate commerce commission.

The commission is hearing an application of the Van Sweringens to extend their holdings to include the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Hocking Valley, the Erie, the Pere Marquette in the Nickel Plate under one large system.

This collosal profit was made by buying the Nickel Plate road from the New York Central for $21,000,000 and selling minority shares for $17,225,309, retaining control of the road by virtue of their minority stock.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 1.—Six white miners were killed last night in a pit accident at Piper, Alaa., reports to the Little Cahaba Coal company, owner of the mine here said. Death is believed to have been caused by an accumulation of black damp in an unused heading of the mine.

YOUNG CANADIAN RED DEPORTED FROM WINNIPEG

Worker Sent to England with Family

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TORONTO, Ont., Canada, June 1.—The deportation of Comrade Jack Gregg, with his parents and family back to England for revolutionary activities has seldom been precedented in the history of Canada. The family came to Canada not long ago and settled in Winnipeg. Immediately the family became active in the Communist movement, and Comrade Jack Gregg took a very active part in the work of the Young Communist League in Winnipeg.

The family has been unable to support itself like many hundreds of families in the large cities of Canada and has been dependent upon the city of Winnipeg for relief during the winter. Five times the immigration authorities threatened to deport the whole family back to England, allegedly because they had been dependent on the city, and were taking an active part in the labor movement. Finally, they have been deported. They sailed on the 20th.

Made May Day Speech.

The incident which was responsible for the final decision on the matter was Comrade Gregg's speech on May Day in Winnipeg. Comrade Gregg spoke for the Young Communist League of Canada and pointed out with enough force to make the bourgeoisie afraid, all the evils of the system, and particularly the conditions of the young workers.

This scorching attack upon the flag of British imperialism was too much for the master class, and they have shown their fear and anger by deporting the comrade back to the old country. Such a step as this on the part of the bourgeoisie is absolutely intolerable. If they can get away with it in one case, they will use the same tactics again when it suits their end.

Y. C. L. Protests.

The National Executive Committee of the Y. C. L. of Canada raises its voice against such a direct attack against the Young Communist League, and thus against the militant workers at large. The master class would like to destroy the fighting spirit of the entire working class movement in this country in the same fashion, by the deportation of its militant leadership. The National Executive of the Y. C. L. of Canada will fight such action and calls upon the working class as a whole to protest against this menacing policy.

Army Spy in Slimy Talk Against Reds at Englewood H. S.

By STANLEY BALCHUNAS.

Englewood high school had a visitor recently. This gentleman's name was Col. Hopkins. This man knows the Star Spangled Banner. He was dressed in a clean, newly pressed uniform.

Col. Hopkins' definition of a slacker is a man who marries and then hides behind his woman's skirts and then says he cannot go to war. Col. Hopkins wanted to impress upon us that a bolshevik and a slacker are the same thing. A very good definition Col. Hopkins, but we don't believe you.

Another thing that Col. Hopkins said is that, bolsheviks are all over the country and cause trouble. That is very true, Col. Hopkins, but I think that the trouble is caused by the capitalist class and the bolsheviks are resisting the oppression.

This great gentleman was in the secret service during the war and so probably did not see the slaughter out there which he praises now as patriotism.

This is the kind of speeches we are getting in high schools for our education.

SMALL BEFORE SUPREME COURT FOR CORRUPTION

Organizations Flock to Expose Governor

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 1.—The suit against Governor Small, demanding an accounting of public funds during his term as state treasurer, now before the state supreme court, on appeal, took another turn today when Walter F. Dodd and Floyd E. Britton, representing the Citizens Association of Chicago, made formal petition to file briefs and present oral arguments as a "friend of the court" and in an advisory capacity.

Small is accused of robbing the state of millions of dollars.

Spanish Communists Fight Neutrality In the Class Struggle

"Resolved, That no working class organization can afford to remain neutral in political questions before the workers," is the thesis which will be defended by the Chicago Spanish branch of the Workers (Communist) Party in a debate with the "Hermandad Obrera Mexicana," one of the biggest fraternal societies of Spanish-speaking workers in the middle west.

The debate will be held in the last week of this month; the exact date and place will be announced later. Manuel Gomez and Felix Barocio will take the affirmative in the debate and the "Hermandad Obrera Mexicana" will name two speakers to defend the negative.

A committee consisting of comrades Barocio and Espinosa has been elected by the Workers Party Spanish branch to conclude preliminary arrangements with a similar committee from the fraternal organization. In accepting the challenge to debate, the president of the "Hermandad Obrera Mexicana" declared that if the Spanish-speaking members of the Workers Party take a more and more active part in helping to solve the problems facing the organization, their co-operation will be more than welcome.

Five states were in the $200,000,000 exporting class.

Chief exports from New York were metals, ores and their manufactured products.

sation for the murders of all students and workers shot down since Saturday's massacre.

Yesterday, the quiet day between Saturday's clash and this morning's murders on the Nanking road, was not so quiet, however, as to leave the city to forget the wrongs it suffers by foreign occupation. Two hundred Chinese girl students of Shanghai colleges, led a demonstration of students and workers along the Nanking road. The police arrested a number but released them after taking them to the jail.

Even the Chinese shop keepers are protesting against the massacre of Saturday, closing their shops and posting notices of protest.

Whole Chinese Populace In Revolt.

The whole population is being stirred to its depths against the foreign imperialists, and great meetings are being arranged to denounce the plunder of China by the United States, England, Japan and other foreign exploiters. Groups of more than seven on the streets are forbidden by the martial laws.

American destroyers which were supposed to leave for Chefoo, are remaining to overawe the Chinese by threatening to bombard the city if the masses rise against the imperialist forces in the foreign settlement. Feeling against foreign exploiters runs high. Reports from Peking are that students there are organizing protests against the massacres here.

VIENNA, Austria, June 1.—The Austrian labor chamber will take the next opportunity to ask the United States to accept 50,000 emigrants. This will be done because Austria is too small for its inhabitants, the labor chamber claims.

WORKERS VOICE OPPOSITION TO GOOSE-STEP DAY

Governors in Fear of Indorsing Cal's Plan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, June 1.—Most of the governors of the 48 states, when questioned as to their support of President Coolidge's request that July 4 be set aside as an annual mobilization day, were far from enthusiastic about the plan. Many of the governors questioned, reflecting the opposition of the workers of their state, offered objection and criticism to the plan, altho some of them said they would support Coolidge if he made it necessary.

Gov. Henry L. Fugua, of Louisiana, declared: "It is impracticable to mobilize our state troops for July 4. I am inclined to think an annual defense day is too often. I feel that every two or even four years is sufficient for a test, and not calculated to emphasize and foster a too militaristic spirit."

Against Mobilization.

Gov. F. S. Billins, of Vermont, Coolidge's home state, said he "approved Coolidge's suggestion," but "As to the matter of mobilization, that will have to be taken up later. As I understand it the president wishes defense day to be entirely voluntary."

"Mobilization on the fourth of July is inadvisable for it would curtail the recreation of citizens on a national holiday," said Gov. Albert Ritchief of Maryland.

Not For War Activity.

Gov. George Hunt of Arizona opposed mobilization day either on July 4 or on armistice day. "I feel both these days should be devoted to the cause of peace rather than consideration of further military activity," said Hunt.

Some of the governors will be running for re-election soon, and are catering to the poposition of the workers to the militarization of the country.

Women Hold Meeting to Protest Against New Deportation Bill

NEW YORK, June 1.—On Friday, June 5 at 8 P. M. at 1347 Boston Road a mass protest meeting against the new deportation bill will be held, at which Schachne Epstein, editor of the "Freiheit," will speak.

This meeting is the third of a series of meetings that the United Council of Working Class Women is holding in the city. The deportation bill strikes at the foreign-born in this country, and is a direct menace to all workers, since it can be used against all the workers by the bosses threatening the foreign-born workers, driving down their conditions and thus bringing down the conditions of the American workers.

This is an issue on which all working class women must unite. It is an issue that strikes at every home. If the American government is allowed to carry out its plans no foreign-born worker will be safe. If he protests against conditions he may be charged with any crime, sentenced to one year's imprisonment and immediately be deported.

This meeting is to be a protest against the bill. All working class women and working class organizations must join in the protest. Among the other speakers will be Sadie Amter, who attended the third conference of Communist women in Moscow; Margaret Unjus, of the Lithuanian Progressive Women's Alliance; Anna Pastor, old veteran in the fight for the workers' interests. Kate Gitlow, secretary of the United Council of Working Class Women, will act as chairman. Admission will be free.

Bankers Ready to Swallow "Bankrupt" C., M. & St. P. R. R.

It became known Friday that the payment would not be made, the present receivers having served formal notice that the money was not available.

Meetings of committees representing holders of general and refunding bonds are to be held in New York this week looking to the formulation of some plan of reorganization.

French Socialist Party Finally Disappears in Capitalist Quicksands

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the socialists of France stand unmasked before the workers of the world as the open supporters of French imperialist policies in northern Africa, including war to the hilt against its native peoples. This was inevitable. The French socialists have merely taken their stand with the German socialists, the defenders of Hindenburg rule; with MacDonald socialist-labor rule in England, that outstripped imperialism itself in its efforts to keep in submission the subject peoples of Egypt and India; with the socialists of other nations that have thrown all pretense to socialist principles aside and made their peace with and given their energetic support to capitalism as against Communism.

• • • •

The French socialists, in the chamber of deputies, made the vote unanimous against the Communists; an historic event in the unfolding of the struggle of the French workers for power. The French socialists on the one hand, with the nationalists, boasting of their fascism, on the other, with all the bourgeois trimmings in between; all giving their support to the Painleve government, defender of the French imperialist struggle for empire. What a spectacle to cause the French workers to hold their noses and turn away. The Communists exposed the mess. The Communists call on the workers to cleanse France thru abolishing the capitalist system that has called this alliance against the interests of labor and the colonial peoples into being. In this the Communists stand alone, in France as in all other countries.

• • • •

The French socialists have a long record of collaboration with the French capitalists. The first big test came in 1907, at the Stuttgart Congress of the Second (Socialist) International when the French socialists, Briand, Millerand and Viviani, with inviting parliamentary careers opening before them, fought for the right of socialists to enter the capitalist governments. In that year the Second International refused them this right. They left the French socialist party, and have since headed governments of their own; governments that have used every capitalist weapon in crushing the workers.

Next came the world war when the French socialist party collaborated with the government in luring the workers to the slaughter pits. Albert Thomas, Jules Guesde and others became cabinet ministers, taking their places beside the "renegades," Briand, Millerand and Viviani, who had deserted the class struggle but seven years before. While Thomas was now the munitions minister at home in France, Viviani was touring the United States inciting the workers of this country to support the imperialist massacre. Thomas and Viviani—soldiers in arms, for French imperialism.

But the French socialists still remained wedded to some of the Wilsonian phrases, like "the right of self-determination for all peoples." At first they argued with their capitalist tutors in French politics that the African war must be only a defensive war. For two days the capitalist parliamentarians argued with them over this hypocrisy. Then they surrendered, and in common with the worst reactionaries, gave their support to the Painleve government, their ballots being registered with the 537 votes that were cast against the 29 Communist ballots demanding immediate peace and the evacuation of Morocco. The occasion was historic in that it marks another milestone registering the passing of the French socialist party, with the defection of new masses to the sturdy and growing ranks of the French Communist Party.

• • • •

On the day of this latest treason of the French socialists, Eugene V. Debs, chairman of the socialist party in this country, launched a so-called membership drive at Cleveland, Ohio, in an effort to resusicate the socialist organization heads. He might spare himself the effort. The quicksands—no less the capitalist quicksands that have claimed the socialist parties in all nations—never give up their dead.

WORKERS' GOVERNMENT FOUND AMONG FEW WITH GOLD STANDARD

Favorable crop conditions in Russia, indicating the likelihood of considerable exports of cereals and other agricultural products, call attention to the steady levels being maintained by chervonetz, the currency based on gold, which was introduced by the Soviets in 1922, says the New York Times. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in a chart it constructed this week, listed Russia as one of the countries which had returned to "the gold standard or the gold exchange basis." It was pointed out that for the last several years Russia has been expanding her exports wherever possible and, by restricting imports, has built up considerable balances in countries where the gold standard prevails. Thus Russia, in making purchases of American cotton and other products, has been able to pay in gold, making for comparative stability in her international trade. Incidentally, considerable of the gold which the Bank of England has been acquiring of late is believed to have come from Russia.

Miner's Wife Kills Self.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 1.—Investigation among Lithuanian relatives and friends of Mrs. Alexandria Norbert, 40, confessed axe slayer of her husband, Martin, a coal miner, failed today to give authorities a clue to the identity of the person who supplied the matches with which the woman yesterday set fire to her clothing and bed in the jail here and perished by inhaling the flames.

During her confinement in the county jail, pending her trial on the murder charge, the woman frequently had declared: "They'll never send me to the penitentiary for this."

U. S. FLEET TO QUELL CHINESE YOUTH PROTEST

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, June 1.—With a death toll of 15 already reported and with further disturbances imminent today as the result of student demonstrations in Shanghai, United States Consul General Cunningham, of this city, has requested Admiral Thomas Washington of the United States Asiatic fleet that three American destroyers and one gunboat now in the harbor here be detained to put down the demonstrations of the students.

The four warships were under orders to sail immediately for Chefoo. All food markets announced they would close tomorrow.

Boy and girl students continue to patrol the streets of Shanghai today, following their efforts to compel all merchants to declare a general strike, according to a dispatch from Shanghai. The students' agitation is a protest against alleged foreign domination.

HENRY FORD IS BUSY BUILDING WAR AIR FLEET

Freight Planes Easily Made Military Craft

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., June 1.—Henry Ford, speaking of his airplane freight line between Chicago and Detroit, stated: "What we are Joing is this: We decided the time was ripe for serious consideration of aviation as an industrial transportation unit, and we concluded the very best way for us to study the proposition was to start flying so we wouldn't have to depend for information on what other folks did and said.

"This air service of ours is really on trial. We keep exact tab on every detail connected with it. We keep records on how the engines behave in regular daily service, how they stand heavy loads, what their cost is compared to motor or railroad transportation, and how dependable they are under varying weather conditions. So far they appear to be pretty satisfactory."

Ford stated recently that his industrial airplanes could easily be converted into war planes. He is thus aiding the government to build up a war fleet.

Sanitary District Makes 2nd Attempt for More Lake Water

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The sanitary district of Chicago today filed with the supreme court of the United States a petition for a re-hearing of its suit with the government involving its right to take a larger quantity of water from Lake Michigan than allowed by a permit issued by the war department. The sanitary district lost in an earlier hearing before the supreme court of the Unitef tSates.

The grounds on which the re-hearing is asked is:

The court erroneously construed the Canadian boundary waters treaty; the permit for the opening of the drainage canal and enlargement of the Chicago river are not in their nature revocable; the attorney general attempted to exercise authority only under the 1899 rivers and harbors act; the court erroneously construed effects of early war department permits for withdrawals of water from Lake Michigan.

Salesmen Get Blame for Defunct Stock Company's Swindles

Salesmen for the defunct Jack H. Davis Co., which caught scores of investors in Illinois and Indiana in the wreckage of its smash, received commissions running almost to 25 per cent on their sales, it was testified here today in the hearing before Harry Parkin, referee in bankruptcy, who is examining the assets of the company.

In addition to this, it was brought out, the salesmen's expenses ran into staggering figures so that many times they received as high as $43 on a $100 sale. Many of the salesmen, it was testified, used aliases to enable them to sell in the same territory twice.

The hearing was continued until Thursday.

Thirteen Guilty of Selling Counterfeit War Savings Stamps

Thirteen deefndants in the government cases charging conspiracy to counterfeit war savings stamps entered pleas of guilty and so ended the case. Announcement that this step would be taken was made by the defense counsel when the afternoon session of the trial was resumed.

The defendants are accused of having passed thousands of dollars worth of the fake stamps in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Farmer Killed by Bolt.

MT. PULASKI, Ill., June 1.—The shoes worn by Henry Lewis Glick, 40, farmer, who was killed Sunday afternoon by lightning, today gave mute evidence of nature's fierce caprice. The bolt that struck Glick in the back of the head had continued down the body and ripped open the seams of his shoes. Each part of the shoe was separated from the other as completely as tho they never had been put together.

C'mon Over!

If you have a day, an hour, or a minute to spare—why, c'mon over. There is so much work piled up on the small force in our office that we need your help so very badly, to insert letters, address, seal and stamp envelopes and ever so many other little jobs that have us swamped. If you volunteer your services that's a fine way to help the DAILY WORKER. We'll be glad to see you—so just for fun, c'mon over!

SEAMEN VISITING SOVIET PORTS "SEE SCHOOLS AND THEATRES IN FACTORIES" AND OTHER WONDERS

In the paper called Mojrak—which means "seaman" in Russian, the Seamen's Union of Soviet Russia runs a page of letters from seamen of all nations published in the language of the writers. It is called "The Seaman's International Post-Box," and from it we have taken the following, two letters written by English seamen. The first says:—

My Experience

"While visiting Russina ports as A. B. British ships, I have been invited by quite a number of Russian workers to their homes and thus I have been able to observe their life very closely. One is bound to say at once that conditions generally are better and more secure for Russian workmen than it is for us in England. The housing question alone is worthy of note, general meetings of all tenants are held where all necessary repairs are decided upon and the general business of the house conducted. The rent is very low, usually about 3 or 4 shillings a month.

"The social life of the workers in Soviet Russia today is far superior to anything we could find in any other country. Here I can mention only a few things: each trade union have their own clubs which are well supplied with all kinds of literature, concerts, lectures on all subjects and various other entertainments, also courses in every science or language can be taken free of charge.

"One is impressed strongly with their eagerness in social work and especially with workers movement in other countries: How are the workers living in England? How are they organized? What are they thinking? There are some of the questions I have been asked everywhere.

"In Soviet Russia today a great and noble workers' state is being built of which as yet we can only see the outlines.

J. L., Seaman."

And then from a marine fireman is a letter with the flavor of the job right in it.

"Dear Comrade:

"It is with pleasure that I write a few lines about my experience in Russia. I am very pleased to see the working class so well organized. I only wish they were as well organized in Great Britain. I visited the factories and saw the working conditions for myself and believe they are far superior to Great Britain. It is the first time I have ever seen a school and a theater in a factory for the benefit of the workers. Everywhere you go you are made welcome. I assure you the International Seamen's Club is a club that the seamen of the world should be proud of; it is a pity that there is not some in America, Canada, Australia and Great Britain, —it would be like going from home to home and would educate the seamen in so far as to how they are enslaved by the shipowners. It would unite them to fight the capitalist class and make their conditions and life worth living.

"But you will always find amongst the workers the sneak sucker, there is no name bad enough for him, he will do anything to keep well in with the engineer or mate.

"I was in one of the Arcos company boats and each time we went to Russia I was surprised at the welcome we got in the Seamen's Club. I spoke as a worker, as a seaman, expressing my views of the Soviet government. I spoke the truth also about the conditions of the British seamen and I can speak of twenty years of sea experience of sea going.

"One of the ports of the Black Sea I visited on my last voyage to Russia. There I was warned from a friend of mine to keep my mouth shut aboard, for he heard that my speaking in Russia was getting carried to the captain.

"Well, we got paid off in London, and the boat was signed again for another trip, the chief engineer asked all the firemen to go back but me.

"I asked him what is the matter. I cannot go back, is it for my work?

"—No, you are a very good worker.

"—Is it for conduct?—No, we don't want you, that is all.

"So you see, dear comrade, the one who warned me was right. There are suckers amongst us.

"Now there are the sort of men we want to knock sense into, and learn him to fight for his own class and not for the boss, for he is well able to fight for himself and his own class and not the capitalist."

AMALGAMATION NEED SEEN IN SHOE LOCKOUT

Lynn Workers Feel Loss of Unity

By M. SHAVAF

As the last agreement between the Amalgamated Union and the manufacturers expired on May 12, the latter notified the union that they are determined not to renew the agreement. The manufacturers intend to run their business on the American plan, otherwise called the open shop system.

The first one to go thru with that was the Capital Shoe Co. This firm declared a lock-out, and advertised for non-union help. After the union representatives went down to interview the firm a strike was declared, and pickets were put near the plant.

A United Front of Bosses

It is known that the Capitol Shoe company is being backed by the rest of the manufacturers of Lynn.

As the endeavor of the firm to get the former union help to come to work under the individual contract totally failed, the firm applied for an injunction in order to restrain even peaceful picketing.

When Mr. Fish, business agent of the Lasters and advocates for the B. & S. was called upon by the Amalgamated to take a stand in regards to the Capitol Shoe company, he said that the Lasters are with the Amalgamated in this fight.

The militants of both factories in the Amalgamated as well as in the Boot & Shoe Union are endeavoring to prove to their respective locals that the present fight has got to be waged between the workers on one end and the manufacturers on the other end, and not as a fight between the unions.

If there was ever a time for the Shoe Workers to come together, it is a pressing necessity to do it immediately. Here you have for an example the city of Lynn, which was at one time the queen shoe city of the world, and the most organized center in the country, and now is the seventh shoe center and the most disorganized city in the country.

The chief reason which lead it to the present condition is the fact that Boston, ten miles from Lynn, is the pest hole of the open shop, and the Boot and Shoe with its graded prices and state board agreements reign unchanged.

Most obviously, the manufacturers of Lynn took the advantage and moved to Boston, and competed with Lynn.

Need The Same Union Everywhere

Would there be one union in the shoe industry the manufacturer would not see any benefit to keep on his plant moving. It would also make it so much easier for the union to organize the unorganized, thus bringing about a uniformed price in the shoe industry.

UNEMPLOYMENT NOT CURED BY WAGE CUTTING

Alberta Miners Find Operators Lied

By TIM BUCK.

During the recent wage cutting campkaign in the Crows Nest Pass, the favorite argument used by the operators, was that a wage cut would enable them to guarantee steady work.

After Fernie had accepted the cut, all the rest of the camps were regaled will all kinds of stories as to the amount of work available there, the inference being of course, that if the other men accepted similar conditions, they would also have "steady work."

We have repeatedly pointed out the fallacy of such arguments, and shown inasmuch as the railways burn coal to generate heat, and not merely to demonstrate their satisfaction with miners' wages, the wage cut would not increase the amount burned by one ounce; and after all camps had accepted the cut, production would be about the same, divided between the same mess in about the same proportions as before.

"Steady Work" Bubble Bursts.

And within less than a month of the acceptance of the cut by the last camp in the Crow—Hillcrest—events are developing exactly as foreshadowed in our warning.

The Crows Nest Pass Coal company—Fernie and Michel—have already withdrawn their guarantee of five shifts per week, and have not worked five shifts for some time.

This means that the worker classified as "common laborer" outside, loses the guarantee of five days per week at $4.00 per day, which was to have been so much better than "uncertain employment at $5.18. While the miner "enjoys" four days' "steady work" at $5.20 instead of $7.50.

Having started off with a rush, the other camps of the Crow are also already cutting down. The International Mine at Coleman stopping all three shifts on Monday, Belleview staying idle Saturdays—despite the fact that this mine is only producing at about 75 per cent of capacity—Blairmore closed down for two days last week, and prospects are that these arrangements will remain the rule until the mines up north get back to work, when production will be reduced still more.

Boss Sticks the Knife in Deep.

Victimization is rampant, and with an army of men outside looking for jobs, the operators cutting down production and laying men off, the outlook is far from bright. Many of the blacklisted men have tried for work at every mine in the Pass and eastern British Columbia, the invariable answer being: "Nothing doing!" Hillcrest is a bad place to come from if you want a job in District 18 today.

Many of the victimized militants are in desperate straits, lacking even bread for the children. But the boss must have his pound of flesh, and it has evidently been decided to soak the militants good and plenty.

Meantime, those of the miners who are working, are face to face with the problem of what to do next. There are local unions in two camps, Bellevue and Blairmore; company unions in two camps, Fernie and Michel. Hillcrest and Coleman are without organization of any kind whatsoever, while at Corbin, British Columbia, the agreement is between the company and the G. W. V. A.—and the president is the mine superintendent.

Unless something is done in the immediate future to rally the men and re-organize them on a class basis, still another cut is well nigh inevitable. And with it will come conditions rendering organization impossible.

New Problems and Tasks.

The miners of District 18 must realize that the changed conditions with which we are faced, make different tactics and different slogans absolutely necessary.

No wage cuts—not even digging the coal for nothing—will avail in the present situation, the only possible solution of the problem confronting us is nationalization of the mines, workers' control, and production of coal for the consumer rather than for all that the traffic will bear.

With nationalization as a definite aim and Canadian autonomy enabling the miners to fight for its attainment, the bitter lesson being learned just now may yet be of value to the mine workers of Canada.

ADVOCATES A POLICY IN THE I. L. G. W. ELECTION

The Sigman - Perlstein Machine Cracked

By A GARMENT WORKER.

The election in the International Ladies Garment Workers in Chicago is about to take place and it will be well if the rank and file look back over the regime of the present officials. Study the present condition of the organisation, ask some pertinent questions from those seeking office, and cast their vote for the candidates who stand for a militant program of action.

With the entrance of Perlstein into the Chicago situation, coming as he did, ostensibly for organizational purposes, but in reality to remove from office and expell from the union the left wing who were then leading the organization, even if that entailed the complete demoralization of the organization.

Perlstein Goes, Halperin Remains

Perlstein has gone and no one weeps tears over his departure, altho they express deep sympathy with New York for being afflicted with this disrupter. However the Perlstein-Sigman policy still remains. The officials who took the place of the progressives who were removed, are still in office. The strong arm committee of ten, altho now in conflict with the Sigman machine are still a factor and Vice-President Halperin is following in the autocratic footsteps of Perlstein.

Under the guise of organising the unorganized Perlstein squandered like a drunken sailor, over $100,000 of the organization's money, and when his drive was over the organization had lost over 1,000 members, the union was weakened by the expulsion of many of its livest members, and inflicted with a group of incompetent officials whose fighting proclivities were limited to a struggle against the progressives within the union.

A split has taken place in the Perlstein-Sigman local machinery. Not over the question of policy, but over the question of loot. The treasury has been drained, Perlstein made short work of that. The committee of ten and their followers outside the union who only work when they are well paid, and whom everyone blames for the shooting scrape in the Ashland Auditorium, find themselves being squeezed out, the fight is on and Halperin is here to try and save the machine from being completely wrecked.

Hoist With Their Own Petard.

Disfranchisement and expulsion is still the main weapon of offense of Sigman and company. Now they are using it against each other. Some of those who were used by Perlstein to terrorize the left wing now find themselves in opposition to the machine and have been promptly disfranchised. It is needless to say that they are loud against this policy, and the two, former machine, delegates to the joint board from local 5 have resigned as a protest.

Now enters Halperin who in true Perlstein manner took over local 5 at its meeting held on May 20, appointed two delegates to replace those who resigned, on the grounds that if he did not do so, left wing delegates would be elected, and that would be in violation of the policy of the general administration.

Outlawed But Not Beaten.

The T. U. E. L. has been outlawed in the I. L. G. W. It was also outlawed in the miners' union, yet in the last election in the U. M. W. of A. the candidates against the Lewis machine polled 66,000 votes. They ran for office on the full program of the T. U. E. L. and Lewis has not yet complied with the constitution by tabulating the votes by locals, and the natural feeling among the miners is that Lewis was defeated.

In the local Chicago I. L. G. W. U. election, the most prominent left wingers have been expelled or disfranchised, they cannot run for office, but there are many sympathizers. Last year all those whom Perlstein thought sympathized with the expelled were arbitrarily removed from the ballot. This year the rank and file must see that no such czaristic methods are allowed. More than that, they must demand from each candidate to state their policy; what their program will be if elected to office.

Into the Fight!

Trade issues, the conditions of workers in the industry, are of the most importance. The settlement of these, or even the attempt to solve these problems, requires a different leadership, a leadership that will repudiate the class collaboration policy of the present group of officials. Officials are needed who will inject some idealism into the union and who will carry on the fight against the employers on the basis of the class struggle.

CONSTITUTION OF A. F. T. O. USED TO BREAK STRIKES

So Textile Workers Change it

FALL RIVER, Mass.— Constitutional red tape that made the calling of strikes difficult has been unwound by the Fall River Textile Council of local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Textile Operatives, independent.

The constitution now permits all departments of a mill to be called out in support of a strike in any one department at the order of the emergency committee, consisting of the secretaries of the affiliated locals. And a general strike of all mills in the town may be called by a two-thirds vote of all the members voting.

Formerly two-thirds of the unions had to sanction a general strike. Thus the will of the larger unions, having more than two-thirds of all unionists affiliated with the council, could be thwarted by a minority of small unions, having relatively few members.

It is expected that the New Bedford council may follow suit. In that neighboring cotton city last winter a general strike against the 10 per cent cut was prevented by the constitution. Tho more than two-thirds of all unionists voting supported the general strike idea they were negatived by the failure of enuf of the smaller unions to ratify.

The weavers, largest organized body, voted four to one for the strike, for example but they and the other pro-strike unions were blocked by small craft groups.

FIRE CARPENTER AFTER ATTACK BY BOSS JENSEN

Left Winger "Punished" For Defending Self.

W. S. Milson, progressive carpenter, who was attacked by Harry Jensen, president of the carpenters' district countil, on May 18, was discharged from his job with William Morris and Son, an inside carpenter firm, when he went to draw his pay on Saturday.

Milson, member of Local No. 1367, was distributing criculars at Wicker Park Hall, advertising the candidate opposed to Jensen in the carpenters' election for district council, when the reactionary "boss" of the local carpenters struck Milson with his fist.

Milson declares it is very significant that he was fired shortly following Jensen's attack on him. When asked why he had discharged Milson, Louis Hansen, the foreman replied that "I had orders from the office." Milson could get no other information as to why he was thrown into the ranks of the unemployed.

Progressive carpenters are asking whether the incident shows a connection between the bosses and Harry Jensen, Czar Hutcheson's lieutenant in the attack on the left wing.

MARINE WORKERS FIND SHIPPING BOARD TYRANNY

Sailors Brigged, Jailed and Cheated of Damages

NEW ORLEANS, June 1.—Charging that he was chained to his bunk on the steamship Scantic, owned by the shipping board, while in Genoa, Italy, by the second mate, Bixford E. Dickey has filed suit for $10,000 in the federal court.

Not only was he chained to his bunk and placed in irons, but he was refused food and water. The shipping board claims Dickey was chained to his bunk to prevent mutiny.

John L. Labey files suit against the shipping board vessel West Ekonk for $10,000 damages claiming that the captain was responsible for his stay in an Argentine jail for nine days.

The papers show that Labey was drunk for three days but reported for work sober; that the captain requested that he be locked up till the ship sailed. Attorneys claim that the captain has no control of a sailor while off duty.

Three American sailros injured last October when a scaffold on the shipping board steamer Clearwater fell, sued, and on a compromise verdict Joseph F. Kreisch instead of $50,000 received $1,200 for permanent loss of eyesight; John A. Nickles, claiming $20,000 for spinal injury, $800; John F. Edwards, asking $5,000 for shock and abraisons received $500.

Another Question for them is—"Why Not Do Some Amalgamation?"

BOSTON, Mass.— The national board of jurisdictional awards in which building trades unions and building trades employers are represented is holding hearings for the purpose of settling disputed jurisdictional issues between crafts.

Among disputed points to be settled are deciding whether: setting reinforced rods in concrete walls and cement floors is within the province of common laborers or skilled workmen; what craftsmen have exclusive right of cutting chases, channels and openings in brick, tile and masonry; what group shall put up plaster boards; what group shall put on metal trim for office building doors and elevator enclosures. The board has been in existence six years.

GUGGENHEIM SYNDICATE GETS 50 PER CENT ON CONGO DIAMOND MINES

NEW YORK, June 1.—A brief announcement was made by the Guggenheim Ryan syndicate which is exploiting the Congo diamond mines, that a dividend of fifty per cent has been distributed to stockholders.

The syndicate was formed in 1907 under the Congo mines participation agreement, which stipulated that the Guggenheim brothers and Thomas F. Ryan would exploit the African diamond mines.

One reason such a high dividend was declared, it is stated, is because cheap native labor is employed to work the mines.

5,000 IN ONE WEEK

The Second Annual Sub Campaign has been extended to July first—all subs sent in before this date will apply to all city and branch quotes.

In one week, to get five thousand new subscribers to a Communist paper, in the stronghold of world capitalism—is quite an accomplishment.

To do it—a RED WEEK has been organized between June 15 and 21—and every single Communist and sympathetic worker is asked to mobilize for one great unified effort to "Build the DAILY WORKER".

A special sub rate of 2 months for $1.00 will be allowed during this time—free bundles will be sent to distribute door-to-door, in the shops and union halls . . .

Five thousand new subs to the DAILY WORKER in one week—is quite an accomplishment. But it is much easier than to overthrow capitalism—And Communists aim to do both.

FARMERS AIDING SOVIET UNION'S RECONSTRUCTION

Experimental Farms Aid the Peasants

By ALFRED KNUTSEN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., June 1.—If all signs do not fail agriculture in the Soviet Union will in the next 10 or 15 years take a tremendous step forward. Here we have vast stretches of fine, tillable land, in extent much larger than the entire territory of the United States, waiting for modern farm machinery to turn the rich soil to productive uses.

Modern farming methods are destined to transform agricultural production all over this country and their influence upon the intellectual and social life of the people are bound to be tremendous.

Revolution Stimulated Farming.

The revolution has cleared the decks for action in the field of agriculture. Under the czar practically nothing was done to stimulate scientific agriculture and the whole of the peasantry was kept in frightful slavery and ignorance. Soviet government of workers and farmers is starting out along the lines of science, culture and enlightenment, and despite the tremendous difficulties it has had to contend with, a good deal has already been accomplished in modernizing farming in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Peasants Support Soviets.

When we read in the capitalist press in America that the farmers in the Soviet Union are only waiting for an opportune moment to revolt against the Soviet government, it is to laugh. I dare say that the farmers here are supporting their government to a far greater degree than the American farmers are supporting the capitalist government of the United States, and for very good reasons.

The Soviet government belongs to the workers and farmers while the government of the United States belongs to the American capitalists.

Establish Experimental Farms.

What is the Soviet government doing in the field of agriculture? In this article I want briefly to point out two things that are significant. First, the establishment of Soviet experimental farms. I have seen two such farms, one at Ramensko, near Moscow, and another a few miles from Karkov.

These farms are operated under the supervision of the Soviet department of agriculture and they have as their object the production of various kinds of grain, corn, alfalfa, clover, brans, peas, beets and other root crops, fruits of many varieties, hogs, cattle, etc., etc., and the scientific knowledge thus gained is communicated to the farmers thruout the district and these farms also furnish the farmers with good seeds.

There are scores of these experimental farms thruout the Soviet Union and one interesting feature is that the aim is to make them entirely self-supporting. The one at Ramensko is self-supporting, while the one at Karkov is nearly so.

Manufactures Farm Machinery.

Then the Soviet government is directing its attention towards the manufacture of farm machinery. At Karkov I was agreeably surprised to find that one factory turned out 102 caterpillar tractors per month, each of 50 H. P., capable of pulling eight 16-in. plows and plowing 25-30 acres per day.

This work, naturally, is recent, but it is very significant of what is in the minds of the leaders of the new Russia. The Russian social revolution is binging about a tremendous revolution in the production of farm products.

Fleet Back to Honolulu.

HONOLULU, June 1.—The United States fleet has returned to the harbor here for a month preparatory to making its long cruise to Australia to impress the world powers having interests in the Pacific with the power of American militarism.

"DISARM THE MASSES!" ORDERS CALLES, IN FEAR OF REVOLUTION

MEXICO CITY, June 1.—President Calles yesterday issued orders to police that all citizens should be disarmed and that all homes should be searched and arms found there should be seized.

This was considered one of the most drastic orders yet issued by the administration, since the majority of civilians are armed.

The order is going to be particulary hard to enforce, since the arms the masses now have were used by them to aid Senor Calles obtain his position in the war against the Huertista rebellion. More and more the subservience of Calles to the commands of Wall Street and his open alliance with the hated imperialist exploiters of the United States, is disillusioning the Mexican masses, and Calles quite rightly thinks that if the masses have arms they may use them against him.

The Fundamental Tasks of Propaganda Work

By J. STEN

The Importance of Revolutionary Theory

AT the present time the theory of revolutionary Marxism is of special importance for the Communist parties. The tasks dictated to the Communist parties by the historical situation demand a high degree of theoretical knowledge and experience on the part of the Communist parties.

As a general rule the importance of theory for the party is dependent upon the role which the party is called upon to play in the system of the other working class organizations. The party represents the general and highest form of organization, leading and guiding all other labor organizations in the struggle. In order to enable the party to see its marching route clearly before it, the light of revolutionary theory must be cast upon the road. Lenin told us that the struggle is not merely twofold—the political and the economic struggle, but that there is still a third struggle to be faced—the theoretical one. According to Lenin's view the party is called upon to act as leader in all these three struggle. From Lenin's standpoint the party is the fulcrum of all three factors, the organizatory, the political, and the theoretical.

THE working class as totality is as little competent to enter the arena of ideological struggle as it is capable of consciously leading its own struggle for emancipation in the spheres of economics and politics. The theory of Marxism, of scientific Communism, does not spring up automatically, as elementary force, in the ranks of the whole working class. So long as the overwhelming mass of the working class is suppressed and exploited, and held in ignorance by capitalism; so long as it is permeated by the narrow interests of the trade unions and guilds (representing the interests of individual professions only), it is unable to rise simultaneously and directly to the level of the ideology of scientific Communism.

Scientific Communism is based solely upon a whole number of philosophical, historical, and economic theories which have preceded it. In order to grasp scientific communism, it is necessary to go beyond the narrow confines of the interests of this or that trade or profession, and to regard the socal historical process as a whole. It is thus a mistaken idea to believe that Communist ideas originate in the working class with fatalist inevitability, under the influence of the mechanical pressure exercised by economic development. The development of the working class into Communist ideology is an irregular process. The most advanced and active section of the working class first appropriate these ideas. It is the duty of this active section to raise the broad backward masses to their level, to educate them up to the stage which they themselves have reached by their own experience in the economic and political struggle.

THE role played by the party, and its decisive function, were expressed by Lenin in the formula of the "correlations between spontaneity and consciousness." The party is the conscious expression of the spontaneous, objectively historical process. In order that the party may be rendered capable of acting competently as the conscious and active leader of the spontaneous mass movements, and of adepting the right political strategy and tactics, it most imperatively requires a correct comprehension of the laws of capitalist development.

But the knowledge of the general laws of capitalist social development does not in itself render a party capable of leading the struggles of the working class; for this another capacity is required; that of making an efficient concrete analysis of any given special historical situation. This task is however only possible to achieve if the policy of the party is based upon a strictly scientific Marxian foundation. The carrying out of such a policy requires more than a mere "empirical assembling of things," the mere knowledge of certain political rules and tactical standards established by empirical experience. It requires a capacity to extract the core, the actually decisive driving forces of social historical development, out of every individual historical situation, by means of the methods of dialectic materialism. In an historical epoch replete with social catastrophes and dislocations, the capacity of thus applying dialictic methods becomes of eminent importance. Under the conditions caused by the raging speed of social historical development, we cannot approach social phenomena metaphysically without falling into error, that is, we must not isolate these phenomena, or remove them from their context. The epoch of imperialism, the collapse of capitalism, and the development of socialist revolution itself, are in a certain sense dialectically more "mobile" than the previous historical epoch.

The General Tasks of Propaganda.

THE importance of revolutionary theory for the struggle for emancipation of the working class points out to us our general tasks of Marxian propaganda is the dissemination of the basic ideas of Marxism in a number of Communist Parties. This dissemination of Marxian ideas must bear the character of a ruthless calling to account of, and an equally relentless struggle against, the pseudo-Marxism of the Second International. This means that our propaganda of the general fundamentals of Marxism must not be abstract in character, but must be based upon the actual historical tasks set the working class, by each new epoch. And this means that our general propaganda has to be a propaganda of Marxism and Leninism.

When we speak of Leninism, we emphasize that special import which Lenin imparted to Marxian theory. We hold in view the light cast upon Marxian theory by Lenin's application of fresh historical experience, his new practice of Marx's methods in a manner hitherto unknown in the history of the world. Leninism signifies inexorable struggle against the vulgarized and castrated Marxism of the Second International. Leninism is the renaissance of orthodox Marxism. But Leninism is not only the rebirth of the Marxism of Marx, it is the continuation and further development of Marxism under the conditions imposed by the epoch of imperialism and the development of socialist revolution. The historical process does not come to a standstill, social be'ng changes and develops.

WHEN the new phase of capitalist development, the phase of monopolistic capitalism, had commenced, and when the war of 1914 finally determined the beginning of an enormous upheaval in the world's history, Marxism was confronted by fresh theoretical and practical tasks. Marxist theoretical consciousness had to grasp, consciously, the new social being which had come into existence. Lenin, applying the methods and teachings of Marx, consciously grasped the fundamental antagonisms and decisive laws of the imperialist epoch.

The imperialist socialists of the type of Kautsky, Bernstein and Friedrich Adler, proved unequal to this task. These theoreticians of the Second International bid adieu to the tenets of orthodox Marxism. Having conceded to their imperialist inclinations by renouncing dialectic materialism, it was impossible for them to even attempt a conscious grasp of fresh phenomena and processes from the standpoint of Marx's methods. Friedrich Adler's declaration (Adler likes to consider himself a Marxist) that the Bolsheviks are in actual fact sinking deeper and deeper into Bakunistic adventurism, but continue to call upon Marx unceasingly at the same time, thus sounds extremely hypocritical. Adler writes that the standpoint of the Bolshevik may be more easily understood since they have finally decided to speak of "Leninism" instead of "Marxism!" (From Adler's letter to the Executive of the London International.)

AND it is precisely Friedrich Adler, the zealous reviser of the dialectic materialism of Marx and Engels, who makes this statement. In his well known article written in 1907, and published in the Neuen Zeit, under the title of "Friedrich Engels and the Natural Sciences," Adler employed his utmost endeavors to distort Engels, and to replace the philosophy of Marx by the philosophy of Mach. It need not be emphasized that Friedrich Adler's submissive service to the imperialist bourgeoisie has so crippled his mental faculties that he is no longer capable of questioning whether a man who has renounced Marxian methods of materialist dialectics may still be called a Marxist. Friedrich Adler, having renounced Marx's methods, is incapable of comprehending that the split between the labor movement and socialism during the epoch of imperialism is not accidental, and that the disintegration of Marxism in the Second International is as little accidental. The fundamental feature distinguishing the theoreticians of the Second International is their incapability to comprehend Marxism as a coherent view of life, permeated with dialectic concord. Some of them have been prepared to accept this or that part of Marxism, but have rejected that totality of Marxism extends alike to the works of nature and the history of mankind.

Lenin, on the other hand, accepted the methods and teachings of Marx fully and completely, and with their aid he explained the new processes and solved the practical tasks of the labor movement. Thus our general propaganda must be a propaganda of orthodox, unvulgarized Marxism, and a propaganda of the latest achievements won by the theory and practice of Marxism in the latest epoch of history. That is, it must be a propaganda of Leninism. For this reason, our general propaganda must lay special emphasis on the Marxian view of life as a coherent and organic whole. We have to propagate the fundamentals of dialectic materialism, the factors underlying the methods of Marx and Lenin. We have already pointed out that this task is of the utmost importance in the present epoch. Here our task consists of providing the requisite literature for the individual Communist Parties. This is of special importance for literally every theoretician belonging to the Second International has dealt with the philosophy of Marxism with unmasked revisionism, and the broad masses of workers still backing up social democracy have thus been plunged into the profoundest misapprehension with regard to the role and significance of dialectic materialism.

OUR general propaganda must deal at the same time with the questions of historical materialism and with Marx's economic teachings. A comprehension of the laws of capitalist development, and of the conformity to law embodied in classic industrial capitalism, are necessary prerequisites to the comprhension of the connection existing between the capitalism of free competition and monopolist capitalism. If the knowledge does not exist, the danger arises of a lack of comprehension of the associations between imperialism and classic capitalism, leading in practical politics to a tendency towards "left infantile diseases." And as our general propaganda must deal at the same time with the special purport imparted to Marxism by Lenin, our propaganda work must lay special emphasis on the fundamental elements of Leninism.

The theory of imperialism must be accorded a leading place in our propaganda. A clear comprehension of the nature of imperialism is absolutely necessary if we are to grasp the character of the new historical epoch. Here our propaganda must expose the manner in which misapprehension of the essential character of imperialism, as special stage in the devolopment of capitalism, has converted social democracy into the flunkeys of the bourgeoisie.

The position into which social democracy has thus fallen has of course its social causes, and the theoretical expression of these is the false theory of imperialism held by the social democrats. This failure to comprehend imperialism leads the social democratic theoreticians into a further labyrinth of misapprehension as to the real character of the split in the ranks of socialism and in the working class. They do not understand that this split is an inevitability arising out of the essential nature of the imperialist epoch.

They do not understand that imperialist excess profits form a soil for the growth of a labor aristocracy and a bureaucracy which, finding firmer economic ground beneath their feet, begin to show a "bourgeois" and "Philistine" tendency. The political expression of this economic schism of the labor aristocracy to the side of the bourgeoisie is represented by the split in socialism. It is precisely this fundamental fact which has made the split between Communists and opportunists (or imperialist socialists) an imperative necessity. And precisely for this reason there could be no thought of a simple reorganization of the Second International, and the creation of a new organization, the Third International, became an absolute necessity.

WE must thus accord a leading place in our propaganda work to this question of the imperialist nature of the social democratic parties. Failure to comprehend this imperialist character may be observed among the so-called left Communists. Even Rosa Luxemburg shared this lack of clear understanding on this subject. In her book on "The Crisis in Social Democracy," she regards the attitude adopted by German social democracy at the outbreak of the war in 1914 simply as a mistake, and does not associate it with the history of opportunism. Lenin drew special attention to this when he said that "the treachery would be inexplicable" if we could not trace its connection to opportunism as a tendency with a long history behind it—the history of the whole Second International. The question of the split in socialism during the imperialist stage of capitalism has been dealt with by Lenin in his remarkable article entitled: "Imperialism and the Split in Socialism."

The question of the theory of imperialism is of increased importance to us, since at the present time we are obliged in our own ranks to combat the false theory propagated by Rosa Luxemburg's conception of imperialism should be made the fundamental of the program of the Communist International. It is the vital duty of our propaganda work to oppose our incontestable theory to Rosa Luxemburg's incorrect theory of imperialism, in which she summed up her wrong conceptions of the role played by the party, the national emancipation movement, the movements in the colonies, and the peasant movements.

Another important branch of our general propagandist work is the teaching of Lenin's theory, strategy, and tactics of proletarian revolution. The fundamental principles laid down by Lenin in these questions are contained in the main documents of the Communist International. These are:

1. The theses on bourgeois and proletarian democracy (passed at the 1st World Congress).
2. The theses on the agrarian question (2nd Congress).
3. The theses on the national and colonial question (2nd Congress).
4. The resolution on the role of the Communist Party (2nd Congress).
5. The 21 conditions of admittance into the Communist International.

It is our task to disseminate the contents of these documents, which internationalize Lenin's teachings on the role and tasks of the Comintern, and on the role played by the party, the teachings on the driving forces of international socialist revolution, and the principles of party organization, amongst the broadest masses of the people. The educational and propaganda work in the party must provide the broadest possible basis for the process of assimilation of the contents of these most important documents of the Communist International by the masses of party members.

The Special Tasks of Our Propaganda.

THE stage of devolopment of the Communist International through which we are passing at the present time confronts us with a number of concrete propagandist tasks. The Fifth Congress proclaimed the Bolshevization of the Comintern. This slogan commenced a new period in the history of the Comintern. The end of 1923 found a number of countries in a revolutionary situation. Some Communist Partteis, as for instance, the Bulgarian, the German and the Polish, were placed in the position of acting as the direct leaders of revolutionary mass movements. These Communist Parties were obliged to pass from the strategic maneuver of the united front tactics to an immediate struggle. The historical events of this period have however proved and shown that the parties are not yet capable of acting as Bolshevist organizations. The severe test of objective historical development to which these Communist Parties were subjected pointed out to the Communist International the nature of its immediate tasks in the new period.

These tasks consist in a continued endeavor on the part of the Communist Parties to maintain contact with the broad backward masses, in the first place with the proletarian masses, and further with the non-proltarian; further, of the utilization of the lessons learned during the period just passed thru, aided by the analysis of the internal development of the individual country, for the purpose of drawing up a correct strategic plan, and of undertaking correct tactical action in accordance with this plan.

THE taks involved by the necessity of a conscious comprehension of the experience gained in the past period demands from us the accomplishment of a lagre number of propagandist tasks. In the first place we have to wage a relentless ideological and theoretical war against those deviations from Marxism which have wormed their way into various Communist Parties. Where questions arise with reference to the generalization and conscious comprehension of revolutionary experience, the questions which are put with reference to the philosophy and methodology of Marxism are not accidental. In this atmosphere, charged with these essential and important tasks, but lacking in far-reaching and comprehensive traditions in the sphere of dialectic Marxism, the Communist Parties tend to lapse into distortions and falsifications of Marxism. The philosophical efforts of Lukacs, Korsch, Fogarasi, etc., may serve as examples of such distortions and diseased growths.

An article by Lukacs, published in 1921 in the theoretical organ of the German C. P., Die Internationale, on the subject of the "Spontaneity of the Masses and Party Activity," furnishes the clearest evidence of the relationship between Lukacs' philosophy and a certain subjective trend, that is, with the left infantile diseases of politics.

THIS instance furnishes a brilliant justification of Lenin's words with regard to the relationship between the philosophy of Marxism and the Marxist social political movement. We see how an incorrect political deviation produces its corresponding philosophical expression. It is our task to carry on an exterminating theoretical war against these philosophical deviations, and to apply the methods of dialectical materialism to the work of correctly generalizing and consciously grasping the practical experience gained in the Communist movement.

Deviations of precisely the same nature may be observed with regard to the theory of the agrarian question, and again these arise just as the atmosphere is charged with tasks of the utmost importance to the Comintern in its efforts to control the peasant movements. It is incumbent on all Communist Parties to make a special study of the various groups and strata in the peasantry of their own country, and thus to ascertain the right political slogans for enlisting many groups of the peasantry in the ranks of proletarian revolution.

This work demands that the Communist Parties be familiar with the theory of the agrarian question worked out by Marx and Lenin. Such theoretical experience being lacking, many Communist Parties faced for the first time with the agrarian problem have fallen into theoretical deviations. Varga's book, "Outlines of the Agrarian Question," may serve as an example of this description of revisionism in the agrarian question. Here Varga revises the theoretical principles of Marxism and Leninism in the agrarian question. It is our task to combat revisionism in the agrarian question, and to propagate at the same time the teachings of Marx and Lenin in this question. Lenin has left us much valuable theoretical material with reference to the agrarian question. He is the greatest theoretician of the agrarian question in the Marxist camp. Thus one of the most important lines of our prapaganda work must be to spread the knowledge of Lenin's theoretical achievements in the agrarian question, the task immediately incumbent on the Comintern at the present juncture of evolution rending this knowledge of the utmost importance to the Communist Parties.

DURING the present period of the development of the Comintern, and of the united front tactics, the scale inclines in favor of the slogan of "international trade union unity movement." There are however many who have not yet grasped the fact that during the present period the peculiar united front tactics required consist of a penetration into the Amsterdam International, in order that the workers organised in this may be won over from social democracy man by man. One of the special tasks of our propaganda work consists of enlightening the Communist Parties with regard to the role and importance of the trade unions in the class war of the proletariat. It must be shown that under capitalism the trade union is the historically given form of labor organization. The Communist Parties have to grasp the fact that work in the trade unions is the opportunity for propagating Communism ideas among the broad strata of the non-party workers.

The development of the epoch now being struggled thru by the Comintern, in connection with the task of Bolshevization now being entered upon by the Communist Parties, requires that our propaganda work furnishes the theoretical prerequisites for the conscious comprehension of the experience of the past, and establishes the theoretical principles upon which the political and organisatory tasks of the present period are based. But our propaganda must reach the broadest masses of the party members and of the non-partisan workers alike. The fundamental slogan of our propaganda work among the masses of party workers must be: "Every member of the party must know the A. B. C. of Leninism."

Organizatory Prerequisites for Propaganda Work.

IN order to carry out propaganda work as delineated above, the Communist Parties must take a large number of indispensable measures in the sphere of propaganda. In the first place it is of importance to organize a sub-department for propaganda in all Agitprop departments in the Communist Parties. Certain comrades must be selected, who are to devote themselves solely to propaganda work. It is only when a group of comrades of this description, engaged on this special work only, is formed, that a really efficient co-operation between the propaganda sub-department of the E. C. C. I. and the propaganda work of the individual Communist Parties is possible. It has hitherto proved difficult to bring about this co-operation. All Communist Parties have to adapt themselves to the lines laid down by the Agitprop of the E. C. C. I. After the Communist Parties have ascertained the purport of the propaganda work required of them, and have appointed a group of cvomrades devoting themselves to this work, they will then be in a position to approach the task of expanding and developing the various organizatory forms of propaganda work.

In order that a certain staff of theoretically educated comrades may be created, and theoretical experience thus firmly anchored in the Communist Parties, the Agitprop of the Communist International raises the question of the organization of international party courses of instruction. The object of this instruction is to furnish the decisive section of the Comintern with a staff of comrades thoroly versed in Marxist Leninist theory. Comrades capable of acting later on as active leaders in the practical life of the Communist Parties.

One of the most urgent tasks in the building up and development of the various organizatory forms of propaganda work is the task of organizing elementary courses of instruction in all Communist Parties. The program of these courses of instruction was published in the Inprecorr.

THE further development of the organizatory forms of propaganda work raises the question of Marxist Leninist circles, and brings us to the task of establishing central party schools in the individual parties. Reciprocal relations must exist between these various forms of organization. The question of central party schools has already been placed on the agenda of some parties. We are already richer by the experience gained in the French Party school. The immediate future will see the completion of the working out of the working program of the central party schools in the different countries. The fundamental organizatory measures towards propaganda work to be taken up at the present moment by the Communist Parties may however be summed up in the following two points: the appointment of a group of comrades in every party for leading propaganda work, and the immediate development of the elementary courses of instruction.

ELECTRIC GRAB IS EXPOSED BY WORKERS PARTY

Conn. Political Boss Warned by Labor

HARTFORD, Conn., June 1.—The Workers (Communist) Party, Connecticut district, has sent a letter to J. Henry Roraback, political boss of the state denouncing his Electrical Grab bill which robs the workers and farmers of the state of their rights to participate in the use of electrical power.

The letter states:—

"J. Henry Roraback,
State House,
Hartford, Conn.

"To the political boss of Connecticut:

"We note that your Electrical Grab bill goes merrily through the legislative steam roller, having already passed the state senate. This interests us, because we know that you control as well the puppets in the second wax exhibit in the capitol. We have seen you sit by the side of your house leader and crush the child labor amendment. From your room next to the house chamber, you have been executing the will of the manufacturers association of connecticut. Of course, you are doing this for patriotic motives, to defend your country against the red menace. Of course.

Rob Workers

"But now you stand convicted openly before the working class of the state, as one who robs workers of the electric rights of the state. You take by political force the right to exploit the masses of this state when they ask for light. They ask for light and you hand them a bill, pocketing enormous profits. Why are you getting this unusual franchise? For your good looks—for your ability? No. We are forced to the conclusion that it is the reward for political power—a sop thrown to you by the manufacturers whose bidding you do. Senate Bill 587—the Electric Grab bill—is being pushed through, to the sound of your whip. You are evidently not in politics for your health.

"During the recent state campaign, the Workers (Communist) Party demanded that natural resources and public utilities be taken over by the state and nation, and that they be managed by the unions. Your so-called republican party and all others supporting capitalism opposed this. Your candidates were elected by the farce of democratic elections, and actually by capitalist dictatorship—and one of the results is this infamous bill. You will pass such bills, only so long as the workers permit the factories, mines and workshops to be in the hands of your class. When the workers and farmers institute their own government, your days of glory will be at an end.

Government His Puppet

"We wish to congratulate you on the choice bit of camouflage you put over. You have learned from the art of war displayed when the capitalist nations slaughtered millions of workers, for the eternal preservation of their own profits. You have learned the fine art of camouflage. At the same time that you put over this monumental piece of robbery, you had your puppet, the governor, make speeches exalting the spirit of 1776, clothing himself in the flag, and as usual attacking the reds, the communists. The governor of Virginia was imported to highten the patriotic ferver, and all he did was to indulge in petty gossip, and show the low mentality of those supposed to be guiding the destinies of the states. We will unmask you. We will strip off the drappery and show you to the working class of this state in your naked character of exploiters.

Days of Bosses Numbered

"Shall we call upon you to stop pushing this bill through? That would be naive. But we warn you that there will be a day of reckoning, when the workers of the state will take you to task for robbing them of the electric resources of the state. And when the workers take over the industries, and establish their own Soviet government, you will be among those held responsible.

"As against your electric grab (1000 per cent Americanism)—the Workers Party raises the cry of hands off! It raises the slogan of: All the resources for the workers and farms—for use, not for profits.

"Looking forward confidently to the time when your political power will be wrested from you, and assuring you that we will leave nothing undone toward that end, we remain,

Connecticut State Committee,
Workers (Communist) Party of America,

STANDARD OIL PROF. RAVES AT SOVIET RUSSIA

John D. Gave Cornell Man Free European Trip

ITHACA, N. Y., June 1.— Cornell students were entertained by an anti-bolshevist lecture, delivered by Albert Russell Mann, dean of the college of agriculture, who has just returned from a lengthy tour of Europe as a member of the Rockefeller general education fund.

Dean Mann dwelt at length upon the "sufferings" of the refugee students, who with their anti-bolshevist professors are pursuing courses in czarist law in order that they may some day return and "help" Russia out of her difficulties. Professor Mann visited Italy, Bohemia, Esthonia, and Poland. In Warsaw he was told the sad tale of a young Russian woman who had been spreading counter revolutionary propaganda who "had to flee from Moscow in order to save herself from a trip to Siberia."

Dean Cries Over Spy.

The dean related that the young woman had been associated with the Hoover relief organization. The Soviet officials suspected she had ulterior motives besides relief work and subjected her to a cross-examination. The dean concluded from this horrible atrocity that the Union of Socialist Soviet republics is unworthy of recognitioon at this time.

A member of the audience was heard to mutter something about Roger Baldwin getting a six months' sentence for union activities in Paterson, but of course, no one thought of embarrassing the dean by heckling.

Professor Mann admitted that his "information" came from anti-bolshevists. He also admitted that there were signs of real scientific activity in the Soviet republic, altho his nearest approach to that country was a visit to the American ambassador at Warsaw, who is authority for the horrible tale about the poor woman who was harrassed by the cheka.

Represented Standard Oil.

It appears that the dean's philanthropic movements in Europe are not beyond suspicion. One local member of the Workers (Communist) Party has been in touch with the professor's activities in Europe. He relates that the dean traveled from university to university, note book in hand, securing data in a manner characteristic of a sleuth looking for a bootlegger.

He made himself known as a representative of the Rockefeller organization, and was consequently filled with sad tales by anti-bolshevists anxious to obtain a donation from the oil king. What is even more interesting is that the professor cut short his vacation to deliver a public lecture which had one solitary theme—the Soviet must not be recognized.

NEW NAME "ALL AMERICAN ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE" IS ADOPTED IN WAR ON DOLLAR RULE

In order to disassociate itself sharply from such instruments of Wall Street imperialism as the Pan-American Union and the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor, the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League has changed its name. Henceforth there will be no suggestion of possible "Pan-Americanism" in its name, any more than in its principles and activities. The organization is now known as the All-American Anti-Imperialist League (or "Liga Anti-Imperialista de las Americas"), including in its ranks all elements interested in a concerted fight against imperialism in the western hemisphere, and especially American imperialism.

A section of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League has just been set up in Havana, Cuba, under the leadership of Julio Antonio Mella, editor of the well-known student publication, Juventud. Regular secretariats of the league already exist in the United States and in Mexico, and another is in process of organization in Guatemala. The monthly organ of the league, El Libertador, is meeting a wide response thruout Latin-America, the first two editions having been completely exhausted within a week after publication.

National liberation societies, working class organiztaions, peasant leagues, student groups, political parties—in fact any organization in America interested in creating a rallying center for the common struggle against Wall Street—has a place in the All-American Anti-Imperialist League.

The league denounces the Pan-American Union and the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor as avowed supporters of the Monroe doctrine, a doctrine of perpetual aggression against the peoples of Latin-America in the interests of a profit-yielding "Pan-American" empire dominated by Wall Street.

SOVIET UNION AIDS IN SEARCH FOR AMUNDSEN

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., June 1.—The commissariat of Posts and Telegraphs of the Soviet Union has requested every Arctic outpost in the union to be ready to render assistance to Amundsen and his companions if signs of the north pole fliers are found.

The Soviet Union's wireless stations ranging along the extreme northern coast of Europe have remained constantly on the alert, hoping to hear some news of Amundsen, who has not been heard from since his party left Spitzbergen in two airplanes ten days ago.

Mulattoes Have No Legal Rights in Texas is Ruling

AUSTIN, Texas, June 1.—Children of a Negro mother and a white father cannot be regarded as legal descendants, assistant attorney general Ernest May of Texas has ruled. The ruling, handed to state comptroller S. H. Terrel, in answer to an inquiry by county judge Chester Bryan, states that "legal benefits" cannot apply to mulatto children of a white testator.

Intermarriage of the races is prohibited, and common law marriages are not recognized.

New Records for Passport

WASHINGTON, D. C.—June 1.—The number of Americans securing passports this years has exceeded by 12 per cent those who departed the country last year, state department officials declare. Since April 11,200 passports per working day have been issued, setting a new high record. 35,040 secured passports in April.

Workers' Dramatic League of N. Y. Starts Its Summer Program

NEW YORK, June 1.—The Workers' Dramatic League of New York was formed with the express purpose of presenting revolutionary drama to the workers of New York. It is composed of a group of party and non-party members many of whom are artists, writers and others with dramatic ability.

The short but very beautiful pantomine presented for the joint bazaar of the International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council and the Paris Commune pageant a mass presentation that taxed the entire energy of the league for some weeks and which was believed to be extremely successfully.

Lectures will be given on the revolutionary drama by Louis Lozowick, John Lassen and Sadie Amter. These lectures will be short enough so that the better part of the meeting can be devoted to the work on hand.

Comrade Speck and Egri have jointly written a very excellent burlesque called "Tried for Treason," a satire on the trial of the three comrades arrested by the bomb squad for carrying guns during the pageant rehearsal. This little play will be produced for the first time at the picnic which the Workers Party is holding June 24, at Pleasant Bay Park. No one can afford to miss this event which is expected to be a tremendous success.

The new pageant written by John Lassen and Simon Felshin will be presented as an outdoor production for the International Workers' Aid and Labor Defense Council on August 24, at a picnic also at Pleasant Bay Park.

The league meetings take place Fridays at 8 p. m., until further notice at Astoria Hall on E. Fourth St.

To Form all-Inclusive Organization

in advocating amnesty for political prisoners; ex-class-war prisoners; and all working-class organisations.

George Maurer, national secretary of the council, gave the following reasons for the committee's action: "First, the American labor movement has never had a large central defense organ that is able to defend workers of whatever belief or affiliation and it is high time one existed. Secondly, there is every reason to believe that a new epidemic of labor persecution will seize the country before many more months have gone by; the economic situation isn't very promising, there are indications of another strike period and re-action is unquestionably gaining strength not only abroad but here as well.

Old Class War Fighters

"Thirdly, numerous requests have come to our office asking what is now being done for such old class-war prisoners as Ford and Suhr, Rangel and Cline, Mooney and Billings and dozens of others that are now all but forgotten. We intend that there shall be a revival of interest in these old fighters, everyone of whom was framed up on flimsy charges and sent to the penitentiary for long years.

"And lastly, but by no means of the least importance, we think that the hundreds and more class-war prisoners now behind the bars are deserving of better treatment than mere postcards on their birthdays. We think they are entitled to systematic patronage in the form of material comforts for themselves and regular care for their families. And we think there are thousands of other workers of the same opinion."

Deserves Support

The following members of the National Executive Committee approved the calling of the conference: E. C. Wentworth, chairman; Wm. H. Holly, C. E. Ruthenberg, M. J. Loeb and Rev. Davis Rhys Williams. There were no objections.

E. C. Wentworth, the chairman, said after the meeting, "I don't see how it will be possible for any laboring man or labor organization to fail to support a movement like this."

The purposes of the conference, the manifesto issuing the call says, are to devise ways and means to:

1. Initiate and centralise nation-wide campaigns for amnesty of all class-war prisoners, for the repeal of all criminal syndicalism laws, to oppose anti-labor legislation, and against persecution and deportation of foreign born workers.
2. Collect material and give publicity to all facts pertaining to working class persecution, to publicly expose brutal treatment of political prisoners and to expose secret anti-labor activities, such as labor spy system, etc.
3. Provide legal and moral aid to all workers attacked for expression of opinion or for working-class activity.
4. Give material and moral aid and comfort to all prisoners who have been incarcerated for expression of opinion or for working-class activity.
5. Supply material support for the families and dependants of such prisoners.
6. Protest against terrorist activities against workers in other lands and to give moral and financial aid whether possible to the victims of such terror.
7. Merge all forces willing to cooperate in this work into a broad national organization, based upon individual and collective membership that will stand as an ever-willing and ever-ready champion for the defense of all workers, regardless of their political opinions or affiliations, attacked through the courts, or otherwise, for their activities in the labor movement.

The call concludes, "The Labor Defense Council is fully confident that supporters of this conference will come forward in imposing numbers and make the conference on June 28 the starting point for a great defense organ that will unify all forces friendly to the American workers' movement into a solid bulwark against the attacks of predatory capital upon any and all workers of whatever belief or affiliation."

The slogan for the conference will be, "Unite all forces for Labor Defense."

Shepherd Germ Case Witness Continues to Elude Police

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 1.—Local police and detectives have combed the city and environs for twenty-four hours in search of Robert White, elusive state's witness in the William D. Shepherd "germ murder," case at Chicago, without finding a trace of him, they admitted today.

Working on information that the witness, who has been reported variously in New York, Philadelphia and other cities, had relatives in Pittsburgh, authorities combed the city in a quest thus far futule.

Detectives were posted at a local telegraph office, where a money order for $117 was received for White from Chicago, but the money was not claimed.

of time, only for the intervention of Wall Street. It happened that the interests of American capital—the dominant wing of it—demanded an Allied victory. That is what determined the entry of this country into the war and not sentiment for the "mother country" or for the France of LaFayette.

NO brilliant schemes can avert war under capitalism. It may be postponed but not abolished. The conflicting interests of the capitalist powers produce clashes, internationally; while the disharmony in the system of production for profit instead of for use creates social conflicts. These conflicts cannot be harmonized except thru the abolition of capitalism. It is not unusual to see an employer's own relatives striking against him for higher wages. Blood, and social relationships count for something, but are as ineffective in preventing wars and social strife as the wisp of straw on the automobile tire is in impeding the progress of a five ton truck.

DENMARK must have produced a strange crop of social democrats. According to the Milwaukee Leader, things can be done there that would be impossible in other countries. The social spirit reigns. The street car conductors will give you credit for your carfare and should you drop your wallet on the street, a sociable Dane will pick it up, return it and refuse a reward. Even the deer stay in the parks without the need of fences. No police are necessary to keep watch over them. "In Copenhagen" says the Leader "the deer are tame and safe." Well, so are the socialists.

THIS is real news. Of course it may not be true. Such doubts spoil a good story. In those days of struggle it is good to think that there is at least one spot in the world where the "golden rule" is honored. But one cannot help being suspicious about this socialist paradise, in view of the history of the Barmat scandal and the financial activities of the socialists in England, Sweden and other countries where those gentry had the opportunity to connect with some money.

RUMORS of a threatened revolt in Mexico are seeping thru. There is no doubt but considerable disatisfaction with Calle's regime exists among the workers and peasants. They feel that Calles has betrayed them to the Wall Street bankers. There is no doubt about this. The socialist president of Mexico is now, nothing but a common strikebreaker. He is to Mexico what Briand was to France. Of course, there is the difference that Briand became strikebreaker in the interests of French capitalists whereas Calles is a strikebreaker for American capitalists. That difference means nothing to the strikers.

A socialist sob sister writing for the New Leader of New York gives a picture of the thrills that went thru her last May day when, she sow the international holiday of the workers in all countries except the United States, observed in Mexico city with president Calles and socialist labor fakers reviewing the parade. Those socialists always mistake the substance for the shadow. The lady did not tell her readers that a few days after Calles doffed his hat to the red flag, he was breaking a strike of oil workers with his troops. Wall Street has no particular objection to the red flag; provided it can become the emblem of class collaboration instead of the class struggle.

Boy Scouts an "Army of Youths" Coolidge Declare

NEW YORK, June, 1.—In a lette read before the opening session o the fifteenth annual meeting of th National Council, boy scouts of Ame ica, president Coolidge referred t that organisation as "an army of th country's youth."

"With a membership of 750,000 th scout organization is an army in pr paration for the highest civic duties, Coolidge said.

The Carmen's Demands

At a time when the organs of big business are blatantly boasting of prosperity, the officials of the Chicago Surface Lines propose to cut the wages of their employes five per cent. Perhaps the wives and daughters of the millionaires who own the majority of stock in the street car lines have planned some more world tours or intend to marry some financially wrecked European dukes. These plans call for money. The money must come out of the sweat of the street car employes, whose wives are lucky if they can afford to go to the movies once a week or to a picnic once or twice during the summer months.

The men are making a very modest counter demand of a five per cent increase. The trouble with the working class as a whole is their infernal modesty. They do all the work required to run the nation's industries. They have the power to enforce their demands and yet, instead of taking what belongs to them, what they have created, they are contend with going to the bosses hat in hand and beg for a pittance. And the bosses, instead of being grateful, that the workers do not force them to either work or starve, express indignation whenever the workers demand an additional doughnut.

Street car employes are among the hardest working of the industrial workers. Everybody who has to ride on street car knows this. It is bad enough to have to ride on the creaking junk piles without being obliged to drive them for a living.

While the bosses propose to cut the wages of the employes there is no talk of reducing the fat salaries of the company officials. The lowly motormen and conductors are only workers. Let them starve and slave! Let them wait for their reward until they get to heaven! This is the way the bosses think.

But the workers are learning the truth, slowly but surely. The street carmen know that without them there would be no cars on the streets. The parasitic sons and daughters of the millionaire stock holders could not run a perambulator, not to speak of a street car. They are useless to society and in a workers' government such as exists in Russia those parasites would either have to work or starve.

The street carmen should insist that their very modest demands are granted. They will be granted if they are determined to fight. They must not rely on round table conferences with the company officials or on company "arbitrators" like Maclay Hoyne, the Thiel Detective Agency official who let them down two years ago.

The Class War Prisoners

The action of the Labor Defense Council in taking the initiative for the formation of an all-inclusive organization having for its object the defense of all class war prisoners regardless of political affiliation is a worthy move and deserves the wholehearted support of all working class bodies.

Since its inception, the Labor Defense Council has rendered splendid service to the labor movement. Called into existence when the notorious Daugherty made his infamous raid on the Communist convention at Bridgeman, Michigan, it has since then not only carried the burden of defending those indicted under the criminal syndicalism laws of that state, but it has also looked after the interests of hundreds of others arrested in various parts of the country on various charges arising out of their activities in the class struggle.

One of the most sacred responsibilities of the labor movement is its class war prisoners. Many of those who are serving long terms or life sentences are almost forgotten. Tom Mooney, Billings, Ford and Suhr—not to mention others—are among that number. Only the steadiest of the revolutionary workers stick to their guns, in the quiet as well as in the hectic periods. A. F. of L., I. W. W., Communist, or anarchist prisoners—all must be defended; all must be freed from the capitalist dungeons. This is a big task and calls for the united efforts of the entire working class movement of the United States. Let those who mean business join with the Labor Defense Council in bringing an organization into being strong enough to batter down the prison walls that are keeping Tom Mooney, Billings, Sacco, Vanzetti and hundreds of others less known to the public, in the deadly confinement of their prison cells. This is one issue upon which every honest worker can unite. None will raise the standard of disruption except enemies of the working class and cynical renegades whose hearts remain untouched by the agonies of the labor pioneers, whose loyalty to their class brought down upon their heads the hatred of the unrelenting enemy.

We wish the Labor Defense Council success and urge every worker to join it in its revolutionary task.

The demand by the Progressive Miners' Committee that President John L. Lewis lead the march of the West Virginia miners in protest against the injunction denying them the right to picket, is not without humor for those who have seen the magnificent Lewisian paunch. It is very fititng for a chamber of commerce parade, but would look somewhat out of place on the picket line.

There is little chance of its being seen in the van of the anti-injunction battalions altho it shakes with anger whenever the left wing is mentioned.

A German firm is engaged by the Free State government to harness the waters of the River Shannon for the production of electric power. A German steamship line has established direct communication between Ireland and Germany. Krupp is reported to be planning the erection of a big steel plant near Dublin. The British capitalists, particularly the coal, steel and shipping interets are not well pleased. Competition may be the life of trade but it is also the cause of much conflict.

Reports that the British government is preparing a joint note from the capitalist governments to Russia is not unexpected. But there are millions of British workers who will leap to the defense of the workers' republic with much more alacrity than they would defend the robber empire of Britain.

Victor Kopp, Soviet ambassador to Japan, was received at the imperial palace in Tokio. The Mikado was no doubt interested in seeing a representative of the power that liquidated his brother of Russia

Why The Infernal Machine Exploded in Bulgaria

By AL. KOLOSSOV.

COMRADE STOYANOV, a Communist, member of the Bulgarian parliament, a comrade whose unrelenting and unwearied fight against the regime of bloody violence was brought to an end two months ago by his being shot down in the streets of Sofia, sent to the International Red Aid in the spring of last year the diary of one of Zankov's hangmen, who had ended his prolonged and bloody "work" by suicide.

In the letter accompanying the diary Comrade Stoyanov wrote, that the number and the names of the victims of the Zankov terror cannot be ascertained, that this terror is indescribable, as human language lacks the words with which to describe the sufferings of the blood-soaked country and that, therefore, this task must be "left to the words of the hangman," whose diary provides some sketches of the white terror carried on by the Bulgarian government.

THIS diary is the unique confession of a Bulgarian officer, a former social democrat, who at the end of 1923, was the leader of a punitive expeditioon which went from place to place carrying fire and bloodshed and practicing innumerable acts of violence.

At a time when the Zankov agents are fabricating "documents of the Comintern and of the Soviet government," at a time when the capitalist press is endeavoring to demonstrate the hand of Moscow in the Bulgarian events, it is very opportune to turn over the gruesome pages of the confession of a hangman and to read the bloody records of an eyewitness of the acts of the white terror and to convince oneself that the avenging explosion of the infernal machine was an outbreak of desperation, which has seized the mercilessly tortured and plundered working masses of the country who have nothing to lose but prison walls, torturings and death from starvation.

What is the peasant policy of the government of this land of peasants?

In the attached case of the writer of the diary there lay the "instructions" of the authorities in Sofia, which prescribe:

1. "When circumstances render it necessary, the entire population of the villages must be exterminated!"
2. "No prisoners must be taken!"
3. "Individual executions should be carried out with the cold steel!"

TO whom has the government entrusted the fate of the Bulgarian villages?

Below there is given the type of one of the dictators, an absolute ruler over the rural areas.

"One of my companions," writes the author of the diary, "is a fat, undersized person; his bloated cheeks are clean shaven, his black moustache, which is touched with grey, is curled upwards, his eyes are inflamed as a result of continual drinking; but the chief thing that impresses one's memory, are his low forehead and the tousled hair hanging over it!" 'I only need to look at a fellow who is going to be hanged, young man,' said he, 'and I can tell what convulsions he will have; his arms and legs will twist and turn, will now stretch out or will bend in the form of half a wheel, with convulsive movements at the sides. Thus, for example, I can tell from your neck that your limbs would be bent and that you would have long convulsions. I, however. . ."

THE sadistic dictator could not finish his speech. There entered the room now glancing sideways, now looking on the ground, now fastening her eyes on one point, an old woman. She came up to the table, began to tremble, and her sobs filled the room. She bowed to the ground and began with groans to beg that the corpses of her two young sons who had been executed a week before might be given up.

One insufficiently acquainted with the exercise of the white terror by the Bulgarian government could easily assume that this is only directed with all its rigor against the Communist Party, against the working masses and against the revolutionary active peasants. The language of the documents tells a somewhat different story. Facts and figures bear witness that the terror in the country under the rule of Zankov has reached a point of blind, pitiless and bestial cruelty, where the hangmen can no longer distinguish the active opponents from the masses of the workers, and class hate knows no limits.

"Seven condemned," states the writer of the diary, "are bound together. A living wall, a wall of human bodies."

WHO are these people who are to be slaughtered, concerning whom it is prescribed, "they must not be hanged but finished off with the cold steel?"

"It is within my own knowledge," writes the author, "that this man was arrested, as he was returning home after the burial of his son, that one as he was going into his little vineyard, and this one was simply fetched from his hay wagon. . ."

Nevertheless, the leader of the punitive expedition, who was only recently a "member of the social democratic party," in the "name of the government," gave the order, and stabs were given which penetrated into the back and into the neck; crunching sounds of the breaking of bones; the dull sound of the bayonet which splits the bones. . . One has fallen into the grave. . . Another one, another and yet another. Still living they are thrown into the grave with its walls of damp black earth. Dozens of spadefuls of earth are thrown over them, and thru the noise of the falling clods there rises the faint groaning of men in their death agony: "Stop, I am still alive! . . ."

"Silence reigns over the country. And even the mothers, who on Saturday visit the graves of their sons who have been hung, shot or had the flesh torn off them, silently weep, without speaking a word, for the invisible, but all-seeing gendarme follows on their heels."

THE above is from a letter from a Bulgarian student, who is neither a member of the Communist Party nor of the Young Communist League, to a colleague who is studying at the Berlin university.

"In September, 1923, all lights in the villages were out. A darkness and stillness as of the grave reigned over the fields of Bulgaria.

"Strike a light grandmother; just a light so that I can see to change my clothes," asks Comrade Torov, who has escaped from the prison of Stara Zagora, of an old peasant woman. "Have you gone mad?" exclaims the old woman in reply, her whole body trembling. "And what about the guerilla? They will be here in a minute. They will sweep down like fierce vultures."

THE guerilla is Zankov's band for maintaining order. It is the members of this band who fling peasants into the wells for being behind in paying their taxes, who rape young women, who, in an intoxicated condition, set fire to the peasants' houses, hang the village school teacher, declare the last horse of the peasant to be "state property" and create that horror which lies upon the souls of the Bulgarian peasants and which was described by Comrade P. who has recently fled to Poland:

"The burning village lay before us seven or eight kilometers distant. The flames seized only a portion of the village, and to the left, half a kilometer from the burning houses there flared up three separate huge tongues of flame which lit up the few dozen houses which still remained untouched by the fire. One could hear the weeping, crying and sobbing of the women and children, the wild lowing of cows and oxen, the bleating of sheep and the crashing of the walls as they collapsed. This government of the bloody Zankov was settling accounts with the "disobedient" peasants. The air trembled, the first shot was followed by a second, then a third and a fourth, the punitive expedition was commencing artillery fire. Fresh sparks shot up to the heavens and lit up that portion of the village which lay between the main conflagration and the three sheets of flame."

And here is the testimony of another eye witness.

"Below, a kilometer from the maple trees, there lay on the right bank of the brook a little village, and on the trees there hung three corpses, one of a youth, another of an old peasant and the third of a priest. The morning breeze played with the wavy beard of the old peasant; a strange smile lay upon his face. Upon the bare breast of the priest there shone a cross that had been hacked with a sabre; the blood was dripping down and two yellow flies had crawled into the depths of the wound."

Is there any need to ask why the infernal machine exploded?

INSURANCE BOSS BLAMES FIRES ON COMMUNISTS

Also Dislikes Foreign-Born and Starving

NEW YORK, June 1.—H. A. Smith, president of the National Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, links "fire losses to reds' activities." This gentleman declares that "a few weeks ago there was held at Madison Square Garden in this city a meeting of reds—a noisy, turbulent gathering that cried loudly for Soviet rule in America.., Most of those present were of foreign birth. Deportation is obviously the remedy of self-protection... This influx of foreigners and the fact that the immigrants are raising larger families than are to be found in our native households are two factors bound to have an effect upon future conditions."

"This gathering... is a symptom of a serious condition that is growing worse rather than better, despite the restrictions that have been placed upon immigration. And this has a very definite bearing upon the business of fire insurance. Look over the names of criminals being tried in the courts every day; examine the roster of firebugs and see how the great majority bear cognomens that originated on foreign soil...I notice that out of some thirty-nine persons arrested for arson and burning to defraud only about five had names inspiring confidence."

A Danger To Employers.

This wild-eyed red hunter accuses the Communists of every imaginable crime. He accuses them of arson—he forgot to add that they introduced the influenza epidemic and are guilty of the small-pox epidemic at the present time. They are the cause of the innumerable auto accidents. And there is no question that they have originated the mine disasters—especially the recent one in North Carolina in which 71 miners lost their lives. That there are 6,000,000 child workers in the United States, taking the place of adult labor, because the children work cheaper and less complainingly than the adults, is another of the crimes of the foreign-born reds.

That this gentleman does not ascribe the high profits of the insurance companies and the many trusts of the country to the reds is very comprehensible. That they threaten the dividends and profits of the bosses of this country is what forries Mr. Smith. Yes the reds are a danger—to the employers of this country.

Children Starving.

Mr. Smith complains that, despite immigration restrictions, the reds are growing in the United States. The foreign-born have larger families—but they do not all belong to the reds yet. What turns the American and the foreign-born worker towards the Communists? The capitalist papers declared that the conditions in Bulgaria—the heavy taxes on the poor peasants, the unemployment, low wages, unsteady work and long hours, were making Bolsheviks of the Bulgarian workers. In other words, it was not "Moscow" which was importing the revolutionary movement into Bulgaria but the conditions under which the workers and peasants work. What is producing the revolutionary movement in the United States?

Mr. Smith might turn his eyes to the textile mills of his own section of the country—New England. There he will find children and women working at starvation wages. There he will find the workers having their wages reduced and their hours unsteady. Let him look at the miners in the central fields, and there he will find starvation among hundreds of thousands of miners. Let him look at the machine shops and steel mills, and there he will find the workers working long hours in order to get enough wages to keep their families alive.

To End Bosses' "Democracy."

Mr. Smith says that the foreign-born are guilty of arson. But Mr. Smith does not state which class of foreign-born. He knows that the foreign-born swindlers and firebugs are of the middle and upper classes—people who have lost their position and resort to crime in order not to be compelled to do work.

One thing is notable, however, in this statement of Mr. Smith. It clearly reveals that the capitalist class of this country is linking up everything that is against their own interests, with the reds—the Communists. The capitalists are consciously carrying on a campaign in every form against their only enemies, the Communists. The capitalists know that the influence of the Communists is growing and that the conditions in this country, which are disillusionizing the workers as to "democracy and liberty and prosperity" are making for a powerful Communist movement.

YALE STUDENTS TURN FIRE EXTINGUISHER ON ENGLISH PROFESSOR

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 1—Yale University officials threaten to place the entire freshman class on probation because the freshmen engaged in a riotous demonstration at the Berkeley oval.

Among the crimes charged against the students is that they turned a fire exthinguisher on Prof. F. H. Bangs of the English department when he tried to quiet the students. Bangs was then chased to his room.

The students tore down a fence in celebration of the close of the college year, and then broke many electric light bulbs. The campus was covered with wreckage.

MINER KILLED BY WIRES TOO RISKY FOR MINE RULES

Farrington Drives Men Into Electrocution

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., June 1.—A Collinsville miner, whose name our correspondent was not able to learn at this writing, was electrocuted by a trolley wire while he was preparing to leave by trolley for the bottom at Lumaghi Coal company No. 2. The mine officials and the state mine inspector knew very well that this kind of transportation is dangerous to the life of the miners.

A month ago the mine manager stopped using battery motors for transportation of the miners to and from work places, and began to use trolley power—a dangerous thing to use for transporting miners in steel cars. A falling wire may electrocute the whole car full of miners.

Protect Mules—Not Miners

When the miners asked the manager what the idea was of using such dangerous means, he replied that the state mining law allowed. When asked why he had not used trolley before, if it was allowed, he said, "Well before this we used mules, and we were afraid that if we used trolley transportation, the mules would be electrocuted. Now that we don't use mules we can change from battery to trolley wire motor." Thus we see that the operators took more care of their mules than of the miners' lives.

So the miners refused to ride in the trolley. But the sub-district officials advised that we go ahead and ride in them while they looked up provisions on protection from trolley danger in the mine and mineral department and consulted the state officials. But nothing was done. Farrington sent a letter to the local in which he stated that "If the state mine laws allowed, the mine has a right to use trolley."

When the miner was electrocuted, the danger of trolley transportation was well shown to the miners. So they refused again to ride in the cars and went back home from the mine for two days.

Farrington Aids in Murder

Farrington sent two telegrams, brutally ordering the miners to go back to work, ordering that they must either ride in the trollies or walk. The sub-district officials added to the intimidation, scaring the miners by saying. "If you don't go back to work the mine will shut down and you'll be out of a job. Then what'll you do? Go back to work, like Farrington says." Confronted with enemies all around, the poor miners had to agree to go back.

Farrington has his agents in every sub-district and local. This was shown when Sub-District No. 7, President Jack Bill jumped up in a local meeting and attacked a miner who compared Farrington to the mine bosses. It is time for miners to wake up and kick out all these fakers from top to bottom of the union.

Reserve Board Has Hopes

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Restoration of the gold standard by great Britain removes from the major part of the world commerce and finance the uncertainities arising from wide and abrupt fluctuation of exchanges, the federal reserve board announced today.

Chicago Carmen Plan Fight Against Wage Cut Threat

proceeds to smash it with the aid of the courts. They will have the courts on their sides and the police, even tho thousands of policemen get on the force after working on the street cars. But policemen under a capitalist government must carry out the orders of the bosses or lose their jobs.

The Chicago street carmen are not asking much. They should be getting at least one dollar an hour. The present rates are 70 to 75 cents an hour with 77 cents for night cars and eight cents additional for one-man operation on the surface lines. The maximum on the elevated lines is 77 cents an hour.

The progressive elements in the carmen's union know that unless the organization remains a fighting body it is bound to go under. The railway companies in Boston tried to smash the organization that was founded by fighting men like Fay and Nesdale. Many of the leaders who came after them went over to the company, but the rank and file stood to their guns and the Boston union still keeps the flag flying.

The recent frame-up of the traction magnates of Buffalo against Vice-Presidnet Fitzgerald of the union, show to what extremes the bosses will go in trying to get rid of fighting labor leaders. Fitzgerald is a good organizer, even tho he is not politically a radical. Therefore the bosses want to put him in jail.

The street carmen of Chicago should do well in this fight to place their faith in their own power and not depend on the good will of President Blair of the surface lines. Blair is the tool of the millionaires who own the street cars. Between the millionaires and the employes there cannot be any peace. The employes must fight for everything they get from the bosses.

PENAL COLONY AT PANAMA FOR U. S. PRISONERS

Former Corporal Shot in Attempt to Escape

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALBOA, June 1.—That America it running a penal colony in Panama was disclosed when two former United States soldiers were shot in attempting to escape.

The colony, located on Coiba Island, on the west of Panama Bay, deserted except for the penal colony, is in charge of an American superintendent. About one hundred prisoners are confined there.

Fred M. Grant, who was sentenced to twenty years in the colony charged with murder, and discharged from the army, where until that time he served, as a corporal, tried to escape, accompanied by Jose Rodriguez, a Porto Rican soldier.

The two ex-soldiers were caught in the bush and shot down. Grant was killed and Rodriguez seriously wounded. Grant served with the U. S army at Corozol.

CHANG TSO-LIN, JAPAN PUPPET, MENACES PEKING

Feng Moves 60,000 to City's Defense

MUKDEN, June 1.—Gen. Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian chieftain, left for Peking this morning. The report caused concern.

Chang announced he would go to Peking and "arrange government changes." This was taken in Peking to mean Chang intends to oust Tuan-chi Jui, provisional chief executive.

Concern is due to the probability that Feng Yu Hsiang, Christian general, will not permit Chang Tso Lin, to have a free hand in naming a new provisional government. Trouble has been fomenting between the two for months.

When Chang announced his intentions to proceed to Peking, Feng Yu Hsiang began removing his sixty thousand soldiers from Peking and the nearby barracks, ostensibly for strategic reasons.

These troops are now mostly concentrated north of Peking along the Kalgan railroad. Chang has an equal number of troops in the Peking and Tientsin areas and can command the railroad between the two cities.

Truce in Grain Marketing War

A temporary truce was signed here today between the Illinois Agricultural Association and the Grain Marketing company before the Illinois commerce commission. The truce will be effective until July 28 when a hearing will begin before the I. C. C. in which the I. A. BOSTON P[illegible]RS' STRIKE ENDS BY BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL'S BETRAYAL AND BOSSES' VICTORY

By TOM BELL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., June 2.—The strike of union house painters, which has been in force since April 1, to enforce an increase in wages from $1.10 to $1.25 an hour, has been called off.

The 2.250 union painters have returned to work at the old rate of wages under a three-year contract which prevents strikes and forces arbitration of wage disputes after the first year. This is the three-year "peace pact" of the Building Trades Employers' Association against which the strike was called.

Painters Curse Lack of Unity.

The painters have returned to work cursing the lack of solidarity among the building trade unions who refused to fight along with them, and even refused to call the union men off of jobs on which scab painters were employed, or aid the striking painters.

Charles A. Cullen, vice-president of the Painters' International Union arranged the conference with the bosses which led to the signing of the three-year slave pledge contract.

Bosses Now to Attack All Trades.

The employers' association is jubilant over this victory and is now out to smash the strike of building laborers which started Tuesday morning. If they succeed in this, the building trade unions of this city will be bound hand and foot for the next three years.

BOSTON, Mass., June 2.—The story of the painters' strike and the situation in the building trade unions was told to the DAILY WORKER by a group of painters active in the strike as follows:

The agreements of the building trade unions with the bosses expired on April 1. Secretary Walsh of the Building Trades Employers' Association issued the slogan: No increase in wages this year. The Building Trades Council decided to demand increases to $1.25 an hour, which met with the approval of the membership of the unions.

Carpenters First to Break Line.

The Carpenters' Union was not affiliated with the Building Trades Council owing to the jurisdictional dispute with the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, and they renewed their agreement with the bosses for three years. This agreement embraces arbitration of wage questions after the first year, but no strikes are to be called.

All building trade unions affiliated with the Building Trades Council voted to strike April 1, to secure the wage increase. A conference of representatives of the bosses and the council met to discuss the matter, with the result that Secretary Johnston of the Building Trades Council sent a circular to the affiliated locals recommending that they accept the

MRS. NICK LONGWORTH, nee Alice Roosevelt, simply cannot keep out of the newspapers. She became famous by osculating the German crown prince in public. After that the rest was easy. Her latest accomplishment to merit the attention of the headline writers was when she signed her name to an advertisement for a beauty cream concern, for which Mrs. Nick gets five thousand dollars. Mrs. Nick may never have used that cream, but these women who are constantly "struggling for beauty" no matter how vainly, will still continue to hope and will purchase the cream that Mrs. Nick got $5,000 for lying about.

SEVERAL European queens and princesses are making pin money by lending their names to advertising the goods of enterprising manufacturers. This shows to what a depth royalty has fallen. And monarchy is but the hand servant of capitalism as a whole.

THE fact that Mrs. Wilhelm Kaiser paid a visit to the queen of Belgium, the first visit since her marriage to old "Me un Gott," may have political significance. Splendid testimony to the success of the social democrats. Wilhelm's cousin Nicky, is not worrying about his throne.

REGIONAL MEET OF SOCIALISTS AT CLEVELAND

Abe Cahan's $25,000 Is Bet on Bankrupt

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, June 2—The first of a series of socialist party regional conventions, financed by the Jewish Daily Forward to the extent of $25,000 in yellow bills, flew the red flag of the auctioneer, not of the revolution. The morning session consisted of a goodly crop of testimonials. All who could talk, from the colonel from Kentucky to John Willert, the polisher of Cleveland, told of their past and what a husky organization their party used to be.

Willert again, for the 666th time, related the sad story of his expulsion from the Cleveland city council by the naughty chamber of commerce, so many years ago. But a strange

BRITISH POLICE WALL AGAINST REDS PUNCTURED

Foreign Delegates Appear, Talk and Vanish

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GLASGOW, Scotland, June 2.—The boasted powers of the British government to "keep out alien reds" was mocked thruout the British Isles today since yesterday's appearance on the platform at the convention of the British Communist Party here of two fraternal delegates from brother parties of the Communist International.

Marcelle Lebel, a woman member of the leading group in the French Communist Party and Dr. Stocker from the German Communist Party appeared suddenly, delivered speeches to the convention and disappeared as suddenly as they came. The army of Scotland Yard detectives which was watching every seaport and railroad station and the squad of secret service operatives which examined every person arriving in Glasgow railroad stations, were made the joke of Britain and the subject of a part of Stocker's lecture.

"If the British government thinks it can prevent a British revolution by petty means of forbidding foreign Communists from visiting here, it is childish and absurd. Sir William Joynson-Hicks' attempt to build a great Chinese wall around the working classes of each country only makes international proletarian solidarity a hundred times stronger."

The police; as is customary, are looking for clews.

PHILADELPHIA SHOE WORKERS IN HOT FIGHT

Battle Open Shop on Picket Line

By R. BAKER.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 2.—The Shoe Workers' Protective Union of Philadelphia is facing a fresh open shop drive conducted by the bosses' association thru several small shops recently taken into the association.

The trouble started when Colton & Mennies Shoe Co. refused to recognize the union working permits and the 15 union men in the shop refused to permit anyone without a union permit to work beside them.

Discharge Answered By Strike

The union men, members of the Shoe Workers Protective Union, were fired and immediately began picketing the shop. The work of the Colton Mennies shop was taken to another association shop, the Star Shoe Co., where the organized workers refused to touch the work from a struck shop and after an argument which resulted in a threat by the boss to hang out an open shop sign outside and the firing of several fitters the entire shop walked out.

At a special union meeting it was decided to fight this strike to the limit. The spirit and enthusiasm of the strikers and the union members assures them a complete and speedy victory. The entire difference lay in the fact that the union insists that the bosses must hire only union men with union working permits.

Lots of Cash to Break Strike

It has been discovered from reliable sources that the bosses' association has a fund of $6,000 to fight this strike. The union on the other hand at a special meeting unanimously adopted an assessment of 5 per cent of the wages of all workers in the union shops to conduct a battle against this new open shop drive and in addition to that have put out demands for a 44 hour week and yearly agreements in place of the present six months agreements.

Needless to say, members of the Trade Union Educational League are actively involved both in the strike and the general fight of the union against the open shop drive.

The picket line at the Star Shoe Co., has been enlivened with several conflicts between the strikers and a few scabs that attempted to do the work abandoned by the strikers. At least one of the scabs has received a lesson that will teach him not to work during a strike again. The police as usual tried to help the scabs with but little success.

CANADIAN BOSS PRESS AGITATES R. R. WAGE CUT

Overcapitalized Lines to Lay Load on Labor

By C. McKAY

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

MONTREAL, June 2.—Canadian railway workers must beware of a drive on wages. The daily papers are whooping up the dangers of the railway situation. In 1924 the net operating revenue of the Canadian Pacific's revenues also declined.

Government statistics show that railway wages have increased only 57 per cent since 1913, the smallest increase for any representative occupation.

The Canadian National's difficulties are mainly due to overcapitalization and its vast mileage thru districts which originate little traffic.

New Bottom for 1925 Touched by Belgian and French Exchanges

NEW YORK, June 2.—French and Belgian exchanges declined to a new low for 1925 quotations in the foreign exchange market today, in continuation of their steady drop since Mar. 1.

Last week French francs dropped momentarily below the equivalent of 5 cents in American money and recovered to 5.02 cents. The opening quotation for francs today was 4.95½ cents for demand and 4.96 cents to the franc for cable exchange. Belgian francs opened at 4.85½ for demand and 4.86 cents for cables.

STOOL PIGEON WHO BOOSTED 1917 SCALE GOES TO DREAMLAND

MONESSEN, Pa., June 2.—The miners in this district are not going to accept the 1917 scale so soon as the coal barons expect them to, is shown by this little incident that took place in a mining town near here.

The coal company had hired a stool pigeon to loaf, and talk with the miners, about accepting the 1917 scale etc. He kept up his talk for some time till one of the miners in the bunch could not stand any more so he floored the bird, and sent him with the angels for several minutes.

When he woke up from his little nap he went looking for his higher up, the superintendent, who came out with a revolver, and acted hard, but no casualties were reported.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—The United States will see to it that France does not re-establish her credit, stabilize her currency, and return to the gold standard, it was hinted at the office of the secretary of the treasury, until France makes arrangements to pay her war debts to the United States.

Secretary Mellon declared he "does not believe it ever will be possible for France and other European nations to stabilize their currency without funding their seven billion dollars of indebtedness to the United States."

This statement was taken to mean that Wall Street, which holds most of the money bags of the world, will tighten its purse strings until France is forced into line.

FRANCE, SPAIN CLOSING IN ON RIFFIAN FRONTS

To Bombard Northern Coast, Use Planes

FEZ, French Morocco, June 2.—The Riffian troops have established their frontier along the north bank of the Ouergha river, and a lull has occurred in the fighting. Meanwhile, however, the Spanish and French are completing plans for a combined assault on the Moroccans, with a view to completely exterminating them.

The Spanish airplanes are dropping bombs on the newly sown and ripening crops of barley and wheat in the vicinity of Alhucemas Bay. The air squadrons leave Melilla for the Alhucemas district every day.

The Spaniards plan to land on the shores of Alhucemas Bay within a few days. They will then attempt to capture the heights of Morro Neuva, from the defending Riffian army.

The French cruiser Metz arrived off Casa Blanca, Morocco, with a convoy of torpedo boats, and is expected to bombrad the Riffians along the coast.

Primo Rivera has left for Fez, declaring he will aid in the extermination of the Riffian army.

The Riffians have brought up reinforcements on the Kiffane front, and are thought to be preparing an attack on the Fez-Taza railroad.

U. S. MARINES ORDERED TO BREAK GENERAL STRIKE OF WORKERS AT SHANGHAI AGAINST IMPERIALIS

SHANGHAI, China, June 2.—American marines, sailors ar Italian marines were landed on Chinese soil today to break th general strike called by Shanghai workers to protest against th massacre of Chinese students and workers on Nanking road b British Sikh police and to demand apology and compensatio from the international imperialists.

The diplomatic body at Peking—except Ambassador Kara khan of Soviet Russia—authorized the landing of 2,000 foreig marines if needed to break the general strike and wired suc advice to Shanghai. Two hundred U. S. marines and two hun dred Italian marines were at once landed from the four American destroyers and the Italian ship Libya, and placed on patrol duty.

U. S. Marines Break Strike for Jap Bosses.

These armed forces were assigned to the textile mill strike district, where the mill owners are Japanese and where the strike violence began by the murder of a striker by the police last week. This Hongkew district is a center of Japanese cotton spinning mills.

Martial law continues and American Consul Cunningham wirelessed a message to the American fleet now in summer practice at Chefoo to send more warships to increase the strength of the flotilla of four destroyers already here.

There are, besides these American ships, three Japanese, two French, one British and one Italian, the Libya, now here. All are of the gunboat or cruiser class.

U. S. WHITE GUARD DIES IN SHANGHAI AS CHINA WARS ON IMPERIALISTS

SHANGHAI, China, June 2.—(Bulletin)—T. G. Martin, an American dentist practicing his profession in Shanghai but acting as a member of the armed white guard of foreign businessmen called out to break the general strike, was killed while trying to ride down demonstrating strikers on Tibet Road. His horse was also killed. The other American troops opened fire with Lewis machine guns, killing many and wounding a great number.

The strike is now developing as a clash between Chinese and foreign imperialists. The whole Chinese population supports the students, except the Chinese chamber of commerce, which renegaded its first approval when the general strike was called.

Every house, lamp post, door and shutter is covered with anti-imperialist posters. Fully 25,000 workers are out with the Japanese mill workers expected to join the strike tonight. Telephone service is limping under foreign supervision. Food is becoming scarce. The council has appointed a food controller and mobilized transport facilities, calling for volunteers.

Students of Peking, Hankow, Tientsin, [illegible] and other [illegible] are rallying to support of the Shanghai strikers and making a national issue of the foreign concessions and extra-territoriality.

40,000 CHINESE WORKERS OUT IN GENERAL STRIKE AS MORE U. S. WARSHIPS RUSH TO BATTLE SCENE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, June 2.—Dr. T. G. McMartin of Seattle, Wash., a member of the American troop of volunteer corps, sustained a minor wound today when Chinese fired on a mounted patrol.

Following the shooting the "volunteers" turned a machine gun on the New World Theater where the Chinese workers were hidden and raked the building with hundreds of shots wounding three natives.

Hundreds were arrested, but all except fourteen were released following questioning.

The general strike is spreading rapidly and it was estimated tonight that 40,000 are out.

The American sailors landed today are guarding the power station.

The U. S. S. Huron and other ships of the U. S. fleet are expected tomorrow and two British destroyers are enroute here from Pi-Hai-Pi.

CHICAGO STREET CARMEN VOTE 'NO' ON WAGE SLASH

Union Heads Conferring with Company Officials

Employes of the Chicago Surface Lines voted unanimously at a meeting held in Carmen's Hall to reject the wage agreement offered by the company, which calls for a reduction in wages of five cents an hour and changes in schedules that would unfavorably affect the present working conditions of the men.

The union's contract with the company expired on June 1. Any agreement entered into will become retroactive as from June 1. President William Quinlan announced that a committee from the union will meet with the company and endeavor to affect an agreement. This will be referred to the men thru referendum ballot.

CROUCH TO TAKE FIGHT BEFORE FEDERAL COURT

Red Soldiers Jailed in Violation of Law

By PAUL CROUCH.

HAWAII, Honolulu, 27th Infantry Guard House, June 2.—The next move in the fight of Comrade Trumbull and myself for freedom of speech and thought in the army will be action in the federal courts here. Our release will be demanded on the grounds that we were convicted for violation of the laws of Hawaii (by organizing the Hawaiian Communist League, alleged to be a secret society).. According to military law, no one is subject to state or territorial law for his conduct while on a government reservation.

We have received no official notice of the reduction of our sentences. We know nothing of the cut except from the newspaper stories.

Fate Is Uncertain.

The intention of the military authorities concerning those who were released without trial—Ebert, Creque, Domagalski, and Nadeau—is uncertain. An announcement was made that three soldiers (presumably Ebert, Creque and Domagalski) would be discharged for their connection with us. But they have been called before officials for examination and questioning several times and are ignorant of their fate at the hands of the authorities. Schwartz was returned to duty after two or three weeks at hard labor and apparently no action will be taken against him.

Demand Freedom.

Army regulations were violated by our confinement and trial. Regulations state that charges must be brot within eight days after arrest and trial within ten days after the charges have been made. But charges were not brot against us until March 10, despite our arrest on February 19. And I was not brot to trial until about twenty days after the charges were made against me.

Coolidge Plans to Force Hard Terms on French Debtors

preliminary negotiations with the United States have demanded better terms than were accorded Great Britain, but the American debt commission will consider the Great Britain settlement the basis for other negotiations, Mellon announced.

The settlement with Great Britain provided for debt payments extending over a period of 62 years, with a minimum interest rate of three per cent.

The American debt funding commission will hold no meetings abroad, it was announced by state and treasury officials.

Cal Agrees to Plan

WASHINGTON, June 2.—President Coolidge agrees with Secretary of State Kellogg, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and other members of the American debt commission that any debt negotiations between the United States and other governments should be held in Washington, it was stated officially at the White House today.

While it was explained that the president regarded the place for holding negotiations as a question to be decided solely by the commission, officials said there was no disposition to send American debt negotiators either to Paris or London for a conference on the French debt.

upbearable conditions in the mills.

Resent Invasion of China.

The circulars also denounced as an insult and aggression the meeting of the foreign tax-payers which today met under the protection of 500 white guards at the city hall, where machine guns menaced the streets filled with Chinese, while the foreign taxpayers deliberated upon further curtailment of the rights of the Chinese in their own country. The points were the censorship by license of Chinese newspapers and printshops, and an increase of wharfage charges to favor the foreign companies against the Chinese.

The meeting failed to bring a quorum, and adjourned after passing a vote of confidence in the municipal council for its declaration of martial law.

London Hears More Murdered.

LONDON, June 2—Dispatches to the Exchange Telegraph from Shanghai reports that martial law today led to further bloodshed when volunteer white guards and international police attacked demonstrating crowds in an effort to forbid all groups of Chinese over seven persons from gathering on the Shanghai streets. The police fired into the crowds killing twenty and wounding many more.

World Becomes Normal When Workers Join for Overthrow of Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, altho Coolidge repeatedly reiterates that he will have nothing to do with the Workers' Republics, nevertheless, big business worries exceedingly much about Soviet trade conditions.

James L. Patten, Chicago's multi-millionaire wheat gambler, is quoted as saying that as long as Russia remains out of the grain market, the grain trade of the world is likely to be periodically settled and nervous.

A financial writer, in replying to numerous inquiries he, claims to have received about Russian conditions, asks himself a question and then replies to himself as follows:

> "When, then, will Russia again be normal in the grain trade, normal in exports and imports, normal in home enterprise, normal in development of her resources? Not until the Russians change their business principles and the business character of their rulers."

• • • •

No matter how much big business, and its government at Washington, tries to dismiss the problem forced upon it by the existence of Soviet Rule, nevertheless it is there. Even the "expert" writers of the kept press, paid to hide the repeated crisis that confront capitalism, confess that Bolshevism must go or capitalism will continue "unsettled and nervous." To be sure they dare not hint that capitalism must go. But that is the real alternative. It is either Communism or capitalism.

• • • •

Reports from the Soviet Republics indicate that the harvest days are coming in with bumper crops. Soviet Rule will this year be in the world market with huge exports of grain of all kinds.

That should make all capitalists nervous, especially since crops in the rest of the world are not so good, which will result in high prices. That means that Soviet Rule will be able to get new finances to keep up the work of reconstruction, to improve the life of the peasant. That means strengthening Bolshevism in its struggle against capitalism.

• • • •

The oil wells under the Red Flag are gushing petroleum at a rate that was never known in the days of czarism. Huge exports are going to many foreign lands. Even Rockefeller's Standard Oil Trust has bought its share.

The American oil business will gulp down just ten billion gallons of gasoline this year, 1925. That is 15 per cent more than last year, and automobiles, tractors, airplanes and oil-burning ships are being turned out in added quantities in this country, calling for more oil, at higher prices. The Soviets have oil to sell; the oil that the capitalist world needs, the oil that the capitalist world is compelled to buy, that it will pay increasingly good prices for, providing Soviet Rule with added strength to reconstruct and build.

• • • •

The capitalist world says the Soviet world does not treat it "fairly," whatever that means. What the capitalists desire, it appears, is to invade and conquer the Soviet world with their capitalism, without allowing the Soviet world to permeate their territory with its Bolshevism. British imperialism, for instance, tried to stop the advance of Communism by denying admittance to foreign Communist delegates to attend to British Communist Party's convention at Glasgow. But the German and French delegates arrived in Glasgow just the same. They spoke for the German and French workers. They told of the conflicts within the capitalist world, of the workings of the Dawes plan, of the war in Morocco, of the necessity for the workers everywhere to end the rule of capitalism everywhere.

• • • •

Let us paraphrase the declaration quoted above of the finance expert of capitalism's own press and put it this way:

When, then, will the world be normal in the grain trade, normal in exports and imports, normal in home enterprise, normal in development of her resources? Not until the world changes its business principles and the business character of its rulers; until capitalism that breeds imperialist rivalries, foments world wars on an ever-increasing scale, and threatens all civilization, has been overthrown and the rule of the World Union of Soviet Republics established in its stead. The issue is, "Communism or capitalism must go!" Very well, let capitalism go!

Strike of Boston Painters Ends

three-year no-increase contract offered by the bosses.

Trades Council and Open Shoppers Work Together.

Most of the unions being intimidated by the "open shop" threat of the bosses and the stand adopted by Secretary Johnston, accepted the agreement. Those who refused were the painters, building laborers, electricians and plumbers.

The Building Trades Council further weakened any chance of a real fight being put up by declaring that no support would be given any union that went on strike. All trades returned to work pending negotiations except the painters.

Council Forces Scabbing.

Mass meetings of union painters voted unanimously to strike for the increase. On April 4 the strike was called and 2,200 painters answered the call. The bosses immediately hired as many scabs as possible to fill the places of the union men.

The business agent of the painters' union asked the council to order all union men off the jobs employing scab painters. This the council refused to do and the Painters' Union withdrew from the council. Many union men who refused to work along with scab painters were threatened with fines and expulsions if they did not return to work.

Some Queer Voting Results.

Some firms agreed to the new scale and about 700 painters were at work at the increased wages, and paid an essessment of $2.50 a day during the strike.

International officials of the Painters' Union immediately busied themselves attempting a settlement and at last succeeded. A secret ballot taken by the union was declared to have resulted in 500 voting to return to work at the bosses' terms while 300 voted against.

The three-year contract ties the painters securely and the arbitration fraud will aid the bosses in keeping their wages at the same level during the life of the agreement.

Amalgamation or Annihilation.

The result of the whole thing, filled with jurisdictional squabbles, traitorous officials, and lack of solidarity, is that the building trade unions here are weaker today than before April 1. The disgust of the painters at the betrayal of the Building Trades Council and their withdrawal from the council will further increase the confusion and distrust among the unions. The need for education of all trades upon the amalgamation program of the Trade Union Educational League is more pressing than ever before.

GOLDEN WEST NOT EXACTLY PLACE OF HAPPINESS

Unemployed Find No Work Anywhere

PORTLAND, Ore., June 2.— Even that despicable company union and blacklist organization called the "Four L-s" has to admit that industry in Oregon is slowing down. With loggers being laid off at many camps and a marked slump in the demand for labor in fishing, mining and other industries, employment is becoming harder than ever to get in the promised land of the Northwest.

Men are coming up the coast from California to add to the already acute situation. East of the Cascade range, employment is at its maximum. Sawmills and camps are fairly filled, but with the lull between planting and harvest farm work is slack.

Marshfield reports one large fir logging camp closed. Thompson-Kelly mill shut down. Cedar operations slowing. Sawmills reducing forces. Veneer plants laid off the night shift. Farm work has, however, absorbed some unemployed.

Along the Columbia river several falling and bucking crews are laid off. Both camps of the Whitney company on the Tillamook line are closed. Labor turnover in lumber is decreasing. There is little call for farm labor.

IRISH FLUNKEY IS TREATED TO SCRAMBLED EGG

Gets Stale Hen Fruit on Nice Clean Uniform

NEW YORK, June 2—General Owen O'Duffy, chief commissioner of the Irish civic guard, spent a busy time dodging over-ripe duck eggs yesterday while reviewing the 165th infantry, formerly known as the the "Fighting Sixty-Ninth."

The missiles hurled at the general were understood to be meant as a silent tho odoriferous protest against the presence of a representative of the Free State government which is looked upon by the Irish masses as a tool of British imperialism.

Several plain clothes policemen, most of them of Irish extraction, routed their more rebellious countrymen and women and saved the general from an overdose of scrambled eggs.

Eleven Known Dead in Middlewestern Electric Storms

Eleven dead and a score injured, several probably fatally, was the toll left in the midwest today in the wake of a gradually diminishing heat wave which yesterday sent thermometers thruout the district climbing to new high marks for June 1.

The heat and the severe electrical and wind storms which brought some measure of relief, claimed four lives in Chicago, three in Cleveland, two in Des Moines, Ia., and two near Wayland, Mo.

Western Iowa was the center of a violent wind and electrical storm which played havoc in that region and in eastern Nebraska and southwestern Minnesota. As the storm moved east, the fury of the wind abated and at Des Moines, lightning took the human toll.

Missouri and southeastern Kansas also paid tribute to the wind in lives and property damage. Missouri's victims were killed when their rig was swept from the road by the gale. No loss of life was reported from Kansas.

Would Postpone Trial of Raper in Indiana Klan

son, Carl Klinck and Earl Gentry, charged with the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, was continued today from June 11 to June 16.

In agreeing to the postponement Judge Hines of the Hamilton court set aside three days for the hearing starting June 16 and emphatically asserted it must be ended within the allotted time.

William H. Remy, Marion county prosecutor, who asked for the continuance, during the proceedings heatedly asserted that if defense attorneys were anxious to have their clients released soon "the state is willing to stick all the motions together and start the trial immediately."

He got no reply.

OSLO DENIES RUMOR AMUNDSEN HAS RETURNED FROM NORTH POLE

OSLO, Norway, June 2.—Authoritative denial was made today by government officials of reports that the Amundsen-Ellsworth north pole flyers had returned to Spitzbergen, and that one of the six members of the party had been killed. It was officially stated "there is no news."

KLUXERS BEAT CREW OF NEGRO SHIP; COPS AID

Negro Preachers Work with Employers

JACKSONVILLE,. Fla., June 2.—(By Mail)—The "Negro" ship, the "Booker T. Washington" of the Black Cross Line, has been driven from the port here after 36 policemen, together with members of the ku klux klan and carrying orders of the mayor, had come aboard and brutally assaulted members of the crew.

The police, after severely clubbing the Negro sailors and ordering the ship to depart, returned the next morning in a launch to repeat the order, which had not been obeyed because of the necessity of coaling.

Employers engaged in exploiting Negro workers at starvation wages in this seaport, are said to have feared that many Negro workers intended to leave Jacksonville on the ship. Negro preachers who are agents in disguise for the white employers, served as tools to start the trouble.

These preachers provided the smoke screen by raising objection to the dances which were being held every night on board the ship. Accustomed to appropriating the spare change of the Negroes hereabouts, the colored ministers said the ship's crew had no right to charge fifty cents for admission to the dances.

The Black Cross Line is a steamship company organized by the Universal Negro Improvement Association as a successor to the "Black Star Line," dissolved by the United States government on the ground that the selling of stock in the company was fraudulent, the stock being declared worthless.

Marcus Garvey, president of the Negro organization, is in the U. S. government penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., serving a ten-year sentence on the ground that he used the mails to defraud. Agitation for his release and for the cessation of the persecution of the Negro association has reached a great intensity among Negro workers. The recent call of the Workers (Communist) Party for a united front of all Negro and white workers to put an end to the persecutions and to demonstrate for the release of Garvey, has penetrated into this section and aroused much favorable comment among the wharf workers.

Shepherd Trial Drags Into Third Week Without Jury

The trial of William D. Shepherd on an indictment charging murder for the death of William Nelson McC[illegible]ock was in its thirteenth day with its status virtually unchanged from more than a week ago.

Four sworn jurors, accepted eight days ago, were in the box and two other veniremen tentatively accepted by the state, awaited examination by the defense when the proceedings were resumed. Neither state nor defense, both worn weary by the tedious effort to empanel an acceptable jury, were willing to venture an opinion as to how long it might be before the actual taking of testimony would begin.

The only other interest in the case centered on the finding of Robert White, missing witness, claimed by both the state and defense, but even this had simmered down to a waiting game with defense attorneys looking mysteriously wise when questioned about it. White was known to have been in Pittsburgh yesterday, supposedly ready to return, but where he was today again became a question.

BOMB SQUAD THROWS TWO BOXES IN RIVER, FAKING ANOTHER 'PLOT'

NEW YORK, June 2.—Fears of a plot to blow up the city's transit lines were expressed by police today following the discovery of two mysterious wooden boxes on the Third Ave. elevated line. Believing the boxes to be infernal machines, police threw them into the East River.

One was on the 99th Street station and the other was on the 89th Street station.

One of the detectives sent to examine the boxes said he received a shock while picking one of them up. The boxes were first put into pails of water and later thrown into the east river without being opened.

Someone is probably looking for the crates today.

Police then began a search of all subway and elevated stations "to make certain the boxes were not part of a concerted plan of bomb throwers," they announced.

Forward Invests $75,000 in Bankrupt

silence was noticeable regarding the expulsion of 40,000 members of the language federations, and the states of Ohio and Michigan by the socialist party national executive committee in 1919, because of their loyalty to the revolution which gave us Soviet Russia.

Not at All Promising.

Now the socialist party comes back to Ohio, laments its weakness and complains about loss of vitality. Cut the vitals out of an organism and it is not going to function long thereafter. And when the socialist party lost its militants, lost those who could tell an honest-to-goodness revolution when it occurred, lost the army of actives who demanded affiliation with the Third International, then it itself was lost. Today it lives on hopes for a resurrection. It is so far gone that even the quack political doctors that possess it look at it askance and wonder when it will kick its last.

The Cleveland regional convention proved this party bankrupt in principles and policies, in revolutionary spirit and activity. The national executive committee of the socialist party, tho represented, understood its main duty at the convention to be to get subscriptions for the new weekly the national headquarters intends to issue.

Nary an Idea.

Did it read an analysis of the present situation in the United States, the inroads that class collaboration is making into the unions, the open shop offensive of the capitalists, the coming war and the imperialisms of the major powers? Not a word! Did it even review its heralded victories in Belgium, its coalition with French imperialism, its "stabilization" policy in Germany which has now thrown fatty Hindenburg into its lap? Not a word! Mind you, a regional convention of the party and not a line of theoretical, or even organizational direction from headquarters.

The comrades came to see Debs. He presided. And the feature of the afternoon session was not a debate upon how to broaden the daily demands of the workers in an effort to lead them to revolution, but the presentation of a nice big cake to Gene. The ridiculousness of the situation, the whole local of Jamestown, N. Y., (eleven members, count them!) coming to Cleveland with a cake for Debs, nicely tucked away among the delegations' shirts and undies, a portly woman comrade marching down the aisle of the so-called mass convention of one hundred, handing the big heart-shaped cake to Gene—it could only have been funnier if she, in approved movie slapstick style, had thrown the cake at him.

Days of Miracles Not Past.

There was an agenda. Organization, propaganda, American Appeal, finance,—this was it. The pearl contributed upon the question of organization was by one Stelly, who had just come from Yonkers, N. Y., where, be claimed, he has just organized a socialist party local of 150 members (Krumbein, please note!). The modus operandi was: 1. Enter the town. 2. Look up the comrades. 3. Get a list of citizens. 4. Call on them personally, fill them full of enthusiasm, good will, optmism, bring them to tears if possible and sign them up!

Under propaganda, Van Essen of Pittsburgh suggested that the party at least ought to organize study classes. With this we could not disagree as we, one after another, heard these many mouths utter sweet nothings. The American Appeal, the national weekly which is to be born in January, 1926, caused the only heated discussion, for Jos. Sharts of the Miami Valley Socialist was present, and he wanted some consideration for his sheet. But, and this is peculiar,—a delegate from Pittsburgh arose and made a real argument for centralization. Sharts lost. Some socialist party member must be sitting in on us in Pittsburgh, we fear. All the towns pledged themselves to secure thousands of subscribers, and so ended this number on the program.

The Yellow Angel of Counter Revolution.

Tho the Jewish Daily Forward, that veteran assassin of Soviet Russia had ladled out $25,000 to again inflate the party, the comrades were given to understand, under the discussion of finances, that their dollars would have to fly to the rescue of the yellow thousands of the Forward would not last long. May we make a guess? May we guess that the Forward $25,000 was given with certain stipulations? May we go so far as to say that one of these stipulations is to soft pedal all refernce to Soviet Russia?

For at the mass meeting next day, the four speakers occupied the rostrum—Sharts, Kirkpatrick, Harkins and Debs—only Debs mentioned Soviet Russia and he only once. There was an immediate burst of applause, but when he linked this Soviet country with England and Germany in the same breath, this applause died as spontaneously as it had arisen.

The Class War—What For? Eh, George.

Geo. R. Kirkpatrick, the spellbinder, the champion money getter and literature seller of the party, worked awfully hard to sell the American Appeal to the mass meeting. The audience remained frozen in its seats. Out of 1,500 people present, comrades a few, the rest coming to attend the celebration in honor of Debs' fifty years in the labor movement, only two took five Appeal cards each, and several more took two cards each. Kirkpatrick was exasperated—quite wild, we would add. And his closing remark was—"Sit there and do nothing and we'll get nothing and get nowhere." But the audienec could. not help it. That's the kind of a party it is.

Leo Harkins next tried his hand at a collection. Tho many in the audience could have given $500 easily, when he asked for this sum, none gave. Nor did any of the many middle class participants give even $100, or $50, or $25 or even $10. When donations of $5 weer asked for two hands went up.

Diagnosis of Disease.

Joseph Sharts, as chairman, was also not a howling success. Why should a chairman of a party that is trying to stage a comeback say, confess rather, that if anything could kill us we would have certainly killed ourselves because we chased rainbows, were misled by emotionalism, followed false leaders up blind alleys. Then he referred to the audience as the international union of grave diggers with Debs as its business agent.

The grave they were digging trying to dig capitalism's and it was a big one—and so the thot arose that the social democrats were not even good grave diggers, for in all instances where they had been given an opportunity to bury capitalism, they had failed to cover the corpse.

Debs—A Relic of Past.

When Debs came in all arose. But there was no cheering. A solemn manifestation of good will towards the veteran. Debs made his usual speech. Sharts had referred to the Debs' Canton speech for which Debs was indicted and imprisoned, mentioning the persecution of Ruthenberg, Wagenknecht, and Baker in the Canton workhouse as the incident which made Debs' speech at Canton particularly bitter. Debs talked long about his trial, imprisonment, and in his usual characteristic way, stated and restated that he felt no resentment nor bitterness towards anyone who had caused his incarceration.

Not at all an attitude to develop struggle and militancy among the workers, we would say. His speech dealt with no concrete situation of the day, no exposition of the battle of the workers upon dozens of fronts, from the colonies in the East to the workers under the heel of imperialism in the West. Just generalities, some moralizing plenty of platitudes, play of words.

Socialists and Police Unite Against Daily Worker.

The local socialists had entered into a united front with the Cleveland police department, and arriving upon the scene with immense bundles of the DAILY WORKER, we were prohibited from disposing of them. The lieutenant of police frankly informed us that the socialists had requested protection against us, not only at the hall entrance, but for blocks either way from the hall. The first order issued was not to allow any lfterature or periodical to. be sold or given away. This order prohibited the disposal of not only the DAILY WORKER, but Sharts' weekly also was made to suffer.

The next order that came forth after we had demonstrated our opposition and the police officer had called up headquaretrs, was that we could give away the papers but could not sell them. The gareement the police made with the socialists undoubtedly was that nothing should be sold near the hall. When we arrived with a daily, this agreement would hardly hold water. And so as not to violate the agreement made with the soicalists and to save their faces, the police allowed everyone to give away their wares.

Bankrupt Needs Auctioneer.

This first regional convention is interesting as an indicator of socialist party methods. The aim is, to build a party. The socialist way to do this is, not to talk much class struggle for this may drive some away; not to take a concrete stand upon anything, because all may not agree; not to say anything about Soviet Russia because altho some may welcome a few words in its favor, others will object. Eschew principles, policies and action—bring them all into the fold—what we want is a crowd and a mailing list for the weekly, that's all. These are the slogans of the socialist party, at one time a big business, now bankrupt and flying the red flag of the auctioneer, not of revolt.

STATE AND COOK COUNTY CROOKS CONTINUE FIGHT

Control of the Assembly Goal of Politicians

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 2.—Cook county's revamped battle cry of "no taxation without representation" was characterized at the state capitol today as "childish prattle" nurtured to the full bloom of hallucination by political policies dominating a Chicago newspaper organization.

Commenting on the action of the Cook county commissioner in directing County Treasurer Patrick J. Carr to withhold almost $5,000,000 of taxes now due the state, Governor Len Small declared the board had no authority to issue instructions to the treasurer and that the treasurer would "continue to pay the taxes just as he had in the past, always as late as possible."

"For ten years," the governor continued, "Cook county has been in arrears with her state taxes."

"This reference to secessation from the state means nothing. As long as I am governor, Cook county will be a part of Illinois. I need cook county and Cook county needs me."

Iowa Storms Kill Several, Damage Crops and Homes

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

DES MOINES, Ia., June 2—Several dead, scores injured, property destruction estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars, and a virtually unbroken drouth in western Iowa, today marked the paths of a series of violent thunderstorms that swept this state late yesterday.

Peter Brown, farmer, and George Stephenson, were killed by lightning in Des Moines. Stephenson died of heart failure when a bolt struck near him. Two other persons were stunned. One of them was Pat Wilcox, 18, a golfer.

Fourteen were injured and $250,000 damage was done at Sioux City by an 85-mile wind.

Two were hurt and great property damage done at Waterloo.

A $100,000 fire was caused by an early morning storm today at Cedar Rapids.

Crazy Jurior Delays Trial

LINCOLN, Ill., June 2.—His trial suddenly halted when Richard Seefeldt, a juryman, suddenly became mentally deranged, Joe Gardner, charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, Steven Hunter, was informed today a new panel of petit jurors had been ordered to report Monday for continuance of the case. Seefeldt's condition was discovered when he began singing loudly, talking incoherently and making wild statements about the trial.

Teachers Must Obey

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 2.—William Jennings Bryan, declared "there is no such thing as evolution," as he passed thru here on his way to Champaign. "This teaching of evolution and the increasing insignificance attached to god almighty by schools i general is the live issue of the day," Bryan said.

"A teacher must respect the wishes of his employers on all subjects upon which the employers have deep-seated convictions."

Doheny to be Let Off.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—The United States may not prosecute Edward L. Doheny for the return of the Elks Hill naval reserve lease any further, it is announced here. The case will probably be settled out of court.

N.Y. Sets Payroll Pay Loss Pace

By JAY LOVESTONE

NEW YORK is again setting the pace. This time it is in the payroll loss and in the decrease of employment for the last month. Most of the industrial districts show declines in employment and payroll for the last month. But the New York losses are bigger than the average, according to the figures just made public by the New York state industrial Commissioner, James A. Hamilton.

From March to April factory payrolls showed a big loss. For the week of April 15, wages of forty percent of the factory workers show a drop of $5,000,000. This is a loss of 4 per cent in one month. At the same time the total employment of the state dropped two per cent.

THE tendency in New York state is significant especially in view of the fact that the general industrial situation in the country is usually estimated by striking the average of the conditions in the empire state with the figures of the United States bureau of labor statistics.

Precisely a year ago the decline marking the worst phase of the last depression had begun. Then, the wage decrease was about the same as this year, tho the 1925 drop in employment is not as big as the corresponding drop of last year.

The average factory wage for April in New York was $27.65 per week. This is approximately the same wage received by the workers at this time in 1924. In the metal industry, however, especially in the ship yards, the wages are lower than last year. The automobile industry is the only one to show any substantial increase in wages over last year.

THE women workers of the state have been hit harder by the wage reductions than the men. In the clothing shops, shoe and textile industry the wages of women workers suffered marked reductions last month.

The copper mills, the railway equipment shops, the hardware factories, and the heating apparatus manufactories showed the heaviest losses in the metal industry. It is interesting to note that this decline in the metal industry has been continuous since February.

The curtailment of production was also evident in the textile industry which reported reductions thru nearly every line of manufacture.

Ordinarily the workers engaged in the turning out of building materials show an increase in wages at this time of the year. This year no such increases are reported. In the brick yards part time is very noticeable. Within the last year wages have dropped in this industry from $24.39 to $19.70 a week.

THE two clothing centers of the state, Rochester and New York City, show losses in payrolls. In New York City the loss was seven per cent and in Rochester it was six per cent.

The heavy New York payroll loss compares with a loss of 0.2 per cent in the Illinois industrial district for last month. But the loss in the latter section has been continuous. New York also led the Illinois industrial district in the extent of the decrease of number employed. The latter section showed a loss of 1.3 per cent for the same time as compared with New York's loss of two per cent.

Economists the country over are keeping eye on industrial developments in New York which has always been considered somewhat of a weathervane in the economic developments of the country.

NO SLACKNESS IN CHICAGO'S BUILDING WORK

Ten Million More This May Than Last May

More than $42,000,000 in new buildings was authorized during May, according to the records of Commissioner of Buildings Frank E. Doherty. This is $10,000,000 more than was authorized in May last year and is at the rate of $1,500,000 for each working day.

Altho the total operations are slightly less than the April record, the decrease does not mean that the unprecedented boom is beginning to subside, said Chief Plan Examiner Edward H. Nordlie.

Permits for 3,231 apartments and 904 residences were granted during the month, making a total of 15,485 new apartments and 4,249 residences since the first of the year. During the same period last year new apartments numbered 13,700, while new residences total 3,650.

ALLIES' NOTE TO REICH DELAYED FOR TWO DAYS

Charges Germany with "Illegal" Armed Force

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, June 2.— Germany must wait two days longer for the delivery of the long-awaited disarmament note from the council of ambassaodrs.

Because of the absence from Berlin of Foreign Minister Stresemann the note will not be delivered until Thursday, instead of today as scheduled.

The Luther government has requested France to delay publication of the note, giving the conditions with which Germany must comply before evacuation of Cologne, at least twenty hours and preferably twenty-four hours after its official delivery.

The note will charge Germany with maintaining a larger force than she agreed to under the peace treaty. France is making the note an excuse for keeping an army in Cologne.

LABOR DEFENSE IN APPEAL FOR NATIONAL DRIVE forgotten.

Many Cases to Fight.

Rangel and Cline, in a Texas prison since long before the war, have been neglected by the movement for activity in which they were imprisoned.

Sacco and Vanzetti are in the shadow of the gallows. Fred Merrick and nine other Communists in Pittsburgh are this moment facing prison; Ruthenberg, Foster and the thirty other Communist defendants in the Michigan trials, are still in jeopardy.

Two Hawaiian soldiers, Crouch and Trumbull, have been sentenced to brutal terms in prison for their sympathy with the workers' movement.

Hundreds of foreign-born workers are being deported for their activities in the labor movement.

In other lands, scores of thousands, the victims of the white terror, cry out for help.

Defends Class Prisoners.

Why do so many of the best fighters of the working class languish in prison? Why are the instruments of organized capital able so easily to frame up and keep in long confinement some of the ablest and most active exponents of the cause of the workers? Why are the victims of capitalist conspiracy forgotten and their families neglected? Because the forces of protest are not organized.

Because there is no agressive movement to keep the workers of America alive to the need of defense and to recall to them that many brave and forgotten fighters still lie behind prison bars.

The executive committee of the Labor Defense Council, realising the need for such a movement, issues the call for a national conference to convene at 10 a. m. on June 28, 1925, in Ashland Auditorium, Chicago, and that invitations be extended to all existing defense organizations, individuals who have distinguished themselves in the struggle against persecution and for amnesty, ex-political and industrial prisoners, and all working class organizations.

Institute Nation-Wide Campaign.

The conference shall devise ways and means to:

1. Initiate and centralize nation-wide campaigns for amnesty of all class war prisoners, for the repeal of all criminal syndicalism laws, to oppose anti-labor legislation, and against persecution and deportation of foreign-born workers.

2. Collect material and give publicity to all facts pertaining to working class persecution, to publicly expose brutal treatment of political prisoners and expose secret anti-labor activities, such as labor spy systems, etc.

3. Provide legal and moral aid to all workers attacked for expression of opinion or for working class activity.

4. Give material and moral aid and comfort to all prisoners who have been incarcerated for expression of opinion or for working class activity.

Protest Against White Terror.

5. Supply material support for the families and dependants of such prisoners.

6. Protest against terrorist activities against workers in other lands, and to give moral and financial aid wherever possible to the victims of such terror.

7. Merge all forces willing to cooperate in this work into a broad national organization, based upon individual and collective membership that will stand as an ever-willing and ever-ready champion for the defense of all workers, regardless of their political opinions or affiliations, attacked thru the courts, or otherwise, for their activities in the labor movement.

Called On June 28.

The Labor Defense Council believes that this conference will realize these aims. It is fully confident that supporters of this proposal will come forward in imposing numbers and make the conference of June 28 the starting point for a great defense organ that will unify all forces friendly to the American workers' movement into a solid bulwark against the attacks of predatory capital upon any and all workers of whatever belief or affiliation.

Rally to the support of the June 28 conference!

Unite all forces for Labor Defense!

The Work of the Agitprop Organizer - - - By M. Rafes

By M. RAFES.

AT the present time, when many sections are undergoing extensive reorganization on the factory nucleus basis, it is a suitable moment to raise the organizatory questions involved by the various forms of agitation and propaganda work in the factory nuclei.

The creation of factory nuclei opens out fresh opportunities of mass agitation to the party. Here we can divide the totality of the workers in shops and factories into several categories: 1. Members of the party and of the Communist youth organizations; 2. A considerable number of workers sympathyzing with and supporting the party, reading our party literature regularly or irregaulrly, but not joining our organizations; 3. The mass of neutral workers, influenced but slightly either by our propaganda or by the propaganda of parties hostile to us; 4. Those who sympathize with and support other parties organizing the working masses, and finally; 5. The members of these party organizations.

It is obvious that we must differentiate our work with the utmost care in order to adapt it to these various strata of the working class. The formation of the factory nucleus is the first prerequisite for an organized influence to be exercised upon the whole of these strata, enabling their various trends of thought and feeling to be recognized, and enabling work to be properly organized and distributed among the Communists employed in any given workshop or factory. Agitation and propaganda work are exceedingly complicated, and demands a careful calculation of the forces at our disposal, a careful discussion of the causes of this or that success or failure. The factory nucleus must possess a special organ, competent to regulate, prepare, and lead the whole of this work.

THE most important form of preparation for Agitprop work among party members consists of systematic party education, and in the study of the fundamental principles of the party program and party tactics. Workers sympathizing with the party must be invited to take part in every meeting and every session of the factory cells, and on every such occasion some question of general political life or some matter pertaining to the factory or shop should be discussed. This must not be done in the form of an agitation speech, but must be a carefully prepared report explaining the connection between the urgent daily question under discussion and our program and main lines of tactics, and thus enabling generalizations to be drawn from the events of daily work, and the audience induced to take part in the discussion of the most important questions of our party work. An intimate acquaintance with the whole of the members of a nucleus renders it possible to select those members possessing superior abilities and most closely connected with the party, and to form separate circles for the study of the theory and practice of Leninist Marxism. (See Syllabus for Elementary Party Courses, published in "Inprecorr." No. 5, January 15, 1925.)

THE best of these comrades should then be selected for training in the party schools or educational opportunities provided by the organization. From time to time burning questions of the day may be made the opportunity for organising large meetings, and at these similar reports should be given, but in a more popular form, and approaching nearer to an agitation speech.

WHAT is known as "individual agitation, plays an important role in influencing persons sympathizing with the party. The organ entrusted with the Agitprop work must prepare the necessary material, and the nucleus bureau organizes this individual work. Every Communist is "allotted" one or more of these sympathizers, and it is his duty to enter into conversation as often as possible with these, to visit them at their houses, and to discuss questions of interest to them from the standpoint of the party. This is the best preparation for the entry of such sympathizers into the party.

The distribution of party literature, including the factory newspaper, is one of the very most important branches of mass agitation and propaganda. The propagation of our literature must be carefully thought out and organized. It is an entirely inadequate procedure to simply give a workman a single copy of a newspeper, periodical or pamphlet; the impression made by its perusal must be carefully noted, conversation must be entered into on the subject, doubts explained, etc. This is best accomplished when the distribution of party literature is so organized that one and the same person invariably undertakes the work in a certain vocational group of a factory or works, or in a certain group of workers. Here it must not be forgotten to take into account the difficulties incident to this work, the necessity of counteracting as far as possible the reprisals undertaken by the works, mangament or the police.

It is very necessary to keep up a continuous search for fresh fields of agitation for the party. The attempt must be made to make use of the bars and restaurants frequented by the workers of the works of factory in question. It is possible to use these places for the distribution of literature, and for some forms of mass agitation.

IMPROMPTU meetings and organized meetings must also be accorded their place. But not these alone. The experience won in the mass work of the Russian revolution has led to the development of two forms of work forming the greatest attraction for the great non-party labor press: the "verbal newspaper" and the "agitation trials."

The nucleus co-operates with the youth organization to organize small groups of workers (including non-party groups) in the careful preparation of this form of agitation for without this it cannot be successful. A small group of editors is organized, and these divide the roles among them: leading arctile, current news, telegrams from the Soviet Union, factory notes, humorous supplement, letters from the country, etc. For each of these departments a five minutes' article in the liveliest possible form is required and an editors' meeting is arranged, etc.

The agitation trial requires careful perparation and frequently resembles a theatrical performance. Roles are divided, masks frequently worn, and then some person or body is put on trial: the Russian proletariat, a social democratic minister, the social democratic party, a factory owner, etc. This is to be so arranged that there are judges, public attorney, defending barrister, witnesses for and against, etc.

IT will be seen that various forms of agitation and propaganda work may be created. Every form requires careful preparation, organization and study, and thus implies the formation of a special organ. The nucleus work done in the Russian C. P. during the last few years has led to the development of a form of organization of this description in the "organiser of agitation and propaganda work" (Agitpaop organizer), aided by a small commission. This Agitprop organiser has to be a member of the nucleus bureau, and is appointed by this bureau for this work. The commission is formed of three to five members of the nucleus. The Agitprop organizer collaborates with the commission in working out their scheme of work, and submits this to the nucleus bureau for confirmation. The commission divides the various departments of work among its members, and meets regularly for the purpose of giving an account of work done and exchanging experiences. The Agitprop organizer must give a regular account of his work to the nucleus bureau, and finally to the general meeting of the nuclei as well. At the present time it is still impossible to determine all the details of this work.

We intend to submit this question to the whole of our nuclei for careful discussion, and expect that the experience gained within the next few months will enable us to lay down more definite rules for the best forms of work and organization.

A. F. OF L. FAKERS FRIGHTENED AS PURCELL COMES

Begin Reading Report on Russian Visit

American Federation of Labor, many of the biggest industrial corporations in the United States and in all quarters where the vast Russian experiment in working class rule is being watched, this report is now being read. Friends and foes are getting ready for Purcell's visit.

Who Purcell Is.

In the front section of the 250-page volume containing this latest report by spokesmen of British labor on the Soviet state, Purcell is described as a member of the furnishing trades since 1891; a member, many years, of the social democratic federation; member of Salford borough council six years; sectional secretary and then organizer, furnishing trades; parliamentary candidate, 1910; elected at Coventry, 1923; successful arbitrator in co-operative and other labor disputes; elected by general council, Trades Union Congress, 1919 and ever since; elected by Trade Union International Conference, Vienna, 1924, as president; president at 1924 Trades Union Congress; vice-chairman, general council.

Open Shopper Is Alarmed.

His reputation has convinced Ralph Easley of the National Civic Federation that Purcell and his friend Wheatley, recent minister of health, who may also come to Atlantic City, are dangerous.

The Russian report, however, is signed by Herbert Smith, head of the Miners' Federation, who was a fraternal delegate to the Cincinnati convention; by Fred Bramley, secretary to the congress and to the delegation in Russia; by Ben Tillett, John Turner of the Shop Assistants, Alan Findled of the Pattern Makers, John Bromley, M. P., of the Locomotive Engineers, and by two advisory delegates who had seen official service in Russia during the war.

A Taste of the Report.

On page 17 of the report Purcell and his associates give this conclusion on political affairs: "Finally, the delegation is of the opinion that the Soviet system of representation and its scheme of constitutional and civil rights, so far from being undemocratic in the widest sense of the word, give in many respects to the individual a more real and reasonable opportunity of participation in public affairs than does parliamentary and party government.

"In other respects, such participation is still severely restricted. For the system has as yet been kept under close control by its originators with the tacit consent of an immense majority of their fellow electors. This consent can be accounted for partly by the energy and efficiency with which these leaders carried the country thru one crisis after another, and partly by loyalty to the pioneers of the revolution. But this permanence in power is a result of past circumstances—not of the present constitution. Under that constitution there are certainly as great—and possibly greater—possibilities than elsewhere in respect of popular government, political peace, and social progress."

Regulation Not Truce of Enemies.

This is a sample or conclusions on various fields—economic, industrial, educational, social, and so forth—investigated by the British labor veterans. They are as offensive to anti-radical experts in the United States as are the opening remarks on labor conditions:

"In Russia the workers are the ruling class. . . In Russia we have a regulation of the workers' rights that they have put upon themselves for their own well-being. Elsewhere we have a restriction of the workers' rights put upon them by the wealthy. Such regulations are in Russia the result of agreement between the workers and their own expert governors and managers to whom they have entrusted their institutions and their industries, their factories and their farms. Elsewhere such regulations are the result of treaties and truces between the entrenched interests of a wealthy ruling class and the assaults of a working class that as yet never rules but only rebels."

Juniors of Chicago, Attention!

On Saturday, June 6, the city central committee of the junior section of Chicago will convene. Every group must send down two delegates to this committee meeting. The meeting will start at 2:30 o'clock at 19 S. Lincoln St., and every comrade must be there in time. Important business will be taken up and it is imperative that every delegate be present to this gathering. Be sure that your group is represented, Saturday. If you are a delegate do not fail to attend.

War Secretary Still Sick.

The Workers Party in Action

"Minor" Tasks for Major Accomplishments

By WALT CARMON

THE Communist International has given to the American Communist movement, indications of the road it must travel if it is to play its historical role. It has done this briefly but completely. Not only with an adjustment of major policies but with specific mention of "minor" ones; not only what we are to do, but also how.

Particularly at this time, it is essential to stress this part of the advice to the American Communist movement from the leading world Communist body in its decision on the American question:

"As the Workers Party is at present constituted, it is still altogether too weak to collaborate with sufficient effectiveness in the proletarian mass movement of this great country. This natural weakness was particularly evident in its election campaign. As long as the Workers Party does not AT LEAST DOUBLE ITS MEMBERSHIP, it cannot be said that it fulfills the requirements of an American Communist Party."

QUITE plainly, it is essential for us to grow, to strengthen our ranks—to build. We must set ourselves to the task. How we are to "fulfill the requirements of an American Communist Party," the Communist International specifies clearly:

"Under no circumstances should it underestimate in any way the importance of such "minor" tasks as the circulation of the DAILY WORKER."

This is the first among other methods it suggests for the building. With other methods, by "estiblishment of new organs, the development of the Workers Monthly, the publication and distribution of good propaganda literature, the organization of party schools, recruiting weeks, etc." But FIRST (and we repeat with emphasis the very specific reference)... "the circulation of the DAILY WORKER."

Decisions of the Communist International are not accidental—nor are they voiced indiscriminately. They are born of the collective experience of the world Communist movement and given carefully to its various sections for guidance. The emphasis on the circulation of the DAILY WORKER to build the Communist movement is the emphasis placed on the means that has served every section of the world Communist movements.

IN Russia, "Pravda," with its circulation of over one half million (a fact only recently celebrated thruout the Communist world); in France, "Humanite," with a circulation of over two hundred thousand; in Germany "Rohte Fahne," so hated by reaction—these and other great Communist papers have been one of the "minor" means for the great Communist accomplishments.

The executive committee of the Communist International in its report to the Fifth Congress on the various sections of the world Communist movement "Between the Fourth and the Fifth Congress" lays specific emphasis on the Communist press in the reports on each country.

THIS emphasis must be made by every single member of the American Communist movement on the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party—the DAILY WORKER. This emphasis must of necessity be, to be a practical Communist emphasis, put into immediate and concrete ACTION.

The way this can be done, the executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party suggests in a detailed fashion thru the letter sent out by the executive secretary for intensified action that it asks from every party unit and member during Red Week of June 15 to 21. Specifically: 1—Every party member must become a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER; 2—Get at least one new subscriber in the shop, trade union—from another worker you know; 3—Order a bundle of the DAILY WORKER (given free of charge) to distribute door to door in working class sections, in the union—among workers everywhere.

Simple plans, simply done—in fact the very easiest task that can be performed by a Communist or other militant worker—and with a full week to do it in. Yet it is this easy, "minor" task that will play such a great role, says the Communist International—in building the American Communist movement "to fulfill the requirements of an American Communist Party."

THIS has been said recently: Without a daily newspaper the Communist Party cannot form any adequately important factor in any country. The Communist International makes this specific in its decision on the American question.

The members of the American Workers (Communist) Party are not yet fully aware of the role the DAILY WORKER plays in our party, they have not fully appreciated the importance of the DAILY WORKER (nor the Workers Monthly and all Communist Literature) as, not a "minor" activity to be relegated and restricted to the least capable comrades only (and appended to other activities IF time allows) but as A MEANS by which all party activity is conducted.

The role of the DAILY WORKER in the American Communist movement must be considered by a greater section of our membership in the light of the well known words of our great teacher Comrade Lenin:

"THE role of the newspaper is, however, not confined to the mere propaganda of ideas, to the political schooling and winning over of political allies. The newspaper is not merely a collective propagandist and collective agitator, but a collective organizer."

One thought remains from these words on the importance of "Our Daily" to the American Communist movement. Will you—a Communist, or with the Communists in their struggles—at least during RED WEEK of June 15 to 21—perform a "minor" task for great major accomplishments?

'MOTHER' BLOOR STARTS ON 3,000 MILE JOURNEY

Covers 100 Miles on the First Day

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SACRAMENTO, Calif., June 2. — Ella Reeve "Mother" Bloor, sixty-year-old Communist fighter, yesterday began the three thousand mile journey from coast to coast for the DAILY WORKER.

An all-day farewell party arranged by the militant workers in the San Francisco Bay district and assisted by the Young Workers League was attended by hundreds who came to wish a successful trip to this courageous comrade who at sixty years of age begins a journey that will carry her to speak at all the important centers on a direct line from San Francisco to New York, to organize for Communism, to speak for the only English Communist daily and to bring the message to fields as yet unorganized.

Reno, Nevada, Next Stop.

Leaving Berkeley at three o'clock in the afternoon on Monday, June 1, "Mother" Bloor made the first one hundred miles without paying a cent of railroad fare as she had originally planned, covering the first fifty miles in an auto truck.

Meetings will be held tonight in Sacramento. Following these "Mother" Bloor proceeds to Reno, Nevada.

At every step made by this veteran Communist fighter, bundles of the DAILY WORKER have preceded her. These have been enthusiastically received and the DAILY WORKER is now reaching workers in new corners of this country.

Like the Daily Worker.

"I'm feeling fine," wires "Mother" Bloor. "The first response has been the kind that puts new fighting spirit into me and the ease in reaching one town after another on schedule without the use of the railroads makes the prospects for success most rosy.

"The DAILY WORKER is going like hot cakes and subs are coming with the response."

NOTE:—New bulletins will appear advising of the progress of "Mother" Bloor in this spectacular journey of organizing for Communism.

FOREIGN FILM FIRMS BID FOR RICH MARKET IN SOVIET UNION

A leading French film producer, the Phocoa company, has made an offer to the Soviet Union to produce a picture in exchange for distribution rights in the U. S. S. R. Nor is the picture to be some artistic version of ancient society—it is to be a propaganda film, according to "The Film Daily," and its name is "The Force and Grandeur of the Soviet." The trade paper's headline complains that "France Flirts with Soviet."

Another news item reports that a noted Italian producer, Gonnare Righelli, who made some of the leading European current features, among them "Oriente" and "The Queen of the Dells," is in Russia to shoot his exteriors, and that the noted actress Maria Jacobini, is in the cast.

Film Market Immense.

The Soviet Union film market is recognized as one of the most important and richest in the world today. Ninety millions people have undergone an awakening possible only in the stress of revolution, and they have a government whose sole concerns it is to make accessible for the workers and peasants the best products of the brain and brawn of their fellow workers thruout the world.

The only restrictions imposed upon outside agencies which seek to exploit this field of production and distribution, is that the Russian people shall share in the benefits drawn from such films as are made in their country, and that their revolutionary struggles and sacrifices shall be presented in a true light to their fellow workers thruout the world. The desire of the capitalist world to use the films only for counter-revolutionary propaganda, as well as to hog all returns for themselves, has thus far curtailed foreign participation in the Russian cinema.

Soviet Production Increases.

The pre-eminence of American technique is recognized in the Soviet Union and the help of American producers, especially of such independents as the "United Artists" group, would be welcomed. In the meantime, however, the Soviet's production is going steadily forward, new actors and directors are being developed out of the workers' ranks, and new inventions of technique and machinery are reported from time to time. All Soviet films sent to the United States are distributed thru International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill. Workers' organizations, as well as theaters can rent them at reasonable rates.

"Progressive" Loses to Smith in Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1. — Eugene Smith was re-elected as president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, Washington, by a vote of 985, against 818 cast for E. W. Morcock, on May 27. Of the 2,100 members of the local, over 1,000 are employed in the government printing office.

Smith has led a fight against Public Printer Carter, who dismissed a large number of the employes—all union men— last February. Smith's supporters charged that Carter was backing his opponent, who is employed as a proof reader in the government shop. Morrock claimed to represent the "progressive" as against the Lynch or "regular" element in the I. T. U.

Delegates chosen to the I. T. U. convention were W. C. Austin, T. C. Sharp, C. I. Mallard, Jacob Wagner, alternates, Frank Johnson, John A. Parker, F. S. Hussey and Carl V. Eckdall.

PEONAGE FARM EXPLOITERS GET LIGHT SENTENCE

Prejudice Against Peons Says Judge

ANDERSON, S. C., June 2. — Four men were sentenced to imprisonment in the Atlanta penitentiary after their conviction in the United States court here on charges of conducting a peonage farm. However, typical of southern justice, Judge H. H. Watkins stipulated that the sentences should be suspended in one year.

Guy Hall, on whose turpentine farm the Negro, Thomas Washington, was held prisoner, and forced to work for the turpentine manufacturers, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and fined $1,000 on the peonage charge and two years' imprisonment and $500 fine on a charge of conspiracy to violate the federal law against peonage.

Bruce Hall, Dewey Simpson and Asbury T. Jones, found guilty on the conspiracy, were sentenced to two years' imprisonment each, and fined $500 for Hall and $250 for Simpson and Jones.

Judge Wilkins gave no reason for the suspension of the sentences, but it is understood that race prejudice against the Negroes whom the prisoners beat and exploited, prompted him to make the sentences light.

U. S. S. R. Puts Thru Electrification Plan for Suburban Roads

WASHINGTON, D. C. June 2.—Electrification of the railways of the Soviet Union has been started, according to information received from Moscow by the Russian information bureau in Washington. Several of the Moscow suburban lines are being electrified and also the Suram mountain pass section of the Transcaucasian railroad between Tiflis and Batum. In all, ninety-four miles are being completed, according to the information. An additional 105 miles will shortly be begun, including the electrification of Leningrad suburban railways.

The general electrification program, it is stated, calls for the electrification of suburban and mountain lines and eventually for the establishment of electric trunk lines adopted to the transport of trains up to 7,000 tons. Urban trolley systems are also increasing their mileage this year. Before the war 35 cities had electric street railways. During the war and the civil wars about half of the lines went out of business. By 1920 fifteen had ceased operations altogether and eight were running only four months of the year. By the end of 1924 the pre-war mileage was restored and lines had been opened in three additional cities.

The volume of traffic has doubled in three years, though still somewhat below the pre-war figures. About a thousand new cars will be needed this year, of which 385 are already being built in Russian factories. The budgets of almost all the enterprises, says the bulletin, show an excess of revenues over expenditures.

SCHOOLS USE ANTI-SOVIET LIES SENT OUT BY STATE DEPARTMENT TO PREVENT RECOGNITION BY U. S.

VALPARAISO, Ind., June 2.—That teachers in the public schools are co-operating with the state department at Washington to flood the schools with anti-Soviet propaganda was disclosed here when a teacher of history, J. Adams, read a dispatch sent out by the state department, which attacked the Soviet government.

Adams told his pupils that the Soviet Union should not be recognized by the United States, and gave as "proof" the government propaganda against the Soviet government. The statement sent out by the state department was headed "Confidential." It was dated Dec. 19, 1923, but is still being used in the schools.

The state department document declares: "The department of state made public today the text of instructions given by Zinoviev, president of the Communist International, to the Workers Party of America. The department of justice has assured the department of state of the authenticity of these instructions.

Then follows the statement alleged to have been made by Zinoviev, another one of the famous forged "Zinoviev letters," which have been manufactured wholsale by white guards for the purpose of preventing recognition of Soviet Russia.

Bryan Raised Price of Virtue as His Own Fortune Piled Higher

WASHINGTON, June 2—W. J. Bryan, interested in the Coral Gables land market, was recently talking daily to crowds on the beauty and value of Florida real estate and climate, and he was reputed to be getting $1,000 a day for this effort.

This calls to mind a story that has been going the rounds of Washington since the Commoner announced that he would give a $50,000 house, representing 10 per cent of his real estate gains, to a church organization, and would devote himself henceforth to writing.

The story goes that Bryan and Raymond Robbins were discussing the menace of great fortunes a dozen years ago during a campaign, and that Bryan, laying a fatherly hand on Robbins' shoulder, remarked earnestly: "Robbins, you know, and I know, that no man can earn a million dollars honestly." Robbins agreed. A year or two ago they were again together, and it happened that the same topic came up. Again Bryan laid the authoritative hand on his friend's shoulder, and looking almost pleadingly into his eyes he said: "Robbins, you know, and I know, that no man can earn three million dollars honestly."

Capitalist Court Says Only Two Pickets Can Walk Street at Once

NEW YORK, June 2—Modification of an injunction writ against the American Shoe Workers' Protective union legalizes picketing to the extent of two pickets at a time, and says the pickets may give out strike circulars to employes. The strike is against the Sigman & Cohen Shoe Co. Supreme Court Judge Faber granted the modifications.

ARMY ENGINEERS HATE UNIONISM, SAYS A. F. OF L.

Discovers "Democracy" Fraud 8 Years Late

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 2. — Better work for a private contractor than for an army engineer in charge of construction of public work, any day, is the attitude of the organized building trades interpreted by Secretary Tracey of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

The issue is raised by a claim that the army engineers are planning to build the $14,000,000 Arlington memorial bridge by direct employment of day labor.

"Our contact with army engineer officers," said Secy. Tracy, "has taught us in the building trades that most of these officers think in terms of coercion, of military discipline, and they have no use for unions nor any interest in the human element in the work. There are exceptional men among them, of course, but most of them would like to answer any suggestion of a strike by calling out a firing squad. Their training molds them that way. They treat a union spokesman like a dog."

Garment Workers on Strike in Toronto

NEW YORK, June 2.—The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union reports the calling of a strike in Toronto, Canada, against the Royal and Continental Cloak Co. for breaking an agreement.

More War Maneuvers.

LAKEHURST, N. J., June 2.—The United States navy's dirigible Los Angeles left her mooring mast at the naval air station here at 10:08 o'clock today to fly to Annapolis, Md. She will tie up to the mast ship Patoka in the Chesapeake Bay of the naval academy there, probably about 2 o'clock.

STRIKE ON GULF SOUTHERN BOAT BROUGHT FLOGGING TO ONE I. W. W. TWO MISSING MAY BE MURDERED

NEW YORK, June 2.—All of Florida's floggings of labor men are not in the turpentine camps. The latest story of the lash is told at the headquarters of the Marine Transport Workers' Union of the I. W. W. from the report of Delegate Robert F. Bierley who was arrested in a ship strike at Miami, with two companions, and taken into the countryside where all three were savagely beaten.

Bierley fears the other two sailors were murdered. The flogging crew separated the men and he has not seen them since. Fruitless inquiries have been made by local organizers of the union in Boston and New Orleans, where Fogelburg and LaMonica, the two victims, had lived. No trace of them has yet been found.

Arrested at Bosses' Orders.

The strike that led to the lashings took place on the Lake Gunni, a steamship of the Gulf Southern Line. Bierley says they were arrested at the instance of one of the ship's officers and taken to the Miami police station where they were held incommunicado for 36 hours. Then they were flung into automobiles, handcuffed, and rushed for the outskirts of the city.

Blackjacks were freely applied as the cars sped outward, the delegate reports and his narrative continues as follows:

Legion Gangster Steals His Money.

"After being taken out to a deserted roadway, we were thrown out of the cars and our clothes torn off us. One sat on our feet and another upon our heads while the rest took turns flogging us with heavy leather straps until they were tired out. My clothes were stolen and some of my supplies.

"One of the gang wearing an American Legion button, while taking the handcuffs off my wrists, took twenty dollars out of my pocket. He didn't get all as I had some of it in another pocket. I have not seen the other fellow workers since and I fear they may have been killed. The next morning I took the highway and came as far as Pensacola and was again arrested, while walking thru. Thirty-six hours later I was released and I came to Mobile."

Secretary-Treasurer T. P. Sullivan of the union says no stone will be left unturned to find and succor the other two victims of the flogging if they are still alive and he declares his organization will not be deterred by the episode but will continue the fight to improve conditions for sailors in Florida ports.

Boy Scouts Prepare Youth for Murder and Strikebreaking

By STANLEY BALCHUNAS.

What is the difference between the boy scouts and the Young Workers' League? That's not a hard one; the boy scouts are organized by the capitalist while the Young Workers' League is a Communist organization.

What does that slogan of the boy scouts "Be prepared" actually mean? This ought to start you thinking. It means that the boy scouts must be ready to be killed off when the capitalists start a war.

The boy scouts are given medals for saving some one, which everybody should do, while in the future they will be given medals for killing in a war or killing some workers in a strike.

The boys join the scouts for the fun which they are told they will get, but they are unconsciously made tools of the capitalist.

All of us should try as much as possible to get a worker's son to join the Juniors or the Young Workers' League and not the boy scouts.

PRINTERS OF NEW HAVEN ASK WAGE INCREASE

Bosses Try Stalling Off Game

NEW HAVEN, Conn., (By Mail).—Typographical Union No. 47 of this city has placed a demand for higher wages before the newspaper publishers. The present scale is $41 a week for compositors, which the union wished increased by $8. But when the local committee met with the owners, who refused to treat with the committee, the union committee reduced the increase to $3.

The scene then shifted to New York City, where President Lynch met with the head of the publishers. An offer of $2 a week increase was made to the local union, provided the agreement was drawn up for three years, instead of two. The first dollar was to be granted in Jan. 1926, and the second in May, 1927. The local union refused.

Last Sunday, it was decided to call a meeting for Tuesday, to take a strike vote, but instead the strike committee urged no action be taken until June 1. The agreement had expired May 1. The men are determined to get the minimum of $3 a week increase, payable as from May 1.

The demand of the New Haven Local seems mild, compared to Hartford, Conn. (an open shop hotbed) where the wage scale was $45 a week. Recently, the Hartford Local won two weeks off on vacation each year with pay, and payment for holidays and illness. Sanitary conditions, which were better than in New Haven now, were considerably improved.

WORKERS GIVE FOR RELIEF OF IRISH VICTIMS

Famine Sufferers Are Aided by Unions

The situation among the famine stricken peasants of the West of Ireland is not improving, according to a letter received at the office of the Irish Workers and Peasants Famine Relief Committee, at 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill., from Robert Stewart, executive secretary of the Irish section of the International Workers' Aid.

The American workers are responding to the appeal for aid to their brothers and sisters in Ireland and many generous contributions are coming from local unions thruout the county.

Unions Lend Help.

Newport Lodge No. 119 of the International Association of Machinists, Newport, Rhode Island, sent $35.00, with the following letter:

"Enclosed find check for Thirty-five Dollars, ($35.00). This amount was donated by Lodge No. 119, I. A. of M. to help relieve distress amongst the Irish Peasants and Workers in Ireland in the districts affected by the food and fuel famine.

"With best wishes to you in your noble effort to relieve distress amongst these unfortunate people, I am

"Sincerely and fraternally yours,
"James J. Tiernan, Rec. Secretary."

Promptness Necessary.

The United Women's Club of Madison, Wisconsin, sent $10.00 and a donation of $14.00 came all the way from Anyox, B. C.

One dollar now is better than $20.00 three months from now.

Send in your contribution at once to Irish Workers and Peasants Relief Committee, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Illinois.

Another Offensive Fizzles

Ever since the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia raised the standard of revolt against the forces of capitalist-feudalism in the once mighty Russian empire and carried that standard to victory over the dead body of the enemy, the capitalist class of the world have never given up hope that they would be able to restore the old order in Russia.

Plot followed plot with monotonous regularity. At first, frontal attacks were made on the Soviet republic. When those failed; when it was discovered that the workers' republic was able to stand off all such attacks, more devious methods were resorted to.

The capitalist powers vainly tried the sword. They tried economic isolation and starvation. That also failed. Today, without the loan of a dollar from any capitalist government the Soviet Union is building up its productive power as a strong and powerful basis for the socialist economy of the future.

But capitalist plotting has not stopped by any means. It should be noted that in the forefront of all this plotting was the British government. Perhaps Britain figured in the background, rather than in the foreground. But Britain was the guiding brain.

The famous offensive opened by the late Lord Curzon went on the rocks. The Soviet Union still stands. Curzon is resting under the archetecture of Westminister Abbey.

But the empire is persistent. The latest move of the tory government is to attack the Communist International and organize a conspiracy to get every government in Europe present Russia with a joint note demanding the expulsion of the Comintern from the Soviet Union. This was expected to find universal favor among the bourgeoisie and it was not expected that the working class organizations not affiliated with the Comintern would care what happened to it. The tory government figured that the British labor party would be at least neutral.

But the tory government should know that MacDonald is not as useful a tool of the robber empire today as he was when he turned loose the forged Zinoviev letter for the greater glory of the tories, his own undoing, and to the detriment of his party. The beneficiary of Sir Alexander Grant's biscuit factory has lost caste with the workers since then. When Joynson Hicks, home secretary, sprung his attack on the Comintern, there was such an explosion in the British labor movement, politically and industrially, that the tories decided, discretion was the better part of valor.

In reply to questions asked by labor members in the British house of commons, the tory ministry stated that the government had no intention of threatening to break off relations with Russia over the activities of the Communist International. It did not admit that its decision was arrived at after France and Italy refused to bite.

The Soviet Union has more allies than the capitalist powers are aware of. Besides its red army and red fleet, millions of workers in all countries look on the Soviet Union as their only fatherland.

Another Lackey Passes

In Thomas Riley Marshall died one of the meanest political prostitutes of American history.

Marshall was born in a small country town of Indiana, "educated" in a third-rate college in another small town and after wavering between careers as preacher or lawyer, settled down to a life of village legal mediocrity. Without distinguishing mark other than the degree of his softness to other men's wills, his quickness and shamelessness to do a job without question, Marshall was the one of a thousand of his kind who might have been chosen for the governorship of Indiana in the slump year of 1908. The same qualities caused him to be chosen as a vice-presidential dummy on Woodrow Wilson's ticket in 1912, and again in 1916.

Marshall as vice-president became the pun-making buffoon of the United States senate during a time when such a buffoon was a real asset in cloaking the stern realities of the most terrible of world history heretofore known. As the clown of the Woodrow Wilson court, he produced the vapid humor that best suited the lowest stage that had ever been reached in the pre-Harding days by bourgeois intellectual culture. Marshall became known for what the capitalist hack writers choose to call "wit." This reached its height at the time the I. W. W. organizer Frank Little was murdered by a lynching party of businessmen at Butte, Montana. On that occasion, the vice-president of the United States was quoted for the pun which expressed the current feeling of the American bourgeoisie for that early beginning of fascist terror:

"A LITTLE hanging goes a long way."

This will live in the memory of the American working class.

The after-war industrial chaos, with hunger and misery, "deflation," wages, with strikes and the growing awakening of the class which is to be destroyed and the undertaker of capitalism, brought from Marshall the final expression of his weasel-wisdom:

"What the country really needs is a good five-cent cigar."

The name of Thomas R. Marshall may appear, written small, in the dusty records of the future. Or it may be seized upon by some future historian to show a peculiar phase of "decaying, dying capitalism"—the necessity of hoisting into places of prominence of the least talented, the weakest and meanest of men.

The oil profiteer, Doheny, of Teapot Dome infamy, now an agent of the Standard Oil trust, and Calles, the "socialist" president of Mexico, constitute the latest "united front" against the Communists. Welcome to more opposition of the same kind.

Scab coal from "the south" drips with the blood of the workers. Sixty dead in the Coal Glen, North Carolina, disaster, and now six more slain in an explosion at Piper, Ala. Coal miners' blood is cheap, especially in the non-union fields.

The vote was unanimous at the meeting of the Chicago Street Carmen's Union, "AGAINST ALL WAGE CUTS!"

Bishop Kelley of Oklahoma denied that the catholic church is in politics. Well, neither is the ku klux klan for that matter.

Mr. Churchill's Bankers Budget for Great Britain

By J. T. MURPHY (London)

WHATEVER else may be said about Churchill's budget, this much has to be said—it is a bankers' imperialist budget! The incidence or the relief of taxation, coincident with the return to the gold standard, point most clearly to the bankers and link the budget to the Dawes report.

The introduction of the tariff policy directed against foreign countries along with preferences to the colonies of Great Britain, simultaneously with the increase of military expenditure, make it perfectly clear that to describe it as an imperialist budget is no exaggeration.

Mr. Snowden has described it as the "worst rich man's budget in modern history," but has nothing to say about its real imperialist character. He would have the navy and air estimates reduced a little and he thinks that "the state of our industries," do not warrant the application of the insurance scheme with which he is very much annoyed. Sir Alfred Mond supported Mr. Snowden and Sir Alfred is the voice of big business, Sir Robert Horne the conservative leader of the federation of British industries reechoed the story. All the critics were therefore mainly concerned as to how best to help British capitalism and we can pass it along without worrying much about it.

THE first feature of the budget speech was that dealing with the return of the pound to the gold standard. Last year at this time there was a fierce discussion going on in banking and industrial circles as to the advisability of this project. It appeared that they were on the verge of further inflation. The industrialist elements of the F. B. I. were pressing for it and the labor party were not averse. The scales were weighted in the opposite direction immediately the Dawes report was put thru and American money began to flow towards Britain and Europe.

The bankers have won and the industrialists still cry out without avail. It is clear from all the evidence that this has been accomplished by the collaboration of Wall Street and the English bankers. The government has already purchased sufficient dollars to cover the July and December payments on the American debt, covered any retreat they may have to make with arrangements for credits between the government and the United States federal board and the American banks. "Great Britain," says the Evening Standard, "is now more than ever vulnerable to the weapon of financial pressure . . . We are, in short, giving the United States a power which, while it may not be to America's interests to use it, remains always uncomfortably in the background." This disquietude is echoed by others, but it was the only way possible for British capitalism to regather its forces. American-Anglo collaboration in matters of finance is the only cover under which Britain can even steady herself down the decline, and the bankers have decided on it.

OTHER factors play their part, of course. It is interesting to be able to lend money that is depreciated to the state and get interest and repayments in appreciated currency. This profitable business is revealed in a further part of the budget dealing with the national debt. Mr. Churchill was very proud of the debt reduction. It amounts this year to somewhere about £40,000,000. In 1920 the debt stood at £7,828,779,000. It is now £7,646,000,000. So, altho taxation has yielded for national debt purposes in five years some £1,750,000,000 the debt is only reduced by £182,000,000. The difference between the two sums has gone into the pockets of the patriotic investors in war stocks, mainly the banks.

But the industrialists are growling for another reason. They cannot yet see how the restoration of the gold-standard is going to help them a great deal with regard to the problem of markets. There is a divergence between dollar prices and pound prices. Whereas British prices are up 71 per cent above 1914 level, dollar prices are up only 62 per cent. This difference in price level places the British exporter at a disadvantage, which annoys the British industrialists who reckon on America as their principal competitor, and accounts for their objection to the latter being strengthened by the government's action in relation to the gold standard.

It also accounts for the fact that, simultaneously with the concerted efforts to restore the pound, we are faced with a general offensive against the workers' wages and hours of labor. The whole business has to be put thru at the expense of the working class. Mr. Keynes projects that it will now be necessary to reduce wages 2 shillings in the pound, that is, 10 per cent.

WERE these the only features of the budget it would be bad enuf for the workers, but the remaining features are still more blatant pieces of class activity directed to the support of the richest elements. Death duties have been increased it is true, but the living millionaries have received a free gift of £10,000,000 per annum by the reduction of the super tax on unearned income. Besides these, all those with incomes over £250 per annum receive a little gift amounting in all to £32,000,000 yer annum.

While these little gifts are being handed round to those who are in clover, the workers come in for a bit of rough handling. Mr. Churchill has stolen the thunder of the labor party with regard to old age pensions, and pensions for widows, but has decided to do it at the expense of the workers, by imposing a tax of four pence per week for men and two pence per week for women who already pay the national health insurance and the unemployment insurance. Of course it is said that the employers are to pay 4 pence and 2 pence per week too and the state an equal amount. But it does not work out that way. The miners, for example, under the national wages agreement pay 87 per cent of the employers' insurance, while everybody is quite convinced that the remainder is passed on to the price of commodities.

OF course the industrial element don't want even that, because they are anxious for prices to come down. The net result can only be an intensification of the fight to reduce prices by reducing wages and lengthening the working day. At the same time the worker cannot escape the payment by any means whatsoever. If he gets a job at all, it is stopped out of his wages. Hence, the poor, out of their poverty, are to be poll taxed to insure the boss from any responsibility for either old age, widowhood, sickness or unemployment.

It only requires the extension of this scheme along the line of the Mond proposals and the workers will also be levied to subsidize broken down industries. Already unemployment and health insurance cost the worker 13 pence per week off his wages. To add a further four pence per week just at the moment that wages are again being reduced all round is a pretty heavy dose and is bound to affect trade unionism. The average wage of the skilled worker in the engineering industry is 57 shillings per week. Of this he has to pay 1 shilling, 5 pence insurance and 2 shillings per week for his trade union. It is obvious therefore that this new taxation is no godsend. But Mr. Churchill consoles him by reminding him that the labor government reduced his taxes last year, but politely ignores the fact that the cost of living is higher, and the tax relief has gone into the pockets of the trusts.

THE reward for all this is to be in the form of pensions for widows to the extent of 10 per cent per week which is about five shillings per week lower than what is allowed by the board of guardians as poor law relief. The allowance for the first child is 5 shillings per week, for the others 3 shillings per week. This scheme is to come into operation on Jan 1 next for all those who have two years' payments. Old age pensions at 65 years of age come within the scheme and are operative from 1928.

This departure from state pensions on a non-contributory basis is the point upon which the labor party is laying stress. The tories have stolen the thunder of the labor party so far as the widows and pensioners are concerned and transferred the payment for it direct on the workers. For sheer impudent class war legislation for social amelioration it would be hard to beat.

After relieving the rich and penalizing the poor it is of importance to observe the nature of the remaining program. Expenditure on the navy and air forces goes up £5,000,000. This is introduced at a moment when recruiting and military demonstrations are receiving more attention than they have received since the war, and certainly much more than before the war in 1914. The budget emphasizes the fact that however pacific the language of the British ruling class may be to America or any other country, there is very little of a pacifist nature in their deeds. The budget begins the tariff war by re-introducing the McKenna duties and imposing new taxes on the import of silk goods. For raw materials and partly manufactured materials, Britain is practically dependent on foreign supplies in which France plays no small part. The McKenna duties are taxes on automobiles, motor parts, clocks etc. directly aiming at the continental and American trade.

With these barriers against the foreigner the government has decided to make concessions to the colonies by granting preferences on dried fruits, etc. agreed upon at the empire conference in 1923. It will be remembered that this conference was composed of tory premiers, and paved the way to the general election which made possible the return of a labor government.

THUS the plan of campaign for imperial recovery has come full circle. Two years have elapsed and the labor opposition has been transformed into an appendage of the imperialists with little chance of making a real opposition to their policy for a long time to come. Certainly on this occasion they will meet with no serious opposition. Most of it will be of a vote catching character in which the remnants of the liberal party will vie with the Mr. Snowden and MacDonald. Both will talk about the extra burdens placed on "industry." Both will complain about women's silk stockings and underwear costing more. While the labor party may get a little extra capital out of the situation by saying that the pensions should be on a non-contributory basis.

The tories will undoubtedly make the fullest possible use of this labor party line in other circumstances. For example, Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Hayday have howled about the heavy burden on industry which the insurance tax will impose. Mr. Hayday said: "Mr. Churchill's budget, we are told, was to help industry. By his pension scheme he will do more harm than a dozen strikes or lockouts . . "The heavy burden on industry will handicap most heavily those trades—mining, engineering, shipbuilding, cotton, etc., which have been hardest hit in the present depression. On top of their present difficulties, the Churchill poll tax may prove to be the last straw that breaks the camel's back."

THE employing class will thank the labor party for this argument when they meet the trade unionists who want increases of wages, and it wants very little imagination to hear the employers address, say, the engineering unions as follows: "You agree that four pence per week per head for the insurance scheme may prove likely to break our backs. Why then do you come to us with demands for one pound per week per head advance in wages, for the engineering workers? Is this not likely to send our industries to perdition?" Thus, once again the labor leaders' concern for capitalist industry will be used to defeat the workers.

So the tory government can afford to smile. They will say and do say that while the labor party was talking about pensions, the tory party found the practical ways and means of introducing them without delay. True, they say it means a small effort more must come from the workers, but then if they have to wait until the state can afford to give the pensions, they will not get them for many years to come because everyone is so poor and industry has yet to be restored to normal.

With this kind of reply ready, with an enormous press to help them, they will then reckon up the account and see that the wealthy class has succeeded in entrenching itself, relieved itself of considerable taxation, paved the way for a bigger navy and bigger air force, taken definite steps to hold the empire closer to the "mother country" and prepared the way to fight the foreigner. In short the budget is a real British imperialist budget.

The Political Significance of Hindenburg's Election

By J. LENZ (Berlin)

ON the 12th day of May Hindenburg, the kaiser's field-marshall took the oath of loyalty to the constitution of the republic, which, according to the promises of the first government, the government directly set up by the people, was to become a socialist republic and which is now openly represented as being a "monarchy without a king."

The so-called republican papers are not quite clear as to the question whether it is a triumph for democracy and the republic that a representative of monarchist ideas has taken the oath of loyalty to the constitutional republic, or whether the monarchist danger, against which the so-called republicans are supposed to have conducted the election campaign, continues to exist in a more acute form as result of Hindenburg's election.

CONTRARY to the stupid idea of socialist "theoreticians"—who praised the candidate of the "republican bloc" as the best representative of the "economic" interests, and represented the candidature of Hindenburg as a disagreeable episode which crossed the plans of the German bourgeoisie, of its leading group, the heavy industry and its political party, the German people's party—the Communists, right from the outset, have clearly pointed out that the candidature of Hindenburg is not a candidature of the nationalist junkers and the petty bourgeoisie, not a rebellion of the nationalists against the treaty of Versailles and the Dawes plan, but on the contrary, that he is the most suitable candidate of the bourgeosie for rendering its policy of the Dawes plan popular among the masses, and before all among the nationalist petty bourgeoisie.

Both as regards foreign and home politics, the tendency of the policy of the big bourgeoisie is determined by the fact that German capitalism can only maintain its existence with the aid of international capitalism, and before all of American and English capitalism—which fact found expression in the treaty of London.

WITH regards to home politics, the carrying out of the Dawes plan renders necessary a firm government and state power, which is exclusively at the disposal of the heavy capitalist concerns, in order to be able to thrust the enormous reparation burdens upon the working masses without the danger of encountering any serious resistance.

As far as foreign politics is concerned, the German bourgeoisie, which in spite of its dependence upon foreign capital cannot abandon an imperialist foreign policy, must endeavor, while remaining dependent upon other imperialist powers and by taking advantage of the imperialist antagonisms, to win back a little more freedom of action and prepare for the restoration of German imperialism. The offer of the guarantee pact, which was made by the Foreign Minister Stressmann on behalf of the government which stands under the decisive influence of the German nationalists, is an attempt, by means of an offer of armed help against Soviet Russia and by recognition of the frontiers of France, to obtain an alleviation of the conditions of disarming, a free hand in the Eastern policy and a colonial mandate of the league of nations. In adopting this course the German government believes that it can take advantage of the differences between England and France by courting the friendship of England, whilst, as a matter of fact, the English government, following the old policy of maintaining the balance of power, intends to make use of Germany as a counterweight against France.

IT is quite evident that Hindenburg's candidature would have been impossible if the English ambassador in Berlin, who, as is known, exercises a decisive influence upon the policy of the German government, had made any objection to this candidature. The efforts of the English press to reassure French public opinion regarding Hindenburg's election, are a clear indication that English imperialism at present regards the restoration of the German bourgeoisie, not as a threat against itself, but as a positive factor against France.

The election speeches which the controllers of the nationalist party machine drew up for the "National Saviour of Germany," Hindenburg, persistently emphasized that in the event of his election, Hindenburg would not make any change in the present foreign policy of Germany. The first governmental act of Hindenburg, before he actually assumed office, was the speech which he caused to be delivered by the Reich Chancellor Luther after he had had a conversation with the latter and which culminated in the assurance of Germany's unchangeable loyalty to international treaties.

IT is certain that nobody in the world will take a peace speech of Hindenburg any more seriously that the peace talk which Wilhelm the last was wont to indulge in on every possible occasion. It is certain that Hindenburg cannot rely upon any other class than the bourgeoisie, as the German nationalist petty bourgeois were only given their beloved field marshall in order to win them the more securely for the policy of the big bourgeoisie.

Thus it is not the war of revenge against France that has become an acute danger as a result of the election of Hindenburg, but rather that war which, according to the program of German heavy industry, has every probability of breaking out, the "legitimate war" of which Briand spoke at the last session of the league of nations, the league of nations' war against the common enemy of all imperialists—against Soviet Russia.

After the election of Hindenburg the Stinnes organ saw the consolidation of Germany, which has been thereby created, among other things, in the fact that the guarantee pact and the entry into the league of nations—the two definite measures by which Germany is to take her place in the front of world imperialism against Russia—will not give rise to any further difficulties in home politics, as Hindenburg takes the responsibility for them, while resistance on the part of the nationalists was only to be feared so long as it appeared that only Stressman bore responsibility for them.

A German nationalist weekly paper gave expression to the meaning of the Hindenburg election by saying that if Hindenburg were to summon the German people against the red danger all would respond, whilst it is not certain whether all would have responded if the hated republic had issued the call to arms.

IT is also undeniable that the election of Hindenburg means a strengthening and consolidation of the power of the bourgeoisie in the sphere of home politics. This is also expressed by the statement that Hindenburg stands for exactly the same programme of casting the burden of taxation upon the working masses as his "republican" opponent Marx, but that Hindenburg is much better able to render this policy palatable to the broad masses of the petty bourgeoisie and to render the bourgeois state power a still firmer and reliable element against the proletariat than it was in Ebert's time.

It is certain that, for the bourgeoisie, the restoration of the monarchy is only a question of expediency but a republic in which the whole state apparatus is in the hands of convinced monarchists and which, as the product of the defeat of German imperialism has never won the sympathies of the nationalist bourgeoisie, very well served its purpose. The German nationalist papers assert that Hindenburg, as a man of honor, will keep his oath of loyalty to the constitution, but they immediately add that for Germany the "most suitable" form of state, i. e. the monarchy, can only be introduced by legal and constitutional means. In fact in a republic in which the idol of the monarchy has been elected president by a popular vote, the abolition of the republican form of state can be realized by constitutional means.

THE election of Hindenburg is not a mere chance and should not be regarded as an historical error, but it is a stage in the advance of the restoration of the counter-revolutionary bourgeoisie, which advance will be continued until the proletariat, as the leader of all the exploited and oppressed, calls a halt to it.

Passengers on St. Louis Steamer Are Marooned on Bar

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June [illegible]—A thousand persons, marooned all night when the big river steam St. Paul went aground on a sand bar in the Mississippi river ten miles north of St. Louis, were brought to shore today after a half dozen river crafts had succeeded in dislodging the vessel.

SUPREME COURT JUDGES EXEMPT SELVES OF TAX

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The supreme court of the United States decided today that the salaries of federal judges, even of the lower courts, can not be included in taxable income and subjected to the federal tax.

The decision was in the government's appeal in the case of Judge Samuel J. Graham, Baltimore, Md., who paid $585 taxes on his salary for 1919 and 1920, and whose suit to recover was won in the lower courts.

Selling The "Daily" In Boston

To the DAILY WORKER:—We wish to commend you on the appearance and general excellence of Monday's issue of the DAILY WORKER, of which we ordered 500 for special distribution in Boston. It carried a purposeful selection, location and display of news matter.

It is hard selling the papers, arriving so late in Boston where the dubs get Hearst's fake news two or three days before it never happens. They are so busy with baby comics and cross word puzzles, that they have neither time nor sense enough left to catch Hearst at it.

However, we sold and distributed a bundle to the high school students and the teamsters, then dashed to the other end of town in time to see the striking building laborers' meeting breaking up. As the labor faker officials, guard was away from the doorway for a moment, we were able to see to it that every single man passing out of the hall had a DAILY WORKER.

When the last two huskies—officials of the union—saw the paper, their eyes widened. "What—The Worker?," and looking out the door the street was full of men, every one was reading the strike news. It looked like a snow bank. The labor fakers flew into a rage and charged us. We retreated to the sidewalk. As we left three or four hundred men were in the street smiling at us, many waving the paper, all unquestionably friendly.

We are firmly convinced that the paper can be sold on the streets of Boston, if the delay in arrival can be overcome. Fraternally, Reguera and Rosa.

By T. J. O'FLAHER

REPRESENTATIVES of la[illegible] allowed a certain free[illegible] speech in Great Britain, decla[illegible] W. Joynson Hicks, secretary fo[illegible] affairs, in answer to questions raised in the house of commons relative to the announced intention of the government to bar foreign Communists from entering England. This means that as much freedom of speech as is compatible with the security of the capitalist state is allowed, an admission which explodes the fable so sedulously cultivated by Angliomaniacs that Britain is the cradle of free speech and individual liberty.

THIS was true so long as the speeches were harmless or economic conditions were such that there was no danger of the speeches being followed by action. But those golden days are gone forever. There are 2,000,000 of British workers unemployed and with every likelihood that this condition is not a passing one. This standing workless army is a constant menace to the wage scales of those who are employed. After all the question of filling the stomachs of the people is the rock on which governments crack.

THE British government would not permit foreign working class agitators to come and make speeches against capitalism, said Sir Hicks, but he did not say that the same rule would be employed in the case of foreign capitalist representatives spouting against the Soviet government. We note that the tory police department was not able to keep out delegates to the Communist convention held in Glasgow. Buchanan, labor member from that city told the tory home secretary that he would welcome the Communist convention officially, as it would take place in his constituency and that he thot no Communist in the convention would make a more extreme speech than himself.

WHILE the left members of the British labor party are talking thusly, the right honorable J. H. Thomas is writing pamphlets boosting the empire, which he says is a trust that must be developed for the benefit of "all the people." With Thomas are associated Ramsay MacDonald, Phillip Snowden, Sidney Webb, J. R. Cynes and other socialists. This shows that the label of socialism means little more in England than it does in France or the United States.

THE social democrats in Austria are kicking up a shindy because the bourgeois foreign minister delivered an anti-Soviet speech recently. Not that the social-democratic leaders of Austria have any more love for the Soviet Union than their prototypes in Germany or England, but the Soviet government placed several large orders in Austria giving employment to thousands of social democratic workers. As a result of the anti-Soviet attack the workers republic cancelled the orders. Hence the howl from the social-democratic leaders.

OUR pacifist American socialists who beat the air about a dictatorship and a Red Army in Soviet Russia do not feature the presence in Austria of a social democratic military force of 100,000 workers. The social-democrats of Germany also have their military organizations. The main difference between the attitude towards the use of force expressed by the Communists and socialists is that the former use force against capitalism while the latter use it to defend the robber system against revolution.

REVOLT OF CHINESE WORKERS AGAINST FOREIGN IMPERIALISM IS SWEEPING WHOLE NATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, June 3.—With Shanghai as its present center, the revolt against foreign imperialist exploiters is sweeping like a tidal wave thruout the whole of China.

Here 100,000 workers are on strike with the general strike call grownig hourly and assuming the proportion and forms of war.

Stung by the repeated massacres of unarmed demonstrators by the white guard "volunteer" foreign businessmen and foreign police troops, arms are appearing in the hands of students and workers posted to defend their meetings from attack. Foreign troops have been ordered to shoot to kill on all occasions.

The general strike is paralyzing the international settlement. All the workers in the foreign cotton mills, along the wharves, the telephone exchanges, power plants and waterworks are out.

Great Demonstrations Being Held.

In the Chinese city, great demonstrations are being held, with the thousands of students leading parades, bearing the coffins of their dead comrades shot down by British Sikh police troops Saturday and the other victims which have been murdered since.

Of the five goreign language papers published here, all are hit by the strike, four being completely tied up by the strike of the linotype operators while the fifth is issuing a small sheet only by throwing a heavy guard around the plant to protect the foreign scabs from being stopped at their work by Chinese strikers and sympathizers.

Two thousand Chinese members of the municipal police force are threatening to strike, and flatly refusing to act against the other industrial workers on strike.

Cable employes are meeting this afternoon to consider joining the strike. Water is being furnished the international settlement only by use of volunteer scabs guarded by American marines. At the American Club, the social center for wealthy Americans, the Chinese servants have been called

WEST VIRGINIA MINE PICKET GETS 10 YEARS

Frank Corish First of Court Victims

By REGINA MYROWSKI.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., June 3—On May 28, Frank Corish, one of the victims of the strike situation in the northern section of West Virginia, was sentenced, at the Marshall County Court House, to ten years at the state penitentiary as a result of the outbreak which had taken place at Glendale, W. Va., on April 19, 1925.

On the above date an outbreak had occurred in that town as a result of the scabbing that was being done in that region. The house of a scab was picketed by a number of striking miners, but altho no damage was done, police arrived upon the scene immediately, dispersed the crowd, arrested 19 men and one woman as having part in the outbreak.

Rank and Rotten Injustice.

On May 4, 1925 they were indicted by the grand jury and were held pending trial for violation of the Red-man act, which carries a prison sentence of from two to ten years.

The week of May 25, 1925 the trials for the strikers were commenced, each one being tried individually.

Frank Corish was the first one to be tried and was charged with being the instigator of the outbreak. He was found guilty and given the maximum sentence, 10 years! This caused great consternation among not only the strikers themselves but also among the sympathisers, and is viewed as being one of the most savage sentences ever pronounced for the crime committed. Frank Corish has appealed his trial to the supreme court.

Prison for Strikers—Freedom for Scab

What the fate of the others connected with the outbreak will be cannot be determined but without doubt the majority of them will be convicted, with a pretense of a trial, and also given severe sentences, as an example for the rest of the strikers.

While these people are being tried for attacking Robert Crowe, the strikebreaker, no charge has been entered against the latter as yet, altho he shot Samichow, one of the strikers in the head. Samichow is reported as having nearly recovered, with the bullet still remaining in his head.

Heavy prison sentences, injunctions, etc. have not as yet succeeded in breaking the working class spirit. Altho they may have a depressing in-

ANOTHER MANUFACTURED 'RED PLOT' IS PEDDLED BY BERLIN NEWSPAPERS

BERLIN, Germany, June 3.—Another fake "red plot," manufactured by czarists, has found a ready market here. The Deutsche Zeitung said today that it possessed a "document" according to which M. Lewitsky, counselor of the Soviet legation at Vienna, is to "take advantage of his diplomatic immunity and direct Communist activity thruout the Balkans."

Lewitzky points out that it is not even revealed who sent the note, and characerizes it as a crude forgery.

'FORD SPIRIT' IS NEW NAME FOR SERFDOM

Studied Petty Tyranny for Workers

(By A Worker Correspondent)

DETROIT, Mich., June 3.—Ford is known the world over, outside of his factories, as a great and considerate employer. But to the tens of thousands of production slaves out of whose very hides are tanned the hundreds of millions of Ford profits, he is looked upon as a mean, heartless miser and a hypocrite par excellence. A great spirit permeates the Ford organization (from the foremen up) known as the "Ford spirit."

This same spirit is handed down from above in any other open shop concern but it is not as lucrative to the stockholders as this particular brand.

Straw-Boss Tranny

Here are a few instances of masters and slavery prompted by this great spirit.

No straw-boss or petty foremen has the power to fire a worker directly, tho he can easily have it done, but where he lacks this privilege he makes it up by arrogant orders and threats of lay-offs and giving night-shiffs outside of one's turn.

The company for years has supplied paper cuspidors and saw-dust free to those who chew tobacco or want them, but about a year ago, in line with the Ford spirit of profits, the men were charged one cent per cuspidor.

Ford Favors on Prince

A few months ago when his royal parasiteness, the prince of Wales visited the plant, Ford issued strict orders against spitting that day and so cuspidors and sawdust were not sold, and all recepticles for holding turning and chips were covered with white canvas.

A special bridge over the motor assembly line was constructed with white canvas carpets to protect his royal eyes and princely feet from proletarian contact. All painters worked 4 hours overtime the night previous, touching up the locations of honor. The British and American capitalist flags were flying over the administration building that day.

More "Ford Spirit"

But to return again to the Ford spirit, no more saw-dust was given out and only what cuspidors that were in stock were sold and again more orders against spitting.

The whole shop is plastered with sickly slogans about safety—the latest is "Have you sent in your safety suggestion?" Here is a good suggestion—"Gentlemen, would cite that in the tool-room, where men cannot be rushed, accidents are very rare the hazards are quite as great; would suggest that the nerve racking speed-up system in production be cut out—giving men

STRIKE IN BIG ST. LOUIS SHOP TO ORGANIZE CLOTHING WORKERS OF SCAB TOWN IN AMALGAMATED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 3.—The force of cutters in the big tailoring shop of the Curlee Clothing company, 85 men and women in all, are on strike by order of the Local Cutters' Union of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers following refusal of their demands by the firm.

An Open Shop Center.

The Curlee company is the biggest factory in St. Louis, a town which is among the largest and scabbiest of clothing centers of the country. The Curlee firm employs a total of 1,000 men and women and until now the union has made but litle headway. If the A. C.W. can make a win of the present strike, which may spread from the cutters to the rest of the 1,000 workers, the town of St. Louis will be well on he way to unionization in this industry.

The clothing bosses of Chicago and other union centers, so it is reported, have lately been sending their work to St. Louis to make more profit from the low scab wages prevailing. The long delay of the A.C.W. in doing effective organization work has caused unemployment in these union centers and intense exploitation in St Louis shops.

Militants Actively Support Campaign.

It now appears that the A.C.W. locally is going about organization in a determined manner, and in the campaign the militant members of the Trade Union Educational League and the Young Workers League are taking an active part. All the clothing workers are set upon making St. Louis a union town.

The demands of the cutters of the Curlee shop are as follows: The right to organize, re-instatement of eight workers fired for belonging to the union, sanitary conditions, time and a half for overtime, a 44-hour week and an increase of the basic wage from $25.50 to $47 a week.

Forger of Fake "Zinoviev Plots" Caught in Berlin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany June 3.— The forger of the fake Zinoviev letters, and manufacturer of numerous bogus "red plots," the czarist Russian forger Drushelovsky, has been arrested here.

This document fakir found a ready market for his wares.. The capitalist governments of the world, including the Ramsay MacDonald "labor" government, in Great Britain, found it expedient to believe that these crude concoctions were genuine.

Exposed by Red Press.

Only in the DAILY WORKER, and the Communist and left wing press were the fake plots exposed. Now the Communist exposures of the "plots" have been verified, and the capitalist governments and their agents have been given the lie.

In the capture of the arch-fakir Drushelovsky, the German police declare they have run down the forger who for months has been weaving a net of plots all over Europe, making a livelihood by fostering race hatreds and animosities, and who has been successful, they believe, in the overthrow of a cabinet by his machinations.

The mysterious trail of the "Zinoviev" letter, published during the campaign which saw the defeat of the Ramsay MacDonald cabinet in England, may be cleared up by investigation of Drushelovsky's operations. This letter purported to be a communication from the Soviet foreign minister to MacDonald, then British premier, suggesting MacDonald could aid in spreading Communist propaganda in Great Britain. Official Moscow branded the letter a forgery. MacDonald made it the subject of a sharp note to Russia.

More Fake "Soviet" Orders.

AIRPLANES TO LEAVE OSLO SUNDAY TO SEEK NORTH POLE EXPLORERS

OSLO, Norway, June 3.—The two Norwegian aeroplanes which the government is to send into the Polar region to search for the missing Amundsen-Ellsworth north pole flyers, will not get under way before Sunday, it was believed by aviators here today.

Miners Fight Attempt of Officials to Gag Union by Postponing Convention

COAL MINERS' MEET PUT OFF BY LEWIS GANG

Terrorized by Fear of Progressives

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

INDIANAPOLIS, June 3.—The next International convention of the United Mine Workers of America, scheduled to convene in January, 1926, has been postponed until 1927, by a decision of the International Executive Board, subject to approved by referendum vote of the membership of the union.

It is freely admitted that this action was prompted by fear on the part of John L. Lewis that the next convention if held on the scheduled date would run away with him. In the last elections for officers of the International Union, George Voyzey, progressive candidate for president, polled half as many votes as Lewis, according to the official count, which was made by Lewis. The general opinion among the rank and file of the union is that Voyzey was really elected. In fact Lewis has refused to publish a tabulated list of the voting.

Lewis held his ground at the last convention by pulling off several red scares and illegally terminating the convention when a majority of the delegates voted to give Alexander Howat, of Kansas, a new deal. Since then several districts have gone on record for a special international convention to take up the Howat matter and other grievances of the rank and file against the international officials.

Busted Lewis Machine.

Several districts are decidedly opposed to Lewis and even his position in the anthracite fields is badly shaken, tho he made Tom Kennedy secretary-treasurer of the international as a sop to the hard coal miners. The actions of the stool pigeon and renegade Cappellini have busted the Lewis machine in District one and districts 17, 14, 12, 26, 18 are off the reactionary autocrat for good.

WILL FIGHT ALL PROGRESS, SAYS LEE OF B. R. T.

Reaction Still Rules in Brotherhood

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 3.—Bill Lee, ultra-reactionary labor faker heading the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, was re-elected president by its triennial convention here by 531 votes as against 408 votes cast for A. F. Whitney, his opponent for the last four elections—beginning in 1913.

After his election Lee, who was terrifically disturbed recently when William Z. Foster of the Trade Union Educational League spoke at an enthusiastic meeting of railway workers in Cleveland against the proposal of Lee to turn all the rail unions into company unions and abandon the class struggle entirely, spoke to the delegates and said that he, Lee, would continue his collaboration with the railway companies and his opposition to amalgamation and all other progressive movements.

E. King, general secretary-treasurer; Thomas R. Dodge, Lee's assistant, and D. L. Cease, editor, were also re-elected.

PERMANENT INJUNCTION GIVEN 20 COAL MINING COMPANIES IN W. VA.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 3.—Injunction proceedings, growing out of organization activities of the United Mine Workers in the Panhandle district of West Virginia, today held the attention of Federal Judge William E. Baker, who handed down two orders, one continuing a temporary injunction granted the West Virginia-Pittsburgh Coal company and the other granting a restraining order to nineteen coal companies which petitioned for an injunction.

PROGRESSIVE MINERS DEMAND INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION IN JANUARY TO OUST LEWIS

The news published in another column, that the Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers has postponed the international convention until January, 1927, elicited the following statement today from Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' International Committee:

• • • •

Demand a Convention in January, 1926.

The international executive board of the U. M. W. of A., held a meeting at Indianapolis on May 12-16, and decided to postpone the regularly constituted convention from January, 1926, to January, 1927, subject to the approval of the membership, alleging as a reason that because the contract expires in 1927, it is impossible to formulate a wage scale before that time and that therefore a convention is unnecessary.

The progressive miners see the real reason for the postponement in the fear of the Lewis machine to face the outraged and betrayed miners, starving with their wives and children all over the country because of Lewis' collaboration with the operators and the Jacksonville agreement, which is throttling the miners' union.

Lewis Fears Removal.

Lewis knows that his machine is crumbling. He knows that Voyzey rightly claims to be the International president. He knows that the rank and file miners are demanding his removal for violation of the constitution in refusing to issue a tabulated record of the vote in the last international election.

The rank and file have prepared charges against Lewis. They demand his impeachment for this flagrant violation of the constitution, and he realizes that the miners at the convention will attempt to rid the union forever of his traitorous leadership.

Install Voyzey as President.

Voyzey demands that the convention shall take up the international vote, in order that he may be installed in the presidency as constitutionally provided.

The progressive miners also demand the repudiation of Lewis for his imposition upon the union of the Jacksonville agreement, which is destroying the union. They see the Alberta miners crucified by the operators, and deserted and betrayed by the union leaders; their union is gone and black despair stalks the district.

Ruin in the Trail of Fakers.

Nova Scotia, a semi-ruin, striking against wage cuts, against the beast of Besco which seeks to crush the union, is also deserted by Lewis and his machine. Nova Scotia bravely fights alone. But the progressive miners know that this state of affairs must be brought to the convention for appropriate action—and Lewis knows that his position as International president may be made short work of.

The Case of Local 699.

In Local 699, in Pennsylvania, 1,700 miners of the Woodward Collieries are expelled by Cappellini and the action is approved by Lewis in direct

COURT DELAYS SUIT AGAINST GOVERNOR SMALL

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 3.—The request of Assistant Attorney General Charles W. Hadley for extention of time to June 22, for filing of briefs and arguments in the civil proceedings against Gov. Small, was granted by the state supreme court here today over the protest of counsel for the defense which branded the request unreasonable and for the purpose of causing delay.

At the same time the court denied the petition of the Citizens Association of Chicago to appear as a friend of the court and in an advisory capacity file briefs and make oral argument.

Small is accused of stealing state funds.

PEABODY COAL COMPANY CUTS MINERS' WAGE

Violates the Agreement with Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KINCAID, Ill., June 3. — The Peabody Coal company operating about 20 mines in Illinois, one of the largest mining concerns in America, has now become a factor in attempting to reduce the living standards of the miners in Kincaid and destroy the coal diggers' working standards.

The contract between the miners and the coal operators specifically provides that no change will be made during the life of the contract that will add to the expense of coal production or reduce the miners' wages.

Big Construction Job Again Tied Up

Thru a comparatively unimportant strike—that of a dozen teamsters delivering building material for the new $20,000 produce market—work on that structure has been held up for nearly a week, it was learned yesterday. The strike has been on ten days, but had little effect until the material on hand ran out. Then brick layers, iron workers and other workmen were laid off. It is the third strike there.

FIRE IN 'TINTOWN' EXPOSES FAIRY TALE OF BOSSES' PUBLICITY

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 3.— The stories sent out by the Bisbee chamber of commerce describing that non-union town sound like fairy tales when compared with the following dispatch printed in a local paper under a Bisbee date line:

"Approximately one-fourth of the village of Tintown, near here, was destroyed by fire early this morning, causing damage estimated at $12 or $15. Tintown is inhabited solely by Mexicans of the poorer class, who have built their homes from tin cans, parts of wrecked automobiles of a popular make and anything else that can be tacked or glued on to the railroad ties that form the frame-work.

Like the disastrous Chicago fire, Tintown's conflagration is supposed to have started when a vagrant cow wandered into the kitchen of a house and kicked over a lamp. There being no fire fighting equipment in the village, one entire block was razed before it was placed under control."

on strike by students who pointed out that America was the first to land troops in the present intervention.

The club is placing emergency scabs on jobs, and the haughty aristocratic women are being forced to work to let the equally aristocratic men join the white guard army which is being found unable to stem the revolt it has provoked.

Women Also Turn Scabs.

The women are called on to do work of striking chauffeurs, nurses, telephone operators, clerks, cooks, etc.

Bringing 1,500 sailors and marines who began landing at daybreak, the British cruisers Carlisle and Diomede arrived shortly after midnight after a record run from Wei-Hai-Wei to join in the suppression of Chinese demonstrations against the foreign imperialists.

Official reports show that the violent anti-imperialist spirit is flaming thruout China as students in the larger cities spread the tidings of the massacre of workers and students at Shanghai. M. H. Throup, an American Presbyterian misisonary was thrown from his rickshaw and manhandled by students when he answered their question as to his attitude on the Shanghai massacres, with insults.

Spread Leaflets Over Nation.

Chinese in Nanking are reported to be showing their hatred of foreign imperialists by spitting on foreigners. Literature, well written and clearly setting forth the indignities the Chinese nation has borne from foreign powers, the plunder of her resources by foreign imperialist interests, the beginning of the strike in the textile mills of Shanghai and the cold-blooded shooting down of unarmed students on parade. Such leaflets are being spread all over China.

At noon, a Chinese striker was killed and five wounded when foreign white guard troops fired on a crowd of 3,000 who were picketing the ice works owned by Japanese. Foreigners are warned against going into districts where the patrol force cannot cope with the revolt. Foreigners attempting to do scab streetcar work or ride upon the cars are showered with stones.

Shanghai in State of Seige.

Shanghai is in a state of seige. The food controller has begun rationing food which is being requisitioned. This removal of food from storage led to the death of one and the wounding of ten Japanese when several thousand strikers stormed a Japanese egg and produce plant to prevent the foreigners from getting supplies.

Thousands of marine workers, wharf and longshore workers with members of the Seamen's union, armed with bamboo poles were routed from the Broadway district only by appearance of white guards with machine guns, and not then without minor clashes.

Prisons Are Overcrowded.

The arrested Chinese, among them hundreds of those jailed for observing the fight yesterday on Burkill Road, from their house-tops, are becoming a problem. The prisons are overcrowded and the compounds are being turned into bull-pens, with the prisoners forced to share vile conditions and given no food. Student demonstrators demand their release, claiming that the foreign white guards are trying to force a starvation uprising among the prisoners in order ot have an excuse for another massacre.

Plan to Extend Strike.

Following the funeral of the dead students, speakers urged the throngs of Chinese not to invite attacks on foreigners, pointing out that it was folly to attack empty-handed the armed bands of the imperialists, some counseling getting arms wherever possible, and all urging extension of the strike and blockading the foreigners' food supply.

American sailors are guarding the water reservoirs to give water supply to the international settlement, but this may not continue successfully as there are attempts being made to tear up the water mains. Barricades of sand-bags and barbed wire are being put up by the foreign forces.

Barbed Wire Entanglements Appear.

PEKING, China, June 3.— Barbed wire entanglements and fixed bayonets on the guns of French, Japanese, and Italian troops doing guard duty, met thousands of Peking students today when they staged a demonstration at the gates of the foreign legation. "Kill the British and the Japanese! Drive the American imperialist into the sea! Down with imperialist robbers of China!" were the cries of the demonstrators.

On the way to the foreign legations the students had visited the Chinese foreign office, where they demanded that the Chinese government insist upon the foreigners who shot down the students at Shanghai, be punished.

University on Strike.

All Peking schools, including the Yenching university are on strike, with the students parading the streets carrying red flags and distributing literature against foreign imperialists.

This afternoon the students will assemble before the office of the provincial chief executive and the foreign office, to demand abolition of extra territorial privileges of foreigners, cancellation of the oppressive treaties forced on China by the imperialist powers and death to the murderers of the Shanghai students.

EUROPE LAUGHS AT ANTI-DARWIN TALK OF BRYAN

Tennessee Must Cut Truth from Textbooks

NEW YORK, June 3.—The whole world is laughing at the United States because of the Tennessee evolution trial and the preachings of William Jennings Bryan, who is slated to be the unofficial prosecutor in that epochal legal fight, according to Sinclair Lewis, author.

Lewis is just back from an extended stay abroad.

The author of "Babbitt" intimated that the great commoner is one of the American travelers greatest crosses.

"Bryan has finally made it possible for the humblest and most submerged of nations to roar with laughter at all of us," Lewis said.

"I for one, do not like to find myself ridiculous when I travel. I do not like to have Europeans assume that because I am an American and a countryman of Bryan, therefore, like him, I get all my science by main strength and awkwardness. '

"It isn't Europe's attractions, but Mr. Bryan that is responsible for the heavy east-bound steamer traffic."

"There are two great phenomena in American life. One is the grand canyon, the other is Mr. Bryan."

Neal wrote the commission advising that the selection of textbooks be postponed until after Scopes is tried for teaching what the authorized textbooks of the state contain on the theory of evolution.

"Ford Spirit" is New Name for Fliver Serfdom time to think and practice safety."

Of course this would not be in harmony with the "Ford spirit" and would be rejected.

More Wounded Than in France

One worker (an ex-service man) who happens to work close to the main aisle leading to the factory hospital, said, that for the same length of time, he saw more wounded men carried thru on stretcher-carts than he saw at the front in France.

When a man is very sick or seriously injured, he is sent to the Henry Ford hospital, some three miles away—not in a modern comfortable ambulance. The too frequent calls of the ambulance would not look well in public, and so a Ford sedan is fitted up with secret doors in the back and just a drivers seat and space for a stretcher.

On this the patient is shoved in, head first; the rear door closed, and behold, the camouflage is complete; the old can jerkes its way to the hospital; the rough riding is offset by the excessive heat on the patient's head from the engine.

Ford's Prisoners

Another little dignity-chaser for a worker is when he desires to leave the factory before the regular quitting time. He must obtain a doctors pass and he only gets this when he is quite sick or has a fever. Foremen and some tool-room men can get out with a special pass.

No seats or stools are permitted in the tool-room except to foremen and men with special O.K.

Only half-hour for lunch and the men squat around on benches and floor like coolies. Where departments work three shifts daily, only fifteen minutes are allowed for funch, this necessitates stuffing of food down and invariably results in stomach trouble for those men.

Lavatory Espionage—Pocket Searching

In some departments a watcher is stationed at the toilet door to "discourage loitering."

At every exit door are watchmen who scrutinize each man as he leaves, if he carries a lunch kit it is lifted and shaken, every soiled apron or shop coat carried out for laundry is felt and squeezed, also men's pockets that look rather bulky are felt to make sure that a radiator or fender is not conceeled therein.

Poisonous Tractor Gas

Another practice which belies their safety propaganda is the operation of countless numbers of Ford tractors and trucks used for inter-departmental transportation. The air is thick with exhaust gas which carries the deadly carbon-monoxide fumes. This is especially noxious in winter when the buildings are closed.

It causes the eyes to burn and makes one feel drowsy. The company operates electric trucks (a very few) but they cost more than a lizzie. It is the "cost" and not health that Henry considers.

The Daily Rush

Another manifestation of the Ford spirit in the total disregard of the rights, health and convenience of the workers are the coat cribs. Hooks are spaced twelve inches apart on long ranks. with no passage way between them.

At quitting time there is a mad rush for the coat racks, which necessitates diving thru columns of clothes, always throwing dozens of articles on the floor only to be trampled upon, and brushing and spreading disease germs from coat to coat.

Other articles describing the Ford spirit will follow.

Now The International Chamber of Commerce is Facing More "Obstacles"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the industrial masters of the world are planning feverishly for this month's meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce to be held at Brussels, in Belgium.

Two years ago they met at Rome, in Italy. They exalted fascist rule, proudly acclaimed the fascist dictator, Mussolini, and laid the basis for the Morgan-Dawes plan for Germany.

This year the industrial kaisers will meet in one of the countries where the king has called a "socialist" to organize his government, but where the fear of Communism is just as great as on the Mediterranean side of the continent.

• • • •

"The business men of the world are united!" is the proud exclamation of Edward A. Filene, so-called "American publicist," in telling of the approaching Brussels gathering. America's workers do not yet realize this. They are frequently made acquainted with the fact that local Chambers of Commerce constitute the united front behind which the employers rally in ever industrial struggle. But most workers do not yet glimpse the state, national and international network of organizations of the bosses, or they would engage in more militant struggles to perfect their own organizations along parallel lines.

The International Chamber of Commerce is only four years old, but it already does much to cement the world solidarity of the employing class and issues edicts to the parliaments of the various capitalist nations. It is not an accident that the International Chamber of Commerce is meeting in Europe. That is where capitalism needs most patching at the present time. The business wizards want to be there to help, because in so doing they feel they are helping themselves. Even the smug capitalist must smile when the "publicist," Filene, says that, "the business men of the world in the meeting at Rome laid the foundations for the Dawes plan, and a group of its devoted members sacrificed their time and energy to pave the way for its adoption."

Whenever a great capitalist does anything to increase his dividends or pile up his profits, that is courageous "self-sacrifice" and unstinted "energy." But let a worker demand an increase in wages and the vocabulary of the "open shoppers" becomes too limited to denounce him sufficiently.

• • • •

The Rome gathering inaugurated the Dawes plan. The Brussels meeting will consider how to carry it out more effectively in spite of the protests not only of Germany's workers, but of labor in other nations as well. Even big business admits that "some obstacles" have arisen to the carrying out of this 20th century slavery scheme. An effort will be made to overcome them.

The success with which capitalism overcomes its obstacles all depends on the workers themselves. Every obstacle overcome is a defeat for labor. Every failure of the employing class to solve its difficulties is a working class victory.

• • • •

It is pointed out that one problem the Brussels meeting will discuss is the economic rivalry that exists between the various European capitalist states. The race is for large exports as against small imports in order to obtain gold to stabilize currencies. This results everywhere in the extreme exploitation of labor, in order to produce cheap goods, high tariffs and a growing struggle for markets. Any government enforcing these measures becomes unpopular and is usually put out of office. But the "publicist," Filene, declares:

"The business men of the world do not need to fear that they may be put out of office."

So, it is taken for granted, big business intends to go the limit to more thoroly enslave, not only the workers of Germany, by labor in all Europe, to the Morgan-Dawes "idea." Whether it succeeds, with the International Chamber of Commerce as one of its weapons, depends on the workers themselves.

Labor must fight its own battles. It has its Communist organizations, locally, state, nationally and internationally, linked in closest solidarity. These Communist organizations are dedicated to the struggle that "big business be put out of office," that capitalism be abolished. Let all workers and poor farmers rally to this fight, build their own power until it becomes strong enough to set at naught the best laid plans even of the International Chamber of Commerce.

be found that they will be instrumental in the overthrow of capitalism!

Fighting Ranks Have Spineless Leaders.

The strikers of this section are to be commended for their fighting spirit and their grit in sticking to their principles and fighting for them. Nothing of consequence is being done to encourage them to keep on with the strike, for the Lewis machinery is very lax indeed when it comes to encourage strikers and help them win their battles. In fact everything is being done to discourage them.

New injunctions have been passed which prohibit even peaceful persuasions, mass meetings, etc. Scabbing is taking place on a rather extensive scale—and the only thing the strikers can do is to stay at home and watch their daily supply of food growing less and less with no ready means of obtaining more. Shall they be permitted to be starved into submission?

RIFFIANS USE CANNON AGAINST FRENCH TROOPS

Communique Admits Aim Was Accurate

FEZ, French Morocco, June 3.—The Riffian natives are concentrating troops north of Tazza, the French military officers announce. The French invaders admit that during the fighting which has just taken place on the Bibane front, the Riffians used their cannon effectively.

The communique states that the Moroccans aimed their cannon accurately, but no casualty figures are given out.

The natives around Loukhos and Rihana are increasingly open in their support of Abd-el-Krim, and the French troops are finding it difficult to suppress them.

Bomb Riff Hospital.

The economic blockade has not greatly affected the Riffians, altho the Anjera tribe on the Tangier peninsula is said to be starving.

SOVIET TRADE IN MACHINERY INCREASES HERE

But Europe Grants Better Credits

NEW YORK, June 3.—Isaiah J. Hoorgin, chairman of the board of directors of the Amtorg Trading corporation, the purchasing and selling agent for various industrial and commercial organizations of the Soviet Union, and director of the All-Russian Textile Syndicate which is buying the bulk fo the cotton shipped to Russia from this country, returned on the Mauretania last Friday after a prolonged stay in Moscow, Kharkov, Leningrad and other important centers in the Soviet republics where he arranged for better facilities for the constantly increasing trade between the United States and the Soviet Union.

In a statement given out at his office at the Amtorg Trading corporation, 165 Broadway, Hoorgin pointed out that the prospects for the further development of the commercial relations between the two countries are closely linked with two of the chief economic problems confronting the Soviet Union at present.

Reconstruct Agriculture.

First is the problem of agricultural reconstruction. While the prospects for the next crop are favorable and it is expected that the Soviet Union will have a large surplus for export purposes, it is keenly felt by the Soviet authorities that, in order to do away completely with the possibility of recurring elemental disaster, such as caused the famine of 1922 and the poor crop of last year, agriculture in the Soviet republics must be thoroly reconstructed along modern technical lines.

This has been realised also by the mass of the peasants even in the most backward localities and as a result there is an ever increasing demand for modern agricultural machinery, chiefly tractors. The Amtorg Trading corporation has already contributed much toward making the "iron horse," as the tractor is being called by the peasants, popular in the Soviet villages, by importing during the first year of its activities, upward of 5,000 American tractors.

Concentrate on Tractors.

Out of $10,000,000 spent by the Amtorg in the purchase of machinery in this country during the year ending April 30, 1925, about $4,500,000 have been spent in the purchase of agricultural machinery, tractors being the chief item among the latter. The main difficulty which has been confronting the Amtorg Trading corporation during the past year, which was the first year of its activiites was the question of meeting the credit requirements of the Russian purchasers.

Most of the American manufacturers have realised these conditions and extended credits for long terms on purchases of agricultural machinery. However, freer and longer credit terms are offered by European manufacturers who are competing with the American products on the Russian market.

Industry Booms.

The second important economic problem of the Soviet Union is the restoration of its industries. The industrial expansion in the Soviet Union during the past year has surpassed the most optimistic expectations and plans of the Soviet economists. Even the heavy metal industries which have been the slowest to recuperate have increased their production during this year by 82 per cent over the preceding year, while in a number of the lighter industries the pre-war level of production has already been attained.

This rapid growth of the industries is due to the increasing demand on the internal market as a result of the improving economic conditions. But since 1914, when most of the factories were put on a war basis, the equipment and machinery has not been renewed. The greatest part of the industrial equipment has been worn down from lack of repair. Much of it has become antiquated.

Need New Machinery.

For the Soviet industries to run at full blast they must be re-equipped and more modern machinery installed in the factories. In this connection considerable purchases of industrial equipment and machinery have already been made by the Amtorg Trading corporation in this country.

These purchases could be increased many more times during the coming year since the Soviet industries are taking America as a model in their work of reconstruction. But, as in the case of the agricultural machinery, here also the question of credits and European competition is of vital importance.

However, Mr. Hoorgin believes that the experience of the past year which was satisfactory and of mutual advantage both to the American producers and banking interests and the Russian consumers and when the trade turnover between America and the Soviet Union reached the unprecedented amount of nearly $100,000,000, will pave the way for the establishment of closer business relations between the two countries. It will be to this end that Mr. Hoorgin will devote his time during his present stay in this country.

HEAVY RAINFALL IN ERIN MAKES FAMINE WORSE

Boston Committee for Relief Organized

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, June 3.— Owing to the continued wet weather, a poor harvest is expected thruout Ireland this year and the famine which is now confined to the seaboard counties on the west coast is expected to become more widespread. Large numbers of cattle are dying in the south and west.

The Irish section of the Workers' International Relief is negotiating with the Free State government for the lifting of import duty on shipments of food and clothing sent from other countries to relieve the suffering in Ireland.

One thousand dollars was received by the Dublin committee from the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief committee in the United States. As thousands of workers from the west of Ireland live in the United States it is expected that the response to the famine appeal will be generous.

By GEORGE KRASKA.

The Boston branch of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief committee was formed Wednesday, May 27, in Paine Memorial Hall. After brief introductory remarks by the temporary secretary, Dr. Gibbs, John Lucey was elected chairman for the evening. The chairman then introduced Joseph Manley as a member of the national committee, who gave a very impressive and convincing talk as to the extent of the suffering in the famine area, and also gave the reasons why the capitalist papers are ignoring the facts, namely that the Irish Free State is trying to get a loan from America and the truth about the famine would certainly not be in their favor, so the best thing then in order to get the loan, and to keep the workers in subjection, and in suffering rather than to lose the opportunity of getting the loan. He then urged that a conference be formed to carry on the much needed relief work.

John P. McCarthy recently returned from the west of Ireland was the next speaker, and he certainly painted a word picture of the horrible condition under which the population in the famine area are living or rather existing.

As an eye witness, he stated "that owing to the heavy rains the peat bogs were all soaked, and could not be used for fuel (which is the fuel used in that section) thus causing untold of suffering from cold, and hunger" he also urged that the conference take definite steps to raise funds for the Irish workers' and peasants in Ireland.

The credentials committee reported that there were 26 delegates, representing 12 organizations, that representatives from the Cigarmakers' Union 97, Engineers' Union 849, Jewelry Workers' Union and Longshore men Union, were there and also Workers Party, International Workers' Aid and Labor Defense Council.

The executive committee consisting of Secretary Dr. Gibbs, Treasurer Dr. Geo. W. Galvin, Financial Secretary Michael Moore, James Connelly, John Lucey, James Lacey and Casey Blockland, who were then elected by the conference, were instructed to make plans for a mass meeting at once and also tag days and house to house collections.

With an executive committee of this make-up Boston is assured of getting at the head of the line in relief work for the Irish workers and peasants in the west of Ireland.

Pay envelopes were distributed among the delegates to take back to their organizations or shops and have the workers contribute 1 per cent of their wages weekly and turn it in with their name and address to the secretary, Dr. H. A. Gibbs, 876 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

WOMEN'S EIGHT HOUR BILL DEAD IN THE SENATE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 3.—The senate passed the Barr bill creating a commission of seven senators and seven representatives to investigate the question of terminable permits for utilities and report to the next regular session. The senate has passed bills appropriating millions of dollars but has no time to consider the workers.

Legislative observers believed that all efforts to regulate the working hours for women were irrevocable and dead issues. After several fruitless efforts to obtain a quorum of the senate committee on corporations and industrial affairs handling the senate 8-hour bill, friends of the issue were fearful that both it and the modified 8½ hour bill now in the house were dead.

The senate today passed the Hicks reapportionment bill and sent it to the house. The vote was 32 to 14. The measure provides for a commission of four senators and four representatives, half of them to be appointed from Cook county and the other half from downstate, to investigate the redistricting proposition and submit proposed constitutional amendments to the next general assembly.

Harry Luebbe, business agent of the painters' union, local 47, and chairman of the board of business agents, was re-elected for the fourth time at a meeting of local painters, defeating John Wood by a vote of 560 to 347.

BANKERS TAKE OVER C., M. & ST. P. RAILROAD

Stockholders Assessed on New Shares Issued

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The plan of New York bankers to refinance the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, forced into receivership on March 18, will not interfere with the plan of the interstate commerce commission to make a thorough investigation of the "history, management, financial and other operations, accounts and practices," of the road, it was learned today.

This general investigation was ordered by the commission on May 12, and it was said, dates for hearings bearing on the subject would be ordered within a few days.

Coal Miners' Meet Is Postponed by the Lewis Regime

The reason given by Lewis for postponing the convention for another year, is, that the existing wage agreement terminates on March 31, 1927 and that January, 1926 would be too early a date to consider new wage agreements. As a matter of fact the coal operators have made a joke of the Jacksonville agreement and a real president would have called a special convention immediately to deal with the situation.

No Time for Discussion.

In order to prevent unfavorable action on the postponement, Lewis sprung the proposition on the locals as a surprise giving them no time to discuss the matter. The first the members knew of the postponement was when they saw it published in the official journal. In view of the fact that the members have expressed themselves in favor of a special convention it is not likely that the proposal for a postponement will go down well with them.

Lewis in private conversations admits that the radicals have made considerable progress since the last convention and that the propaganda of the Progressive Miners' Committee is now making more headway than ever, despite threatened expulsions on a large scale. The 66,000 votes cast for his Communist opponents Voysey in the last election put an end to any large scale expulsion plan.

Motor Stock Speculation.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Speculative interest in the stock market today converged on the motor stocks and most of the spectacular price move ments of the day occurred in a small number of these stocks. The high priced industrials, whipped up to a still higher level by the bullish pools, gave additional strength to the market and assisted in the "campaigns" of the professional bulls, who remained strongly intrenched in their position of leadership.

Progressive Miners Demand Convention

violation of the International constitution. The progressive miners are demanding the impeachment of Lewis and the re-instatement of the members of Local 699.

Edmunds, the constitutionally elected president of the local, has been thrown out of office by the Lewis machine. This, too, must come before the international convention. This, too, is another count in the indictment against Lewis. This, too, is a reason Lewis postpones the convention.

Many Reasons for Convention.

The case of Alex Howat and the Kansas miners, the Jim MacLachlan case, the Illinois and Pennsylvania cases, all have struck Lewis with fear to face a convention. He sees his big salary and fat expense account vanishing and he is determined to cling to the presidency by fair means or foul, by hook or crook. That is why he has postponed the convention.

The progressive miners demand the convening of the international convention in January, 1926, as constitutionally provided. The progressive miners demand that our grievances be heard and adjudicated upon their merits; that the charges against Lewis be taken up and he be expelled, while the injuries done to the union, including the expulsions of our brothers who have fought the machine, be remedied, and these brothers re-instated and Voyzey declared the International president on the basis of having won the last international election.

Organize the Unorganized.

The U. M. W. of A. is being cut to pieces while Lewis and his machine does nothing to organize the vast unorganized fields which must be organized before the union can effectively fight the closely combined operators. The progressive miners demand that the international convention be held in January, 1926, as provided for, to formulate steps to wage a militant campaign to unionize every unorganized coal field and make the U. M. W. of A. 100 per cent strong in the coal pits of the United States. Miners everywhere! Demand the international convention for January, 1926.

MORGAN ELECTRIC TRUST GRABS POWER OF WHICH INDUSTRY AND JOBS DEPEND, IN ALL STATES

(Federated Press).

From Niagara to the Gulf of Mexico the distribution of the power on which industry and employment will depend is being rapidly monopolized by the General Electric Co. Recent negotiations for purchase of the Southern Power & Light Co. by Electric Power & Light Co. represent an important step in the unification of this super power trust.

Electric Power & Light is a subsidiary of Electric Bond & Share Co., a General Electric dummy which in turn controls a series of electric power companies serving territory with a population approaching 10,000,000. Says The Wall Street Journal:

A Nationwide Trust.

"One of the biggest super power projects is approaching fruition. It will tie in stations from Niagara Falls to Houston, Texas. Leading factors in this unification are the companies owned or operated by the Electric Bond & Share Co. The grouping now under way will run thru 14 states with ramifications possible in every direction except where the Atlantic ocrean and the Gulf of Mexico mark the boundaries."

The properties include part of the holdings of the Electric Power & Light Co., American Power & Light, National Power & Light, Southeastern Power & Light, American Gas & Electric, Carolina Power & Ligth, Lehigh Power Securities, and Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern.

Morgan Dictatorship.

The area served by Southern Power & Light, which is being added to the chain, is bounded by Little Rock, Ark., Memphis, Muscle Shoals and Jackson, Miss. Speaking of the approach to Muscle Shoals The Wall Street Journal says: "Completion of plan will mean the consummation of another important step in the acquisition by Electric Bond & Sare interests of control of the electric power situation in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals.

The Morgan interests behind General Electric are creating a dictatorship over what is coming to be the prime essential of the mechanical age. They are establishing themselves where they can levy a twofold profit, first the profit on the huge quantities of electrical equipment they will manufacture in their role of General Electric and sell to themselves in their role of the power combine, and second, the operating profit from the sale of power.

Immense Profits.

General Electric profits for 1924 show how large the manufacturing profits will be. With a record business of $299,251,869 it reported a manufacturing profit of $34,342,331. After adding other income and subtracting depreciation, federal taxes and interest charges there remained $39,235,543 for the stockholders which meant $21.00 a share for the holders of common. General Electric since 1899 has distributted dividends totaling 330 per cent. It is the third largest holder of cash among the country's industrial corporations with $117,718,797 in this account. Ahead of it stand only U. S. Steel and Ford Motor Co.

The huge profits realized on the sale of electrical energy appear in the review of 1924 by The Electrical World. This shows gross revenue from the sale of electrical energy by central station power companies at $1,335,100,000 while only $690,000,000 was required to meet the cost of operation and maintenance.

COMMUNIST-CHILDREN'S-COLUMN

Dear Comrades: In this part of the country there is no Communist movements. So all of my school friends have different political views.

The people of this town go in gangs and sets and as I belong to none of these because of our financial position my friends are outsiders also. I have a very good friend who feels that if she could only get into these gangs she would have a very lonely time, but she would have a "cat and dog" time. One day our conversation drifted to economic problems. She asked me why her father worked hard all day and made so little money while the rich work very little and get lots of money. I answered her as best as I could and told her about the capitalist system and how Russia was remedying it. She became interested, so I read to her the article by Anna Louise Strong wrote on Youth on the Volga. I said that some day I hoped to go to Russia and she said she would go with me.

Our teacher asked for a cartoon on the world war. She would not accept this one. I am sending it to you.

THE BOLSHEVIZATION OF OUR PARTY PRESS

By KARL VOSS.

I. Bolshevist Self-Criticism

ONE of the most essential constituents, or rather prerequisites, of the Bolshevization of the Communist parties, is revolutionary self criticism. This is not only one of the sharpest weapons of Bolshevist propaganda and organization, but is an essential constituent of Bolshevist methods and ideology as such; it forms the lungs of the Bolshevist organism, supplying its heart with the oxygen which it requires daily, rejuvenating the circulation of the blood, and forming the best antidote to all forms of decomposition. An unceasing, continuous, relentless, revolutionary self criticism runs like a scarlet flame thru the whole history of Bolshevism.

The ideology of Bolshevism, and Bolshevization as historical process, are subject to the laws of both capitalist and revolutionary development. They do not supply the revolutionary parties with any finished recipe for class warfare, but what they do supply is methodic indications, based on wide experience, for revolutionary action. Their very nature involves the inevitability of errors of many kinds. And the more rapid the rate of revolutionary development, the greater the danger of tactical errors. ,, The Bolshevization of the Communist parties may cause strategic errors to be almost excluded, but it does not exclude the possibility of errors in tactics. The approach of the revolutionary upheaval in the West will bring about such profound and complicated subversions of class strata that the Communist parties will be obliged to maneuver and tack much more than the Russian Communist Party before the seizure of power.

BUT when the time comes for the West European Communist parties to meet their October, it will be found that despite the intense use made of Russian experience, and despite the profound penetration of the process of Bolshevization, these parties are faced by the almost certain fact that the development of Bolshevist ideology and of Bolshevist leadership does not keep pace with the speed of revolutionary development. At the moment when the party of the proletariat takes up the struggle for power, the bourgeoisie will prove tactically superior unless the revolutionary storm of the rising millions is decisively controlled by the revolutionary self-criticism of the Bolshevist leadership. The propagandist theoretical understanding of self-criticism is as necessary for the propaganda of Leninism, and for the carrying out of Bolshevism, as the masses are necessary to the Communist Party and the Communist Party to the masses.

For years the Communist International has been fighting for the principle of self criticism. The whole story of the last Czechish party crisis is a striking example. Here it became clear that Bolshevization is an empty word unless accompanied by self criticism. The genuine liquidators accepted all decisions on Bolshevization but refused to recognize their own decisive errors. And thus they were defeated in the end. Self criticism is the principle which must form the revolutionary spring for the Bolshevization of the Czechish Communist Party. The Communist parties are now confronted by the task of differentiating and concertizing the process of Bolshevization; the recognition of the necessity of self criticism will play a more important role in the future than in the first propagandist stage of the process.

All considerations on the various tasks of Bolshevization must be preceded by these fundamental principles.

II. Is the Communist Press a Mass Press?

THE decisive purport of Bolshevization lies in the increasing and growing consciousness, among the Communist workers, of the importance of the role played by the party, accompanied by a simultaneous expansion of the influence exercised by the party upon the broad masses of the working class. The Communist press forms one of the best means of gauging the extent and character of this influence upon the masses. The Communist press is of decisive significance for the work of Bolshevization. It must be more than a "collective organizer" for the party, it must be a "collective organizer" for the masses. What is the present relation of readers of the Communist press to the number of party members and to the masses affiliated to the Communist Party?

The following table may afford an approximate idea*):

	Party members	Readers	Voters
Germany	200,000	300,000	2,700,000
Czecho-Slovakia	140,000	100,000	1,500,000
France	70,000	220,000	1,500,000

---

*The above figures have been estimated on entirely general data, without material.

A comparison of these figures shows that the ratio of party members to the readers of the party press in these countries is on an average 2:3. But the ratio of party press to party voters is 1:9.

If the above calculation were to be supplemented by the figures referring to the smaller parties belonging to the Communist International (quite apart from those obliged to work illegally), the result would doubtless be much worse. (With the exception of the Anglo-Saxon countries, for instance America, where there are about 120,000 readers of the Communist press to about 20,000 party members and 33,000 voters.)

THIS computation relates to the Communist daily newspapers only. The Communist press is in such a poor state with reference to special questions and particular strata of the population (the press dealing with trade unions, women's interests, officials' interests, etc.) that is is scarcely able to improve the ratio. Thus for instance in Germany the editions published by the Communist trade unions and special press only amount to about 200,000 to 300,000 copies against an edition of about 7 million published by the social democratic trade union press. And this apart from the bourgeois trade union press, and the numerous publications issued by socal democracy and bourgeoisie for the different categories and groups of the population.

It will be seen from the above that scarcely every tenth worker among those who express their confidence in the Communist International at the ballot boxes is actually a reader of a Communist paper, that is, under the immediate daily influence of Communist ideology. And it would be a bitter illusion for the whole of Europe were we to believe that we can convert a worker into a conscious champion of revolution if we cannot induce him to read our party press. And it is one of the most important tasks of Bolshevization to convert these masses of sympathizers into a conscious vanguard of proletarian revolution.

"We should be deceiving ourselves, and closing our eyes to the greatness of our task, if we were to belittle these tasks, if we were to ignore the difference between the vanguard and the masses pressing forward towards it, and if we were to forget that it is the duty of this vanguard to raise ever increasing masses of the others to its own level." (Lenin: "A Step Forwards.")

THE fundamental element of Bolshevization is the simultaneuos development and revolutionary intensification of class consciousness and revolutionary will both in the party as vanguard and in the broad masses. A Bolshevization of the party without a simultaneous Bolshevization of the masses involves the serious danger of sectarianism, and the result would be that the party, instead of increasing its influence upon the masses, would become alienated from them.

We should commit a grave error were we to refuse to recognise the objective material reasons why the Communist press is not a mass press at the present time. But it would be more than an error, it would be unpardonable, were we to refuse to recognize that the main causes do not lie in the misery or indifference of the working class, but in the character of the methods of agitation and organisation hitherto pursued by our Communist press.

"The character of our newspapers does not change as it should change in a state of society passing thru the transition from capitalism to socialism." (Lenin: "The Character of Our Newspapers.")

The Bolshevization of the press means that the Communist press is to be reformed in a manner rendering it the press of the broad masses.

WOMEN WORKERS PARADE IN N. Y. AGAINST BOSSES

United Council Meets at Victims' Graves

NEW YORK, June 3.—The United Council of Working Class Women together with members of the Workers (Communist) Party held a demonstration for the victims of the Triangle fire. About sixty workers, members of the United Council and the Workers Party marched in a body from the headquarters of the Workers Party on 14th street, carrying banners bearing the following inscriptions: "Remember our children who died in the Triagnle Waist factory fire for bosses' profits"; "Join the United Council which fights for the protection of our children"; "Remember the Triangle fire victims and fight for the workers' interests"; "Join the Workers (Communist) Party the only party that fights the battles of the working class."

Visit Victims' Graves.

The weeping and moaning of some of the marchers at the graves of their loved ones lost in the terrible fire was a sad and impressive thing.

Comrade Kate Gitlow of the Council acted as chairman of ceremonies and introduced the speakers. Kate Fabrikant, member of the Harlem Council, spoke in Jewish.

Comrade Gitlow introduced Comrade Antony Weschaler of the Hungarian Council and member of the Workers Party as one who had battled for years first in Hungary and then in America for the workers. Comrade Weschsler, speaking in Hungarian, said that the Triangle fire victims burned in 1911, were but part of capital's toll of working class lives.

Comrade Poydasheff was introduced as one of the men who is interested in seeing the United Council of Working Class Women and all similar working class organisations of women built up. Comrade Poydasheff spoke in Russian.

Bosses Kill Children.

Sadie Amter spoke, representing the Workers (Communist) Party.

A resolution was adopted, pledging the support of the council in the fight against the horrible conditions prevailing in industry and in fighting for control of government power by the workers and farmers of this country under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Bronx Section of Party to Meet to Discuss Union Work

NEW YORK, June 3.—The Bronx Section of the Workers Party will hold a meeting on Friday, June 12, 1925, to hear a report on industrial work and to discuss plans for the future work. The meeting will take place at 8 p. m., at the Workers' Hall, 1347 Boston Road. All party members of the branches are urged to be present.

One of the most important subjects will be taken up by the city industrial organizer—the general industrial work and activity in New York City—and discussion will follow.

The Bronx Section Committee has decided that the comrades of the branches must not make any other engagements for Friday, June 12, as that evening has been put aside by the section for instructive and constructive industrial work. We are sure that you will realize the importance of this meeting and will do everything possible to attend. Come early and bring your membership card.

Comrades, altho great and important work has been done by the Workers Party on the trade union field, we must admit that during the last two years there have been features in our work against which we must put up an energetic fight. Against all the weak points of our work, a lack of discipline among party members, who allow themselves to be guided by their impressionist views, we discover a desertion of trade union work or an elaboration of the members' own trade union policy, regardless of the decisions of the party. And we also note an absence of Communist fractions, etc.

This is your opportunity to meet the situation, so do not fail to come.

REDS STRANGLED AND HANGED IN POLISH PRISONS AFTER BRUTAL TORTURES OF WHITE TERRORISTS

WARSAW, Poland, June 3.—The political prisoners were in strict solitary confinement in very small cells. During the night one heard groans in the prison. We could get into contact thru knocking at the walls. We were informed that new prisoners had arrived and were brutally tortured. Every morning new terrible news reached us. One of the prisoners had the nails torn out of his fingers, to others the arms were turned out and the skin hurt with iron instruments. To others the teeth were broken away, their mouths were injured so much that they could speak no more.

Of the 150 prisoners we saw only six in the courtyard, all the others were wounded and tired in their cells. Even the walk in the open air was a torture to them. One of them wanted to lean against the wall because he was tired. He was immediately driven to the cell with the words, "You dog, if you can't walk, remain in your cell and perish."

Prisoners Protest.

This was the last walk. We had protested and were put in strict solitary confinement. The cells were cold and wet. We were terribly cold. Deep silence was in the prison as in the courtyard. Only sometimes one heard groans.

Suddenly the door of my neighboring cell was torn open. One heard a terrible fight, a noise and groans—no cries. s he strangled? I press my ear against the door and hear a low groaning.

Silently the hangmen leave the cell. They lock the door. The night lies in silence. No groan any more. I lie frozen on the cold floor and, without knowing, if the comrade is still alive.

Murdered in Cell.

When the morning dawn rises before the window like a ghost, I knock again on the wall as the day before. Silence in the death room. I go to the window and call with a pleading voice: "Comrade," and then I knock again and repeat, but no answer—strangled and hanged.

And nobody knows the tortures suffered by a human being in a lonely prison cell. I dig his name into the wall with my nails—strangled and hanged. Then there is the rumor in the prison: Comrade N. has hanged himself in his call. The bourgeois press reports of a suicide in the prison of the "Holy Cross" in white Poland.

Did you order a bundle for Red Week?

PEABODY COAL COMPANY CUTS MINERS' WAGE

pillar method of mining to the long wall system, which will reduce the wages and cut conditions to the bone.

The gob is being thrown to one side and the machine cuts clear along the rib, to the boundary on one side of the room. The miners are taken from the tonnage rate and put loading at the $8.04 rate as day men.

A Way of Wage Cutting.

This system will reduce the men's earning power by running in extra cars to be loaded for the $8.04 rate and create a condition where nobody but the strongest and healthiest men will be able to stand up.

Peabody shut down the No. 8 mine and after four months opened it up with a reduction in working conditions —conditions that were established for many years. The midafternoon cages permitted all the men in the bottom at that time to go up. Now only one cage load is permitted and the balance have to climb 600 feet up a wet air shaft.

New Tricks Ahead.

No. 7 is now shut down and No. 8 opened up, the men are waiting for the next proposition from Peabody, knowing from experience another attempt to cut conditions is in sight. The men are fighting the onslaught and the cases are up before the board.

The May 1st celebration was a success in Kincaid, and the No. 7 mine was practically idle as a result. The following morning Peabody's superintendent called the men into the office and inquired why they were idle and one man was fired for replying—that it was none of his business. The case was fought and the man reinstated.

A Systematic Campaign.

Thruout the Peabody mines a campaign of systematic wage and condition reducing is being pressed, which is being bitterly fought by the miners.

As usual, tthe Farrington crowd is quietly sitting by and refusing to militantly take the lead. If Farrington had an inch of progressive thought or action he would notify the Illinois operators to comply with the contract or shut down every mine in Illinois until they do so.

FEW ISSUES TO DETRACT FROM "GOOD TIME AND LOTS OF BEER" AT MUSICIANS' UNION MEETING

(By The Federated Press)

Delegates returning to Chicago from the Niagara Falls convention of the American Federation of Musicians report a happy family gathering with few issues to distract those attending from having a good time. The family character of the meet was intensified by the testimonial to Joe Weber, national president for the past 25 years. He was voted a life membership and an album signed by the 400 delegates. Both Weber and National Secretary Kerngood were reelected. The national headquarters remain at Newark, New Jersey.

The convention voted to extend the union's jurisdiction over jazz and vaudeville bands. Hitherto a union member could play with non-union men in such bands but now it will have to be all union or straight open shop. Open shop will bring union complications to the proprietors elsewhere if they persist.

The convention also raised the scale in the traveling musical organizations over which the locals have no jurisdiction. Band leaders in burlesque shows will get $90 a week hereafter instead of $85 if the manager values union co-operation. Other burlesque musicians benefit from the new rule fixing 8 performances a week instead of 9 for traveling shows. The scale for circus bands was raised from $32 a week to $40.

Questions agitating a number of locals were not settled by the national body. The competition of regimental bands whose music is thrown in with the rent when an armory is rented in various states was a matter left to the locals in the states affected.

The practice hurts the union musicians because many people will accept the non-union regimental band when they have to pay for it anyhow, tho they prefer genuine music. The problem of competition from bands maintained by corporations and municipal bodies that play for nothing at public functions, parades and play grounds and parks was also left for the future.

"Lots of Beer."

"We found lots of good beer when we went across the lake to Toronto," the delegates agreed.

In spite of the inroads of jazz and automatic player instruments and electric bands, the membership has grown steadily from per-war days and suffered nothing from the post-war deflation that cut the membership of other crafts in half and in some cases took away nine-tenths of the enrollment. The 60,000 members in the American Federation of Musicians in 1914 climbed to 70,000 in 1920 and reached the high mark of 77,100 in 1924.

The 1926 convention will be held in Salt Lake City.

Heat Kills Three Clevelanders.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 3. — Another day of sweltering heat following the hottest June 1, recorded in 54 years in Ohio weather history, faced Cleveland and other parts of the state today. Thundershowers tomorrow were expected to ameliorate the intense heat, which has taken three lives in Cleveland and suburbs. The highest mark here yesterday was 91. Marietta suffered under a temperature of 95, the highest recorded in the state.

Norwegian Firm Gets Red Mining Concession on the Caspian Sea

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, June 3.—The new mining concession recently granted to the Norwegian firm, Mr. Stern, extends over an area of 5,500 square miles, and is situated on the Buzachi Peninsula on the Caspian Sea. The nearest town is Alexandrovsk, which lies at a distance of some 160 miles.

The concessionaire has the right to prospect and bore for oil and to mine all minerals except platinum, undertaking to expend during the next five years, a minimum of 800,000 rubles on the working of the concession and on providing equipment and setting up machinery.

The terms provide for the payment of rent on a graduated scale and of a royalty on profits which is fixed at the rate of 15 per cent for oil, 3 to 5 per cent for ores, and 50 per cent for gusher oil. The concession is granted for a period of 40 years. As a guarantee of fulfillment of the contract, a sum of 50,000 rubles has been deposited.

Upon the termination of the contract, the undertaking becomes the property of the state, the latter receiving the right to buy out the concessionaire after thirty years.

Boosts for Oldest Russian Fair.

MOSCOW—(By mail)—It is reported from Paris that at a preliminary exchange of views, held at the Lyons Fair, on the question of organization of the Franco-Soviet company "Nizni-Lyons, Ltd.," this company proposes in the first place to proceed with the construction of the bridge over the river Oka, at Nijni-Novgorod, and then with the erection of various constructions both in the fair area and outside of it.

On all these subjects Malysheff, chairman of the Nijni-Novgorod Fair Committee, had a long talk with the then French premier.

After visiting the Lyons Fair, Malysheff left for Milan to attend the international fairs conference, as a delegate of the Nijni-Novgorod fair—the oldest one in Russia.

MORE WAGES OR SHORT WORKDAY SHOWN POSSIBLE

on the Pacific coast behind the already low level of a year ago.

Employment thruout the indutarial establishments of the country is 1.7 per cent below April, 1924. This means 9½ per cent below April, 1923, and more than 21 per cent below April 1920. Manufacturing industry is thus employing one-fifth fewer workers than in 1920.

Wages Fall Off.

The total distributed in wages is also off about 1.5 per cent compared with a year ago. The country's factory workers are getting seven per cent less wages than in 1923 and about 28 per cent less than in April, 1920.

There was practically no change of employment between March and April but the amount paid on wages decreased 1.7 per cent showing an increase in part-time operation. According to the bureau's figures industry as a whole in April operated 92 per cent of full time with an average of 83 per cent of a full normal force of employes. The percentages for 15 leading industries were:

Industries	Pct. operation	Pct. of full force	Pct. of full-production
Automobile	91	76	69
Baking	95	87	83
Boot & shoe	83	80	66
Brick	91	86	78
Car bldg.	96	87	84
Cotton	95	92	88
Electrical supplies	94	79	74
Foundries, machine shops	92	73	67
Flour	63	71	45
Iron & steel	89	81	72
Meat packing	86	78	67
Men's clothing	94	87	82
Silk	97	86	83
Women's clothing	93	82	76
Wool	90	85	76

These figures show how much more in shoes or bricks or automobiles or cotton goods or clothing the country could turn out without additional investment of capital if enough wages were distributed to create a market for the full product. The auto industry could have turned out about 40 per cent more machines, the shoe industry nearly 50 per cent more shoes, manufacturers of electrical supplies 35 per cent more electrical devices and the men's clothing industry 22 per cent more suits and coats during April if operated full-time with a full working force. Industry as a whole could have turned out a third more goods for it operated only 67 per cent of full-time capacity.

Shorter Hours Possible.

From another angle the figures show that present production could be regularized on the basis of a much shorter working week. For with full employment the regular hours could have been reduced as follows without curtailing production: auto 31 per cent, baking 17 per cent, shoe 34 per cent, brick 22 per cent, cotton 12½ per cent, metal products 33 per cent, iron and steel 28 per cent fewer hours, etc.

Of course the percentages vary from month to month but reports covering the last two years show that less than full-time capacity operation is chronic, in fact, that it is becoming worse as the productivity of machinery increases. They indicate roughly the extent to which the people as a whole could have more goods or more leisure if production were regulated for the common benefit instead of for profiteers.

Want Russian Trade.

LONDON.—At the annual conference of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the delegation of the Leeds chamber of commerce submitted a resolution proposing the appointment of a mixed commission of representatives of the British and Soviet governments for investigating the question of the legality and fairness of the Russian prewar debts to England.

The resolution was supported by the representatives of over one hundred largest engineering works in Britain.

Several speakers on this subject urged the necessity of resuming more regular business with the Russian market in view o fthe unemployment situation in England.

Union Plumbers Strike for $10 Day.

MILWAUKEE, June 3.—Over 200 union plumbers, two-thirds of the journeymen in Milwaukee, are on strike since June 1 for a $1 a day raise from the $9 scale that expired on that day. The other building crafts are taking no part in the controversy.

Cal Will Ride Specials

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3.—President Coolidge will henceforth travel in special trains, in spite of all his economy talk it is announced. He declares the railroads urged him to ride in private trains to "insure protection."

BUILDERS AT WORK

The First Gun Is Fired for Red Week

From the Heart of the Steel District

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, from the indications in the letter of the sub-district organizer, Comrade Wallace T. Metcalfe, is going to make Red Week loom big "where men make steel."

"On June 14," this cmorade writes, "we hold our third annual picnic and as our DAILY WORKER drive for Red Week opens on the 15th, we will try to give it a good start here on the day before.

"We are offering prizes in the form of books and we would like the DAILY WORKER to send a prize (a book) to be donated to any worker securing the highest number of subs for the DAILY WORKER on June 14, so that we can have every single worker attending the picnic solicited for a sub."

The book (it has been decided there will be more than one!) will go to the worker who does best—more power to his powers of persuasion! But the best feature of it all is that here where workers slave hardest, is the response to the one paper that is fighting their battles and voicing their aspirations.

For Red Week (June 15 to June 21)

Rush in your orders of how many copies of the DAILY WORKER you will need EVERYDAY—how many special sub cards you can use (remember you can take subs during this week at the rate of two months for one dollar)—pledge yourself and your branch to get a certain number of subs. Rush in the advice at once! Don't delay!

of his spiritual gizzard. One of those questions is evolution, since it is perfectly harmless and is tolerated by everybody nowadays except avatistic types like William Jennings Bryan. Even the catholic church might officially reconcile itself to the theory of evolution but for the difficulty of getting anybody with a reasonable respect for the use of his reasoning power to swallow the dogma of the immaculate conception without straining at his necktie.

BUT Thomas takes a plunge into the quicksands when he lets down the bars on the sacred rule of the majority, ever so little. What will become of his position against the dictatorship of the proletariat, a dictatorship of the majority it is true, but exercised by a minority of the majority in the interests of the majority? Thomas says: "There are some questions which cannot be decided by the ignorance of the majority. Democracy makes itself ridiculous when it passes anti-evolution laws." Oh you doubting Thomas! Perhaps the Russian peasants would have voted to kill Rasputin, supply the Czar's queen with a more elegant cake-eater and give Nickolas a salary increase, if Lenin allowed them the privilege of having a referendum on the burning problems of the stormy days of October 1917. But they didn't have the chance.

SINCE Chester Wright took to peddling fake oil stocks, Norman Thomas is the most dangerous dealer in economic fallacies, whose mental meanderings find their way into the labor press of the United States. His league for industrial democracy, is supported by the Garland fund and can therefore afford to supply intellectually impoverished editors of labor papers with column-filling material. Those editors care very little what kind of stuff they publish, provided it is not radical. Thus Thomas effusions come in handy.

ONE sub-editorial sent out by th ex-preacher on his editorial serv ice of May 29, deals with the menac to liberalism which prevails in Ger many, thru reactionary control of th courts. He writes: "In that countr both monarchists and Communist have been guilty of political murder and rebellion. The monarchists be tween January 1919 and June 24, 192 carried out 354 political assassina tions. The perpetrators receive penalties aggregating 90 years and months incarceration and one life im prisonment. During the same perio the Communists carried out 22 poli ical assassinations. The total punish ment was 10 executions, 3 life impr sonments and 248 years and 9 month incarcerations."

IT should be noticed that while thos assassinations were being perp trated by the monarchists, a sociali government ruled in Germany. should also be noticed that not on execution of a monarchist took plac in punishment for their crimes. Bu ten Communists or suspected Com munists were executed in retaliatio for the 22 political assassinations a tributed to them, tho even Norma Thomas should know that Commu ists are strongly opposed to individu terror as a means of everthrowin the capitalists system.

• • •

THOMAS has nothing to say again the murders committed by h friends Scheidemann and Noske. The did not murder monarchists. The turned their guns on revolutiona workers, with the result that monarc ism is enthroned in Germany tod instead of the rule of labor. Liber ism is in danger, says Thomas. A the sanctimonious hypocrite w never misses an opportunity to sl der the Soviet government, in his p culiarly slimy fashion, expresses h disapprobation over the present sit tion in Germany in these mild word "Liberals and socialists who have p tested against Soviet repression ca not be silent in regard to this sit tion." Ugh!

The Outlook

The industrial outlook in the United States for the balance of the year is not so good. A note of pessimism is creeping into the articles of the business experts who usually peddle optimistic mental pabulum to the middle class and to add to their fears it begins to appear that the agricultural situation is not of the most hopeful kind.

There is a great surplus of unskilled workers in the large cities of the middle west, an unusual condition for this time of the year when the haying and harvest season is beginning. The government bureaus report a 15 to 20 per cent decrease in the demand for agricultural labor and the wages offered farm hands have declined from $5 to $15 per month.

Unskilled labor in the cities reflects in its wages the decline in demand by a maximum of 40 cents per hour and a minimum of 30 cents—a decrease of something like a third from a year ago.

Crops are bad and to us it appears that many farmers have been afraid to increase their acreage to any great extent due to the belief that the high prices of last fall were largely the result of speculation and could not be maintained. The two factors contribute to the drop in the demand for agricultural labor.

It is fairly certain that there will be no bumper crop in the U. S. as was the case last year and indications now are that a slackening of industry will be simultaneous with agricultural depression.

That this belief prevails in official circles is shown by the special bulletins sent by the various commercial agencies to their clients to the effect that the next congressional elections will see a swing against the republican administration.

Official labor, since its wild plunge of last year into the hitherto unexplored regions of political action outside the capitalist parties thru participation in the LaFollette movement, has remained more or less quiescent after a round of mutual recrimination but among the rank and file there are important evidences of discontent crystallizing into a lfet wing movement of far broader proportions than any yet seen in this country. Coal miners, carpenters, machinists—key unions—with barbers and other miscellaneous unions are developing rank and file programs of surprising militancy with strong followings.

Even in the railway brotherhoods, notably the trainmen, there have been such unheard of events as progressive campaigns against the reactionary leadership.

The evident intention of the capitalists to seize the first opportunity for war on the union membership, which even the policy of class collaboration cannot disguise, has made the rank and file watchful and unusually suspicious of the officialdom.

All of the above are signs of the sharpening of the class struggle in the United States. In addition to these indications there is the quite obvious fear on the part of a large section of the middle class that the foreign adventurers of the House of Morgan are drawing the country into entanglements pregnant with the danger of new wars. Even the overtime efforts of the propagandists of imperialism cannot quite allay this fear, which finds its expression in scores of pacifist and semi-pacifist organizations, helpless to stop war, but significant of the drift of sentiment among the small fry of capitalist America.

Internationally, the political situation is vibrating with the clash of imperialist rivalries in Morocco, the Balkans, Mesopotamia and China.

We stand on the eve of new developments in the class conflict and upon the Workers (Communist) Party is the responsibility bringing into the confused atmosphere of the American labor movement new clarity of thought and a new will to struggle.

We must carry on our work within the mass organizations of the American toilers with ever greater energy. We must endeavor to erect on this foundation a labor party with which to give a mass character to the election campaigns of labor and thru which the political education of the American working class can be expedited. But most of all must we concentrate on building a mass Communist Party, strong, self-reliant, skilled in class warfare and capable of giving revolutionary leadership in the mass struggles for which the development of American capitalism has created the historical background.

American Democracy in China

American machine guns are pouring a hail of death into the ranks of striking Chinese workers and students who have taken the part of the strikers against the exactions of foreign employers. The situation is fraught with serious possibilities.

The struggle has a two-fold significance. It is a fight of the Chinese masses against the brutalizing working conditions and low stanard of living forced upon them by the capitalists and also a struggle on the part of the Chinese people as a whole against the degrading system of foreign domination imposed on the country by all the capitalist powers.

In this game of oppression the United States is taking a leading part. The country that made a magnanimous gesture to China by returning its share of the Boxer indemnity, now uses the machine gun to force the Chinese to comply with the wishes of the money barons of Wall Street. The Chinese masses no longer look upon the United States as their friend. That place in their affections is now occupied by Soviet Russia, which joins with the Chinese people in fighting foreign political and economic domination.

One significant feature of the Shanghai strike is the fact that all the capitalist powers, Japan included, are united against the workers. Tho the robber nations have conflicting interests they present a united front against labor. This should be a valuable lession in the need for unity to the working class.

The awakening of the Chinese millions is a serious threat to the plundering powers. In this period of temporary stabilization for capitalism, a slumbering China—slumbering but willing to slave for the capitalists—would mean hundreds of millions of dollars in profits for the plunderbund. But the days of capitalism are numbered if not yet ended. As the blackest of the clouds pass out of the capitalist sky in Europe, trouble looms in the colonies, today in China, yesterday in Morocco, tomorrow, perhaps in India.

The colonial masses are awakening and this is a most encouraging sign of the times for labor. It carries an ominous note for capitalist imperialism.

Link Amsterdam Trade Union International With League of Nations' Disarmament Conference

By OTTO (Berlin)

"The Executive of the International Federation of Trade Unions has decided, simultaneously with the disarmament conference to be held by the league of nations in Geneva, to arrange in the same place a conference of the organizations affiliated to the International Federation of Trade Unions."

THE "disarmament conference" of the league of nations, and also the "disarmament conference" of the International Federation of Trade Unions which is to be held at the same time, are the effects of definite causes. What causes? Before all the fact that all the capitalist states, both small and great, have commenced a competition in armaments which places that which preceded 1914 completely in the shade. Feverish preparations are being made for war by land, air, and sea. If the storm should break, then the wholesale slaughter of 1914-1918 will appear insignificant in comparison.

This fact led to the first "disarmament conference" in Washington on the part of the great powers, as well as to the Hague peace conference on the part of the organizations of the working class. If the Amsterdam International now once again convenes such a conference, it only proves that the tremendous competition in armaments of all capitalist states has not been restricted by the Washington disarmament conference, but that it has become an ever nearer approaching danger of war. The new conference further proves that the Hague peace resolutions have done nothing to change the rivalry in armaments. The iron arguments of sea, land and air armaments speak another language than that of the Hague paper resolution.

THE present step of the I. F. T. U. is a practical admisison that both it and its representatives on the league of nations have not checked the armaments fever. In spite of all the hymns of peace of the leaders of the I. F. T. U. and its representatives on the league of nations, none of the great powers takes a notice of the league of nations and of the I. F. T. U. This fact was rendered obvious at the last session of the league of nations and serves best to expose the fraud of world peace which has been carried on hitherto by means of the league of nations by all its supporters in the face of the working masses. It was there that Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, rejected the Geneva protocol, "as its clauses were calculated to increase the danger of war instead of promoting the idea of peace!" Briand, the representative of France in the league of nations, also used this as an occasion to declare, "that it is quite impossible for the league of nations to come before the world at present with the declaration that it cannot do anything to stop war."

The bankrupt peace angels of the International Federation of Trade Unions are quite disappointed over this defeat of their policy and excuse themselves by saying:

"They would never have believed, that after the last barbarous war, any government, even if it were a conservative government, would have the audacity to speak so openly of the necessity for alliances and armaments as was recently done by the foreign minister, Chamberlain."

AND in such a moment of pointed declarations on the part of the great powers against the Geneva protocol of the league of nations, the International Federation of Trade Unions convenes its conference, without communicating the agenda or the program of the conference to the working class and the public. Instead of appealing to all workers, as well as to their organizations, in order to carry out the immediate common steps in the active fight against the armaments race, the International Federation of Trade Unions intends to do the following:

"At this conference it will not be a question of a great demonsration, similar to that of the Hague peace conference, but of exerting practical and impressive influence upon the representatives of the governments themselves."

How these Amsterdam trade union diplomats are going to exert practical and impressive influence upon Chamberlain and Briand, as well as upon their policy of iron arguments, they do not say. And why do they communicate the import of their practical and impressive influence to the representatives of the governments and conceal it from the working class? Simply because: "in no case must there be a great demonstration similar to that of the Hague conference!"

THERE we have the reason for secret diplomacy. The workers of all countries must see thru this and energetically call a halt to this activity of the Amsterdam trade union diplomats. Whilst at the Hague conference there were representatives of the Soviet trade unions present, at the conference to be now convened by the International Federation of Trade Unions only the organizations affiliated to the Amsterdam Trade Union International are to take part. Whilst at the Hague conference there stood on the agenda the ways and means for common action against all imperialist wars, it is now sought to prevent this, because the trade unions of the Soviet Union serve as a brilliant example in the active fight of the workers against all imperialist wars. Whilst at the Hague congress the trade unions of the Soviet Union demanded, instead of the proposed paper resolution, the active mobilizing of the masses against armaments, with all the means of the class struggle, and a common international week of agitation against imperialism to be concluded by a one day's protest strike, this interference is to be avoided when exercising "impressive influence upon the representatives of the governments."

If the International Federation of Trade Unions does not know what means the working class has at its disposal, then the workers in all countries must raise their voices and declare: The question of war preparations or peace is not an affair of the International Federation of Trade Unions but of the whole of the international working class!

JUST as was the case in the last world war of 1914-1918, the whole working class, without distinction, will be hit by the coming war. And if the workers do not wish to let this mass slaughter sweep over them while they remain helpless as in 1914-1918, they must act unitedly and with determination. This requires, at least, the closest fighting unity and solidarity in this question with the trade unions of the Soviet Union. For the Russian working class is threatened by the war danger promoted by the armaments competition of the capitalist states, no less than the West-European working class. Their successful policy in the defensive struggle against all military actions on the part of the West European imperialists is the best instructor as to how to exercise "practical and impressive influence."

If the working class does not desire to wade once more thru a sea of blood, then it must stretch out a hand to the Soviet Union and see to it that the International Federation of Trade Unions complies with this demand and establishes a close fighting alliance of the whole working class for the fight against all military intentions of the imperialist states.

The American Massacre in the Far East - -

By Robert Minor

AMERICAN troops have fired upon Chinese workers and students!

Is this the opening shot in a coming world war?

An American "citizen" has been shot. What citizen? "Private T. G. McMartin of the American company of volunteers at Shanghai," say the reports. The complaint is that a Chinese "mob" fired upon American troops, wounding McMartin who is an innocent dentist, but was under arms in military formation on Chinese soil at the time he was shot.

What are the American troops doing in China? What are American ships of war doing in Chinese harbors?

IF Chinese troops were marching under arms somewhere in the United States—say in California—what would happen? Is there any doubt that some of them would be shot?

But this is not in California or Illinois. It is in China, and China is supposed to be different. The Americans are in China for the purpose of plundering and exploiting the 440,000,000 Chinese people and the enormous resources of that marvelous land. The Americans are the "superior race" in China for the purpose of enslaving the "inferior" yellow Chinese.

Chinese workers are being employed in factories for wages ranging from one and one-half cents a day for women to fifty cents a day for the higher paid men. Chinese children are being worked twelve hours a day at the age of six years and up. This is the sugar bowl around which are swarming the filthy imperialist flies of all big capitalist nations. The murder of men, women and even babies is being done by American capitalists for the money that is to be made in fabulous sums thru the act of murder. No crime of a foot-pad who murders to obtain a pocketbook, no crime of a Leopold and Loeb who murder for the fun of witnessing death, can compare in cold-blooded, heartless, sordid brutality with the crime which is being committed in China under the American flag. The exploitation, the filling of graveyards with the bodies of mere babies worked to death, is the first crime. The shooting of the protesting Chinese workers and students on their own soil is the next crime.

BUT it is profitable. The American capitalist class, the most ruthless beast of history, will continue the expoitation and the murder at any cost. The first turning loose of the American machine guns on the Chinese in Shanghai is a forwarning of what is to follow.

The smug gentlemen in Washington will seek means to continue and extend the exploitation. Military men and navy commanders will sit and plot for the exploitation of Chinese babies for the profits of American corporations. The recent gigantic fleet maneuvers in the Pacific had the purpose of preparing for the conquest of the Far East. All the strength of the marvelous machine development of the United States can and will be mobilized for the wholesale murder of the Chinese, and for the struggle against all competing powers for the first right to do so.

THE Chinese nation is being solidified with an intense determination to resist subjection. Of course, the Chinese industrial working class is the backbone of the movement and the one unswervingly reliable force of resistance. But also the nationalist movement of China is supporting the resistance. In a subject colonial or semi-colonial country, the nationalist movement may objectively be a vastly different force from what it is in a dominant nation, and in the case of China the nationalsit movement is arrayed against the foreign exploiter and is under the circumstances a revolutionary force.

The Chinese nationalist movement has for its slogans the independence of China from foreign domination, the abolition of extra-territorial rights of the foreign capitalists, the abolition of foreign concessions and foreign control of customs.

THE Chinese labor movement—new and glorious phenomenan of the new epoch!—is directed against the conditions of inhuman exploitation by the capitalists of the cotton mills and other industries, and these capitalists are also foreigners. The existence and militancy of this industrial labor movement gives the backbone and ensures the dyanmic force of the revolution.

The fact that the upheaval takes the form of a general strike of industrial workers gives the peculiar essence of the present situation. This is the guarantee that the affair will be no passing incident, but an enduring movement which leads on without doubt toward the final crisis of world imperialism.

IT is entirely possible that the United States will be called to war in Asia in the chain of events now occurring. American marines were landed at Shanghai last Monday. More warships are on the way.

The direct drawing of the United States into the situation greatly intensifies the probability of war. Other great powers, weakened by the last war and fearful of another big conflict at the present time, are not so able as the Unietd States to throw the world into a cataclism at this moment. American capitalism is bursting with the material for an attempt at world conquest. The Chinese propaganda of resistance has heretofore apparently been aimed chiefly at the British and Japanese imperialists. Now it must inevitably be turned against the American imperialists with intense vigor. The Chinese wall-poster cartoons which are stuck up on every lamp post, door and wall, picture the foreign imperialists as turtles. The turtle, to the Chinese, symbolizes all that is filthiest in human affairs. Inevitably the American imperialists must be pictured as the biggest turtle of them all.

How is the American working class going to respond to the call for mass murder in China in the clearest possible form of strikebreaking? Lives there another Gompers who can persuade the American labor movement to support the massacre of Chinese workers and peasants in a war for "democracy"?

THE duty of the American working class is to prepare to support the Chinese workers and the Chinese nationalists against the invasion by American militarism, and to support them by every effective means in their power. A like duty faces the working class of England, the British dominions, France, Italy and Japan. As to the Russian working class, it will do its duty to the full measure, and, possessed as the Russian workers are, of full state power, this will be no small measure. The now long established relations between revolutionary Russia and revolutionary China are a guarantee that China will not be without powerful help if this is indeed the beginning of the coming world conflict.

Will the American working class face its duty? One thing is sure: the American Communists will do their utmost to bring the American workers to face it.

Whether the second world war, centering about Asia, is precipitated early or late, these strirring events in China should be a warning against any foolish dreams of permanent stabilization and a long period of peaceful development of capitalism. It should be a warning that if there is a temporary pause in the development of the revolutionary world situation, it is a period in which to build the Communist parties in all countries as thoroly and as rapidly as it can be done. Especially the American party has this duty. The picture of the gigantic tasks we have to perform here in this center of the strongest, most brutal of capitalist societies, together with this threat of the imminence of a world cataclism, should stir every American Communist to work night and day for the building of our party to a size and Bolshevik character more in measure with the task.

THE machine guns which massacred the Chinese workers in Shanghai should be heard in every branch and every shop nucleus of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Build the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

Faces to the Far East! Bring the American workers to undrestand that the Chinese workers are fighting our fight, in which we, too, must play our part.

Banking the Workers

Ranking officers of the army and navy, trade union leaders, comedians, movie stars, officials of the Federal Reserve Bank, prominent bankers, officials of the governments of the nations, state and city, gathered together at the second anniversary celebration of the Federation Bank of New York. This is one of the so-called labor banks that have come into existence during the past few years.

This bank now has $11,000,000 in deposits and is patronized not only by workers but by the business elements, according to the proud boast of Peter Brady. president.

Among those who congratulated the Federation Bank on its prosperity were Calvin Coolidge and Andrew Mellon. That both those outstanding representatives of capitalism should endorse labor banking, is in itself a convincing argument against this form of business unionism as a substitute for fighting the bosses.

Coolidge declared that the growth of labor banking proves that this is a real democracy where the workers have the same opportunity as the capitalists for making money. Mellon said labor banking proves that the workers can save money as well as earn money. President Green of the American Federation of Labor, not to be outbabbitted by Messers Coolidge and Mellon, declared that "labor banks would have a profound effect on future progress and advancement of community and individual life upon industry." Which is almost as clear as mud.

Labor banking will not solve the problems of the working class, tho it must be admitted that it will help solve the problems of the labor fakers. Nice jobs as bank presidents and directors beckon to the tired per capita sharks, who have long since taken their last look at the picket lines. But labor banks will not eliminate the class struggle which arises from the conflict between the sellers and buyers of labor power over the cost of that commodity, which remains a commodity despite the provisions of the Clayton act.

Labor in business means that a few confidence men from the ranks of labor will reap a golden harvest in juggling the savings of the workers after the fashion of the older bankers and insurance companies.

The middle class holders of stock in the bankrupt Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad again learn that the big capitalists hold the whiphand. They are again called to "come across."

Stupidity of "Cop" Costs Innocent Man Life; Shot in Jaw

Wilbur Johnson, a messenger for the Brinks Express company, was shot and killed by a policeman who mistook him for a bandit as he attempted to collect some money from an oil station at Milwaukee Ave. and Clinton St.

"Give me the money," said the express messenger to the man in charge of the oil station, in his usual manner.

Just then Baston appeared and hearing the command, he fired, hitting the messenger in the jaw. At the county hospital the man died on the operating table.

The Assassination of Todor Panitza in Vienna

By R. ALBERT.

THE assassins in the pay of M. Zankov murdered in Prague M. Daskalov, the leader of the Peasants' League and an old colleague of Stamboulisky, the former chief of the Bulgarian peasant government.

In Milan they killed the hero of Macedonian independence, Peter Tshaulev.

To their other numerous crimes they have now added the murder in Vienna of Todor Panitza, another fighter in the Macedonian cause.

WE were already aware that they were preparing to carry out assassinations in Austria and in Italy. Documents emanating from the Bulgarian embassy in Rome have been made public regarding their activity in Italy. With regard to their activity in Vienna we only know that they have "condemned to death," among other political opponents, D. Vlakhov, the president of the Balkan federation and that they are only waiting for a suitable occasion in order to carry out their decree.

In addition to these professional cutthroats, the Sofia government is working abroad with the aid of its diplomacy and its secret police.

Its secret police study the habits of and the places frequented by the victims who have been marked down for assassination. Its diplomacy corrupts the press and is continually intriguing in the foreign chancelleries. It denounces the red peril. It demands drastic measures against Bulgarian refugees. It seeks to prove that the victims who fall under the knife or the revolver of its assassins are the guilty parties.

THE assassination in Vienna was carried out at the precise moment when the cabinets of Sofia and Belgrade, who are obviously supported by Chamberlain, are exerting a shameful pressure on the small Austrian republic. They demand nothing more nor less than the abolition of the right of asylum at present enjoyed by a few Bulgarian subjects who have escaped the slaughter in Sofia, Gorna-Djoumaia and other places.

The murder of Todor Panitza bears all the marks of a political crime.

The female student, Mencia Carniciu, who, on May 8, during the performance of Peer Gynt in the Burg Theater, aimed the bullet at the Macedonian leader, was—as the official statement shows—a frequent visitor of a certain M. Antonov, the chief of the press department of the Bulgarian embassy in Vienna. M. Antonov was in the habit of handing over to her the "remittances" sent to her by her parents in Bulgaria. Is not the matter sufficiently clear?

MENCIA CARNICIU has declared that she wanted to punish in Panitza the "wicked Macedonian." The good Macedonians are those of General Protogerov, who are in the service of M. Zankov.

The bad Macedonians are those who support the united front of all the suppressed and the free federation of the workers and peasants of the Balkans.

After the assassination of Peter Tchaulev in Milan, Todor Panitza, who was an old insurgent renowned for his courage and who for a long time lived in the mountains, fought for years against the Turkish oppression and never submitted to any foreign yoke, became the real leader of the revolutionary peasants in Macedonia.

'B. & O.' BILL JOHNSTON AND HIS GANG STEA[illegible]CHINISTS' UNION ELECTION BY DAVISON'S COUNT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 4.—William H. (B. & O. Bill) Johnston and his machine, have counted themselves into office as "re-elected" by one of the rawest election steals in the history of the International Association of Machinists.

General Secretary-Treasurer E. C. Davison has finally issued the official statement on the returns of the I. A. M. election, and the strange "prophecy" made by the Johnston machine long before the votes were counted, that "B. & O. Bill" would be reelected by "about a thousand" and that Bill Hannon and C. W. Fry of the Anderson centrist group would also be given an office, this strange prophecy of Johnston has turned out true.

"And why shouldn't it?" say the left wingers. "When Johnston's machine counts the votes and aims to split the Anderson group by this concession."

Some Davison Arithmetic.

According to the official statement by Davison, Johnston won—at that—by only a margin of 945 votes; the Davison figures being 17,076 for Anderson and 18,021 for Johnston. Davison also modestly announces that he won the general secretaryship from Stilgenbauer by 20,208 to 14,648.

Of the general vice-presidents (United States) elected, of which there are six, the Davison statement gives the plum to the following: P. J. Conlon, 20,122; J. T. Thorpe, 18,449; H. F. Nickerson, 18,249; H. W. Brown, 17,836; Robert Fechner, 17,666; and—who do you think?—William Hannon, 17,388.

Counted out of the vice-presidencies are the following with the Davison figures: Taylor, 16,948; McMahon, 16,698; McNamara, 15,786; Knudsen, 15,194; Laudeman, 16,174; Nicholson, 16,225. Then the Canadian vice-presidency is given to James Somerville by 16,377 over McClelland, 14,611.

More Figures—More Lies.

Davison says Fred Hewitt won the editorship of the official journal by 18,943 to Williams 15,812. Wm. P. Ready, 18,786; C. E. Johnson, 18,550; R. B. St. Clair, 18,356; Paul Haybrecht, 18,304; and George Wright (Canada), 18,178, were declared elected to the general law committee over Valvano, 14,609; Hoch, 16,037; Huttel, 16,049; Rankin, 17,218; and Kerrigan (Canada) 15,474.

The five delegates to the American Federation of Labor begins with the Anderson group's supporter—that is to say he was Anderson's supporter during the election—C. W. Fry, with 18,584; Dan Haggerty, 17,911; William Larkin, 17,633; George Marshall, 17,506; and C. F. Wills, 17,061. Counted out are Dalton, given 16,528 votes; Mitchell, 16,235; McGillivary, 16,117; Tucker, 16,525; Kenning 15,193.

Davison says the delegate to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada is John Munro with 17,706 votes against Clark's 16,436.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IF the Chinese had no other grevliance against the Occident they would be justified in making a revolution as a protest against the unjustified libel that they were a nation of pacifists and non-violent resistants. According to reports from Shanghai, those who are not fortunate enough to possess guns and bombs are spitting on their enemies. The vaudeville Chinaman, like the red headed stage Irishman and his Hebrew team mate, will quickly go out of fashion when the tools of foreign imperialism are given the bum's rush out of China.

IT is not outside the bounds of possibility that the red flag of Soviet China may fly in Peking before this imbroglio is over. Of course the reform socialists of the S. L. P. and their comrades of the S. P. would, in such an eventuality, write long and painfully correct articles proving that China is not yet sufficiently industrialized to make a social revolution possible. And no doubt world capitalism would spend billions of dollars in order to prove that the S. L. P.-ites there is also no doubt that the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia and the S. P.-ites were right. But would be glad to help their Chinese brothers to plant the flag of freedom at Peking and to help them keep it flying.

JAMES ONEAL proves to his own satisfaction that there is no freedom in Russia because his friend Abramovich could not organise meetings there, and agitate for the overthrow of the workers' and peasants' government. Abramovich could do this in America, only for the opposition of the workers. So could Oneal. Therefore, concludes this intellectual kluxer from Indiana, there is more freedom in the United States than there is in Soviet Russia.

• • •

ONEAL snarls back fiercely at a member of his own party who berated him for his scurrilous attacks on Russia, attacks which have surpassed in bitterness the filthiest fulminations of the official stoolpigeons of capitalism. The report of the British trade union delegation arouses Oneal's wrath. How dare those leading members of the Amsterdam International spoil the pitch of the yellow socialists by giving the Soviet Union a clean bill of health? No doubt when Purcell comes to this country to represent the British trade union movement at the A. F. of L. convention, Oneal and the yellow socialist worms who are trying to crawl up the backs of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats, will do their level best to squirt their filth on him.

THE Oneal type presents an interesting psychopathic study. The revolution did not happen to come according to directions, so when it did come, they refused to recognize it and treated it very much as a respectable deacon would treat his natural child

GLOOM SETTLES ON LEWIS PHIZ. AS MINERS KICK

Resent Postponement of Convention

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

INDIANAPOLIS, June 4.— The atmosphere around the Merchants Bank building, where the executive offices of the United Mine Workers of America are located, is anything but light and airy, despite the prevalence of electric fans. The reaction of the miners to the recommendation of the Lewis machine that the next international convention be postponed for another year is not conducive to pleasant smiles on the considerable countenance of John L. Lewis.

The membership of the organization do not cause John to lose any sleep as a rule but it is reported that he is now adding up his winnings during his term of office and figuring what he is to do after next January unless he succeeds in having the convention postponed.

Two Fakers Confer.

It is reported that Frank Farrington was in Indianapolis recently and urged Lewis to put off the next convention for "five years if necessary." Farrington is said to have swere eloquently at the rank and file in Illinois. He advised Lewis to treat the "rebellious districts the same as I handled Thompson and Watt in Springfield." Lewis is alleged to have replied "Well, Frank; the reds in Nova Scotia, Kansas and Alberta will testify that I can use the iron fist when the occasion requires, but there is a limit to our power and the miners are not the easiest people in the world to handle."

William Green made a wise move when he jumped into Sam Gompers' shoes at a time when the prestige of the reactionary officialdom of the miners' union was at a fairly high level. Lewis is reported as not being so well pleased with his own prospects for jumping into the limelight which he likes so well when the membership of the union gives him the gate.

Lewis Holding The Bag.

The head of the mine workers feels that he was let down by the Coolidge machine. He was promised the secretaryship of labor; it being understood that James J. Davis would step out as a matter of discipline when the proper time come. But Davis sticks to his job as an executive bed bug sticks to a blanket, so Lewis is now like a man dressed up and with no place to go. Of course the Coolidge administration will make a place for Lewis whenever the miners give him his walking papers, but John wants a place with power. Money, he does not need so badly. He has invested wisely and is now in a position to live comfortably on his income.

The local unions are beginning to send in protests against the postponement of the convention. Of course Lewis and his gang have the counting of the ballots. Lewis counted himself in as president in the last election, and it is expected that he will count the referendum on the postponement in his favor. But some of the fakers are afraid that if he does the job in a raw manner, the miners may march on Indianapolis as they marched on Mingo in 1921.

RIFFS THREATEN TO CUT ALGIERS, MOROCCAN R. R.

French Use League Against Natives

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, June 4—France and Spain are still negotiating with a view to possible co-operation against the Moroccans, Premier Painleve told the cabinet today. The agreements so far reached between the two countries have been kept secret, to prevent criticism in the chamber of deputies.

The Riffians are massing their troops near Kifane, and threaten to sever the French communication between Algeria and French Morocco.

The French representative at the limitation of arms conference, Paul Boncour, has demanded in the name of his government that Morocco be included in the prohibited zones and that all shipments of arms there be prevented unless requested by governments holding protectorates.

TWO MORE DAYS OF HEAT, SAYS WEATHER MAN

Damaging Rains and Windstorms in West

Little hope for immediate relief from the heat wave that has prevailed since Sunday was in store yesterday. The weather bureau announced the temperature would remain high for the next two days.

The heat was accountable for three deaths in Chicago.

Many Persons Killed

In several sections of the middle west the heat wave brought violent damaging rains and windstorms of tornado proportions. Many persons were killed in the storm. In the region around Minneapolis six deaths were reported. In Iowa eight have been killed since Monday by the storms that accompanied the high temperature. In Nebraska four persons met deaths in small tornados.

With the heat wave Chicago felt an increase in the mosquito scourge. Officials are directing a fight against the pests.

Seven Die in New York.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The death toll in the heat wave in New York and vicinity today stood at seven, and there was no relief in sight.

"Continued warm," was the forecast.

The hot weather, according to advices, encompassed the eastern states again this morning, and there were reports of numerous prostrations. Showers and cooler weather were predicted for tonight or tomorrow.

U.S. Marines in Armed Raid on Shanghai University; Use Bayonets on Students

'DRIVE OUT ALL IMPERIALISTS,' CRY CHINESE

U. S. Marines Raid the Shanghai University

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, China, June 4.— The United States marines today violated international law by an armed raid upon the Shanghai university, driving out the students at the end of bayonets and carting away stacks of books, pamphlets and school documents, one pamphlet of which the so-called "Intelligence Office" said was in English and contained a poem with the "seditious" expression "Foreign bosses are fat and prosperous. We'll make them thin."

Meanwhile, there are 150,000 striking in this city, and strike sentiment is rising in all Chinese cities against all foreign business. Shanghai is paralyzed. It is a city, the greatest port in the far east, but its wharves are idle—except two, one of them the American Dollar line.

Banks Are Closed Down.

All the Chinese banks in the city have closed down, the workers in foreign-owned mills, factories, offices, public works, industrial plants, tobacco and cigarette companies, mostly British, foreign hotels and even the clerical forces of the International Banking corporation are on strike. All the banks are barricaded.

Fifty thousand more Chinese joined the strike today including those of the British cigarette company, banks and foreign shops and offices. Also the hotel and domestic servants began to strike, the "house boys" promising to walk out in the morning.

With the "house boys" in the Shanghai Club, one of the famous lounging places of the "fat and prosperous foreign bosses"—having walked out today, however, the paunches of the imperialist business men in the international settlement are rubbed vainly against what is known as "the longest bar in the world." There are no "boys" to mix their drinks and pretend politeness to the hated exploiters of the Chinese people.

Work to Extend Strike.

The effort of the Chinese is now directed to starve the foreigners out. Strenuous efforts were made to extend the strike to all services to cut off food supplies to the foreign population.

Five Chinese were wounded when the Japanese overseers at the China-Japan Cotton mill on Poo Tung fired into a crowd which stormed the building. The crowd then tried to arm itself by invading the customs yard where big supplies of amunition are stored. The river police hastily removed the ammunition. The constabulary, meanwhile charging the mob with rifle butts. Aside from this only the minor disorder of stoning street cars were reported.

"HANDS OFF CHINA!" DRIVE IS STARTED BY WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY TO AROUSE AMERICAN LABOR

The Workers (Communist) Party of America announced yesterday thru its executive secretary, C. E. Ruthenberg, that the Communists of America would call upon the whole working class of the country to protest against the present imperialist intervention in China, the oppression permanently forced upon the Chinese people by plundering business interests on the hunt for a profit larger even than the profit returned on capitalist investment in the United States. This greed for super-profits both exploits the Chinese workers and injures those of this country.

The Workers Party, it is announced, will demonstrate in every way possible the community of interest between the underpaid, overworked wage working class of America and the exploited and oppressed population of China—robbed and plundered by the same financial group of capitalist imperialists.

Meetings thruout the country will be arranged, jointly with the Chinese living in America, demands of "Hands off China!" shall be formulated and pressed upon the American government in order that it may be forced to evacuate Chinese soil and release the heretofore helpless Chinese from th insult of extra-territorial privilege and compulsory treaties legalising the imperialist domination.

10,000 HEAVILY ARMED MEN ARE MUSTERED IN PRIVATE ARMY OF ILLINOIS BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

By CARL HAESSLER

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Ten thousand armed men, responsible to the Illinois Bankers' Association, hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition, thousands of firearms paid for by these same bankers—together with the other panoply and paraphernalia of a fighting organization that means business—constitute the new private army of the invisible government of Illinois, with headquarters at 208 S. LaSalle Street, the Wall Street of Chicago.

The ostensible state government, with headquarters at Springfield, controlled only 3,831 officers and enlisted men in the Illinois national guard, according to the 1924 report. The private army is about three times as large.

Unlike the supposed millions of "secretly armed radicals" about whom the bankers rave regularly at their annual powwows, everything is open and public in the bankers' army. The association's publicithy director, Ray E. Garrison, brags about his deputized gunmen in the public prints. His assistants boast about it over the phone to anyone who cares to ring up Wabash 2288.

"We have all of the 102 counties of the state organized for defense, except one," the association office declares, "and the remaining county will be organized within the next flew days. We hope the defense force will be permanent."

It will be permanent so long as the bankers care to spend the money on it. The state government gives no sign of interfering with the private army or with the mounting of guns and distribution of rifles and cartridges. The cost to the bankers is $250,000, according to Garrison.

And what is the purpose? Not merely to protect banks against a yearly loss of $325,000 by bank robbers, as originally announced. The Federated Press stated in March that "armed bands under highly organized private control, like that exercised by

R.I.L.U. HAMMERS DUAL UNIONISM ON SOLAR PLEXUS

International Unity is Aimed At

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—The fight against dual unionism and secessionism was one of the main features of the meeting of the executive bureau of the Red International of Labor unions, held here on April 28th. Comrade Mandalian was secretary of the meeting while Lozovsky took the chair.

The points on the agenda were:

1.—Last session of the National Unitary Confederal committee in Paris.

2.—International Metal Workers conference in Cologne and Leipsig.

3.—The coming congress of the General German Trade Union Federation.

4.—The fusion of the Metal Workers' Unions in Czecho-Slovakia.

5.—The coming Trade Union congress in Poland.

6.—The Russian Union's position in the Foodworkers' International.

7.—Correspondence with the co-operative alliance.

Comrade Bellugue reported for the French. He stated that more than one hundred departmental federations and industrial unions were represented at the national council of the Unitary Federation of Labor which was held in Paris on April 17. The three principal questions on the agenda were: unity, fascism and the Dawes plan.

The biggest question was that of unity. After listening to Comrade Bellugue's report the committee adopted the following resolution:

Fusing the Unions

PENNSYLVANIA LABOR PARTY EXCLUDES COMMUNISTS BUT BASES ITSELF ON THE TRADE UNIONS

By J. S. OTIS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, June 4.—After the clouds of the last election campaign have cleared away, we find that only those labor parties have remained in existence which had a basic foundation in the trade unions. One of these parties, the Pennsylvania labor party, has recently held its convention during the same week as the State Federation of Labor conventino.

A little better than a year ago the attention of the workers of the country was diverted to the movement of the farmers in the northwst away from the two old line parties. Great hope was held that this would develop into a real farmer-labor party and while cherishing this hope many were forgetting that a labor party must be based on the industrial workers especially those organized in the trade unions.

The make-up of the Pennsylvania labor party was such. It was organized in 1922 at the Altoona convention of the State Federation of Labor after a referendum vote had been taken by the unions affiliated with the federation. A total of 70,000 organized workers voted for the organ-

"MAKE A. W. I. U. A REAL UNION" IS CALL OF RED INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE TO HARVEST WORKERS

As the harvest season approaches the floating and unemployed workers are attracted to the middle west where, from south to north, the wheat fields of the Mississippi valley are ripening the grain that will feed America and be a factor on the international market. The I. W. W. is the only union which attempts to unite these workers, and the Red International Affiliation committee of the I. W. W., has issued the following statement upon the problem of the agricultural wage workers and the union in that industry.

municipal police force failed to report for duty on the midnight shift while the remaining 1,500 were reported wavering between holding to their duties and joining the ranks of the strikers who have tied up all city activities.

All of the absentees had previously turned in their rifles and ammunition and no disorder attended their defection. A strike of the entire Chinese force would leave on the regular force approximately 300 foreigners and 600 sikhs in addition to 1,000 civilian white guards. These white guards tonight took up the posts of the strikers acting as scabs.

Insist on Indemnities.

Prospects for peace seemed slight as the Chinese insist on indemnities and punishment of the police for the slaying of Chinese student demonstrators while the municipal council is determined not to yield.

Chinese are refusing to accept British notes and checks, but still accept American currency.

Chamber of Commerce Busy.

The Chinese chamber of commerce, Consul General Cunningham reported, is now making overtures to the foreign chambers of commerce in an attempt to bring about better conditions and a settlement of the situation.

Vice-Consul Carl D. Meinhardt, at Chang Sha, also reported that students in all the schools at Chang Sha had gone on strike in sympathy with the Shanghai strikers. The students have declared a boycott against the British and Japanese and in a riot on the main streets of the city demolished a number of private rickshaws.

Evidences of the strike spreading to Hong Kong, Canton, Tientsin, Peking, Nanking, Soochow, and Hankow have already appeared.

Official foreign office reports show similar demonstrations at Canton, Nanking, Hankow, and other cities. One of the significant developments is the joining of the students and workers by Chinese soldiery at Canton, Shanghai, and other points. The various legations are reported to have ordered warships sent at once to Shanghai.

Foreign Office Protests.

The Chinese foreign office has presented a strong note of protest to the senior minister of the diplomatic corps relative to the Shanghai disturbances, in which students and onlookers have been killed and wounded. The note points out that the Chinese authorities consider the shooting to have been entirely unwarranted.

"The students are young boys of good family, unarmed and filled with patriotic motives," the foreign diplomats are told. "The demonstrators should have been regarded and treated as ordinary malefactors and calmed by appropriate means, but the police resorted to extremes which absolutely violated all principles of humanity and justice."

The foreign office reserves the right to formulate a further protest following receipts of final reports, but holds the authorities of the international settlement in Shanghai entirely responsible. It requests that instructions be sent to the foreign consulates in Shanghai for the immediate release of those arrested.

Japanese Imperialists Alarmed.

TOKIO, Japan, June 4.—The situation in Shanghai is regarded with deepest concern by Japanese who are well informed upon recent political developments in China. The killing of students is especially deprecated. Indeed, any resort to violence upon the part of foreigners, especially Japanese, is almost certain to react calamitously.

Chinese Students Are Not Rah-rah Boys.

The student body of China cannot be compared with that class in the west or even in Japan. They exercise enormous influence in all political and commercial centers and may be regarded as a real force. For many months this element has been learning a new version of the doctrine of China for the Chinese.

Telegrams from Shanghai and Tsingtau today are alraming to Japan. Authorities realise Japan's position is most dicult because there is every reason to believe that the instigators of the present movement in China will point out Japan as the target, being representative of "oppressive imperialism," while the United States and England are held to be "imperialistic, capitalistic exploiters."

Utmost caution is necessary on the part of Japan if this country would avoid boycotts or even worse in China.

Find Red Literature in Great Place.

WASHINGTON, June 4.— Quantities of Bolshevist literature and arms and other munitions were found today when foreign police searched the Great Eastern and Burlington hotels in Shanghai, according to dispatches to the state department from Consul General Edwin S. Cunningham.

The Great Eastern is Shanghai's leading Chinese hotel and the Burlington is a foreign hotel.

Consul General Cunningham reported that the strike had spread to include domestic servants in many foreigners' homes, in the Shanghai clubs, the Astor House, and other smaller hotels.

Send Out Jap Cruiser.

TOKIO, June 4.—Acceding to the request of Consul General Yada, the cabinet today decided to dispatch the cruiser Tatsuta to Shanghai immediately.

Chinese students at a mass meeting here adopted resolutions sympathising with the Shanghai strikers and began collecting a fund for their aid.

Why Should America Help Japan, Asks Karakhan?

PEKING, China, June 4.—The reply of the powers to China's note protesting the recent shooting of Chinese rioters at Shanghai by foreign police deprecates the affair, but says the responsibility rests upon the Chinese demonstrators and not upon the authorities of the foreign concessions of Shanghai.

M. Karakhan, Soviet ambassador to China, today denied that his country was responsible in any degree for hostile activities of Chinese students.

The Soviet ambassador said, in his opinion, America might well take this opportunity to prove professed friendship for China by standing aside, saying to the other implicated powers, particularly Japan, in whose cotton mills the strike began:

"'This is your business, not ours.'

"Why should America assume any responsibility for the Shanghai outrages?" continued M. Ka.akhan.

The ambassador's analysis of the situation was that industrial conditions alone were responsible for the rebellion of Shanghai workers, pointing out there was ample evidence to that fact in the records of foreign administrations in China.

Exploitation to an intolerable extent including that of women and children was enough to precipitate the climax at Shanghai without promoting from any outside source, the ambassador said.

U. S. Troops Guard Yellow Scabs.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—American armed forces have been summoned by Consul General E. S. Cunningham at Shanghia to guard Chinese strikebreakers, according to Cunningham's excited cable report to the state department, dated June 1.

British, Japanese, French, Italian and American diplomatic representatives had a conference, that day, on the growing menace of the crowds resulting from the shooting down of strikers and students in the streets of the foreign concession during the textile strike and sympathetic general walkout.

"After hearing the latest reports from the chairman of the municipal council," he said, "it was decided to ask the respective legations to arrange for the immediate dispatch to Shanghai of sufficient naval vessels to provide for total landing forces of 2,000 men for guarding such public utilities as water and light, as well as to convince the anti-strike party of the ability of foreigners to protect those willing to continue to work. The chairman requested the immediate landing of 500 men and this request has been transmitted to the senior American naval officer at Shanghai by the American consul general."

COOLIDGE DELEGATES SIGN TREATY BARRING ALIENS FROM MEXICO

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, June 4—American and Mexican delegates to the anti-smuggling conference at El Paso, Texas, have reached an agreement, and are expected shortly to sign a treaty between the two countries, the state department announced today.

The treaty is designed to prevent smuggling of liquor, narcotics and aliens across the border, the state department said.

RED BALTIC FLEET DEMONSTRATES AGAINST BRITISH VISIT TO ESTHONIA

How We Live and Work

Editor's Note:—This paper is printed for the workers, poor farmers and those who work and sweat under the present system of society. It is a paper of the workers, by the workers and for the workers. We want to reach every corner of this country where labor is being exploited for private gains, for profit. We want the workers and farmers all over the country to read the DAILY WORKER. In order to make it more interesting and be able better to reflect the life of the wide laboring masses, WE WANT OUR READERS TO WRITE TO US. This new department "HOW WE LIVE AND WORK" will appear as often as there will be sufficient letters from our readers about the life and working conditions under which our masses struggle. Try to make the letters interesting bringing out facts which may not be known to workers in other sections of the country. Try to make them short and to the point.

An Engineer Tells His Story.

To the DAILY WORKER: I have read letters from workers in the DAILY WORKER and I want to tell the comrades about my work. I have been working on railroads for twenty years. In 1910 engineers received $5.40 per 100 miles and we pulled 875 tons. Now we have larger engines and the tonnage is 2,400 tons for which we are paid $7.56 per 100 miles. The improvements in the repair shops, machinery as well as the maintenance of way, are on a par with our department, namely, employing fewer men to do more work for less money.

One hundred miles is considered a day's work. Our pay is figured according to the number of miles we make per month. Engine crews on passenger runs are allowed to make between 4,000 and 4,800 miles per month for which engineers receive $6.24 per hundred, firemen $4.72. Freight engine crews make between 3,300 and 3,800 miles per month, engineers get $7.56 per hundred, firemen $5.72 per hundred. Men on extra board are supposed to make between 2,600 and 3,200 miles a month. If these figures are examined it will be seen that passenger crews work the equivalent of 48 days a month.

Control All of Men's Time.

Of course passenger is preferred work, but you are about ready for your "gold hat that St. Peter has waiting for you" by the time you are entiteld to passenger work. Then there are some regular freight trains, but those are getting fewer all the time. Most of the men are in what is called a pool which is operated on the principle first in first out. For instance, when you arrive at the terminal if there are six men in, seven trains will have to be run before you are called. There are no certain hours for these trains to run. One may be called nine hours after he arrives, or it may be 48 hours or even longer. The extra ones only work when some one lays off. These "pools" as well as extra board men have to be where they can be reacehd at once, and there is no pay for the time they hang around waiting. If one can't be found he is disciplined, and in some cases discharged. I have gone to bed many times in the afternoon when I could have spent the afternoon more profitably thinking that I would be called for the night shift only to find that I was not called until the next morning.

We are organized into craft unions. The engineers belong to one outfit, firemen to another, brakemen to still another, switchmen, conductors, etc., all belong to a little union of their own.

This is only part of the game. I will write more some other time,—J. T., Evansville, Ind.

HOOVER GIVEN MINES BUREAU—OTHER CHANGES

Hint at More Teapot Dome Land Transfers

WASHINGTON, June 4—President Coolidge today issued an executive order transferring the bureau of mines from the interior to the commerce department.

The president said he desired to have all governmental agencies having anything to do with business concentrated under the commerce department.

The interior department will retain control of leasing of mineral and oil lands.

The change is one of the reorganization plans for the executive departments approved by the joint congressional committee. In urging the change Secretary Work said: "The transfer made today presages action by congress and opens the way for the transfer to the interior department of bureaus from other executive branches of the government administering public lands and public works as recommended by the joint congressional committee."

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS OFFICIALS LEAGUED WITH CROOKS, IS CHARGE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 4.—A blanket report scoring southern Illinois law officials for laxity and charging irregularities, was handed to Federal Judge Fitzhenry today by the federal grand juhy in connection with twenty-one indictments, all of which were suppressed.

The grand jury declared there were two classes of public officials—those who connive with law violators for it, and those who flagrantly condone crime activities. A sweeping investigation was recommended.

Let the American Forces Before Shanghai Produce Their Martys or Sadouls

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, 438 more American naval officers, in the uniform of Wall Street imperialism, step forth to do the bidding of the empire builders of the United States. This is the annual graduating class of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, with its military counterpart at the West Point Academy on the Hudson River in New York.

"Cal" Coolidge was there, and in his best New England hypocricy, declared that "the navy is a great instrument of peace," and that he saw no cloud on the horizon. One editorial quack, in the jingo press, remarks that there is no cloud on the horizon, that it is above the horizon, the fleets of airships that he prophesies as coming out of Japan.

• • • •

But it is unnecessary today to go to Japan to look for future wars. There is a war already on in the Orient,—the war against the workers of China, in which workers' blood has already been spilled. To be sure, the workers and poor farmers of the United States have heard of no war being declared. Neither did the imperial United States of America declare war against the Workers' Republics, when the territory under Soviet Rule was invaded by American arms at Archangel and Vladivostok. Neither was war declared against Hayti, altho 3,000 natives are reliably reported as having been murdered by American marines. The same is true of other islands in the West Indies, of Mexico, Central and South America. Imperialism, especially U. S. imperialism, doesn't take the trouble to declare war to advance its ambitions. It just takes what it wants. And those who interfere suffer,—unless they are powerful enough to resist successfully.

• • • •

There is bloody work being done and to be done at Shanghai for U. S. imperialism. An active summer awaits many of those naval officers, just graduated at Annapolis, fresh in the killing game. The American Consul General Cunningham at Shanghai frantically appeals for more war vessels. There are today at the Chinese port the gunboats Elcano and Villalobos, the mine sweeper Penguin, and the destroyers Pope, Truxton, Pillsbury, Stewart and Ashville; eight warships in all. Marines are landing in large numbers, under orders, in the Orient, as in the United States, during strikes, to "Shoot to Kill!" But the call goes forth for more warships, more man killers!

• • • •

It will be remembered that large numbers of American soldiers, sent into Siberia in an effort to overthrow Workers' and Peasants' Rule revolted against the task set them. Many deserted. Others committed petty crimes in order to be sent back to "The States," more willing to serve a term in prison in this country than to aid in making war on the Soviet government. Recently the whole Wall Street military machine was thrown into spasms of fear thru the discovery that the army barracks at Honolulu harbored two Communists and more sympathizers.

• • • •

The attack of French imperialism against Soviet Rule produced two heroic figures, Jacques Sadoul and Andre Marti. Sadoul deserted to the Soviet cause from the French army and he was condemned to death charged with treason. The military court that recently tried him for treason, following his return to France and his immediate arrest, did not dare find him guilty, due to popular protest. Marti led the mutiny before Soviet Odessa, in which the French sailors ran up the red flag of the workers' revolution on their battleship and declared they would not fire on the Russian city under workers' rule. Marti was sent to prison but labor has forced his liberation and elected him to the municipal council of Paris.

• • • •

The naval forces before Shanghai, called upon to slaughter Chinese workers on strike against their masters, should produce a Sadoul, a Marti, a Crouch or a Trumbull.

Even among the 438 new naval officers drawn from the Annapolis Academy there ought to be some who refuse to carry out the murderous tasks assigned to them. But surely among the common sailors and marines, taken in large part from the working class, there should flicker and flame the spark of revolt.

• • • •

While Coolidge blabbers about "the spiritual and moral forces of mankind," the soldiers and sailors of the United States murder innocent workers struggling to better their conditions. Even these soldiers must learn more and more that they fight only for Wall Street's dollars. With that knowledge comes the alliance of these same soldiers and sailors with the workers and poor farmers for the struggle to win all power, not for the imperialist masters but for themselves and the liberation of their class.

Excludes Communists from Officials

ization of a labor party. This overwhelming vote was not to be put off lightly.

Had Hard Struggle.

Ever since the organization of the party it had hard sleding. All obstruction known was put in the way of the labor party by the fakirs. Whenever the tools of the capitalist parties ceased trying to stun its growth, the small business interests together with the labor bureaucracy got busy dragging it into the LaoFllette movement. Although for a time the party was thus led away from its working class basis it still exists today enjoying the support of a number of unions of the state.

After the defeat of LaFollette the enemies of the labor party thought the time had come to give it a death blow, which they prepared to deliver at the recent convention. No sooner had Maurer, president of the State Federation of Labor, finished telling the delegates that they gathered for a wake or to build, then the verbal barrage on the party was opened by the reactionaries.

Left Wing Battles For Party.

Led by the left wing the rank and file delegates shattered all of the attacks and called for the recognition of the party's mistakes and the repudiation of the C. P. P. A. and the middle class LaFollette movement. Delegates from sections of the state where the labor party to some extent is a political power warned the convention they would continue with the organization no matter what action the convention took. The supporters of the capitalist parties immediately withdrew, which everyone felt was good riddance to bad rubbish. And despite the great shortcomings of the Pennsylvania labor party it has taken one step toward the organization of the workers into a political party of their own.

The convention was made up of about 60 delegates from unions all over the state representing mainly the miners, steel workers, textile workers and machinists. While the preamble adopted corresponds closely to that of the machinists' and bakers' unions, the party made it obligatory upon all its candidates at future elections to accept the platform in its entirety.

Basis of Affiliation.

The convention decided that affiliation to the party should be sought from local trade unions, farmers' organizations, women's organizations and the socialist party, but failed to mention workers' political parties in general. On this point quite a debate occurred, the left wing pointing out that the enemies of the labor party last year went so far as to destroy the then existing and much larger farmer-labor party of the state, the name by which it was then known, to prevent Communists from functioning on the executive committee altho they had been unanimously elected at the 1924 convention.

The left wing pointed out that no part of the labor movement could live and grow if it attempted to exclude its most militant section—the Workers (Communist) Party. However, by a small margin and with the help of the socialist party elements the former point of view won out, working class political parties were denied admission, except such that the executive committee may decide in favor of.

In the election for executive committee of the Pennsylvania labor party, one Communist delegate was defeated by only one vote, another by only three votes. Yet after adjournment and during the convention of the State Federation of Labor several delegates stated that they had made a mistake in accepting a proposal which would exclude the Workers Party from affiliation to the labor party.

R.I.L.U. HAMMERS DUAL UNIONISM ON SOLAR PLEXUS

the executive bureau of the R. I. L. U. welcomes this resolution to the effect that the confederation is undertaking the immediate fusion of all trade union organisations under the general control of both confederations as a decisive step forward on the path to unity. The executive bureau calls upon the French workers of all views to build up as soon as possible a single militant confederation with firmly welded ranks and do everything possible to lend support to the Anglo-Soviet Unity committee in its struggle for the united international."

Called By Reformists

Comrade Koselev reported on the international workers conference held in Cologne and Leipzig. This conference was called by the reformists and was to have been attended by workers from the bench. Such elections, even to a limited extent took place only in Germany and Austria and most of those elected were Communists.

The two questions on the agenda were: the struggle for the eight hour working day in Germany and the negotiations between the French and German heavy industries regarding the creation of a European iron concern. A reformist delegate declared that the metal workers were working ten and twelve hour day in Germany, and suggested that legal means should be resorted to in bringing pressure to bear on the governments to abide by the terms of the Washington agreement. The Communists moved that this government fake agreement should be turned down but the motion was tabled.

No Dual Unionism

At the close of the Cologne conference twenty one delegates representing 900,000 members met in Leipsig and discussed the functions of the international propaganda committee in the metal trades, emphasising its transitory character. It was made quite clear that no dual unionism will be tolerated as this evil has proved disastrous to the labor movement.

The executive committee of the R. I. L. U. endorsed the action of the revolutionary conference in Leipsig and sanctioned the composition of the executive of the international propaganda committee, which is composed of: Koselev, U. S. S. R., Hannington, England; Manguin, France; Luigi Repossi, Italy; Andrew Overgaard, America; Max Muller, Germany and one representative from Czecho-Slovakia.

WILL HAYS, CZAR OF MOVIES, DEAF DUMB AND BLIND TO INTERESTS OF WORKERS IN THIS INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Actor's Equity Association finds Will Hays, called czar of the movies, no help to moving picture actors in correcting abuses of the industry.

Frank Gillmore, executive secretary of the union, told the annual meeting that the dealings of the union with Will H. Hays "over a period of three years have been must unsatisfactory." When Hays became chairman of the motion picture industry "it was declared the interests of all those affected would be considered," said Gillmore. "Actors as a class are certainly affected, yet they have not been consulted, nor have any steps been taken to remedy the abuses which we have brought to the attention of the producers."

A more militant attitude is to be Equity's program now in the motion picture industry, Gillmore asserted, "to see that our members receive the benefits of a standard minimum contract." The actors' union is ahead in its finances instead of behind as a few years ago and has built a new clubhouse for its members. Over $90,000 due actors for back salaries and other items was collected during the year by Equity for its members.

All actors were urged to insist upon enforcement of the rule requiring payment of one-eighth of a week's salary for every performance broadcasted. The old officers were reelected with one exception. Burce McRae as second vice-president.

19,000 HEAVILY ARMED MEN ARE MUSTERED IN PRIVATE ARMY OF ILLINOIS BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

the Illinois Bankers Assn., are useful for other purposes than an occasional bank robbery."

Make State Safe for Business.

This is now admitted by the bankers who announce that their army is planned "to make the state safe not only for bank operations but for every other form of business life and the home," to quote Garrison, who seems to be properly named for his function.

Workers will note that the gunmen are not intended to make the state safe for labor against the predatory bankers and business men. They are armed and drilled to protect the legalised bandits of commerce and industry, — incidentally against the infrequent unauthorised bank bandits but principally against the legitimate demands of the worker. As strikebreaker guards, as armed raiders on labor meetings, as the best available substitute in Illinois for the Pennsylvania cossacks, the 10,000 roughnecks of the financiers are now set up in business.

Distribute a bundle every day during Red Week of June 15 to 21.

Bankers Take Charge.

Assessments are levied on the stockholders.

Under the reorganization plan all the old common and preferred stock will be wiped out, the new company of bankers will issue share for share of preferred and common stock to stockholders who pay their assessments. Preferred stockholders will be assessed $28 a share, receiving, in addition to the equivalent of their holdings in new stock, new mortgage 5 per cent bonds at the rate of $24 par value for each share of stock.

Williamson to Speak to League Membership Meeting in Boston

John Williamson, national secretary of the Young Workers' League and just recently returned from Russia where he attended the fifth congress of the Young Communist International, will speak to a league membership meeting at New International Hall, 42 Wenona St., Roxbury, Mass., on Saturday, June 6, 7:30 p. m.

The local organization is making extensive preparations to make this meeting the best attended one that has ever been held. Comrade Williamson has addressed meetings in Philadelphia, New York and other eastern cities and his reports on the Fifth Congress of the Y. C. I. as well as the immediate summer activities of the league has met with enthusiasm from the membership.

It is absolutely essential for every league member to be acquainted with the work of this congress. As the best means of getting this information, is to attend the membership meeting at which Williamson will speak.

In addition to the report of the fifth congress of the Y. C. L., Comrade Williamson will report in detail on the work to be done in the textile industry by the league. As the Boston district comprises the textile field, this should be of great interest to the membership. The meeting will be productive of many results among which will be the intensification of our summer work, establishment of a unified organization to carry on the work more energetically in the future.

'B. & O.' JOHNSTON AND HIS GANG IN ELECTION STEAL

Count is Announced by Secretary Davison

Vice-President Anderson, who will be neither vice nor any other kind of president unless he beats the Johnston election steal says, "A clever steal has been worked," but doesn't say what he is going to do about it. He states that he actually received 18,178 votes to 18,170 cast for Johnston; that his watcher had challenged 1,742 votes as having been returned too late or on supplementary tally sheets—charged as illegal—but that only 150 of these challenged votes were thrown out, while of the 1,377 ballots challenged by Johnston's watcher, about 1,100 were thrown out.

In addition, Anderson specifically charges that Davison, after receiving tally sheets of early voting in many lodges, had sent back to those lodges to get out the remaining vote, which came in on additional sheets in violation of union law.

How the Steal Was Worked.

Further revelation of the methods used in stealing the election is disclosed in the way Davison illegally handled the ballots. The law enacted at the last convention provided that Johnston should select one man to look after his interests and his opponent should select a representative to watch for the opposition in the vote counting and supervise the election.

Davison took the position that this did not repeal the old law, as it did not specifically say it repealed any former law. However, the understanding was that the old law was repealed which provided that the secretary-treasurer, Davison, should count the votes.

Trusting Souls Deluded.

Everyone left the convention with the belief that Davison would have to keep his crooked fingers off the ballots and tally sheets. However, when the two supervisors "took charge" of the election, they found that Davison had beaten them to it. Davison had opened all tally sheets and ballots, removed and destroyed the original wrappers, and re-wrapped them, after checking them over on his own book.

Evidently, Davison had found too many Anderson votes by about 5,000. So the machine started to bring in blue sky locals and to throw out as many Anderson lodges as possible.

Davison Plays Solitaire With Ballots.

The Johnston watcher, of course, had no kick at this thimble-rigging scheme, and the Anderson watcher was somewhat helpless for the following reason: The ballots come from the postoffice in mail sacks, and all of these mail sacks have been in Davison's possession ever since the first of May, as he only gave the counting room one sack of ballots at a time, and when he pleased. So Davison could and did play with the ballots any way he chose.

The last day to mail ballots to headquarters under the union law was May 3, but Johnston lodges kept sending in ballots up to May 18—and Davison counted them. About 2,000 came in this way.

Anderson lodges, on the other hand, were thrown out right and left, especially the real living unions in the big industrial centers. At least fifteen heavy voting locals for Anderson were thrown out by the Johnston machine.

The left wing, distinct from the Anderson centrist group, tho supporting him in the election to break the Johnston machine as an outstanding symbol of class collaboration, evidently has had a tremendous influence in the election, despite the attempts of Johnston to deprecate the left wing at this time.

During the election Johnston thot the left wing gathered around the Trade Union Educational League so important, that he published and sent broadcast the statement of the left wing that it conditionally supported Anderson against Johnston. Johnston appealed with this statement for the machinists to "drive out the reds" but from the way the vote runs, the reds are not at all unpopular. In fact, they are a balance of power and seem to be gaining.

"B. & O. Plan" the Issue.

The left wing made its fight on Johnston because of his infamous "B. & O. plan" of class collaboration, which turns the union into a company union, working only for company benefit. The left wing pointed out that the Glenwood shops, where the plan had a tryout, was so shot to pieces it could not get a delegate to the last convention, and when a vote on the plan came up in the Glenwood local it was overwhelmingly repudiated.

In view of this, the statement of Johnston that "the B. & O. plan was not an issue in this contest," is laughed at. The B. & O. plan was the big issue, say the left wingers, and the B. & O. plan together with "B. & O. Bill" Johnston, was decisively licked. It only remains to the union to shake him loose from his illegal clutch at its throat. So say the left wingers.

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY IN CHICAGO FOR NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL

The City Central Committee, Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, at its meeting June 3, took up the matter of pushing the National Conference called by the Labor Defense Council on June 28 at the Ashland Auditorium to discuss ways and means of uniting organizationally the work of all existing defense and relief bodies.

Representation to this big defense project which will be a non-partisan body extending relief and aid to I. W. W., the socialists, Communists, anarchists, etc., will be from working class bodies, trade unions and fraternal organisations. Party units were instructed to make the national defense project the first order of business at their next meeting and to push the work in every working class organization.

Book Store Campaign Forging Ahead.

The campaign for the book store is making headway, reported Comrade Hammersmark, with every indication of success. Every party member is expected to donate his share. Preparations are now in full swing for the big drive for The DAILY WORKER in the week of June 15 to 21. Every branch and nucleus has received special information on that.

The July Fourth Picnic.

Work is under way for the Fourth Annual Picnic of the party in Chicago which will be held this year at the Beyer's Grove. This is a big affair of the party each year and attracts thousands of workers where they can get acquainted with the revolutionary workers. The T. U. E. L. picnic just held was a marked success. Labor Day (First Sunday in September) is reserved for another picnic of the T. U. E. L.

Industrial Activity.

In the industrial work a program has been laid out for the election campaign. In the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the progressive and left wing candidates are going to give the reactionary supporters of Pearlstein a close race and make a real effort to dislodge the reactionaries from control.

The progressive workers group thru their militant fight were able to get the support of rank and file barbers and to defeat the machine in its attempt to expel a number of the militant barbers.

In the painters the progressives are organising for the coming elections. And in the carpenters the progressive caucus is meeting regularly.

It was reported that trade union committee for aiding the American Negro Labor Congress had been formed.

Discussion on the needle trades situation, especially in the Amalgamated was discussed at length at the C. C. C. meeting and the party units are being informed separately on this matter.

Young Workers' League.

Starting campaign in printing industry. Holding picnic in Beyer's Grove on June 14. Need party support.

National convention assessment stamps have been sent to all branches.

Work in the District.

Work in the district is headed in the formation of five shop nuclei in Pullman, of a Scandinavian branch in Kenosha and campaign to develop the progressive miners committees and to intensify the campaign against the latest move of Lewis of the miners to prevent a convention in the united mine workers.

ANTI-AMERICAN PARTY WINS SWEEPING VICTORY IN PHILIPPINE POLL

MANILA, P. I., June 4.—Election returns indicate that in both houses of the legislature the Nacionalista Consolidate party, of which Manuel Quezon is a leader, has won a sweeping victory in both houses of the legislature. Quezon's party is opposed to the domination of the Philippines by American imperialism.

ATTRACTIONS SUPERIOR TO THOSE FOUND ANYWHERE IN CHICAGO AT PARTY PRESS PICNIC, JULY 4

July 4, will be observed by the super-patriots of capitalism as "mobilization day" or whatever other title they think will go down easiest with the masses. It was originally intended to keep the memory of the revolutionary war green in the hearts of the people.

Now They Are United.

But the revolutionary war is now little more than a bad dream. Talking too much about it will only offend the sensitive ears of John Bull and until Morgan is ready to try conclusions with John, the less said about the declaration of independence the better. At best the declaration of independence was the revolt of the rising bourgeoisie of the United States against the cramping leading strings of the feudal capitalists of England.

The workers of the United States are preparing to write a new declaration of independence, from the capitalists, who now celebrate July 4, and use the occasion to fasten their grip on the masses by patriotic exercises and military propaganda.

Our Communist Daily.

The organizers of the workers' movement for independence are the Communists, joined together in the Workers (Cammunist) Party. The Communists use many methods to get their ideas across to the masses. Plays, meetings and most important of all the press, are utilised in this task. Against the one Communist daily in the English language the capitalists have thousands of dailies and countless other periodicals. The capitalists can afford to subsidize their papers and they realize the value of them. The workers could also support their press but they do not yet realize that they should have a press of their own separate and apart from the capitalist press.

Spread the News.

The object of the Press Picnic on the 4th of July, which will be held under the auspices of the Workers Party, local Chicago, is to raise money for the party press, and the DAILY WORKER is the most prized gem in the collection. Of course our picnic strategists know that in order to make money, we must make the picnic attractive. For that reason there are attractions superior in interest to any that may be found anywhere else in the city of Chicago. Every language federation group in this city, and there are many, will be on the job, doing something special to make the affair a success both socially and financially. A description of those specialties will be the task of other stories of the coming picnic.

The affair will be held in Beyer's Grove, Irving Park Blvd. and California Ave. Don't forget the time and place and date.

STEEL WORKERS HEAR LOVESTONE, HIT TERRORISTS

Resolution Condemns Fascist Murderers

By WALLACE METCALFE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 4.—Jay Lovestone, member of the C. E. C. and director of the research department of the Workers (Communist) Party, was the principal speaker at a mass meeting held here May 31, against the white terror. Regardless of the weather, which was hot for an indoor meeting, several hundred workers turned out and took part in the meeting.

Lovestone pointed out the world campaign being carried on by the imperialists to drive out of existence every organization of workers that attempts to hinder the imperialists in their campaign for the complete enslavement of all peoples.

U. S. Aids White Terror.

The imperialists in the United States are playing a leading part in the Balkan white terror by subscribing to loans being floated in this country for the support of the white terror governments. Lovestone called upon all workers and farmers to support the Workers (Communist) Party of America to fight the white terror in America and thru it to join with the Communist International in its campaign against world wide white terror.

Time and time again the speaker was applauded when he showed up the part being played by the capitalists and their governments whose only argument to the cries of starving people is the white terror. The plight of the West Virginia coal miners and the ruthless suppression of workers organizations shows that the U. S. capitalists are no different than the others.

Comrade Michalosky of the South Slavic Federation spoke in Coatian, while William J. White presided as chairman. As a result of the meeting six new subs were secured for the DAILY WORKER and one new member for the party.

The following resolution was adopted by a rising vote.

Resolution Adopted.

WHEREAS, the countries known as the Balkan states are compelled to submit to the iron heel of militarism imposed upon them by puppet rulers who are financed and supported by the world's imperialist powers, and

WHEREAS, the Balkan states so supported are the "cordon sanitarie" erected to serve as buffer states against the Workers' and Peasants' Republic of Soviet Russia, and

WHEREAS, these buffer states are concentration camps used by the world's imperialists to mobilize their white terror forces in preparation for an attack upon the world's first workers' and peasants' republic, and

WHEREAS, awaiting the word from their miperialist masters such armies are used to slaughter the workers and peasants revolting against imperialist rule, and

WHEREAS, from these white terror attacks thousands of innocent men, women and children have been slaughtered in cold blood without protest save from the Communists of the world who have aroused the workers the world over to the necessity of coming to the rescue of their oppressed brothers in the Balkans, and

WHEREAS, no word of protest against this unprecedented terror in the Balkans has been offered by so-called christian states or its public officials in office who have remained idly by and allowed the bloody sword of Zankov and his paid murderers given to him by consent of the league of nations to slay and butcher without mercy, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we, the workers of Youngstown, O., and vicinity in mass meeting assembled, pronounce our most emphatic condemnation of the inhuman methods of the bourgeois terrorists and pledge our support to the embattled workers and peasants of the Balkans and with them pledge a united front of workers and peasants for a world federation of workers' and peasants' Soviet republics.

Adopted by rising vote.

THE BOLSHEVIZATION OF OUR PARTY PRESS

III. The Organization of Our Press

THIS is a question to which little or no attention has hitherto been paid. As a general rule, the forms of organization followed by the Communist press have been permitted to develop without any special supervision, without study and observation, without any attempt at organization adapted to the object in view. The Russian section is the sole section in the Communist International which possesses an organ working systematically and continually for the organization and supervision of the press. And yet the questions raised by the relations between party press and party organization, and by the internal relations of party press organization, are such as play a leading part in affecting the extent of the influence exercised by the press on the broad masses of the working class.

The internal organization of the editorial staffs of almost all Communist newspapers, especially in the case of provincial newspapers, suffers from the unhappy effects of the principle of a mechanical division into departments, a principle taken over from the social-democrats. The editorial staffs of our party newspapers have generally been an accurate reflection of the party executives, which have suffered equally from this social-democratic disease. In one organizatory report of a section of the Communist International we read:

> "The same conditions are to be found in the district and local organizations. Here the local secretary or trade union secretary is solely responsible for the factory work, or no departmental nucleus whatever has been formed. Politics and organizations are kept separate. Organization itself comprises purely administrative work only...."

THE same conditions, or worse, prevail in most of our editorial staffs. "Politics," "trade unions," "district" and "local organization" work side by side more than together. The political editor writes the highly political articles, the trade union editor has his special department, and the editorial staff responsible for the local department is a child entirely disinherited by destiny.

This state of affairs often enough results in somewhat grotesque combinations, as the readers of our press may observe. It is not alone that the political editor, soaring solely in the highest spheres of politics, almost entirely loses contact with local events, but the local and trade union editors, forced to occupy themselves exclusively with the trivial details of daily happenings, lose sight of the political line of the party. Instead of political collaboration among the different members of the editorial staff, we find an obstinate struggle for the "columns."

Energetic war must be declared against the mechanical allotment of departments on our editorial staffs. Every staff can be developed into a united collective organization if the political leaders of the newspaper adopt the principle of treating all questions, local and trade union alike, as political questions, and of invariably placing in the foreground of the paper those questions which form the foreground of the interests of the mass of workers upon which the paper is intended to exercise its immediate influence.

In the majority of cases the actual observance of this principle can only be made possible with the aid of a systematic organizatory and political control exercised upon the editorial staffs by the political leaders. Precisely these questions must form the basis enabling editorial staffs to grasp the principle that every party newspaper is an organ of the party.

A SECOND and perhaps even more important method of destroying the bureaucratic departmental principle, and one exceedingly valuable for creating really Communist editors, is the participation of the editors in the immediate work of the Party. In this question the political leaders must make concessions. Work on the editorial staffs must be so organized that every editor is given the opportunity of taking part in the work of the local organization, factory cell, etc. "It is imperatively necessary for the literates to enter the party organization"—this was said by Lenin at a time when the Russian labor movement was suffering the severest persecution. "The communist editors must be unreservedly prepared to take part in party work at any time, outside of their jornalistic activity"—this is what the Communist organizations must say to those comrades to whom they have entrusted their editorial work. The principle of "the inkslinger writes and the reader reads" (Lenin) may safely be left to the inkslingers of the bourgeois and social democratic press.

It frequently happens that the Communist organizations do not comprehend that the principle recognizing the Communist press as an organ of the party extends much further than the mere possibility of imparting a certain political trend to a newspaper.

THE leaders of the organizations must accustom themselves to employ their organ as an efficient instrument for the whole of their organization policy. Not only must they require and demand that certain questions of organization are placed in the foreground at certain times, but they have a right to add a decisive word when decisions are being made. The business management, whose motives are generally influenced by the business standpoint, must only be given as much play as the organizatory tactics of the party permit; the reverse should never be the case. The atmosphere of bourgeois business legality is the enemy of the real interests of the Communist press.

A special chapter of the organization work of our press is formed by the question of its direct connection with the factory or works. In the majority of cases the Communist newspaper reaches the factory by the roundabout path of the residential organisation (the formation of factory cells may have changed this somewhat during the past few months). The best proof that despite our factory nuclei there is still no adequate organisatory connection between the party press and the factory is the fact that the work of increasing the number of subscribers to our newspapers is still carried out for the most part by the residential organizations. In an electoral report issued by the German C. P. work for increasing the number of subscribers to the Kampfer (an organ which may be counted in every respect among the best organs of the International) we read:

> "Agitation had to be transferred to the residential districts, for the previous agitation made for the Kampfer, carried on for the most part in the factories, yielded very poor results."

THE sale of Communist papers in the works and factories themselves has become an indispensable necessity of the present period of factory cell development. In countries where capitalist terror does not yet rage to the same extent as in Germany, for instance, Czecho-Slovakia and France, a certain amount of effort will render this possible. But even in Germany ways and means must be found for distributing the Communist newspaper to at least a part of the workers in a factory, or shortly before work is started. (A general reduction of prices for Communist newspapers subscribed to or distributed in factories would be a suitable means to this end.)

The question of organizing the campaigns to gain subscribers belongs to this same chapter. Even the most superficial consideration of the methods and results of work up to now in this direction show the necessity of increasing mass efforts. Hitherto all endeavors to gain large numbers of new readers have all been too much on one pattern, too little differentiated.

TWO examples: a campaign of agitation for the Kampfer in Chemnitz brought in 1740 new readers, a simultaneous agitation for the party 1000 members. A similar agitation for the Freiheit in Dusseldorf resulted in 4500 readers, and for the party 700 new members. In Chemnitz the number of new party members was almost as great as that of the new readers, and yet the Dusseldorf results, seen from the standpoint of Communist mass agitation, appear to us to be far better than those of Chemnitz. Why? The Chmenitz Communists won for their press solely such workers whose entry into the party proved that they were mature for membership. But the Dusseldofer cast their nets far beyond these confines, and gained as readers many workers not yet ripe for the Communist organization, but already receptive for Communist agitation. Both tasks are important. But the work involved must be differentiated, must be adapted in each case to the category of workers in question; the workers whose standpoint is nearly ours must be approached by different means to those who are still far from understanding our aims, and who have still to be drawn within our sphere of influence.

Our Communist parties must devote the greatest and most intense attention to the study of all these factors. The same methods of organisation cannot be employed in every country. Thus for instance one of the most important reforms to be undertaken by the Communists press in Czecho-Slovakia is in our opinion a certain deprovincialization (the amalgamation of the many semi-vegetating weekly and Sunday papers issued in the provinces, most of them far from being Communist, into really Communist daily papers), whilst in Germany the reversed recipe might frequently be applied with advantage. Every Communist Party should make it its endeavour to create organs guaranteeing the use of the whole of the forces at the disposal of the party for a real supervision, a real study, and a real application of the extensive and valuable experience already gained.

WORKERS REBEL AT CONDITIONS IN JAP MILLS

Brutal Exploitation in Own Factories

other industries," Wildes asserts. "Nominally these girls cannot be forced to labor more than eleven hours daily, but the labor laws are so full of exceptions that 'in case of unavoidable necessity' the working day may be prolonged to 13 or 14 hours, and the two compulsory holidays a month may be withdrawn without provision for any later restoration.

Twelve-year olds who have finished elementary schools may be regularly employed, while children as young as ten can be engaged if 'extraordinary need arises.' The factory laws do not apply at all to any factory using less than 15 workers, nor in any case to industries involving artificial flower making, paper boxes, embroideries and laces, goods made of bamboo, rattan, straw or wicker, bakeries, cigarette factories, wearing apparel and non-white phosphorus matches."

Unions Are Forbidden.

"The Mitsubishi steamships, banks and engineering firms, a self-styled god, and the Mitsui industries comprise the Tokyo old guard which governs the empire of Japan," declares Wildes. "The laws which govern labor," he says, "are such as might have been compiled by Mitchell Palmer, Judge Elbert H. Gary and the late 'Postum King of Battle Creek.' Every avenue of escape from unbearable industrial conditions is closed by legal barricades. Legally, the forming of a union is forbidden, so that the empire is a nest of cultural associations which do not have the right to pay strike benefits, even if the scanty dues of twenty sen a month were able to supply a fund."

The Japan General Federation of Labor, headed by Bunji Susuki, after a dozen years of precarious existence has a membership of less than 200,000 out of perhaps 4,000,000 wage-earning men, Wildes states. Only 7,500 women workers are organised, "tho seven times as many are employed in coaling operations alone, many of them underground as in pre-Victorian England, or bunkering ships in Nagasaki, Moji and Shimonoseki harbors, where photography is prohibited by law."

The Japan Federation of Labor "is now perfecting plans for a farmer-labor party in conjunction with the Nippon Nomin Kumiai, or tenant farmers' league, which represents some 4,000,000 terribly exploited tenant farmer households."

5,500,000 Families on Farms.

"About five and one-half million families are actually engaged in farming," in Japan, altho the country is scarcely the size of California, Hirosho Saito, consul general of Japan at New York, writes. "Of one and one-half million men engaged in the fishing industry 20,000 are distributed on the Korean sea and 25,000 on Russian waters," he continues. The industrial population "includes 1,500,000 factory workers, 150,000 railway men and 35,000 seamen. It may be interesting to note that there are 107,000 richshaw men against 18,000 chauffeurs who drive motor cars.

Women are largely employed in the tea industry, agriculture, spinning and weaving and an increasing number on government railways, post offices and in schools.

The Workers Party in Action!

Court Is Burlesqued in Play at Picnic

The Workers' Drama League of New York is now rehearsing a rollicking farce entitled "Tried for Treason," which is a take-off on the trial of the comrades arrested and tried for drilling with theatrical rifles for the Paris Commune pageant held at Madison Square Garden. The play will be given at the grand picnic of Local New York which is to be held once more at Pleasant Bay Park as last year. The date is Sunday, June 21. In addition to the play there will be a great athletic carnival and other features.

The play has been written in collaboration by Walter Speck and Louis Egri. Louis Egri is a playwright, whose play "Hecuba and Hocuba" will be produced next season on Broadway. The play "Tried for Treason" is an account of what happened in the court when the comrades came up before the judge, plus satire and very clever farce. It is bound to get plenty of laughs. Anna Rosenberg is directing the play. The settings will be by Lo Hartman. There are still a few roles to be filled, and those interested are invited to come to the next rehearsals and meeting of the Drama League, Friday evening, June 5 at the Jewish headquarters, Workers Party, 35 Second Avenue, near Second street.

The cast is made up as follows: Judge—Jack Kweller; first witness—Israel Hurwitz; second witness—Goldie Waldner; third witness—Clarence Miller; first attorney—J. M. Schramm; second attorney—Cohen; police officer—Aubruy C. Bailey; stenographer—Isabelle Waldner.

At the meeting of the Workers' Drama League this coming Friday work will be started on the tremendous pageant which will be produced in August at the picnic to be run by the International Workers Aid. The pageant, written by John Lassen and Simon Felshin requires a cast of about seventy-five.

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER WILL SPEAK AT FIRST INTERNATIONAL PICNIC IN MILWAUKEE ON SUNDAY, JUNE 14

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 4.—William Z. Foster will speak in Milwaukee on Sunday, June 14, at the First International Picnic to be held here at Tippecanoe Park.

Comrade Foster has recently returned from a tour thru England, Germany and Soviet Russia and every Milwaukee comrade will be interested in what he has to relate of his impressions of the working class movements in those countries. The activities of the left wing movement within the labor movement in England has a great significance for every militant trade unionist in America and every worker must acquaint himself with the situation existing in the English labor movement today. Comrade Foster's interpretations of this movement as well as of recent developments in Germany is a treat no one will want to miss. And Russia—who is not eager at all times to hear an intimate account of the doings in the workers' government!

Come Early—Don't Miss the Fun.

The picnic will begin early as there are many interesting stunts to be pulled off for a reat jollification. There will be games, dancing, singing by the Freiheit Singing Society and dance music by the well-known Holly Syncopators.

The picnic is held under the auspices of the Workers Party. Admission only 35 cents. To get there, take Vliet street car marked Tippecanoe, to the park.

Apologies to "American."

LEGHORN, Italy, June 4.—The alleged attack on Franklin G. Gowen, American vice-consul here, became insignificant today in the light of the official report. Gowen did not remove his hat during a fascist parade and a fascisti struck at the hat with a stick. Apologies were offered when it was learned he was an American.

RED WEEK—June 14 to 21.

Juniors, Attention!

On Saturday, June 6, the city central committee of the Junior section of Chicago, will convene. All delegates must be present at 2:30 o'clock sharp at 19 S. Lincoln Ave. Every group in the city must be represented by two delegates. Comrades, be sure that your group is represented by your delegates. Notify your delegates if they do not see this announcement. The tasks of the Junior section during the summer months will be discussed at this meeting. All group leaders must see that delegates from their Junior groups attend. Members of the city executive committee, are requested to come, and also all group leaders. Don't forget, 2:30 sharp.

Every sub you get during Red Week of June 15 to 21 is a sub to "make another Communist."

SCIENTISTS PUT DOUBT ON RELIEF DRIVE TO POLE

They Can't See Value of Airplane Expedition

OSLO, Norway, June 4.—Scientists interested in exploration were inclined to doubt, they said today, the value of the Norwegian government's aeroplane relief expedition which is to seek the Amundsen-Ellsworth north pole flyers.

They based their doubt on the government's order to the relief flyers that they should proceed only as far as the edge of the ice and not to attempt to go further.

This would make it difficult for the aviators to locate Amundsen because visibility at the edge of the northern ice fields is not great.

Germany Gets Note from Allies Today—Troops to Remain

The note declares that the allied troops in Cologne Germany will remain until a specified set of conditions are fulfilled.

Ambassadors from France, Great Britain, Italy, Belgium and Japan attended the conference.

"Make A. W. I. U. a Real Union"

THE agricultural crisis of 1924 involving financial ruin for farmers undoubtedly had its effect upon the success of the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union No. 110 of the I. W. W. We see that in spite of the method used of district organization with stationary delegate—explained in Bulletin 31 of September 10, 1924, the A. W. I. U. 110 did not increase its average membership during last year over the year before. In fact, it lost; as 1923 showed an average membership of 5,483, while 1924 figures show only 4,503.

Something Fundamentally Wrong.

If the smaller membership were given better returns in hours or wages, this fall off of numbers ought to have been compensated for by more loyal sticking to the union during the winter months. However, the March general office bulletin shows that in that month the A. W. I. U. paid per capita tax for only 980 members.

This situation is not encouraging, in fact it reveals the fundamental flaw in the A. W. I. U.—the dependence upon the harvest drive alone, the snatching of initiations and dues from the floating and seasonal worker riding the trains, and a complete indifference to the possible building of a stable and genuine union of the 2,000,000 agricultural wage workers of the United States.

Don't Forget to Fight Employing Class.

It is, of course, the easier task to gather in the seasonal harvest workers, and these should by no means be neglected. Thousands of them have become accustomed to taking out a new card as a sort of season railroad ticket. But the benefits to members of an agricultural workers' union should not be limited to transportation. The R. I. A. C. feels that if the A. W. I. U. 110 would deliver other and larger benefits it would recieve more permanent support—it could even require such support.

But what do we find as the result of the Omaha conference? We regret to say that the negative question of fighting the "emergency" split almost shut out the positive question of fighting the bosses for better conditions. While fighting splitters is necessary, yet any union which wants to attract the unorganized workers cannot ignore the formulation of demands upon the employing class. However, the A. W. I. U. seems to promise no improvement.

The Necessity of Industrial Demands.

It is little to boast of that the 10-hour day exists in many sections, as it is not altogether an innovation, nor should the union stop there, but demand shorter hours, as 10 hours is too long for such heavy work in the terrible heat.

And in wages, the explanation that these are better fixed by local conditions pertaining to the supply and demand of labor, would be good only if it were not the duty of the union to control this matter, and the setting of a minimum wage can be, in any event, a stimulus to organization and in addition, is necessary to offset the low minimum of the employers.

A Lesson in Dualism.

Hence we see that the fight against the bosses has been nearly forgotten in the fight against the formation of a dual union by the "emergency" faction. This ruinous situation should be a sharp lesson to members of the A. W. I. U. and to all I. W. W. who now taste a little of the alarm and hatred against dual unions which is engendered in the minds of members of other unions when the I. W. W. carries out dualist attacks on them.

Unquestionably the split in the I. W. W. must be ended. The R. I. A. C. points out that it would never have occurred had the organization possessed a definitely organized revolutionary left wing group which possessed and fought for a definite revolutionary theory and applied it in proposed programs of action leading the more backward elements on to revolutionary consciousness upon the basis of militant class struggle for immediate demands.

The R. I. A. C. points out that a necessary part of the struggle is a political party of the working class composed of its most advanced elements which hammers out from world experience the clear revolutionary theory mentioned above as the absolute prerequisite to revolutionary action.

Abolish Anarchist Anti-Politics.

There is no inherent conflict between such a revolutionary party and the industrial unions. The experience of the I. W. W. and the most cursory survey of the ideas prevailing among the masses, even those within the unions, proves that correct revolutionary theory does not arise spontaneously out of the amorphous mass, but comes as the conscious effort of the most advanced elements who draw their conclusions from world events of all history and hammer them out in collective discussion within the organization which represents the highest form of class unity—the revolutionary party.

The split would not have taken place if the I. W. W. had possessed a revolutionary left wing group with such a theory. But as a practical matter, now that the split exists, it must be ended.

Fight for Internal Unity.

The R. I. A. C. suggests that besides the necessary steps against the dualist organizers, and vigorous support of the expulsion of the disruptive group which played the stoolpigeon and appealed to capitalist courts, the following methods be observed to bring the divided rank and file together:

1. Unity on the job so far as fighting the bosses is concerned. Common action with all workers on the job, including those rank and filers who have militantly gone "emergency."

2. Joint meetings of conflicting branches and joint delegate conferences of industrial unions which are split, with the agenda to be limited to the one question—unity.

3. The next general convention of either faction must elect a permanent committee on unity to formulate and publish terms of unity with the other faction and set a date and place to discuss terms acceptable to both.

4. In the meantime, the general headquarters should send the G. E. B. chairman or the general secretary-treasurer, or both, to the coast and call mass meetings to contest the "emergency" program in its strongest section with an ideological war against decentralization, pacifism, anarcho-syndicalism and anti-revolutionary job unionism.

Make the A. W. I. U. a Real Union.

But the positive basis of A. W. I. U. 110 should rest upon the building up by persistent and aggressive effort of a real union among the 2,000,000 wage workers in agriculture. Until that is done it is idle to call the A. W. I. U. an effective union. Until that is done it is a grave mistake to scatter the financial proceeds of the harvest drive in all directions with generous hand, and not provide for a systematic drive to unionize the residential and semi-residential "hired men," ranch hands, dairy hands, cotton, fruit and tobacco pickers, beet field and all other categories of land workers.

These masses of workers must be organized and the difficulty of the task is no reason for delaying it. Unions of similar workers in other countries are organized and function militantly in strikes and general class struggle and return a benefit to their members. The A. W. I. U. will convict itself of the same charge it makes against the A. F. of L. if it, too, does not apply itself to organizing these oppressed and exploited workers.

Friendly Contact with Other Red Land Workers.

And in the consideration of this great duty, the A. W. I. U. could benefit by the experience and efforts of the International Propaganda Committee of Land and Forest Workers' Section of the Red International of Labor Unions.

For this purpose the officials of the A. W. I. U. 110 should enter into friendly correspondence with the I. P. C. of Land and Forest Workers, and the next A. W. I. U. convention should elect a delegation to attend the next international conference of the revolutionary land workers' unions connected with the I. P. C.

For International Unity.

The R. I. A. C. believes that such international contact would aid tremendously in bringing the A. W. I. U. into the current of world unionism and show to its members the advantage of championing the affiliation of the whole I. W. W. to the Red International of Labor Unions. The R. I. L. U. stands at the forefront of revolutionary unionism and its fight for international unity of all unions of the world should be supported by the A. W. I. U. as it has been by the British unions.

To those who doubt the scope of this movement and the whole matter of the success of the Russian revolution, the number, power, structure and function of the unions of Soviet Russia, and all the relations of life between the workers and their own Soviet government—the R. I. A. C. recommends the reading of the official report of the British trade union delegation to Russia.

A comprehension of its contents, written by labor men who were previously neutral or even hostile to Soviet Russia, will give the members of the A. W. I. U. 110 an idea why we who adhere to the Red Internotional assert that the I. W. W. needs a complete change in viewpoint toward the Russian revolution before it can succeed in agriculture or any other industry.

RAPID TRANSIT WORKERS FAIL TO GET CONTRACT

Street Carmen Officials Waiting for Blair

The employes of the Chicago Rapid Transit Company, Samuel Insull's concern, are conferring with company officials on the question of a new wage contract. Last Tuesday's conference ended without an agreement being reached, but further conferences will be held, it was announced by both sides.

President John J. Bruce, of the elevated men's union, heads a committee of five representing the men. Vice President B. J. Fallon is taking the lead in the negotiations for the company.

The Big Boss Insull.

Samuel Insull, the big boss of the elevated, is not worrying very much over the situation on those sultry summer days. He is interested in the play in which his wife is starring. The gas magnate married a budding actress and now that the parasite has surfeited herself with wealth, she has taken to the footlights in the interests of charity. But while the monarch of illumination is willing to subsidize opera and play the angel to a comedy for charity he is not so willing to pay his employes a living wage. If he did he would not have so much money to throw away at howling divas and amateur actresses.

The officials of the street car men's union are still waiting for the return of Henry Blair, president of the Surface lines. William Quinlan, president of the carmen's union, has considerable confidence in Blair but the rank and file of the union do not share that condence. The men want 80 cents an hour. The company wants to cut them from 75 to 70. Quinlan does not like to hear the word "strike" mentioned. The men are determined to strike rather than accept a wage cut.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Milwaukee Will Build During Red Week

Local Decides for Action

LOCAL Milwaukee, whose splendid efforts in the campaign to "Build the DAILY WORKER" have placed it second only to Philadelphia in results attained by the large locals in the country, has decided to wind up the campaign drive with doubled efforts during Red Week of June 15 to 21.

In response to the letter of the national secretary of the party; on action of the C. E. C. calling for the mobilization during this week of the full membership to distribute the DAILY WORKER and secure subs as a means of party building, a letter has been sent out to all Milwaukee branches by the city secretary, Comrade G. S. Shklar, calling for full and unified response.

• • • •

Note Carefully

During this week all subs sent in will be applied to local and branch quotas and this is one way to complete your share of building the DAILY WORKER. Subs sent in UP TO JULY FIRST will apply on the quotas set.

Has your local decided for action? Bring this matter up in your branch and C. C. C.—send in your order for free copies to be sent to you EVERY DAY for distribution—get action for the "Red Week of Party Building."

by a cloister scrub woman. They looked over the blue print and found that the gospel according to Kautsky, Hyndeman and Hillquit called for revolution in some highly industrialized country, where the majority "would take over the means of production and distribution" and production would go on as ever, with the exception that every worker would automatically receive "the full social value of the product of his toil."

UNFORTUNATELY the workers are not the only people in the world that can shoot and the great majority of the workers are yet under the influence of leaders who are more stupid if not more crooked than Oneal. If the Russian workers and peasants were left without the leadership of the Bolsheviki, it is not only probable but certain that the Czar would be back on his throne now and not under the green grass as it is the case. Germany, under socialist rule paved the way beautifully for the return of the kaiser. He is kept out of Potsdam now, not by the socialists, but by the French capitalists.

IN order to prove his contention that all revolutions in the past were not accompanied by violence, Oneal cites the political victory of the forces of which Thomas Jefferson was the spokesman over their opponents. Then the Jackson "revolution" of 1828 and finally the civil war. History records that there was quite a little violence connected with the civil war. But the struggles, for supremacy between sections of the capitalist and landowning classes, between which there is no irreconcilable gulf, cannot be put in the same category as the struggles between a subject class and a ruling class.

ONEAL might have magnified the LaFollette campaign into a peaceful revolution. Had the Wisconsin senator won, it is possible Oneal might have secured a job as chief of the investigation department of the D. of J. a job that would suit him down to the ground. In his spare moments he could write a pamphlet to show that another bloodless revolution had come and gone.

• • •

MEANWHILE the Russian revolution preceeds merrily on it's way, making new friends among the workers everywhere, and converting honest labor leaders to the belief that there is only one way to overthrow capitalism, and that is to make constant war on it, with every weapon in the workers arsenal, using the various weapons as the occasion requires. Oneal, like his friends, the murderers of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg in Germany, would only use force on the Communists.

WAGES FALL FOR LABORERS, JOBS GROW SCARCER

Harvest Employment Harder to Get

Wages paid for unskilled labor are decreasing, the federal-state employment office announces. Wages range now from 40 to 45 cents per hour, and employers are now offering as low as 35 cents an hour. The employment offices predict wages of unskilled labor will be down to 30 cents an hour before the summer ends.

Jobs for unskilled workers are scarce, especially on the farms. The harvest hands are finding it more difficult to secure jobs this year.

China

China is the center of world interest.

Why?

Because the imperialist nations have invaded Chinese territory and are trying to suppress strikes and anti-imperialist demonstrations of Chinese workers and students?

Not at all. These things happen almost every day in some quarter of the globe which the policemen of imperialism patrol to guard the investments and spheres of influence of their masters. But China is the last undivided territory accessible to the profit-hungry capitalist class of the great powers. Here the clash of imperialist rivalries rises to a shrill crescendo and every foreign nation watches jealously the maneuvers of the rest.

It is because one does not trust the other that some powerful nation, Great Britain for instance, is not delegated by all to guard the interests of each. No, the rivals dare not adopt this more efficient method. All the jackals must be present to take a bite at the body of the Chinese nation, but this does not prevent each from trying to get the biggest chunk.

The theory underlying the present raid on the peaceful Chinese people is that the interests of foreign imperialists come before those of the Chinese and that the great powers can act in accord to suppress revolt against the domination of any particular power. In this instance the aggrieved power happens to be Japan because in mills owned by capitalists of that nation a strike took place.

It is quite obvious that while American marines are carrying out instructions and protecting Japanese property it will be without any great amount of enthusiasm. The same is true of the mercenaries of other nations.

This jealousy among the imperialist powers is the best assurance of the success of the Chinese anti-imperialist movement. The greatest danger to it is in the dissension sown by the tuchuns, the corrupt military leaders, in the ranks of the Chinese people.

A China united against foreign invasion, backed by Soviet Russia, can expel the imperialist robbers. This is the leading part of the program of the Kuo Min Tang party and in South China it has built up a tremendous following.

The leadership of the present movement is in all probability vested in Kuo Min Tang and the desperate measures resorted to by the imperialists are undoubtedly directed more toward suppressing this party than the immediate invasion on a large scale and an attempt to conquer China by force.

Powerful, unscrupulous and cunning forces are at work in China and the Chinese people are forced to fight almost with bare hands. But in their millions of workers and peasants and in their unity against the foreign robber clique lies their strength.

Class Justice

Ten years in prison is the penalty handed out by a West Virginia court to a coal miner for taking part in booing a scab.

It sounds almost incredictable even to us who read and write every day of the dozens of cases of persecution of workers by the capitalist governments for activity in behalf of their union, their party and their class.

The conviction of this miner, one among many indicted, was secured under a law called the "Redman Act"—one with which we are not familiar, but which is evidently one of those pieces of special legislation found on the statute books of states like West Virginia, where the big capitalist concerns like the steel trust are in full control. As a rule such laws are passed with but little publicity. They remain practically unknown until the bosses want to make an example of some group of fighting workers.

The scab who was being ridiculed shot one of the pickets, but he has not even been charged with crime doubtless because at such times the capitalist courts always hold that scabs are acting in self-defense. Besides a scab is one of the institutions of capitalism.

In connection with this case it is interesting to note that 20 coal mining companies in West Virginia have just had their temporary injunction against the union made permanent by an obliging judge thus outlawing thousands of striking miners.

Class justice in a class society.

The way to meet it is organize, meet blow with blow, fight capitalism and its agencies of suppression as a class, at every point, unite in defense of the victims of the class war and make every new incident of savage persecution an object lesson for the whole working class.

Ford's System Thru Eyes of Workers

We wish to call the attention of our readers to the story about conditions in the Detroit Ford factory, that appeared in yesterday's DAILY WORKER. It was of special interest for two reasons.

First, it is written by a member of a shop nucleus, a worker correspondent.

Second, it contains facts that have never been brought out in the volumes written about Ford and the Ford plants. The facts are those that only a worker would note and emphasize—unimportant if taken one by one, together they make up a most damning indictment of the Ford efficiency system and expose with a commendable terseness of utterance the manner in which slavery is enforced by making every worker feel his helplessness and insignificance.

The preparations made for the reception of the prince of Wales as recorded in our worker correspondent's story speak volumes. The contrast between the Fordian attitude toward workers and royalty is striking and proof complete of the hollowness of all pretense that equality of treatment and opportunity is possible under a system that places parasitic idlers above workers in the social scale.

The whole article is a powerful argument for shop committees, militant unions and workers' control of industry. The distribution of such articles to the Ford workers will do more to arouse them to a sense of their slavery and revolt against it than many reasoned arguments.

Some Chickens Come Home to Roost

By Wm. F. Dunne

FOUR Negro members of the house of representatives in Springfield are the key to the passage of the injunction limitation bill favored by the Illinois labor movement.

Labor, that is, official labor—the Olanders, Walkers and Wises and that ilk—is worried and much attention is being lavished on these three Negro representatives. By their votes they can either pass or defeat the bill. Not that this matters a great deal since the bill itself has been operated on until no effective organs are left in it. But Illinois fakerdom wants something to show to the rather restless rank and file that is sniffing suspiciously at the lack of benefit received so far from the alliance with the Small republican forces.

IT seems that the Negro legislators met the advances of the state federation lobbyists with something resembling cool disdain.

"What," one of them is understood to have said, "is there in this bill to interest us? What have you gentlemen ever done for our race?" Also, a number of pertinent and embarrassing questions concerning discrimination against Negroes in the skilled unions were asked. The answers were unsatisfactory.

The scene shifts to Chicago.

Money is needed to pay the Springfield lobby which to date has nothing to show for its labors in corridors, anterooms, bedrooms and booze-parlors. Frenzied appeals are made for funds to unions which are showing remarkably little enthusiasm over the efort of their representatives.

SAID one rank and file speaker at a union meeting held last Sunday:

"What the hell! We dig up good dough to elect these guys and then we have to pay them to vote right. Where do you get that stuff?"

But Brother Wise, the Chester M. Wright of the Typographical Union, with a daily exposure of the Communists to his credit, was not to be deterred by obstacles or daunted by failure. Something must be done to get this bill "limiting" injunctions passed or the pickings would be tough in the next campaign.

The four Negro legislators were still holding the Springfield defiles so Wise appears as a defender of the downtrodden race, suddenly remembering and announcing that thirty-five years ago he had worked with a Negro compositor who was a "good fellow." "This Negro question is a burning one for the American labor movement," said Wise, chastened with a new wisdom. "We must show these people that we are for them."

IT happens thus that the members of the Chicago Typographical Union are expected to write to the three Negro legislators and tell them that the Typographical Union has not and does not discriminate against Negroes. Members of other unions are expected to do the same thing.

Upon the attitude of the Negro legislators we ask to be excused from passing judgment at this time except to say that they should vote for the bill and thus show that they and the Negroes whom they represent understand the class issue involved, badly as it has been befogged by the fakery of union officialdom.

One thing is quite plain, however. Had they voted for the bill without raising the question of the attitude of certain unions towards members of their race the Negroes would have waited until doomsday before they acquired such a sterling defender as Wise, nor would the necessity of the labor movement paying more attention to the organization of the Negro workers have immediately been on the order of business of so many unions in so concrete a form.

CHICKENS come home to roost.

The brood hatched by the reactionary officialdom of the American labor movement when it raises the color bar will continue to demand a perch high up on the program of the unions until it is settled and settled right by the abolition of all racial discrimination in all unions.

We do not know who these Negro legislators are. They may be the lowest heelers of the republican machine or they may be men with some little knowledge of the problems of their race and misled into believing that anything but betrayal for the Negro masses result from the support of capitalist politicians. If this is their understanding they are no more confused or crooked than the labor fakers who now want their support.

WHATEVER their affiliations or beliefs the fact remains that they have taught a lession to union labor as well as a lesson to the Negroes—if they will learn it. It is, to paraphrase David Harum, that it is all right to be humble but not too damned humble.

But the lesson must be learned correctly. Support of the measures of employers' associations, allowing racial prejudice to be used against labor and the consequent weakening of the struggle of all the oppressed, black and white, the securing of temporary advantages by breaking the labor front, these things work against the masses of both races and serve only to inflame further the prejudices made hot by the constant fanning of the exploiters and their press.

THIS little incident in Springfield will do the labor movement good. It will throw a lot of light on its blind spot and with white militants pounding away from the inside and the black militants hammering from the outside the bars against Negroes in those unions where they are not admitted, the half-hearted attitude of some unions where they are admitted and the general lack of interest in their organization thruout the labor movement, will have to yield.

WHEN the labor movement forms in solid ranks of black and white workers there will be no more talk of "limiting" injunctions, or of lobbying for labor legislation. Injunctions will be abolished by the mass might of a united labor movement and labor will elect legislators who will expose th eancient fraud of capitalist democracy which produces Walkers, Olanders, Wises, Farringtons, Greens, Wolls and Lewises as a dunghill produces poisonous toadstools.

FEDERALISM OR FEUDALISM IN CHINA

By Tang Shin She

ENGLISH imperialism is only in a position to rule the Indian empire owing to separatism in India and only with the help of the Indian princes and rajahs. That which it has already succeeded in achieving in India, it now wishes to carry out in China. In China, which has already for a long time been a united country which no longer knows either kings or princes, the English imperialists wish to bring about separatism and feudalism and in this they are making use of the catch word: "Federative Republic." Chen Shui Ming, who already in the year 1919 was the first to advocate a federative republic, in 1922, at the instigation of the English, destroyed the revolutionary Canton government, the government of Sun Yat Sen. England at that time wanted to kill two birds with one stone: first to suppress the revolutionary movement, that is the Kuomintang, and secondly to bring the various governors into the service of her interests.

The catch word, "Federaitve Republic," at first promised the English great success, for the Chinese people believed that only under this slogan could China again become a united state. As at that time the relations of power, especially in South West China, were subject to great variations—for the Southwest provinces were being continually attacked by generals and governors from the North, and the revolutionary movement often threatened to assume the most acute forms—many governors took advantage of this genuine belief of the people and, one after another, declared their provinces to be independent of the Canton or Peking governments. They said that every province must have a constitution and a supreme government. Accordingly, many governors had themselves elected again as supreme rulers, for example, the governor of Hunan.

PARTLY as a result of experience (because many provinces had already been independent for a long time) and partly as a result of the enlightenment work on the part of the Communists and the Kuomintang, the Chinese people finally arrived at the conviction that the movement for the Federative Republic only served the purposes of imperialists and militarists. They sharply opposed the movement and turned again to the Kuomintang in order to fight in a revolutionary manner. The governors, however, now abandoned their catch word and in 1924 gathered round the flag of Wu Pei Fu, first, because they feared his power and secondly because revolutionary insurrections were again to be expected. The English now issued another catch word: they said China must have a "mercantile" government. On their instigation their chief tool, the fascist leader Chen Lim Pak, undertook in October, 1924 an attack upon the Canton government. This failed, with the result that the plan for the "mercantile" government was thwarted right at the commencement.

After the defeat of Wu Pei Fu and the illness of Sun Yat Sen, the movement for the Federative Republic began to revive again. It was not only supported by the governors, but even by Wu Pei Fu. The governors of Fukien and Hupe (the chief supporters of Wu Pei Fu) have also declared their provinces to be independent.

When Tuan She Sui convened the military conference, the so-called reorganization conference, in February of this year in Peking, the representatives of the governors of the South West provinces attempted to force thru various demands. First they wished to establish in Peking a party for the Federative Republic. This however failed, as it was very sharply opposed by the people. Secondly, they brot forward a moiton that the state form of the Federative Republic should be apporved by this conference. Altho Tchang Tso Lin and Tuan She Sui were formerly, after their defeat in 1920 and 1922, supporters of the Fedarative Republic, the plan was frustrated by them this time.

THE death of Sun Yat Sen provided the imperialists and the generals with a welcome opportunity in order to take up the fight against the revolutionary Kuomintang and to proceed with redoubled zeal to the realization of their plan: establishment of a Federative Republic. Now they no longer wish to found a new party for this purpose, but simply desire to make use of the Kuomintang. Shortly before the death of Sun Yat Sen (when he was already dangerously ill) and shortly after his death, many governors suddenly proclaimed themselves to be supporters of the Kuomintang and formed opposition groups in Peking and in Shanghai. They describe themselves as orthodox Kuomintang. They even wanted Tang She Liau, the governor of Yunnan to be the successor of Sun Yat Sen. Tang She Liau immediately after the death of Sun Yat Sen, had himself appointed generalissimo of the Canton government. At the same time he sent his troops to Canton. The Kuomintang, of course, sharply opposed all these plans. It issued an appeal to the Chinese people declaring that all these are imperialist plans and that the people must stand up against them. The Canton troops continued to fight against the troops of the governor of Yunnan, Tang She Liau, and the latter have suffered a defeat.

The era of federalism and separatism reached its highest point in China in the year 1922, when the Canton government was overthrown. Now, after the death of Sun Yat Sen, the governors and generals, the supporters of the Federative Republic, are once again endeavoring and are using all their forces to carry out this plan. But this is only the last flicker before death. They will in no way succeed. The Chinese people know these independent governments; they know how they are enslaved, how they are doubly and trebly exploited by the military rulers, how the generals proceed with the crulest means against striking workers who wish to save themselves from death by starvation. They now know that behind these plans there stand the imperialists and they know what they have to expect if these plans are realized.

Forged Documents and Revolution

The well-organized international forgery agency in Berlin has been exposed and a huge supply of counterfeit "revolutionary" documents, manufactured for sale to capitalist governments for emergency uses has been secured as a result of the arrest of the well-known ex-czarist police spy Drushelovsky.

The arrest of this spy by the German police is an example of one of the contradictions of capitalism that handicap it in its war on the working class. All capitalist governments are not prepared to go to such lengths at present as did the British tories and the bloody Zankov Bulgarian regime. There is a certain danger in the use of such methods and besides most capitalist governments are quite ready and willing to expose the machinations of the rulers of other nations. The German government had been a customer of Drushelovsky at the time of the raid on the Soviet trade bureau, but when he tried to peddle to the allies documents purporting to show the presence of large quantities of arms in Germany and secret preparations for a war of revenge, he got in bad with the German political police.

The exposure of the filthy role to this creature has placed the capitalist world in a ridiculous position. Not that such isolated incidents bring capitalism to its knees, but certianly an accumulation of proofs of deliberate duplicity which a child can grasp, does not help the ruling class to keep its grip on the minds of the masses.

On the strength of such forgeries the Bulgarian government has murdered thousands of workers and peasants. Because of the now famous forged Zinoviev letter, which that darling of the liberals, Ramsay MacDonald, either believed genuine or had not the courage to expose, the British labor government was defeated. With such documents as an excuse the various governments initiate mass raids on working class organizations. It was not so very long ago that the then Secretary of State Hughes was telling the world of the orders from Zinoviev to "raise the red flag on the White House" and making this a reason for non-recognition of Russia.

Such criminal but futile methods used by the ruling class are irrefutable evidence of decay. Before the collapse of the Roman Empire bribery, corruption, perjury together with murder were the commodities chiefly in demand. Preceding the downfall of feudalism the forging of official documents and the hatching of plots and counter-plots was a regular business. Just before the overthrow of the czar forgery and perjury had become a fine art in Russia.

So it is today. Fantastic tales of terroristic plots by which the working class or some section of it intends to wipe out some ruler or retainer are handed out to distract attention from the ceaseless campaign of blood and iron waged against the workers by the capitalist government.

The workers are beginning to understand, however, that revolutions are not the product of conspirators plotting in some dark corner, but are the inevitable result of mass oppression. Sporadic revolts are not revolutions and what the rulers want is an abortive revolt now and then that can be drowned in blood and used to cow the working class.

But there is danger for the rulers even in provocation to sectional uprisings. The czar's police once planned such a revolt but it turned into a real revolution.

When the gong of history sounds the hour forged documents do the ruling class little good.

"Grass," New Film, Gives First Hand Social History

By WM. F. KRUSE.

A BIG step forward, and a daring one, is the running of a travel picture as a full-length "feature" under the sponsorship of the trust itself. Of course the International Workers' Aid has done this time after time with pictures of Soviet Russia and their appeal never seems to wane, but then ours is a special audience vitally and personally concerned in the events depicted on the screen.

"Grass" records a 48-day migration of a nomadic Persian tribe forced by the exhaustion of their pasture land to essay the climbing of the towering snow-covered mountain chain that shuts them off from more fertile valleys to the west. Barefoot thru the ice and snow, breaking trail almost every foot of the way for their cavalcade of thousands of men, women, children, sheep, lambs, goats, kids, horses, colts, mules and all manner of other stock. They swim raging rivers and it is clear to the beholders that there must be quite a few who never reach the other side. Finally the fight is won and the new pastures are enjoyed to the full. A page—a whole chapter—out of the life struggle of the race is thus shown in the space of an hour. There is about this grim reality a clearness, a grandeur, an inspiration beyond the powers of the most gifted writer or artist. This is no story or picture of life and struggle, it is these things themselves, and they hold their audience spellbound.

Some of the strength of the picture is sapped by the occasional attempt to jazz up the sequence with flippant and irrelevant titles. Movie hoakum does obtrude itself every once in a while, but this is the fault of the presentation, not of the event. More footage than is essential is given to the journey of the photographers in search of this "Lost People," altho some of these early scenes, the sandstorms for instance, are tremendously impressive. But when an Arab innkeeper in the middle of the desert welcomes unknown visitors with a two minute magnesium blare it is stretching a little bit far.

Everyone interested in the study of the struggle for existence waged by man thruout the ages should see this wonderful film. This should include all workers, and all children of the workers. Under Communism the story of past and present will be taught with pictures like "Grass."

Letters From Our Readers

Chicago Agricultural Commune on Board the "Berengaria."

To the DAILY WORKER: The group of the Herald Commune and Krasny Lutch hereby send you an account of our trip to Soviet Russia.

We of the group of Krasny Lutch boarded the ship Berengaria in New York City at Pier 54, Cunard Line on May 5. The next morning to our surprise we met the Herald Commune group and we immediately joined forces. We held a meeting, elected a chairman, a secretary, a committee of action, a baggage committee, a publicity commitee and also a sanitation committee.

Up to this minute we have kept our group intact. We eat, work and play together.

You may be surprised to hear that we had work to do. Our very first day on board ship revealed to us the conditions that existed in the third cabin. The food was awful, the passengers got no attention, their complaints were not even noticed. So our commitee of action immediately got on the job. We called on the captain of the boat. We presented him with a letter of introduction from the Cunard Line introducing our party. Then we presented our demands. And after that all the passengers got better serive and we had much better food.

They Get Busy.

Our activities aroused the interest and curiosity of all on the boat. They watched our every move as tho we were some kind of a circus on exhibition. From words let drop in their whispers we knew they were talking about Communists, about Moscow, about the Bolsheviks. Those who showed signs of intelligence we talked to and told about our movement.

They take in the Sight.

One day we were given an exhibition of the Fascisti cannibal game that is such a favorite to the capitalist savages of America. Jack Dempsey is on the boat and he went three rounds with one of the butchers of the ship.

Another treat in store for us was to see a count working on the boat. There is a white guard orchestra for the third class cabin and with it a former Russian Count Sabansky from the province of Kamenetz Podolsk. This count typifies the half-wit creatures the Russian workers used to slave for.

As I write this we are coming to the shores of France, Cherburg. All of us are in the best of spirits and we send you our hearty greetings.

Greetings comrades of the Workers (Communist) Party from the Commune Groups of Herald and Krasny Lutch.

Fraterannly yours,
Jack Zinko, Chairman.

THE LOGIC OF IT.

To the DAILY WORKER:— "We cannot leap over the capitalist phase of development into socialism"—Oneal's challenge to the Communists.

Friendly collaboration is the logical attitude of the socialist party toward capitalism. For, say the socialists, "capitalism is the necessary developing agency of the industrial order preparatory to socialism."

From which it must follow that during the developing process the interests of capital and labor are identical, and that there is no basis for the "class struggle."

And also it must follow that public ownership of utilities, during the process of industrial development, is logically impossible.

Also, logically, socialists become boosters of capitalist imperialism as a necessary agency for the industrial development of backward countries.

And since the success of world-capitalism is dependent upon certain highly developed industrial-financial centers to draw from, it follows that socialism cannot follow up capitalist developments without hindering the developing process in its world-sweep.

And, furthermore, since there will always be a vast and unlimited field for the extension of industrial development here and everywhere; and since, by socialist logic, public capital is not efficient for developing purposes; it follows that capitalism will always be in demand for the developing task.

And, incidentally, in order to carry forward the developing process the capitalists must be in possession of industry, raw materials, means of commerce, markets, financial and industrial resources, the powers of state to keep order, ability to break strikes, legislation, and whatever else is necessary to successful national and international exploitation.

For further information address Oneal.—L. D. Ratliff.

PROGRE[illegible] MINERS CALL COAL DIGG[illegible] DEMAND CONVENTION OF [illegible]. OF A. IN JANUARY, 1926

Thruout the c[illegible] coal miners are writing letters to the Progressive Miners' International Committee of the U. M. W. of A., expressing their protest at the attempt of the Lewis machine to postpone the regular convention until January 1927. On Thursday, June 4th, the progressive miners published their call to the miners to defeat the proposal to postpone the convention. In the statement below, the progressive miners give additional reasons for the miners demanding the holding of the convention at its regularly constituted time:

Additional statement of the Progressive Miners' committee on the proposed postponement of the International Convention of the U. M. of A.

The militant miners know not only from the experience of the last election, but from all previous ones, that a fair election in the organization cannot be had with the Lewis administration controlling the machinery. And one of the main reasons back of the desire of the Lewis machine to postpone the next International convention is to hide the actual returns on the vote.

Affidavits made in Pennsylvania on the Lewis-Howat election of 1920, show that the votes were altered after leaving the locals. Where Howat had received a large majority, they were changed to give Lewis a majority. This was not a local condition, but was general thruout the International.

The following facts from affidavits are good examples of the chicanery practiced:

The affidavit by Paul Francis and John Dusick of Daisytown, Pa., states that Howat got 218 votes and Lewis 75 in their Local Union, yet when the International tellers had finished the count, Howat was given only 14 votes and Lewis 853, showing definitely that the vote had been changed after leaving the local union.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE "traffic-in-arms" conference that held forth in Geneva for several weeks disbanded without having accomplished anything more substantial than proving that the capitalist powers love each other like rival confidence men and that no peace can be expected to last longer than until it suits one or more of them to make war. The conference also proved that all the capitalist powers live in deadly dread of Soviet Russia, but their mutual hatreds and fear of their own working class populations prevent the bandit nations from uniting for the purpose of wiping the Soviet Union off the map.

IT is reported that the People's College at Shanghai was raided. The raiding was done by American marines. This is not so bad. It shows the Chinese that the boasted friendship of the United States government for them in the past, was merely the camouflage of the seducer, working into their good graces in order to be able to rob them the better.

BOLSHEVIK propaganda is blamed for the great revolt of the Chinese masses against the foreign invaders. It need not be denied that Communists are leading factors in the present situation in China. It need not be stated that they are on the side of the Chinese and against the imperialist robbers. But the conditions which create rebellion are not the handiwork of the Communists. The robber policy of the great powers has produced the present crisis and it would not surprise anybody [illegible] developing into a movement formidable enough to drive the imperialist invaders out of China.

• • •

THE working class of Russia have pledged aid to their brothers in China, just as they have aided the oppressed in all lands, since they won their glorious victory over their own oppressors. And the Russian workers must not be alone in bringing aid to the embattled Chinese workers, now awakening to a realization of the own power. The workers of all lands must do whatever they can. The sacrifices of the great Chinese revolutionist Dr. Sun Yat Sen were not made in vain, and let us hope that the day is not far distant when the red flag of Communism will float as proudly from the walls of Peking as it does today from the Kremlin.

NO RESPECT FOR A GRAFTING, STEALING JUDGE, SAY KEYMEN

ST. LOUIS, Mo. June 5.—(FP).—"Those who demand that we respect and venerate judges and declare that any criticism of judges proves the one criticizing to be a "Red Bolshevist and dangerous," should take a slant over at Illinois," declares the railroad telegrapher, organ of its union.

"George W. English is a federal judge over there. He has been investigated by a committee of congress and, among other things charged against him, he stands admittedly guilty of using his position to aid his fortunes and his friends. The papers have been filled with stories of his wrongdoings, yet he sits on the bench at present and sends other men to jail. How can respect for the judiciary be increased by such performances?"

RIFFS INFLICT HEAVY DEFEAT ON FRENCH ARMY

Painleve Pushed; Near Cabinet Crisis

PARIS, France, June 5.—The French troops sent by the Painleve government to invade Morocco have suffered a serious defeat, it was admitted today by the French war office. Under a battering attack of the Riffian natives the French have retreated in the section around Twounat. Reinforcements under Col. Freydenburg finally stemmed the advance, but the French were driven back and suffered severe casualties.

France and Spain are now seeking to starve the native north Africans into submission by the establishment of an economic blockade. The foreign office declared that the French and Spanish government have decided to name a commission to meet in Paris or Madrid to discuss ways of making the blockade more stringent.

Spain Negotiates.

Great Britain will be asked to stop the smuggling of arms and war materials which it is charged have been entering Morocco thru Gibralter.

The Spanish government is known to be negotiating with Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Moroccans, and Primo de Rivera, Spain's dictator, has let it be known that "both countries desire an armistice."

It is now admitted that the Riffians are masters of the situation. The fear that the Moroccan campaign will be costly as well as bloody has contributed to the feebleness of the franc. The French workers are opposed to sending their youth into a foreign land to be slaughtered by natives who are protecting their native soil.

Thousands of Workers Protest

The last meeting held in Paris by the Communist Party of France called for the purpose of condemning the Moroccan campaign of the Painleve government was attended by twenty thousand workers.

France cannot keep up the war much longer without a crisis over the fall of the franc and the imperialistic policy of foreign invasion.

DEFENSE UNITY MOVE GETS MANY ENDORSEMENTS

Foster, Sinclair, Debs Heartily Approve

CHICAGO, June 5.—"As one who is threatened with ten years in a Michigan jail for having opinions that don't meet with the approval of the bosses, and very likely also, by way of revenge for my activity in the great steel strike of 1919," said William Z. Foster in an interview today. "I want to give my unqualified endorsement to the coming defence conference of June 28th. Anyone whose heart lays with the struggles of the workers, it seems to me, can very well support this admirable move to unify the forces of the labor movement against the attacks of the tools of organized capital."

George Maurer, the secretary of the Labor Defense Council which is the initiator of the conference the purpose of which is to rally all workers' organizations for the defense of class war prisoners, received the following telegram from Upton Sinclair, "I sympathize with your purpose and I wish you success in your efforts, but I cannot attend the conference. I have to stick to my own job of writing books. I can do more that way."

Theodore Debs writes to the Council from Terre Haute for his brother, Eugene V. Debs, who is on a speaking tour, "I know he will fully approve the action of your executive committee to extend the operations of the Council and to defend all class-war prisoners."

Former Prisoners Enthusiastic.

Robert Morss Lovett of the University of Chicago and George E. Hooker of Hull House are heartily in sympathy with the objects of the conference. Especially does the conference and its aims meet with the enthusiastic approval of former class-war prisoners whose previous sufferings impell them to the necessity of closer collaboration between the various units of the workers' movement for the prevention of more such suffering.

West Virginia Is Proof.

E. C. Wentworth, chairman of the Labor Defense Council, said regarding the recent attack on the miners in West Virginia, "If what McCallister Coleman writes regarding his having been thrown in jail in Fairmount County with 200 union miners for peaceful picketing is true, then I want to say that the conference for Labor Defense to be held on June 28th is wise and timely indeed."

Mass Meeting.

The Labor Defense Council announces that the conference will be held in Ashland Auditorium at ten in the morning, June 28th. In the evening an amnesty mass meeting will be held at the Plasterers Temple. All existing worker's defense organizations, ex-class war prisoners, individuals who have distinguished themselves in work for amnesty and for the defense of persecuted workers and all workers' organizations such as trade unions and fraternal organizations are invited to the conference.

Asks Yankee Army to Get Out of the Republic of Haiti

NEW YORK, June 5.—(FP)—Request for the withdrawal of armed forces of the United States from Haiti is in the hands of President Coolidge and the secretary of state, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Pierre Hudicourt, formerly of Hague Peace Tribunal and member now of American Institute of International law, sent the request in behalf of the Haitian Patriotic Union in the United States. Hudicourt's memorandum charges that in violation of the Haitian constitution the country has been governed without regularly elected representatives of the people, by a council of state nominated and dismissed by the president.

FOSTER SPEAKS SUNDAY AT CHICAGO ITALIAN COMMUNISTS' PICNIC

William Z. Foster, chairman of the Workers Party, who has recently returned from Soviet Russia, will speak at the picnic given by the Italian branches of the party on Sunday, June 7, at Straka Grove, Lyons, Illinois.

The reconstruction of Soviet Russia is one of the great facts of present history. It is a fact the capitalists are busily trying to contradict and offset with lies of the old famine days. Foster will tell of the situation of the Russian working class today, and its new conditions of life.

On the way to Soviet Russia, Comrade Foster attended the conference of the minority movement in the British trade unions, one of the most promising rank and file movements of the world's organized workers and a subject of Foster's speeches.

Take the Ogden avenue or 22nd street surface car and transfer to the Lyons car at Cicero. Then a short ride to 39th street and Haas avenue, Lyons. Follow the crowd to Straka grove. The Italian Communists of Chicago welcome everybody to their picnic.

WOMEN TOIL IN INDUSTRY LONG HOURS, REPORT

D. of L. Admits Need of 8-Hour Day

WASHINGTON, June 5.— Women in industry are forced to undergo an over-long working day, the woman's bureau of the department of labor revealed, in making public today a report of conditions in the three great women-employing industries—clothing textiles, and mercantile stores.

The survey disclosed that many women in these industries were compelled to work more than fifty hours a week.

Thirteen states and 162,792 women were the basis for the study, which was conducted in New Jersey, Ohio, Rhode Island, Maryland, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Missouri, South Carolina, and Virginia.

Sixty Hours or More.

"More than a quarter of all the 162,972 women were found to be working more than 50 hours a week," the report stated. "Of those, 18,572 were on a 55-hour schedule and 2,945 were on a schedule of 60 hours or more."

Only one-third of all the women had a scheduled week of 48 hours or less.

A 10-hour day was customary for the largest group of textile workers. Only 6 per cent of the textile workers had a week of 44 hours or less in contrast with 32.4 per cent of the clothing workers.

Practically one-half of the women in the various textile industries had a week of 55 hours or more, while less than 3 per cent of the clothing workers had so long a week.

"For the fact must not be overlooked that where no legal limitation exists there are always some plants that are running excessively long hours," the report concludes.

FASCIST SLUGS U. S. CONSUL; MISTAKES HIM FOR WORKER; SO SORRY

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Franklin C. Gowen, American vice consul at Leghorn, Italy, was assaulted on May 24 by a member of the fascisti, Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador at Rome, reported to the state department today.

Fletcher said the attack was "without reason" and that Gowen was "severely stunned by being hit over the head."

Apologies have been offered. The vice consul was mistaken for a worker, some of the fascists said.

POLICE CLUBS FAIL TO STOP STRIKE SPREAD

St. Louis Clothing Workers Organize

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 5—Six more strikers, who were picketing the plant of the Curlee Clothing company, where over 700 workers have walked out demanding recognition of the union, were arrested here. The strikers were peacefully picketing the plant, located at Locust and Twenty-first St.

Additional workers have joined the strike which was called by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The strikers are holding regular mass meetings at the Gayety theater. At the last meeting two of the striking cutters told how they were brutally beaten by two police sergeants and a patrolman from the central district. The union will bring charges against the police before the patrol board.

The cases of 23 strikers, including nine women, who were previously arrested while picketing, on a charge of "disturbing the peace," were continued until June 30, after being called in police court.

Officials of the union declare the strikers will stay out until the union is recognized.

The six strikers arrested are Corine Franklin, Elizabeth Bilzing, Harry Kessel, Jack Blumberg, Julius Schkolinski, and William Fuhrwerk. After being released on bonds, they returned to the picket lines.

Shipping Board to Sell Ships Worth Millions, for Scrap

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The United States shipping board today formally authorized the sale of 200 ships. The purchasers will be permitted to scrap the vessels or use them in commerce.

In the U. S. shipping board today a movement was on to close all the interior offices now maintained to divert traffic to American ships.

The fight will be started, it was learned, as part of the announced intention of the board to turn over all its holdings to private operators as soon as possible.

EIGHT YEARS OF LIFE LOST TO EACH FACTORY WORKER IN AMERICA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, June 5. — Eight years are clipped off of the life of every worker who works in the factories of the United States. So asserts Professor C. E. A. Winslow of the Yale School of Medicine, speaking to the doctors' convention.

He urges a radical change in factory ventilation to protect workers and asserts that regulation of heat is as important in workshops as in schools. Tuberculosis is increasing in industry, and not diminishing, according to Professor Winslow.

Thousands of lives are lost and billions of dollars wasted because of the lack of preventive health measures in industry, said Dr. Emery Hyaburst of the Ohio state university.

EXTRA SQUAD OF MARINES GUARD 'BELOVED CAL'

Pick 100 to Spy on President's Visitors

WASHINGTON, June 5.—A company of United States marines, one hundred strong, will guard President Coolidge during his occupancy of the summer white house at Swampscott, Mass., it was learned here today. Already the guard detail is being selected at the marine base at Quantico, Va.

This is almost unprecedented action.

It was argued that, inasmuch as the men had to be maintained wherever they were stationed, they could be located at Swampscott at little extra expense. Then the order went forward to produce a detail.

They will encamp as near Swampscott as possible, and small quarters will be maintained at "white court" itself for the detail on duty. The men will wear side-arms. They will be stationed as outposts along the coast and around the estate. The regular secret service detail will form the inner cordon.

MARINES ACT AS STRIKEBREAKERS AGAINST CHINESE

Do the Dirty Work for American Imperialists

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

SHAGHAI, China, June 5—With a spread of the general strike against foreign imperialism by a walkout of 150,000 more Chinese today, the propagandists of the imperialists' interests are turning out reams of imperialist propaganda about alleged "Bolshevik plots" rather than acknowledge that the uprising occurred because of the violence used by foreign troops in breaking a strike and shooting down strikers who paraded with students on the Nanking road.

The 150,000 who joined the strike included a thousand or two of house servants and sixty per cent of the police. The rest of the police are also useless for the purpose of suppressing their Chinese brothers.

Servants Quit U. S. Service.

The house servants in the United States consulate and the United States court have walked out on strike and the wives of the consuls and subordinates are compelled to do their own cooking and housework.

This has caused Consul General Cunningham of the U. S. A. to get hysterical and send long dispatches to the American government loaded with plots and conspiracies of the "reds." The food supply of the foreign quarter is endangered and ice is hard to get.

Urge Familiar Capitalist Alibi.

The strange alibi of [illegible] imperialists now is that the [illegible] students tried to get themselves [illegible] by the foreign troops, so that resentment could be stirred up over their deaths. Such is the peculiar reasoning of those who have shot down and are still shooting down the Chinese merely for striking or demonstrating in parades.

As usual, a flood of so-called "documents" has appeared, which the for-

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 5.—The striking union plumbers of Milwaukee, out since June 1 for a $10 day, have sent over a fifth of their number back to work in shops that settled with the union. The old scale was $9. Advertisements for strikebreakers are producing little result, union officials say.

At the same time the strike for the $10 day is spreading to other Wisconsin towns, including Green Bay, Oshkosh, Appleton and Fond du Lac. Racine, Madison and LaCrosse have had the $10 day for some time, unionists report.

SPANISH, FRENCH BLOCKADE HITS WOUNDED RIFFS

They Fight for Native Soil, Doctor Says

LONDON, England, June 5.—The Spanish and French government have blockaded Morocco to such an extent that it is impossible for a doctor or nurse to get into the interior of the Riff country to aid the wounded and sick natives, H. Gordon Canning, who has just returned to London after ministering to the Riff wounded in their war against the invading armies.

Canning declares that the Riffians are fighting for complete independence from the domination of foreign imperialists. They merely ask to be left alone to govern their own land. The Riffians would gladly make peace and settle boundary disputes with the invaders, Canning declares.

In a recent interview, Canning stated:

A blockade has been established in the present way which prohibits even Red Cross stores being sent into the country, and had made it almost impossible for doctors to penetrate into the interior to alleviate the sufferings of combatants and non-combatants, which modern war, with all its horrors of bomb-dropping, gas artillery and machine gun fire, entail on the population of a country which suffers an invasion.

Defend Their Soil.

"Nevertheless, the Riff continues to fight, and has on many occasions sent out desperate appeals to prove to the public of Europe that he wages war simply to defend his soil and drive back the foreigner to the sea coast."

"For two thousand years, altho this country has suffered numerous invasions, it has never been wholly occupied or subdued by any foreign element, and they do not intend that the present day shall see their country become a colony of Spain.

"The league of nations, which is supposed to limit the possibilities of war and to protect the rights of small nations, does not appear to be in any hurry to solve this dangerous problem, altho the Riff has on many occasions appealed for its support and arbitration.

Are Most Hospitable.

"During my journey thru Morocco I did not meet a single Riff who could be described as cunning, suspicious or cruel; on the contrary, they were most hospitable and frank, not in the least fanatical or savage. The one desire of everybody appeared to be first to win independence, secondly to have peace, and thirdly to develop the country.

"The adjective 'cunning' seems to me to be more applicable to many European diplomatists than to the Riff, for proof of which it is not necessary to go further than the methods employed to enmesh Morocco herself in the entanglements of European diplomacy."

Demand Independence.

Muhammed ben Abdul Krim has no desire to create any disturbance in this zone. He wishes, and has repeatedly demanded, that a neutral commission should be appointed at once to investigate and to rectify the boundary lines between the two districts over which there is a dispute, and which is a tantalising cause of frontier incidents.

"The peace terms which the Riffians have demanded are not altogether excessive. There were a few minor territorial points which in the course of a conference would be more or less settled. They were prepared to leave Spain in undisputed possession of Ceuta and Melilla and the ore mines which have been developed close to the latter place.

"They demand complete autonomy and recognition by the league of nations."

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

france is still groggy and the campaign against the Moroccans is hitting several snags. The Riffians are getting along very nicely and the French imperialists are able to use only black or Mohammedan troops against the natives. The French soldiers have no stomach to fight a people that are only endeavoring to rid their country of the invader. It does not look so good for France.

SPAIN is flirting with Krim and it is reported that Dictator De Rivera has promised some concessions to the Riffian chief provided he stops taking pot shots at the Spaniards. The Riffians are used to peppering the invaders by now that it is second nature with them to pull a trigger when a white man hoves in sight. Unfortunately the only white men they have run into were either missionaries, capitalist agents or soldiers of capitalism. This gives them a bad impression of the white race.

A HOT time is promised for Italy next Wednesday. The members of the Aventine opposition, so-called because they retired to the Aventine hill and refused to participate in the Italian parliament, are planning to hold a meeting in the parliament building in commemoration of the murder of Matteotti by the fascisti. This has aroused the wrath of the fascist cutthroats who are planning to invade the meeting and make mince meat of the friends of the murdered Matteotti.

THIS clash may be the signal for a national revolt against the Mussolini murder regime. As the DAILY WORKER predicted when Thomas Lamont of the house of Morgan visited Mussolini recently, the object of the visit was to bolster up the fascist regime with a loan. This has come to pass. But the $50,000,000 Morgan dollars will not be able to hold back the rising tide of opposition to the reign of the black shirted assassins.

THE Italian workers are being given bitter object lessons in fascism. Mussolini announces that he is going to drop 500,000 workers from the public services. All those who do not support fascism 100 per cent are due for dismissal. In order to be able to put this scheme across Benito paid a visit to the demented neurotic D'Annunzio with the object of bringing his influence to bear on the side of fascism. This is the kind of a policy that the international bankers like. They want railroads that pay and they don't want their profits to go in wages to workers whether they wear the black shirt or not.

• • •

IT is rather interesting to learn that President Calles, who is eulogized by the American socialists is following the Mussolini policy in Mexico. Calles will drop "superfluous" workers from the public services. He was careful to secure the acquiescence of the labor fakers before he made up his mind to do this. Wall Street now owns the Mexican government body and soul. Edward L. Doheny, the Teapot Domer, is the unofficial agent of the American government in Mexico. Doheny hates the Communists and the radical workers in general, but he thinks Calles is a mighty nice fellow even tho Calles reviewed a May Day parade and saluted the red flag.

SOVIET UNION PLACES ORDER FOR BUILDING OF 231 LARGE SHIPS

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—(By Mail) The government has placed a big order with four national shipbuilding works for the construction of 231 ships during a five years' period. The total cost is estimated at some 253 million roubles, and it is expected that about 80 thousand workers of various skill and qualification will be employed in this job.

About 240,000 tons of metal, fabricated and semi-fabricated, and some 354,000 tons of raw materials will be used for fulfilling the contract.

eign business interests use to bolster up their stories of "Soviet aid," etc. These imperialists claim to have known a year ago that the "plot" was "afoot," but yet have been strangely silent and unprepared all this time.

Blue Jackets Turn Strikebreakers.

Town hall today was established as the supply depot from which to fight the effort of the Chinese strikers to starve out the imperialists.

Under guard of American bluejackets the food controller moved 2,000 bags of flour from the wharves to the hall.

The French concession was the focus of the strikers' agitation today. Ten thousand Chinese employed in shops in that quarter put up the shutters on their places of employment and joined the milling throngs outside.

Hundreds of students with mourning bands on their arms for the score of rioters who have fallen in the strike demonstrations were riding on street cars thru the French concession, shouting to the workers to join in the walkout. Others held street meetings, rallying to them the Chinese they had persuaded to leave the shops.

Foreign Press Tied Up.

The foreign papers, including the China Press, the Shanghai Times, the English owned North China Daily News and the Shanghai Mercury, an evening paper, are tied up while the Evening News, edited by an American and operated by white guard scab forces is limping out with a reduced sheet.

The Junior Chinese constabulary is being disarmed. Irene Corbally Kuhn, newspaper woman of New York and Miss Viola Smith of the United States Trade Comission are organizing the foreign women for strikebreaking auxiliary work.

Marines Occupy University.

The Shanghai University, yesterday raided by American marines who ejected the students and snooped about for "Bolshevist literature" is now occupied by these Yankee marines and sailors.

The president of the Shanghai college, an American named F. J. White of Kansas City, closed the school to students because they demonstrated on the campus for freedom of China from foreign imperialism. St. John's university did likewise.

Strike Still Spreading.

The strikes are still spreading and are taking hold of the armed forces in Chinese territory adjacent to the foreign settlements. The Chinse "merchant volunteers" supposed to have been created by foreign interests as a protective white guard, are already declaring sympathy to the strike. The Woo-Sung constabulary and military gendarmes are being asked to strike tonight.

Truth Justifies Protest.

PEKNG, China, June 5—While the responsibility for the deaths and injuries in the Shanghai strike was being claimed to rest upon the Chinese by the foreign governments, who curtly said their troops would stop shooting only when the Chinese submitted to their rule of invasion, the news from Shanghai again clearly justifies the protest against the murder of students there.

The foreign office of the Chinese government addressed a note to the foreign diplomatic corps, stating that, contrary to the imperialists' claims, the investigations of the Shanghai shootings show that the murdered students were shot in the back by the British Sikh police troops, who were entirely unhurt—this showing the shooting was altogether unjustified. "The attitude of the Shanghai authorities," says the note, "is arousing the utmost feeling and may cause the gravest consequences." The note points out that the prisoners have not been released in spite of the request of the foreign office.

The Chinese government has sent Admiral Tsai Ting-kan and vice minister of foreign affairs, Tseng, to Shanghai to investigate.

More U. S. Destroyers Arrive.

Three more American destroyers arrived today from Chefoo. Naval forces ashore now include 800 British, 600 Americans, 200 Italians and 60 Japanese. The Japanese government has ordered the cruiser Tatsuta from Sasseho to Shanghai with 200 marines. Additional American forces, including 300 marines are being rushed from Cavite in the Philippines on the U. S. S. Jason. The gunboat Sacramento is also ordered from Hong Kong to Shanghai.

Soviet Denies Plot.

SHANGHAI, June 5—The Russian consul general, E. Osarnin, today denied that Soviet propaganda was responsible for riot conditions. American sailors carrying rifles with bayonets fixed were stationed at the People's College.

Envoy Blames Aliens.

BERLIN, June 5—A warning to foreign powers to keep out of the Shang hai trouble and a charge that the whole trouble has assumed its present proportions only because foreign employers tried to smash the strike of Chinese workers with foreign troops and foreign warships, was issued today by M. Wu, Chinese ambassador to Germany.

Bring Up Mercenary Troops.

WASHINGTON, June 5.— Consul General Cunningham stationed at Shanghai, reports that mercenary Chinese white troops from the Yunnan province, commanded by General Tang Ki-yao, are marching toward Canton to "destroy the Bolshevist influence in Canton." A serious battle is expected in about ten days.

The Central Bank of China in Canton has been closed, martial law is declared at every nightfall and the civil and military authorities are reported to have clashed.

French Want Too Much.

PARIS, France, June 5.— The French government announced today that it has never succeeded in getting an apology from China for the erection of a monument in Canton, of the French colonial Annamite revolutionist who threw a bomb at the French military governor-general of Indo-China last winter, and killed five Frenchmen. The Peking government, unfortunately, has not control over Canton.

Even the Yellows.

GENEVA, Switzerland, June 5.—Even the yellow reformists who sit as "labor delegates" in the international labor office, meeting, of course, separately, have been so impressed by the spirited revolt in Shanghai that they have sent a cable of sympathy to the Chinese workers on strike at Shanghai. The telegram protests mildly the "frequence of violent action by the authorities against the workers of the far east."

Aged Worker Commits Suicide.

Thomas Ward, a bricklayer 60 years old, a victim of the brutal capitalist system which saps the life out of workers for profits and then casts them on the dump heap committed suicide. He was found dead from inhaling gas in his lodging in the basement of 1639 West Van Buren street. The report says it was a suicide, resulting from despondency over illness which made it impossible for Ward to hold down a job.

Conscription of All for Wall Street's Wars Plan of American Imperialism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the American military machine moves toward conscription. Coolidge, posing as a defender of peace, spreads the propaganda of universal military service; the so-called citizens' military training camps are opening their annual season over the nation, drawing the youth of the nation into the hopper of militarism, while over the land special propaganda movies are being shown, with more in preparation, to glorify killing. Coolidge served notice on the nation, that it was about to be militarized, in the speech he made at Annapolis when he said:

> "The true spirit of American institutions requires that each citizen should be potentially a soldier, ready to take his place in the ranks in time of peril, either in the field or in necessary productive activity."

That is due warning that Wall Street imperialism intends to make a military slave of every American worker and poor farmer, those who constitute the broad masses of the country. And Wall Street, thru its government at Washington, has the power to do this, labor permitting.

It is "the true spirit of American institutions" that demands that every worker and farmer be ready, and prepared, to go anywhere in the world to defend the investments of the international bankers, to protect old markets and win new markets for American capitalist industry. If new wars must be fought, with their millions slain, then they will be fought, in the name of "American institutions."

• • • •

In Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan alone, 5,408 boys have applied for admission to the training camps. More than 38,000 boys in all have asked to enter the 39 training camps that have been prepared for them; all to be drilled in the school of capitalist militarism.

In the "movies" the children have "patriotic" pictures thrust before them. They are shown the flag-waving, the cheering, the band-playing side of war. They are not shown the dead, the maimed, the trail of human wreckage, of untold misery that follow in the wake of every war. The graduating exercises of the Annapolis Military Academy were made the occasion of such a jingo "movie," with Ramon Navarro, the movie star, as "hero," getting his diploma from Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, the California Japanophile, in lieu of Coolidge who considered it beneath his Vermont dignity to indulge in the fake ceremony.

• • • •

But labor has something to gain even thru being harnessed in the accoutrements of capitalist wars. It gains the knowledge of how to fight, pending the day when it will fight for its own interests, against its capitalist masters.

Czarism drove millions of workers and peasants into the trenches. When those mililons had had enough of fighting they returned home and seized power.

The allies of the Versailles peace armed and sent into the war colored colonial troops from Africa and Asia. Many of those troops are now fighting for their own interests, against their imperialist masters. The Riffs against the French and Spanish in northern Africa, for instance.

• • • •

Even the Chinese are learning to fight. Armies are put in the field by rival "generals" supported by competing imperialist interests. Ignorantly the Chinese engage in suicidal struggle to the benefit of their foreign masters. But even the Chinese are developing that solidarity of the masses that spells defeat for native and foreign oppressors.

• • • •

All this the American workers and farmers should think about when their capitalist masters put them in the uniform of the profit-seeking dollar. Capitalism will teach them how to fight. It remains for them to learn against whom to fight. It remains for them to learn that capitalism is their only foe, that there is but one enemy, the class enemy, the capitalist class. That knowledge grows even out of the working of the capitalist military machine.

Labor Officials Help Break Up Meeting for Bloor at Reno

was used. Government Conciliator Cornell, here on account of some local trade union troubles, took a leading role in breaking up the meeting advising the authorities and trade union officials not to allow Mother Bloor to speak.

Fear of the message of Communism and the possibilities of forming Communist units in this city famous for its scandals and easy divorces, brought a beautifully clear instance of how the reactionary labor leaders work hand in hand with the authorities to keep the working class divorced from even elementary rights of holding unmolested meetings.

"Mother" Bloor took full advantage of this collaboration between labor officialdom and the authorities to hammer home her message to the workers she was able to reach.

"Breaking up a meeting of mine is nothing new," she said. "This gave me a good chance to show up the reactionary trade union leadership and the local authorities.

"The DAILY WORKER was received very well indeed, and the contacts made and subscriptions secured are going to make life uneasy for all the local opponents of labor in the near future.

Fallon, Nevada is Next

Fallon, Nevada is the next stop of "Mother" Bloor. Holding meetings here on Saturday, she will proceed to Rock Springs, Wyoming arriving on the 1[illegible] and holding meeting at various points in between. Cheyenne Wyoming will see this fighting agitator on the 14, from where she proceeds to Denver, Colorado, holding meetings on the 16, 17 and 18.

HARSH NOTE OF ALLIES SINKS GERMAN HOPES

Move to Retain Direct Control

BERLIN, Germany, June 5.— An extraordinary session of the cabinet was meeting this afternoon to consider the note of the allied council of ambassadors ordering drastic changes in the structure of the military, factory and railway organizations, under the direction of the interallied control commission. The note declares that the French army will remain in the Rhineland until these conditions, which many here consider impossible of fulfillment, are met by the von Hindenburg government.

The note indorsed by the French and British governments, is looked upon by the workers of Germany as the attempt of these imperialists to retain their control of Germany's industries.

The note charged that the "Schutzpolies" or national constabulary is of military character, and is maintained in barracks, with regular military staffs in command. It charges that Germany's police strength is 30 per cent over the amount authorized by the Versailles treaty.

The country's police strength was placed at 150,000, in place of the 150,000 permitted under the treaty.

Dismantling of all portable wireless substations is further demanded.

The note states that the interallied military control commission shall specify where the state police shall be stationed.

Seven private factories, with 8,000 machines and numerous other plants in violation of the treaty remain in Germany, the note states. The interallied military control commission will specify the corrective steps to be taken, it added.

Proof of the destruction of a number of war material plants is demanded in the note which asserts that the dismantling of Krupps was incomplete.

The council of ambassadors submitted no plan for the production of authorized supplies in the Krupp works which have not been converted.

The council demands that the German army be devoted entirely to the maintenance of order within the country's borders and stipulates that the organization of the "Heeresleitung," which is similar to the general staff of war days be suppressed.

The note demands suppression of short term enlistments in the reichswehr, suppression of the reserve cadet corps, also of military activities of societies and associations.

Legislation curbing possession and traffic in firearms also is demanded, as well as restriction of coastal defenses with mounted guns.

Railways have been organised with a view to military mobilisation, the note charges, requiring that a reorganisation to peacetime ends only be effected. Co-operation between civil airplanes and the army also must cease.

The note denies the German contention that non-evacuation of Cologne was an allied move of reprisal.

Japanese Firm Signs Contract with Soviet Union Timber Company

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., (By Mail.)—The Moscow papers note the great interest shown in the contract between the Susuki firm and the "Dalles" (Far Eastern timber syndicate) by the Japanese papers, of which several predict that Siberian timber will soon oust the American product from the Japanese market.

New York Worker Correspondents

NEW YORK.—Saturday evening at 7 p. m., Comrade Jack Carney will speak to those who registered for the course of WORKER CORRESPONDENTS at the party headquarters, 108 E. 14th St.

Arrangements for the class proper are now virtually completed.

The class will meet every week and will last eight weeks.

The text book will be Wm. F. Dunne's "The Revolutionary Role of Worker Correspondents."

After the first session (which will be devoted primarily to an exposition of the purpose, function, etc., of Worker Correspondents) the sessions will be conducted so as to give the students a maximum amount of time for practical work. Home assignments every week will include a critical study of the job news, news stories and special articles appearing in the Communist press as well as the writing up of such news or stories.

The outline of work for each class period will be divided as follows:

1. Discussion and analysis of written material assigned as home work during the previous week.
2. Outline of and explanation of new material by class leader.
3. Discussion for new material by class.
4. Analysis and criticism of job news and news stories in DAILY WORKER and other papers by class.
5. Assignments for home work.

The classes will be of two hours duration.

While, so far as possible, the text book will be followed in taking up (1) News Stories, (2) Special Articles, (3) Interpretative Articles, (4) Party News—the class leader will have to use his own judgment in the assignment of work to see that it correspondents with current happenings.

Supplementing the regular class work, lectures will be given from time to time by Communist and labor journalists on subjects such as: The History of the Pravda, the Rote Fahne, L'Humanite; Problems of a Labor Editor; The Rosta; The Federated Press, etc., etc.

WORKERS DIE BY SCORES IN WAVE OF RECORD HEAT

Sleep in Parks and on Fire Escapes

"Friday was hotter, hour for hour, than Thursday," according to a weather bureau statement. "Saturday will be hotter than Friday and Sunday will be higher than Saturday. There is not sign of relief." Ten deaths were recorded.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The torrid wave that for four days has caused extreme discomfort and numerous deaths and prostrations over the greater part of the nation, probably will continue over the week-end, weather bureau officials said here today.

Dawn today in the Metropolitan district disclosed sleeping forms wherever some relief from the heat might be expected. In the parks, which were thrown open to sleepers by order of the mayor, on the beaches, piers, fire escapes, roofs and in automobiles, New York slept—or tried to sleep.

Face Water Famine.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 5.—With all heat records for June broken, when the mercury at 6 p. m. registered 93 degrees, Cleveland and all Ohio again faced a continuance of the extreme temperature which has already claimed a total of 23 deaths in the state. Seven were added to the list yesterday, three were in Cleveland, one in Cincinnati and three in various parts of the state.

Many cities were facing a water famine. Mansfield, with only 300,000 gallons left in its reservoir, faced a complete famine in three days unless rains come.

• • •

Ten Die in New England.

BOSTON, June 5.—With New England's death toll standing at ten the heat wave today continued its grip on this district.

Two dead and seven prostrations were recorded in Greater Boston.

Hundreds spent the night sleeping out of doors on Boston common and the river banks.

• • •

Fatalities in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 5.—This city had contributed nine lives to the heat wave, with the weather forecaster reporting no relief in sight.

• • •

Two Dead in Binghamton.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 5.—Two dead and ten others prostrated was the record today as the temperature climbed to 98 degrees.

STATE CAN DICTATE LESSONS IN SCHOOLS REGARDLESS OF TRUTH SAYS BRYAN, ATTACKING SCOPES

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 5.—Teaching the truth has nothing to do with education, according to William J. Bryan, who conferred here with the attorneys to prosecute John Scopes, at Dayton, Tenn., for violating the state anti-evolution law.

Bryan declared that the "taxpayers of a state have a right to dictate what shall be taught in their public schools." They can teach what they please, whether it is thru or not.

This will be the basis on which Scopes will be prosecuted about July 10 for violating the state law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the public schools, Bryan said.

"The question of importance," said S. K. Hicks, a leader in the prosecution, "is whether the legislature, under constitutional authority, can control the schools."

Governor A. Peay, of Tennessee, dismissed the Scopes case by declaring "evolution is all bosh, and he does not want to come near the trial."

Wisconsin Farmers Use Workers' Movies to Teach Communism

The I. W. A. press service reports that a Workers Party branch composed mainly of Lettish farmers and farm-hands is setting a fine example in the use of the working class motion picture as a means of agitation in rural communities, so difficult of ecoess to the Communist movement. Their May Day celebration took the form of a motion picture showing of the contrasting practices of the Russian revolutionary and the German reformist governments in regard to the interests of the working class. A large part of the Russian section of the film was devoted to the upbuilding of Russian agriculture and this made it doubly valuable for the rural audience. This show was held at Gleason and was very successful in every way.

In repeating their success they are branching out to a different community, Merrill, Wisc., where "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls" will be shown on June 17th. Other branches in rural sections should follow this lead.

Federal Official Is Caught Grinding Out American Citizens

By WALLACE T. METCALFF

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 5.—T. C. Christian, federal naturalization examiner, from Pittsburgh, Pa., who was arrested in Youngstown, Ohio on a charge of conspiracy in connection with alleged frauds in naturalization papers, was released on $5,000 bond and his hearing set for June 11. A local banker and deputy clerk were arrested along with Christian and are also out on bail.

Christian accepted such gifts as "small sums" of money, etc. from applicants for citizenship and when arrested readily admitted his guilt before the police and county authorities. Local Americanization committees engaged in turning out prospective citizens experienced a lull in their work and hestitation on part of the students in studying the art of how to become a citizen and several announced that it was easy to get by if you only knew how. Local patriotic organization engaged in promoting 100 per cent Americanism are busy passing resolutions condemning pay as you enter citizenship examinations and local capitalist papers are calling upon the courts to make an example out of Christian.

One of the prize questions asked of applicants is: Are you an I. W. W. Anarchist or Bolshevik? Christian, so it seems asked such questions as the financial standing of the applicant in secret. The police placed a dictaphone in his private examination room and heard the whole sordid tale of pay as you enter citizenship revealed... When confronted with the evidence which was supported by applicants for papers the booster of 100 per cent Americanism confessed and was placed in jail.

Official's Machines Saved in Cleveland Fire; Workers' Burned

By A. W. HAWITT

(Worker Correspondent)

TOLEDO, O., June 5.—The big shed used by the employes of the Overland company was gutted by fire Tuesday morning. 130 machines stored there, and belonging to the employes, were completely destroyed.

The only machines that were saved were a few of the more expensive ones, the cheaper ones, owned by the workers, were not taken out.

Some of the workers who rushed into the flaming shed struggled wildly to save their only property, and had to be forcibly dragged away from danger.

Many of the workers who lost their machines in the fire have a better understanding of the meaning of the word proletariat, as they are now completely propertyless.

The sad part of it is that many workers are being laid off by the Overland company every day and they have no way to leave town except to beat their way.

MOSCOW, June 5.—A group of 21 Afghan young men arrived at Moscow to study aviation in the aviation schools here. After that course, they are to return into their mother country.

At the present time, the air service in Afghanistan is done by Russian, German and also a very few Afgan aviators, the latter being graduates from Italian pilot schools.

BOSS' PRESS IS FORCED TO NOTE IRISH FAMINE

Rain Destroys Turf and Potatoes

The Irish Free State government and its apologists have partially succeeded in their aim to prevent the truth concerning the conditions of the famine stricken peasants in the West of Ireland from breaking thru to the outside world.

But despite their policy of suppression of facts, the truth is gradually seeping thru.

The following editorial is taken from the Chicago Evening Journal of May 27th. This paper is a capitalist sheet and cannot be accused of any animus against the Free State government. It bears out the statements made by the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee in its appeal to the American workers for assistance to help their brothers and sisters in the West of Ireland:

IN IRELAND

"The recent elections in the Free State and in Ulster showed the drift of sentiment in Ireland. The government of the Free State carried seven of the nine constituencies voting. The government of Ulster saw its majority in parliament reduced from twenty eight to twelve. It may be said that Cosgrave at Dublin won a vote of confidence and that Craig at Belfast received warning that the voters are losing confidence in his policies. Apparently the reunion of Ireland was advanced appreciably.

"The republicans increased their vote in the Free State by 28,316, whereas the government lost 23,773 votes. The republican percentage of Irish voters thus rose from 26 to 36 per cent. In Ulster, however, the republicans lost four of the six seats they had in parliament. Devlin, a friend of the Free State, won overwhelmingly at Belfast.

"President Cosgrave interprets the election as Ireland's final decision that the Free State shall be maintained. In Ulster Premier Craig holds his tongue, when Devlin and De Valera, who is one of the republican members of the Ulster parliament, open fire, he will have a fight on his hands.

"Meanwhile 750,000 Irish in nine counties of the West are desperately hungry. Deluges of rain have rotted the potatoes and rendered it impracticable to cut turf or to dry what is cut. The famine is said to be worst since that fo 1847, and Governor General Healy declares that 'Fires have been quenched where they had been kept a hundred years.' The Free State is spending more than $5,000,000 in measures of relief, its aim being to provide employment and prevent demoralization from doles. But it needs and welcomes assistance from private philanthropy. This is given already by Irish and British and also American charitable agencies."

That funds are solely needed, in obvious. Contributions should be forwarded immediately to the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 S. Lincoln St. Those funds will be distributed in Ireland, tru the Irish section of the International Workers' Aid, with headquarters in Dublin.

Soviet Oil Trust Keeps Down Prices, Increases Output

HARBIN, June 5.—The main activities of the oil syndicate of the Soviet Union were actually concentrated on sales of petroleum, Penoff, the chief agent for the far eastern sector of the syndicate, told press correspondents here. Such petorleum sales during the current working year reached some 85 per cent of the pre-war sales in the said region.

The oil syndicate, Penoff further stated, had taken all the necessary measures to promote the sale of Russian oil products in northern Manchuria and has made arrangements to bring down the prices of petroleum. During the first half of this working year, namely, from October 1, 1924, to March 31, 1925, the sales of petroleum in northern Manchuria accounted for about 48 per cent of all the trading activities of the syndicate in the far east.

Penoff concluded his interview by stating that, on the whole, the results of the oil syndicate's activities in the far eastern sector were quite satisfactory.

NEW YORK, June 5.—"A Practical Photographic Demonstration" is being held by the Photographic Workers' Union of America to interest workers in the trade in technical developments as well as in unionism. C. F. Becker and J. C. Neely are demonstrating manipulation of lighting, posing, use of papers, quality of films and papers, new methods of developing and enlarging.

Now that it is formally affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, the union anticipates a vigorous organization campaign during the busy summer season, organizer Louis Baum announces. Special attention to the introduction of young workers at wages of $1 a day is to be part of the union program.

Prospective Campaign Speakers, Attention!

A TEN-WEEKS' course in public speaking, designed to prepare you for effective open air speaking, will begin Saturday, June 27, at 3 p. m., at the Workers' School headquarters, 108 E. 14th street.

Attention will be given not only to training the voice, the technic of speaking, how to construct the speech, gathering facts, etc., but also to methods of approach to street corner crowds, book talks, handling disturbers, police interference, and answering questions.

Practical street corner work will constitute a regular part of the class work. There are plenty of party and league comrades who, with the aid of this course, can become able and effective propagandists for our movement.

The class, because of its nature, will have to be rather limited in its membership, so every one who feels he has the makings of a speaker should register NOW. Write, phone or call in person at the Workers' School office.

Get Out of China!

The United States government is making war on China.

There has been no declaration of war, but warships and troops are in Chinese ports and on Chinese soil.

A Chinese college has been raided, students killed, literature confiscated and the populace terrorised in the best American fashion. Workers have been shot down in the streets and hundreds jailed. Armed foreigners have formed "vigilance committees" and protected by troops are raiding and murdering.

"American interests are threatened," says the capitalist press, but even these lying sheets could not control the fact that the direct cause of the truoble was a strkie of Chinese textile workers against Japanese mill owners.

American and Japanese imperialism are at sword's points. Both are trying to grab the biggest chunk of China. The intended victim, however, shows splendid signs of successful resistance so the important thing is the smashing of this resistance.

The American masses should understand that in this war on China the United States and Japan are acting as allies. All of the discrimination against Japan, the holy war of the native sons of California against the Japs and the bunk about the Japanese menace in Hawaii are forgotten in the face of the immediate necessity of crushing the strikes and the anti-imperialist movement of the Chinese masses.

Where are the champions of "peace by understanding" while American guns and bayonets murder Chinese workers? Where are the middle class exponents of pacifist doctrines, where are such middle class spokesmen as Borah, LaFollette and Wheeler? Not a sound of protest is heard from any quarter except the voice of the Workers (Communist) Party of America which calls upon the American working class to demand the immediate withdrawal of all American forces in China and the cessation of this banditry on a wholesale scale.

It is not only that the Chinese are entitled to national independence without interference from outside but that the Chinese situation holds the danger of another world war. Japanese and American militarists are engaged in a joint murder enterprise, it is true, but nevertheless the rivalries become keener as each robber gets a better idea of the great wealth that is China's. Today it is imperialist against the Chinese masses, tomorrow it will be imperialist against imperialist in a struggle over the division of the loot.

No war can start in China that is not a world war because the Pacific, the Far East, is the center of a region in which ALL the great powers are fighting for control.

For Chinese workers and peasants, for ourselves—

Demand and force the withdrawal of all troops and warships from China.

As for the American businessmen who are clamoring for protection and who have fought every attempt of the Chinese workers to secure decent wages and working conditions bring them home if they want to come or leave them there to take the consequences of the arrigant interference in the affairs of the Chinese people.

Suppose the trade unions organised and armed 10,000 men for defense of their privileges and union property as the Illinois bankers have. Imagine the hysterical shrieks of the capitalist press if such a plan were even broached.

Yet the fact that the bankers have an army of this size is openly announced and the only comment in the capitalist press is laudatory.

State troops, constabulary, federal troops, private armies of banks and corporations are all part of the machinery for massacreing the workers when they can no longer be fooled by lies. That is why the bankers are allowed to recruit and maintain their mercenary bands. They are on the side of the biggest robbers of all and against those who are robbed—the workers.

Why Lewis Is Fearful of a Convention

The attempt of the Lewis machine to postpone the convention of the United Mine Workers until 1927 is about the rawest piece of business yet seen in the American labor movement infamous as it is for its trickery.

It must be recalled in this connection that the membership of the union does not know whether Lewis was elected in the last referendum. They have only his word for it and in spite of the plain constitutional provision for the publication of the returns tabulated by two weeks after the election the figures have not been published to this day. Lewis and his henchmen admitted that more than 60,000 votes were cast for Voysey, the left wing candidate and this new scheme for smothering rank and file protest is fairly good evidence that Lewis was actually defeated.

He does not dare to hold a convention.

If ever a convention of the organisation was needed it is now when the union is being riddled by the most effective scheme yet devised by the coal capitalists—the deliberate shutting down of mines, the throwing of hundreds of thousands of miners out of employment with the purpose of starving them into submission.

And Lewis approves of this. He may squirm at the charge, but when the present agreement was negotiated at Jacksonville arrangements were made between the union officials and the coal operators to drive 200,000 miners out of the industry.

This is another reason why Lewis does not dare hold a convention. His job is not finished. The miners are sticking to the union and a convention would undoubtedly show such a revolt against this treacherous leadership that Lewis would be of no more value to the coal capitalists.

Lewis has given the left wing a real fighting issue. For the holding of a convention there can be rallied thousands of miners who needed just this action of Lewis to show them conclusively that nothing can be hoped for from a gang of officials who to this day have suggested nothing but surrender as an answer to the attacks of the coal capitalists on the biggest and most militant union membership in the United States.

Refuting the Surplus Value Theory

All "refuters" of the Marxian theory of surplus value come to grief sooner or later and one of the latest is "Scrutator," a pseudo-economist who writes drivel for the tired businessmen who read the Chicago Tribune.

This gentleman says there is nothing to the theory that the increasing robbery of the workers at the point of production will create crises within capitalism tending to bring it to the point of collapse and he points to America as proof of his contention.

American factories have increased production 185 per cent in the last 25 years he says, while the number of workers has increased only 90 per cent. American capitalism shows no signs of collapsing, he argues, and explains this by pointing out that while the value of all commodities has increased 160 per cent in five years the wages of the workers have increased 150 per cent.

American workers can buy back most of the products their labor creates and he is jubilnat over the ever widening "home market."

But there is that stubborn 10 per cent difference between the value of commodities and the wages of the workers. In five years the workers have lost 10 per cent of their purchasing power, even tho we take Scrutator's own figures. Included in these five years are three years of industrial activity far above normal.

It is not necessary for the creation of a crisis that the working class be unable to buy back ALL of their products. A ten per cent reduction in purchasing power has given us a permanent army of unemployed of more than 2,000,000 in the most prosperous periods and the decrease of purchasing power that is plainly observable is the most striking confirmation of the Marxian theory.

The gap between production and wages is growing and when it becomes 25 per cent instead of 10 the Scrutators will have their work cut out for them in explaining why there is not a "widening home market."

The development of capitalism and the revolutionary struggles which it brings into being are not in a straight line. They alternate between periods of prosperity and quiescence, depression and intensity, but the tendency is definitely towards instability of capitalism and the sharpening of the class conflict.

Bourgeois economists may deny this, but their own figures confound them.

The bureau of mines has been transferred from the department of the interior to the department of commerce headed by Herbert Hoover. Exactly what the reason for this is we have not been informed, but that it means more aid to the coal capitalists against the miners' union is a pretty safe guess.

We do not know very much about the labor movement of Portugal, but it has called a general strike in protest against the deportation of militant workers, and that is more than the American labor movement has done.

RED WEEK BEGINS JUNE 15

Campaign to Increase the Size of Party

AS a first step to build the American Communist movement, to double its size, which in the decision on the American question the Communist International says is essential to "fulfill the requirements of an American Communist Party," a RED WEEK has been instituted thruout the country, beginning June 15 and lasting until June 21.

The building of our party, in conformity with the decision of the Communist International will be initiated by a drive to increase the size of the DAILY WORKER as one of the first and most important steps.

Communications sent out by the Executive Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party to all branches and units of the party are based on the plans arrived at by the Central Executive Committee and ask specifically that during this week every member of the party and every branch send in an order at once to the DAILY WORKER for a bundle to be distributed EVERY DAY for one week at homes, factories and union halls; that every effort should be made to strengthen the official organ of the American Communist movement and that every member of the party should during this week himself become a subscriber. During this week subscriptions can be taken at a special rate of two months for one dollar.

The co-operation of every unit of the party is asked during RED WEEK to mobilize for a week of party building. Action must be taken in branches on the communications sent out and committees chosen ot direct the work.

Those units of the party and individuals not able to put this plan into operation during RED WEEK must conform to the decision and put it into action as soon as possible thereafter.

Demand Miners Meet in January 1926

Haught, and Guy Domascio, states that Howat got 53 votes as against 16 for Lewis, yet while the International tellers reported 53 votes for Howat, all right, they raised the vote for Lewis from 16 to 96.

The affidavit from Bridgeville, Pa., shows Howat's vote was six to Lewis' five, but the Internatioonal tellers recorded the vote as 55 for Lewis and six for Howat.

Hundreds of cases of this kind have come up, showing clearly that the miners are repudiating Lewis and spurning him in every election.

There was bitter feeling at that time against Lewis, and since then it has been steadily increasing, until a point has been reached where it is doubtful if any labor leader in America is so universally distrusted.

In the face of the affidavits quoted above, and with the refusal to tabulate the vote now, as provided by the constitution, with the miners and their families starving, with the union offering them no relief, with the attempts in every district to break the union—the policy of the Lewis bureaucracy is to stand by and permit this situation to continue, when their clear duty is to initiate a national movement of the miners to stop the wage-cutting and union-breaking orgy.

In addition to this, is the charge against Lewis of violation of the constitution, and the question of the expulsions.

Considering all this, and the determination of the miners to clean up the rottenness in the organization, there is no progressive miner but realizes the arbitrariness of the action in attempting to postpone the regular international convention, and that the move is made in order to secure Lewis in office as long as possible before facing the outraged miners.

But Lewis must be made to face the West Virginia miners on the matter of this last pretended organization campaign, where miners are being thrown in jail by the hundreds for peaceful picketing—some of the miners getting as high as 10 years for violation of injunction while Lewis dines and lives like a lord.

The progressive miners in West Virginia and thruout the country are demanding militant action by the union, not resolutions of sympathy. The miners of West Virginia demand that Lewis give them the proper support and call the miners of America to aid them in their fight for organization.

This is a question that must come before the next convention. And Lewis knows his gesture in West Virginia was never intended to organize the miners, and he knows that the miners know it, but he does not intend to give them the opportunity of the convention for a settlement of this score.

We, the Progressive Miners of the U. M. W. of A., demand that the regular International convention be held as constitutionally provided, and call upon all miners in America who have the welfare of our union at heart to rally to this demand and fight for their constitutional rights.

Vote against the postponement of the regular convention.

Insist upon a convention.

Organize and line up with the Progressive Miners who are organized under militant leadership.

Join us in the fight to save our union.

To this end, send in your name and address to the committee, and subscribe for "The Progressive Miner."

BANKERS ROAD HIRES SCABS IN DRIVE ON UNION

Shop Crafts Ditched by C. M. and St. P.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 5.—The scheme of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road and other railways to squeeze the regular shop crafts in the spring and take advantage of the large amount of semi-skilled college-student labor that floods the market the beginning of June is being realized at Milwaukee.

Five hundred men over the full crew are employed at the West Milwaukee shops of the Milwaukee road and the full crew is on again at the New Butler shops of the Northwestern for work that might just as well have started when the layoffs took place.

Propaganda of the Trusts Approved by U. S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The trade association decision of the United States supreme court will do away with further test cases on the "legality of the collection and dissemination of statistics," Attorney General Sargent indicated today.

The department of Justice feels that the question of trade association activities has finally been ended in favor of the associations by decisions in the cement and lumber cases, in which it was ruled the exchange of trade information is legal.

Fix Turkish-Soviet Frontiers

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., June 5.—Mr. Karklin, commissioner for foreign affairs of the government of the Transcaucasian Federation of Soviet Republics and chief of the Soviet delegation for the fixing of frontiers with Turkey, stated, in a pres sinterview, that the work of the commission was proceeding in a very satisfactory manner. This warranted a firm belief, he said, that the work would be brought to a happy conclusion in the interests of the both peoples wishing to live in relation of friendship and good neighborliness.

SOVIET TRADE IN NEAR EAST BEATS ALLIES

Conquer New Markets from Competitors

MOSCOW, (By Mail.)— That the trading activities of the Soviet Union had considerably expanded during the last six months or so, was stated in the course of a press interview by Modylevsky, commissioner of the people's commissariat of foreign trade, who has jut returned to Odessa from a business trip in the near east.

Soviet trade, he said, had conquered and was conquering new positions. In spite of its higher price, but owing to its better quality, Soviet cement was ousting the Italian and German products, while Soviet coal was successfully competing with the British, especially in Turkey, where the Soviet trade representative had sold a fairly big order of coal to the Stinnes company. Eighty per cent of the soda market was in Soviet hands, and Russian matches were also ousting the Swedish product in Greece and Turkey.

Modylevsky further stated that in most of the oil auctions the Soviet products had been successful. Negotiations were under way for deals in construction timber and dairy produce, a party of the latter having recently been profitably disposed of.

The export of cattle, fowls and eggs was growing rapidly, and the Odessa foodstuffs trust was opening wholesale and retail stores for the sale of such products.

The Soviet trade commissioner concluded his statement by noting that the opening of the Constantinople branch of the Union Bank for foreign commerce, which was welcomed by Turkish officials and business circles, would largely contribute to the development of commercial and economic intercourses between the Union of Soviet Republics and Turkey, as well as all the other near eastern countries.

A Saint George Wanted to Check Crimes of a Dragon in Colorado

DENVER, June 5.—Dr. John Galen Locke, grand dragon of the ku klux klan in Colorado and center of an income tax investigation in federal court here, was released from custody today after he had explained to Judge J. Foster Symes that his failure to appear in court yesterday was due to his presence in Colorado Springs to defend himself on the charge of abduction.

Stoppages in New York Shops.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Stoppages affecting cutters and tailors are in force in certain children's clothing shops which have violated the agreement with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union which requires that no work be sent out of town to non-union manufacturing plants.

BUILDERS AT WORK

First Red Week Pledge Given by Leader

Monessen, Pa., on the Job

EIGHT young Johnny Reds in the local branch of the Young Workers League, led by Comrade Leo Kauppila, have secured 140 per cent of the quota in the Second Annual Sub Campaign for the DAILY WORKER.

Not satisfied with this accomplishment which gives them the lead over all cities having a quota of less than one hundred subs, these busy young builders, (being real leaders) have sent in the first pledge to get subs during Red Week of June 15th to 21st.

They pledge themselves to get ten new subs and if they are successful it will mean that these young Reds will get just two and a half times the number of subs asked of them in the Second Annual Sub Campaign.

The DAILY WORKER brings these accomplishments to show an example of splendid Communist performance—and example all League and party branches could do well to follow. An equal performance to this on the part of every branch in the Workers (Communist) Party would give the DAILY WORKER a circulation of 100,000 and would double the size of OUR PARTY.

FAIRY TALES
For Workers Children

Only a very short while ago—there was no book published in the English language that adequately filled the need for real working class stories for children.

The publication of "Fairy Tales for Workers' Children" not only fills this urgent demand but supplies at the same time a work of real merit.

The author, Herminia Zur Mühlen, is a German writer of children's stories of the very highest order—stories of a distinctly new character. Her work is a definite promise of the new proletarian literature of the future.

The translation by Ida Dailes, brings into bold relief the beauty of these stories, breathing so fully the spirit of the working class.

Besides the many drawings from the original edition, the American publication is enriched by four beautiful full page drawings in two colors and front and back cover designs by Lydia Gibson.

The book is a real children's "story book size" of 9x12 inches—with large, clear type.

It is issued in two editions. To enable every worker's child to own one, the first is bound in "Duroflex" covers—durable, leather-like and very attractive in a rich red color.

Price 75 Cents
The cloth bound edition is

Don't let your little boy or girl go without this book—and don't overlook another child of a worker you may know. Send for it on the blank on the reverse side.

The All-Russian Trade Union Council Supports the Decision of the Anglo-Russian Conference

ON the 30th of April there was held in Moscow an extraordinary session of the plenum of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council. The first item on the agenda was the report on the international activity of the All-Russian Trade Union Council and on the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Conference.

The chairman, Comrade Tomsky, pointed out in his opening speech that the extraordinary session had to be convened, because the interests of the international labor movement demand the most rapid furtherance of those modest successes which we attained at the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Conference. The general council of the British trade unions has already confirmed the decision of the Anglo-Russian conference. In order to be able to publish a number of documents which were accepted at this conference, the sanction of the trade unions is necessary.

After welcoming the delegation of English women trade unionists, and after a detailed report by Comrade Tomsky, which was followed by a long debate, the plenum unanimousluy adopted the following:

Resolution on the Report of Comrade Tomsky on the Work of the Anglo-Russian Conference

THE Sixth Trade Union Congress of the Soviet Union expressed the firm will to unity on the part of the trade union organizations of the Soviet Union expressed the firm will to unity on the part of the trade union organizations of the Soviet Union, and of the workers organized in the same.

The plenum approves the actions of the presidium of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council, which were directed towards carrying out the instructions of the Sixth Congress for establishing definite mutual relations with the Amsterdam International, in order, by a mutual pronouncement regarding a conference which should be convened by representatives of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council and by the Amsterdam International, without any restrictive preconditions, to discuss in a comprehensive manner the problem of the unity of the whole international trade union movement.

The plenum of the All-Russian Trade Union Council declares at the same time, that the presidium of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council in its campaign, did not find the necessary, sincere desire on the part of the Amsterdam International to meet its proposal half way.

FURTHER! The last plenary session of the general council of the Amsterdam International, by rejecting the appropriate proposal of the representatives of the general council of the British Trade Union Congress, and by adopting the evasive diplomatic resolution of Stenhuis, gives ground for the assumption that the majority of the general council of the Amsterdam International, in fact not only do not desire the unity of the international trade union movement, but intentionally avoid any co-operation with the trade unions of the Soviet Union. In spite of this the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council still stands by its first position, and is prepared to enter into a joint conference with Amsterdam regarding the question of international trade union unity.

The plenum of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council therefore records with special satisfaction, as a result of the establishment and strengthening of brotherly connections between the trade union movements of the Soviet Union and of Great Britain, an undoubted success for the cause of unity.

These brotherly relations, which have arisen as a result of the recognition of the necessity of realizing the unity of the international trade union movement by the trade union movement of both countries, in the interest of the victory of the class struggle of the proletariat, found its clearest and fullest expression at the conference of the representatives of the trade union movement of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union which took place in London from the 6th to the 9th of April, 1925.

THE plenum of the All-Russian Trade Union Council approves the declaration of the All-Russian Trade Union Council approves the declaration of the British delegation at this conference and the declaration in reply to the delegation of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council and regards the unanimous acceptance of the joint declaration by the conference, which represented more than 1 million organized proletarians, as one of the most important and greatest successes of the cause of unity.

The plenum in applying this joint declaration, both in its general section as well in that part regarding mutual help and connections, which is fully in accordance with the desire expressed by the Sixth Trade Union Congress of the Soviet Union, instructs the presidium of the All-Russian Trade Union Council to strengthen with all possible means the brotherly connections which have been established between the Trade Unions of the Soviet Union and of Great Britain, the most important measures of which regarding the international trade union movement are to be harmonized by an organ specially created for that purpose.

The plenum fully and entirely approves the activity of the presidium and its delegation at the Anglo-Russian conference and instructs the presidium to fight just as steadfastly in the future for the cause of the establishment of the unity of the international trade union movement by the creation of a united trade union international, as it has already done up to now in complete agreement with the general line of the Red International of Labor Unions.

THE plenum of the All-Russian Central Union Council resolves:

(a) To elect a commission of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council for foreign relations, consisting of twelve members, among them the chairman and the secretary of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council.

(b) To elect our representatives to the joint advisory council of the trade union movement of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union, consisting of the chairman, the secretary of the All-Russian Trade Union Council and of three members.

(c) To proceed to the election at this session.

(d) To entrust the commission of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council for foreign relations with the drawing up of the reply to the Amsterdam International, in accordance with the work of the conference of the trade unions of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union and of the decisions of this session of the plenum of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council.

THE plenum of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council is convinced that the joint advisory council of the trade union movement of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union will, in spite of the complexity and difficulty of the task with which we are confronted, adopt and firmly carry out the measures which are necessary for realizing the cause of the unity of the international trade union movement. The plenum is equally convinced that the many millions of workers, not only in Great Britain and in the Soviet Union, but also of other countries, and all those desirous of unity, will by their solidarity and by their struggle, support the cause which has been taken up by the trade unions of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union thru their joint advisory council.

Long live the unity of the International Trade Union Movement, which guarantees the victory of the proletariat!

• • •

The plenum unanimously elected the following commission of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council for foreign relations:

Comrades: Tomsky, Dogadov, Melnitchansky, Andreyev, Lepse, Lozovsky, Figatner, Michailov, Glebov, chernicheva, Schwarz and Kutusov.

The plenum thereupon elected the flolowing five representatives to the joint advisory council of the trade union movement of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union:

Comrades: Tomsky, Dogadov, Melnitchansky, Andreyev and Lepse.

The Job Hunters of Gary -

By Henry Victor

HAVE you not, some of you, readers been lured by fairy stories in your childhood? Have you not been bewitched, sometimes drawn away by the magic of fantasy, by the wonderful stories of the Arabian Nights? Have you not spent many wonderful hours listening to or reading fairy tales of wonderful fairy castles created overnight?

Here, in this country, there exists a wonderful magic castle that exceeds the most wonderful castle one can find in the thickest volume of fairy tales. This gigantic fairy castle, as in fairy stroies, has been created overnight.

This gigantic fairy castle is Gary, Indiana, created overnight not by the work of magicians, but by the magic of human labor, supported by the toil of the workers, and owned by capitalists, parasites, and corrupted politicians. Every inch of Gary contains the blood of workers who, tho they created this town, own nothing.

TO a stranger visiting the Gary steel plants I would give the following advice:—As you step off the train don't ask where the plants are situated. Just look around yourself and you will soon behold a line of powerful "smoke pipes," and by following the direction of the "smoke pipes" you will undoubtedly reach your destination. But if you happen to be short-sighted, oh, let it not worry you. In this case use your nose—no joke—instead. Smell the smoke and you will discover that sometimes a nose can serve as a good compass.

If the same visitor also wishes to apply for a job, he only has to follow a narrow paved road, and do not ask where the employment office is; just follow the road "until they stop you."

Arriving at the employment "office" no job seeker will be admitted to the employment office. Of course, there's an employment office, but no such infernal creatures as common workers in their shabby working attire can enter it. Instead, they are left to wait outside near the employment building. Every hour or so, out of the employment office oppears the all-mighty "man-with-the-glasses" as he is called. This man, his majesty "The-Men-With-The-Glasses," possesses the power to hire whomever he pleases. He looks around the flock of human workers with the look of supreme importance. His majesty, "The-Man-With-The-Glasses," knows his place and value when he sees himself surrounded by hungry would-be-slaves willing to sell themselves for a piece of bread—and this not in abundance.

WHEN this buyer of industrial slaves appears the air suddenly becomes filled with the atmosphere of majesty and subjection. Everyone flocks around him eager to attract the attention of the industrial despot, each hoping that he will be the lucky one to be sold for a pittance. With the air of a king—a king he is indeed, for he has many subjects willing to serve his kingship—he picks out one or two workers among a crowd of hundreds and with them he disappears into the employment office followed by the envieus eyes of the unlucky ones who did not succeed in being sold.

The many unlucky hundreds do not leave as "The-Man-With-The-Glasses" disappears. They still remain waiting with a hidden hope in their hearts that perhaps they will be more successful in their being hired when the industrial king comes out again. Many hundreds have been waiting outside for many days hoping to be hired, but in vain. Almost all of these job hunters are former workers of the Gary Steel plants, but were "laid off" and promised a return of prosperity with the election of Coolidge. Coolidge is elected and his bourgeois press and the loyal servants of Wall Street are beating the drum of falsehood and singing the hypocritical lie of "prosperity," but these unemployed workers are still waiting.

THE disappointed job hunters of Gary are not discouraged. Everyday they gather at the employment office. They cannot be discouraged for the majority of them have not even enough money to buy a piece of bread. And think of those who have in their "home" waiting a wife and small children, hungry and starving! In the late hours of the day one can find these disappointed workers wandering around the streets of Gary without intentions; just wandering, sometimes till late in the night. Where should he go? "Home!" But what

MAX EASTMAN BLOWS UP - By Robert Minor

NOW we see Max Eastman clattering out onto the road in full armor as a warrior in an international struggle which he thinks he sees still going on in the Communist International. And on his spear-point flutters a handkerchief embroidered with Trotsky's name—stolen, we trust and believe, while Trotsky lay ill in bed.

Eastman enters the lists with two books. One of these is "Leon Trotsky: The Portrait of a Youth" (Greenberg, Publisher, New York). In it he writes in the style of the prettified biographers-to-the-trade The reader who has known Max Eastman in the past begins to wonder what he wrote the volume for—unless merely for the market. But on the last page we begin to get at least a suspicion that he has another motive. In the second book, "Since Lenin Died," (Labor Publishing Co., Ltd., London), we learn that our guess was right.

WHAT Eastman thinks he is doing is to defend Trotsky from the terrible triumvirate, Zinoviev, Stalin and Kamenev. What he does in fact is to make a hysterical attack upon the Communist International and the Russian Communist Party—too feeble an attack to be of much concern, but very interesting as a straw in the wind of current history.

There can be no doubt that Eastman thinks he has a great international mission.

"I have hesitated to do this," writes he, "for over six months, because I wanted to be sure that I should serve not merely the ends of historic truth, or personal justice, but the real strategy of the revolution" (my emphasis). And "the strategy of the revolution" requires that no less a man than Max Eastman himself should prod the poor, intimidate, "stampeded" Russian Communist Party membership with the fountain-pen of scandal until he revives its initiative.

"And that revival of initiative," he writes, "would automatically transfer the substance of that power to Trotsky, for the simple reason that the mass of the party, just like all the rest of the world (my emphasis), recognized Trotsky's superior moral and intellectual revolutionary greatness."

I DON'T think Comrade Trotsky will desire or willingly receive the services of Max Eastman in such a jousting, however. For one thing the jousting is over, and Comrade Trotsky did not win it; and for another thing Eastman's stupid attempt will show every Communist on earth who has even an elementary knowledge of Communism, the abyss of bourgeois vulgarization into which the crusade leads. It suffices to show where the crusade leads Eastman himself. Unless the official head of the Russian revolution have been guilty of deliberate lying, he says, he is forced to conclude that:

". . . the whole leadership of the Russian Communist Party has been in the hands of hysterics." The speeches and articles of Stalin and Zinoviev and Kamenev and Bucharin, if regarded as a discussion of points raised by Trotsky, "would be thrown out of a prize essay contest in a school for defective children." "And all the old religious, theological, metaphysical, absolutistical, canonical, scholastic and dogmatic-academic habits of the human race" are against Trotsky, and Eastman sees "the beginning of the transformation of Bolshevism from a science into a religion," the transformation of the party into a "political church" and its leaders into an "official caste" and "priesthood as well."

Now there must be some very deep reason for all this, and sure enough Max is going to give it to us.

IT seems that we were all wrong—according to Eastman—in thinking that Trotsky came over to the position of Lenin in 1917, but that on the contrary Lenin came over to Trotsky in some respects on that memorable occasion. One of the reasons why we haven't been allowed to know this is that Trotsky's enemies have "raked up all those old passages in which Lenin attacked Trotsky upon this question (of the dictatorship of the proletariat supported by the peasants) at a time when Trotsky's formula was right and Lenin's was wrong. . ."

But, goes this melodrama, Lenin came to see the error of his ways. Not only did he come over to Trotsky in 1917, but he finally wanted Trotsky to take over the leadership of the revolution and was defeated in this desire only by Comrade Trotsky's diffident modesty. Then Comrade Lenin got tangled up in a terrible monstrous "Intra-Party Machine," and to be rescued from it he cried to Trotsky three times in vain. Max Eastman literally writes:

"The third appeal which Lenin made to Trotsky in those last days, was literally a cry for help against the suppression of his writings by this intra-party machine."

This sort of stuff is carried on in theatrical style to a mysterious last "Testament" in which Comrade Lenin made a desperate effort to defeat the horrible Communist Party Frankenstein (which he himself had built), by willing over to Trotsky the leadership of the revolution. But "a gang of mediocre bad boys" who "had got their bottoms into the vacant chair of Lenin" wouldn't read the "Testament" to the party, so Trotsky was cheated out of his patrimony.

I don't know whether Comrade Lenin immediately before his death wrote to the central committee a letter in which he discussed the relative merits and demerits of the various Communist leaders. But I do know that Eastman's handling of the matter of a supposed but unpublished and probably non-existent letter is irresponsible and as melodramatic as the handling of "the papers" in a hack-written movie. Even a sentimental use for political purposes is made of Comrade Krupskaya as the widow of Lenin. In fact the whole thing is a disgusting if subtle translation of a political question into terms of personal and even of family relations. Such a small and formal incident as the fact that Comrade Trotsky "received a letter from Lenin's wife some days after Lenin died, reminding him of their early friendship in London and assuring him that Lenin's feelings towards him had never changed from then until the day of his death," is seized upon by Eastman as political proof of the sameness of Leninism with Trotskyism! The book reeks with the interplay of personal friendships, conversations and courtesies as a substitute for the facts of colossal political events. It sounds like the "proof" offered by a Hearst magazine that the evil ways of the monk, Rasputin, were the cause of the revolution. We have no doubt that among the comrades who will share our disgust will be Comrade Krupskaya. And perhaps also Comrade Trotsky.

THE "THREE POINTS."

IT seems that Comrade Trotsky has in three notable instances saved the revolution from the evil, conspiring, "faint-hearted," "timid," and "hysterical" triumvirate: Zinoviev, Stalin, and Kamenev (Bucharin, too), but that now the revolution is going to the dogs again. The three rescues were:

1. Trotsky saved the revolution for state planning.
2. He saved it again from—VODKA! (tho, alas, the revolution has gone to drink again.)
3. He saved it again by making the villains admit that "America has put Europe on rations."

IN handling his three chosen points, Eastman succeeds only in messing up Trotsky's case to a degree which might well call forth a furious repudiation of Eastman by Trotsky.

On the question of Trotsky's proposal in "State Planning," Eastman writes what we cannot call a childish lie only because we know it is the result of ignorance of recent Russian history. There never was and could not be a difference between Communists as to the "need for a concentrated organization and systematic planning of socialist industry." In what form, then, in fact, did the subject become a matter of controversy between the old guard and Trotsky? The question was:, which should come first, the "state planning" or the stabilization of the ruble, as the solution of the economic crisis then gripping Russia. The theory adopted by the old guard was that the stabilization of the ruble had to be undertaken immediately as a prerequisite to the state planning of industry. Comrade Trotsky's view, if I am not mistaken, was that the state planning of industry should come first. Who was right? Is there anybody alive who does not know now that the stabilization of the ruble was not only one of the wonders of recent history but also an absolutely necessary prerequisite to state planning and a measure without which Russia would now be in a most serious perdicament instead of outstripping all capitalist Europe in the rate of economic organization and improvement?

When Eastman begins to write about the restoration of the manufacture of vodka as a government monopoly, it is hard to choose between his propaganda and that of the anti-Bolshevik bureau in Berlin. "The revolutionary government," he says, "has made its life dependent, in other words, upon the successful progress of the ancient industry of debauching the Russian people." (With more space one might demonstrate —soberly—the wisdom of the revolutionary government's policy in regard to the manufacture of spiritous liquor, but here it is only a question of Max Eastman's right to manufacture such vilification of the Soviet government.)

Eastman not only wanders into what amounts to slanderous denunciation of the Russian Communist Party and the Soviet government, but at every step in his superficial, gossip-gathered conception of what is going on within the Communist International, he builds his case always upon the very weakest points in the Trotsky foundation. His manner of quoting Trotsky for the formula: "America has put Europe on rations," is the best that Eastman could do toward trying to kidnap Trotsky for the Kautsky camp. The conception to which Eastman refers is one which ignores the inherent contradictions which make the permanent stabilization of world-capitalism impossible. It has not only not been adopted by the Communist International (as Eastman says it has), but it has been rejected and demonstrated to be incorrect.

"Competition is the Life of"—the Revolution.

BUT Eastman, by the nature of his task, is not allowed to remain even in the sphere of vulgarized "Leninism." He is actually carried by force of his own momentum into that field of delicatessen store philosophy which the esteemed Emma Goldman has made famous in her "My Disillusionment with Russia," and Alexander Berkman with his hysterical collection of petty scolding, "The Bolshevik Myth." Not that Eastman could ever quite accomplish the stupidity of either of these, but he borders on the field. The "anarchist" petty-bourgeois (who merely develops the bourgeois free-trade ideology to the reductio ad absurdum and then calls it a "revolutionary philosophy") always pictures as a monster of reaction the Bolshevik state monopoly of printing and the corollary machine of education and propaganda. To the Communist, this is one of the enormous weapons of the revolution. To the anarchist, the cadet, the monarchist and the liberal as well, this constitutes a suppression of "liberty." The cadet and the monarchist know that it contributes to the destruction of all their hopes. The anarchist and the liberal think it will ruin the revolution by destroying individual initiative—a reflection of the idea that competition is the life of trade. Well, Max Eastman (who used to know better), is carried by his own logic into this slough. Like a sensitive liberal complaining of trust methods, he complains that a pamphlet against Trotsky "was spread thru the territory of the Union of Soviet Republics, like the Bible of the Gideons thru the commercial hotels of the United States."

And he says: "A little later Trotsky's letter and some supplementary articles in the pamphlet form were practically suppressed by the Politburo, and even when I left Moscow—tho the crisis was past—it was still difficult to get a bookseller to produce one." The irresponsibility of this statement is indicated by the fact that I have three editions of Comrade Trotsky's "Lessons of October" in three different languages, one published by the Russian government print-shop and the others by the "Imprecor" of the Communist International, the latest being dated February 26, 1925, and carrying in big type the words "Please Reprint." Trotsky's "The New Course" I have in the German edition of Imprecor, No. 13, Jan. 28, 1924, Trotsky's "On the Peasant Question," English edition of Imprecor No. 1, Jan. 4, 1924. And Trotsky's letter of Dec. 8, 1923, to the Enlarged Executive of the Russian Communist Party, I have in the German edition of the Imprecor No. 8, dated Jan. 21, 1924, spread all over the first page. All of these were broadcasted by the world-publicity machinery of the Communist International—truly with the trust-methods of the Gideons—while the discussion was going on.

Will the God of the Gideons kindly save Trotsky from Eastman?

Trotsky's Version of the Theory of "The Permanent Revolution."

THERE is a mixture of unconscious comedy in the spurious tragedy of this book, "Since Lenin Died." We remember an old incident. About or nearly two years ago Eastman sent from Russia to The Liberator an article entitled "The Permanent Revolution." An assistant lost the manuscript on a New York subway train before the editor (myself) had read it. I advertised for its recovery, with no further result than some gibes in a New York bourgeois newspaper to the effect that "The Liberator has lost the permanent revolution." From Eastman's present book we may be permitted to guess what the manuscript must have been. Later it became necessary for me, as bureaucratic editor of The Liberator, to refuse to print Eastman's articles as received, and to turn them over to a sub-committee for editing—to save Eastman from his own folly. Now we know that Eastman was only developing toward where he is now.

"TROTSKY'S pride of opinion was supported, moreover," writes Eastman, "by a piece of political thinking as farsighted as any of those which foretold the events of 1917. Rejecting the theory of the mensheviks that the Russian revolution would end in a bourgeois republic, and also the slogan with which Lenin opposed them, the 'democratic dictatorship of the workers and peasants,' he adopted from Marx the concept of 'permanent revolution' . . . This realistic prediction, and the resolute and yet flexible concept of 'permanent revolution,' were peculiarly akin to the intellectual method of Lenin. . . Trotsky began to realize that' altho his political analysis of the coming revolution had been the more happy. . ." etc.

So we see what Eastman is getting at. The theory of the "permanent revolution" (expounded by Trotsky) contains the germ of what Max wants to displace the leadership of the Communist International to make room for. If there was any one thing which more than all others divided Trotsky from Lenin, and Leninism from Trotskyism, not only in the beginning, but up to the present moment—it is Comrade Trotsky's theory of "The Permanent Revolution." Trotsky's interpretation of Marx's words on this subject was completely and thoroly exploded, by Lenin before the revolution, by the revolution itself in practice, and by experience since the revolutionary overthrow. Eastman's effort at making a platform of the Trotsky theory of the "permanent revolution" will not please Comrade Trotsky, who now himself wishes to regard that unfortunate question as relating "wholly to the past." In his letter of January 15, 1925, to the Cen-

Problems of the German Communist Party

By ERNST SCHNELLER (Berlin).

THE previous session of the National Council of the Communist Party of Germany took place at the beginning of January, immediately afted the reichstag elections. The party was faced with the urgent task, by wise and elastic tactics along with clear and firm adherence to Bolshevist principles, of becoming the leader in their daily struggles of the proletariat and of all exploited and of all sections who are threatened by the advance of monarchist reaction and to win, to rally and organise these masses for the final struggle for power.

The present session, held from the 9th to 10th of May, had to review the party work of the past four months and at the same time to lay down the tasks for the future. In these four months there have taken place the formation of the Luther government, the overthrow (for the fifth time) of the Prussian government, the reichstag elections and a great number of economic struggles (railway strike), factory council and co-operative elections.

It must be recorded that the party approached the carrying out of its tasks with the greatest eagerness. It was able to point to successes, especially in the factory council elections (the trade union work, owing to the peculiar difficulties, will not show visible results for a long time yet). With what tenacity and energy the party work has been carried out is proved by the presidential elections, where the party succeeded, at the second ballot, in spite of the less favorable conditions compared with the first ballot in increasing its vote by 60,000.

THE National Council did not content itself with merely registering the work accomplished, but, while recognizing the energetic efforts of the party, examined and exposed in the shapest manner the failings of the party and pointed out the way in which they could be remedied. To some of the delegates this sharp self-criticism appeared to be "exaggerated"; they had an eye more to the work accomplished and less to the results among the masses; they realised too little that the socialist party of Germany and the bureaucrats of the German General Federation of Trade Unions (A. D. G. B.) have succeeded without any great efforts in catching million of workers' votes for the reactionary Marx. The C. P. of Germany has not been able to convince the major portion of the social democratic supporters, of the correctness of the Communist slogans and to win them away from the S. P. of Germany. It has not proved capable of rendering ineffective the campaign against the C. P. of Germany as the "allies of reaction" and to break thru the isolation from the millions of the masses.

The Central Committee came before the National Council with open criticism:

1. The party was too late in realising the monarchist danger and underestimated its importance.

2. The party has not succeeded in thoroly exposing the role of the socialist party of Germany and of the other so-called "republican" parties as procurers of the monarchists, and in winning away the masses from them. In particular, it has not carried on the campaign for establishment of trade union unity with sufficient firmness and energy.

3. The tactics of the party are not sufficiently elastic and adaptable; it has been too slow and awkward in adapting itself to altered situations.

4. The party has not yet fully overcome Brandlerism and ultra-left deviations; theoretical clearness and uniformity—the pre-requisites for united revolutionary practice—are not yet fully attained.

5. The party does not yet understand how to concentrate the entire work and to carry it thru co-ordinatedly in all spheres.

REGARDING the question of analysis and of perspectives, the National Council confirmed the view, long held by the Central Committee, and which is in full agreement with the speeches of Comrade Zinoviev, that:

The attempt of the German bourgeoisie, in spite of and in carrying thru the Dawes plan to conduct a new imperialist policy—at the tail of the great powers—finds its expression (carrying thru of the Dawes plan, entry into the league of nations, guarantee pact, war preparations, taxation and economic policy, social and cultural policy) in the strengthening of the monarchist tendencies. The policy of the party in the year 1925 must aim at organizing the defensive movement against the monarchist danger to the revolutionary mass movement. It follows from this that it is necessary, not only by agitation and propaganda, but by practical experience to convince the workers, the peasants and the petty bourgeoisie, that the new imperialist policy will be carried out at the cost of the working people and that there is only one means of rescue for the broad masses: overthrow of the bourgeoisie, setting up of a workers' and peasants' government under the leadership of the C. P. of Germany and an alliance with Soviet Russia.

IN order to expose the republican swindle of the S. P. of Germany and of the parties of the "people's bloc," it is necessary to mobilize the masses for the carrying out of the simple republican minimum demands (as contained in the open letter of the C. P. of Germany to the A. D. G. B. and to the S. P. of Germany) and to demonstrate to them that the S. P. of Germany and the A. D. G. B., just like the other republicans, not only do nothing to oppose the Hindenburg-Luther-reaction, but are determined to do everything to aid the latter against the workers. This purpose is served by the appeal to the S. P. of Germany to form, together with the other "republicans," a government to fight against the monarchist danger. The Braun government in Prussia promptly replied to this offer by starting negotiations with the monarchist people's party.

This policy of exposure for rallying all real oppositional elements under the leadership of the C. P. of Germany has only now begun, it must be carried out effectively, energetically and with patience. It carries with it—especially in view of the past of the German party—great dangers of right deviations, namely, the danger that illusions regarding the S. P. of Germany and even the people's bloc, instead of being destroyed, can be strengthened. These dangers are only to be avoided by the sharpest self-control and thoro party training; at the same time the carrying out of these tactics requires the greatest co-ordination of the party.

THE minority of the National Council did not recognize the justice of the criticism by the Central, they accordingly did not wish to accept the conclusions drawn by the Central Committee (except, of course, more careful work in the trade unions and factories, better party training, closer co-operation between the Central and the districts, etc.). On the contrary, they saw in the proposals of the Central Committee the danger of a relapse into Brandlerism. It is however, significant that the most prominent districts (the old enemies of Brandlerism!) stand behind the Central Committee: Berlin, Wasserkante, Ruhr district, Niederrhein, Mittlerhein (in addition to these: Bremen, East Prussia, Pomerania, Mecklenburg, Silesia, Upper Silesia, East Saxony, Halle-Meresburg, Magdeburg, Anhalt, Wurttemberg). The minority which had behind it 15 out of 50 votes represents about a fourth of the membership. It is a fact that some comrades, against the express decision of their districts, voted against the theses of the central committee.

But it is specially charactetristic that the minority could not bring forward any proposals regarding the tactics to be employed in the present situation, and that they did not oppose the Central Committe from the same motives. From this it can be seen that it will be possible in a short time, by means of intensive work, to convince the minority, which of course, pledged itself to carry out the tactics decided upon, of the correctness of the decisions of the National Council. This will be all the easier as in all districts conferences are to be held in order to prepare for the party conference which will take place shortly and to draw up decisions upon the theses of the National Council.

THE session of the national council of May 9 and 10, means a further step forwards in the direction of bolshevizing, as was demanded by the enlarged executive. The carrying out of these decisions will prove the truth of Lenin's saying: "Defeated armies learn well!" The party knows in what a difficult situation it has to fight in order to gain the leadership of the working class and to set up a fighting alliance with the working peasants and middle classes. It must take this task still more seriously, it must co-operate still more closely with the leadership of the Communist International and of the R. C. P. and the other brother parties in the fight against the capitalist offensive and new imperialist wars.

The following is an extract from the resolution of the national council of the C. P. of Germany on the political situation, the tasks and tactics of the party:

"In a sitiuation in which our party constitutes the factor which will turn the scale between a right and a so-called left government, it is entirely permissible, and under certain conditions necessary to follow such a parliamentary tactic that we render possible the existence of the "left" coalition. In so doing we must openly declare with all clearness that this is not because the revolutionary working class has anything better to expect from the socialist party of Germany and the 'republican parties' than from the open monarchists, but solely for the purpose of showing to the masses who still believe in these parties that they are just as reactionary and hostile to the workers as the open reactionary parties. If the C. P. G. makes use of such a tactic in order to mobilize the masses outside of parliament against the blackredgold parties and their government, this tactic has nothing whatever in common with a social democratic or Brandlerist coalition policy. It is, however, only correct and permissible when the possibility does not yet exist of overthrowing such a government by a proletarian mass movement."

Race Prejudice a Capitalist Disease

By P. RUGUR.

TO the Jew or Negro in the United States who suffers from an overabundance of race consciousness, we recommend a period of work under the authority of a capitalist of his own race. We know of no finer treatment for the elimination of that disease which seeks to implant race consciousness as the paramount emotional complex in the worker's mind. The Jewish worker is utterly beneath the contempt of his bourgeois brother, who thinks only in terms of commercial ventures, salving his humanitarianism by dispensing charity in abundance—but not wages. The bourgeois conscioupess permeates every aspect of Jewish social organizations. The social workers, institutional attendants, settlement workers, and the entire galaxy of white-collared intellectuals are equally as much under the control of self-confident, brazen realtors, clothing merchants and lawyers, as are Jewish tailors under the east-side bosses.

The Negro is marked for even greater discrimination than the Jew. His color is decidedly more distinctive a badge than is the Semitic countenance. To the same extent he is apt to be more race conscious. Furthermore, the Negro middle class is still small, and consequently the colored worker may pass thru life entirely unacquainted with it. Let those who doubt the power of class even where color is concerned subject themselves to the tender mercies of a shyster colored lawyer. Let them ponder upon the baneful effects of the trashy cosmetics advertised by colored business men in Negro periodicals. Let them consider the entire assortment of professional 'lodge-organizers of fifty-seven varities.

IT takes but a very brief association with the bourgeoisie of the colored group, the Jewish group, or of any foreign-born group to let the worker realize that he has nothing in common with them. Race-hatred and capitalism are indelibly linked and must remain so. Where the Negro, the Jew, or the foreigner finds the worker also imbued with ancient prejudices, let him know that capitalist psychology, manifesting itself thru bourgeois preachers and teachers, thru Odd Fellows' lodges and Masonic orders, has inculcated hatred among the workers.

There is not a shred of evidence that prejudice is inborn. The southern Negro has been hated less as a black than as a representative of a downtrodden class. The Jew finds prejudice greater to the extent that he is a dangerous competitor to the gentile merchant.

The abolition of prejudice can only be secured by the abolition of capitalism. Prejudice and intolerance are just as integral a part of capitalism as modernist theology, Rotary clubs, and chambers of commerce. They are necessary to divide the worker. Because of their emotional associations they frequently give the appearance of permanence. But the southern Negro should remember that even bourgeois France has little fear of Negro social equality, and the race-conscious Jewish worker, to prove his theory of innate prejudice, will have to find the Jew subject to discrimination by Chinese, Indians and Malays.

Prejudice is necessary to capitalism. Let the Communist worker fight it at every opportunity, pointing out the harmful influence of race antagonism upon workers' unity.

SOVIETS PROVIDE FOR MINORS WHO ARE BORN TO FOREIGN PARENTS

MOSCOW,—(By Mail).—The commissariat of public education of the Russian Socialist Federative Republic has issued regulations, jointly with the People's Commissariats of foreign affairs and of justice, laying down that when a national of a foreign state which has no treaty relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who resides in the territory of the R. S. F. S. R. and is not of age, the competent Soviet organs shall be appointed trustee's for him or her, if such guardianship is needed.

When, however, the state in question has de jure relations with the Union or has treaty relations, but with no special provisions in the treaty regarding guardianship for persons of minor age, such guardianship may be exercized by the consular representatives, local or the nearest, of the given state, or by diplomatic representatives, when there are no local consular agents.

Naturally, in cases when the question of guardianship is provided for in treaties between the U. S. S. R. and a foreign state the matter is settled as according to such provisions.

MASTERS AND SLAVES ,(A Story of the Working Class) -:-

By John Lassen

(Synopsis of Preceding Chapters)

Nickles and Joe Vavas, migratory workers, meet under a freight train while beating their way west. They get off at Colorado Springs. Joe Vavas is a barber by trade, and Nickles manages to get work as a footman at Broadmoor, the mansion of the Broidins. His work is constant drudgery. Vavas is class conscious, and Nickles is not, but they are staunch friends nevertheless. An attachment springs up between Nickles and Marguerite, the maid at the Broadmoor mansion. One day Joe Vavas tells Nickles and Marguerite that a barbers' union has been formed to fight against the intolerable conditions. Joe Vavas has formed the union with the help of William who is an American by birth and not an immigrant like Joe. The younger elements in the union, led by Joe and William force a strike against the bosses. The strike is won by the barbers, but the union delegate from Denver sells out at the last moment, and the strikers are deprived of most of the fruits of their victory. The ku klux klan of Colorado Springs holds an initiation ceremony as a result of the fight of the workers. They swear to exterminate the reds. Mr. Broidin takes part in the ceremony. He desires Marguerite the young servant and makes love to her. Gradually Nickles is becoming more and more receptive to the ideas of Joe Vavas who is a Communist. Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XII.

MARY the chambermaid was pale and trembled in every limb. At table she sat there with a vacant stare in her eyes and could hardly talk.

"Oh, oh,"—she exclaimed again and again.

They all questioned her solicitously.

"This woman, this woman"—she repeated as if out of her mind.

Mary, usually so calm and collected, was now only a trembling, miserable creature.

"What's happened?"

At last she came to.

"Oh,—Mrs. Broidin said, that . . . "

Again she couldn't talk any more.

Her voice broke down.

Nickles brot a glass of ice-cold orange juice:

"That'll do you good."

The general sympathy seemed to animate the girl.

"I won't stay here, I won't stay another day in this house."

They still didn't know what has happened.

"But what is the matter? . . . "

"Yes, you ought to know it too. She said she didn't want to be bothered by telephone conversations. Because she was once connected wrong. She tells me I can't telephone any more. Told me to tell my friends not to telephone to me. One of them she told it to already."

Her voice broke into sobs that choked her.

"Are we slaves? Slaves?"

The sympathy of all present went out to Mary.

"They don't let you go out, and now they won't let you even telephone. You can't even talk with your friends!"

"That's a damned shame!"—Nickles exclaimed.

"It's six weeks that I haven't been to church"—Mary sobbed.—"six weeks."

Marguerite: "Dreadful."

She herself it is true felt no need for going to church, but she sincerely shared Mary's feelings in the matter.

"Jesus Christ, will you forgive me!"—wailed Mary.

She was carried away by a deep ecstasy.

"This woman is a murderer, she is killing my soul!"

Then she calmed down gradually. Her breast still heaved, but she was in her mind again. I'm leaving this evening. And Sunday I'm going to church!"

"Jesus will surely pardon you, because you're not to blame."

Mary's eyes were still suffering with tears, but they shone now with a faint glimmer of hope: "Do you think so?"

Marguerite was happy to able to comfort the girl. "Of course, there's no doubt about it. In heaven they certainly will take these things into consideration."—And reflecting for a while, and also for her own comfort: "I'm absolutely sure of it."

"Hurry up!"—said John coming in.—"This afternoon there'll be lots of company."

"Oh . . . oh . . . "

This news overwhelmed them so, that they even forgot all about Mary.

When John said "there'll be company," it was bad, but when he said "lots of company," it was very bad.

Nickles scratched himself behind the ear in despair.

Shrill ringing. Three times.

Marguerite! . . .

She brot back a long sheet of paper.

"This is for John. I have to get the second parlor ready."

John sat down with the sheet of paper and was engrossed in the study of it. And he too scratched himself behind the ear.

The sheet of paper contained the work that was to be done and the list of "refreshments."

Iced tea, iced coffee, coffee, iced cocoa, ice-cold orangeade . . . John's ears burned . . . Sandwiches . . . ham . . . goose-liver, liverwurst, tongue, Swiss cheese, cold fish, mayonnaise . . . the reading alone made him tired.

His only comment was:

"Hurry up!"

• • • •

THEY all got to work quickly.

Marguerite hugged Mary and kissed her on the forehead.

Mary was happy.

She went to her little room to pack up.

Marguerite called after her:

"Are you really going away?"

"Yes! Yes!"

Marguerite gave a deep sigh—: "Lucky girl! But I . . . where could I go? I've got nobody here . . . who could telephone to me . . . "

CHAPTER XIII.

THERE certainly was lots of company. Mr. Broidin considered it important to see to it that he did not suffer from a lack of spiritual edification. He was a Christian Scientist, and from time to time he held services with lots of company present.

The church in Colorado Springs seemed to him extremely silly.

"The soul is complicated"—he would say—"the religious ceremony too, must be complicated."

He always saw to it that the audience would have the pleasure of hearing special music or singing besides that of the local great musicians and singers. As a matter of fact the religious exercises took place mostly when the itinerary of some famous singer led thru Denver or Colorado Springs.

A Gothic Christ stood in the music-room. With bleeding body he looked at the vain world. At his feet burned the perpetual light. A small red flame.

On the wall, Leonardo da Vinci's "Madonna and the Child," as well as a few valuable engarvings of great masters.

Candles twinkled in candle-sticks.

Piano, trombone, violincello and—victrola.

The last instrument didn't exactly fit into the setting, but when he was all alone and no one else could hear, Mr. Broidin loved to listen to jazz-music.

But of course only in privacy.

When he was lonely.

• • • •

Mr. Broidin brot many flowers.

Nickles did not recognize the flowers, but from the bill he concluded that they must be something extraordinary.

"A month's wages"—Nickles gasped in astonishment and stuck them with greater reverence in the Japanese vases. The flowers spread a heavy perfume in the whole room. In the parlor with purple-gold carpets.

Automobiles arrived.

They brot guests.

Many guests.

The chauffeur who was demoted to a lackey helped them to get out.

John, Nickles and Marguerite had to drudge away. The silver had to be polished over again. And the glasses had to be just so. The porcelain plates and the big platters. And for every course there was a new set of dishes.

Then, John and Nickles had to put on the holiday dress coats. The black frock coats with silver buttons, and the silk slippers.

The uniforms made the work more difficult.

All were already gathered. And yet the atmosphere was rather prosaic. The hostess knew why she was delaying the start of the services. Her experience taught her that the high point of the service must always occur when it was twilight. That fitted with the arrangement of the parlor.

Meanwhile they had to kill time with social chatter. Gossip, news. And the time passes of its own accord.

The hostess went out. Came back again. She was easily excited.

Ten minutes later there arose out of the distance a deep, subdued, brassy tone. It swelled, until it culminated in a final boom which rolled, ringing thru the room.

Everybody listened. There was complete silence.

And the tenor lifted his voice again: "O Sleep! Why Dost Thou Leave Me," by Handel.

This was the introduction and it had a very powerful effect.

The best mood was thus created for the oration of the young, long-haired poet.

He stood in the corner. At the feet of the crucified Christ. The perpetual light threw a weak red ray upon him. His eyes had burst the bounds of the purple-golden parlor. His voice was highly spiritual.

"My Christian brethren . . . "

That was the way he began the address.

And he spoke very nicely.

"How vain is human life"—he continued. "Oh people, people, wherefore do ye believe that your body means anything upon this earthly road, which leads from the finite into the infinite. There is no human body, there is only a human soul. Fine crystals float in the air. Fine arystal grains, little crystals of the sould float onward . . . onward . . . Poor humanity! These fine crystal grains could glide on toward salvation. They could arise from the earthly road into the heavenly infinite. People could fly toward paradise without pain, without sickness, without earthly troubles . . . For everything, my Christian brethren, is only vision. Is there sickness? No. The human crystals are healthy. The great faith is sufficient, to do away with any disturbance in the crystal movements. Our faith in our Lord, Jesus Christ, suffices to heal the broken bone. To regulate again the circulation of the blood in the decayed lung . . . "

This magnificent prohpesying did not quite overcome the audience. The atmosphere was not yet such that the people there could be warmed up thru and thru. The Christian Scientist and poet realised this, and he was always extremely proud that he could establish full spiritual contact with his hearers. A deep stillness prevailed in the room. His voice flowed deeper and deeper thru the hall.

"People! People! . . . Ye are soul-crystals on the earthly road. Oh, how foolish are those who believe that earthly welfare means anything. The soul-crystals feel no connection with that which offers earthly comforts, with that which is bound up with the worldly. To us, soul crystals, it is all the same, whether we live in a hut or in a palace. Our bread is the word of Jesus, and our wine his blood, which he shed for us . . ."

The eyes of a few hearers became filled with tears.

"Oh, vain wish,—to become rich. The radiant paths are open to all. We are all one in the Lord. Everyone remains where he has beheld the light of this world, on whichever way it was decided for him to tread. All is vision. Imagination. And there is only one reality . . Our soul . . . And our body soul-crystal . . . "

The heavy fragrance of the flowers made the nostrils tremble. The twilight cast its spell upon the audience. All waited for the deep voice. The long-haired, holy poet's deep voice wandering in heaven . . .

" . . . And what is poverty? Imagination. There is no poverty. Everyone of us is rich. The soul is pure gold. Trembling presentiment of existence. Poor? There is no such thing. It is but imagination. A bit of bread suffices for the crystal soul, that it may glide on upon the silver road, light as a feather of flame. And the way is so short that even the bit of bread is not always necessary. There is no hunger. Hunger too is only imagination. The crystal sould floats on and on . . . Upon the road which leads into the infinite, death too is only imagination. Ours is eternal life. The crystal soul descends into the deep. And there it revolves . . . This is understanding. This brings joy. All men are equally fortunate, whether poor, or rich. We must do nothing else than to give this knowledge in equal measure to the poor and rich, and the soul—crystals will find themselves in eternal brotherhood at the feet of our Lord Jesus Christ."

He sank on his knees. And all bent their heads.

"That was a real success"—Mrs. Broidin concluded.

• • • •

THEY were working outside.

John got the sandwiches ready. The perfect skill with which he cut very thin slices of bread bewildered Nickles.

"As thin as paper"—he announced.

John first smeared the butter on the bread and then cut the slices. Now and then he didn't succeed.

"Why don't you cut the bread first and then put on the butter?" Nickles asked.

He suspected that John chose this method because in this way he could spoil more slices and so could eat them up.

But his suspicion was unfounded.

John showed him that the slices were so thin that it was impossible to smear butter on them.

The goose-liver was spread on thick.

"The guests don't want to eat bread, but goose liver."

The taste of the guests was exactly in harmony with that of Nickles, for he also preferred goose-liver. Unfortunately John did not spoil a single goose-liver sandwich.

And in the preparation of the cold refreshments Nickles' aesthetic sense was considerably developed. The largest and nicest cherries had to be picked out, cut up and put into the ice. And then there were fragrant leaves. And small orange-slices. .

Every drink was served in a special way.

The great platters were set in readiness.

The table-silver sparkled.

They waited for the signal.

The cakes also awaited their fate.

• • • •

AFTER a short pause Mrs. Broidin thot that the proper moment had come.

John and Nickles brot on the great, heavy silver platters.

There was the right mood for goose-liver sandwiches and cakes. The ice-cold drinks cooled them off.

The servants stepped softly. In their black frock coats and in their silk slippers they produced a real festive effect.

The guests ate.

Their religious fervor had not in the least diminished their appetite. More and more heaped-up platters were carried in.

The goose-liver sandwiches enjoyed the greatest popularity. Whereas the Swisscheese, with the lettuce leaves received less consideration. The long-haired poet with the eyes that roamed in the distance, dreamily swallowed whole sandwiches. He had an astonishingly good appetite.

At the end there were only ice-cold drinks, and on the platters here and there a lonely sandwich. Nobody wanted to eat what was left over.

THE servants came and went without making any noise. Marguerite stuck a candle here and there, for the evening was already there with its deep shadows.

Mrs. Broidin knew that the spell of evening would not be spoiled, but on the contrary, greatly heightened thru mystical lighting. By this time the little flame of the perpetual light dominated everything.

"The Resurrection" by Haydn followed.

The melody swept forward in triumph and enraptured the gathering.

The tenor sang songs by Schumann.

Evening came down deeper and deeper, and wrapped the whole room in soft, yellow colors. It was as if the hall had extended and had penetrated into the outside world.

The friend of the poet recited a poem entitled "Our Mother Mary." A creation of the dreamy poet. The poem was extremely commonplace, but precisely for that reason it was the more effective in this place.

They congratulated the poet. But he pointed to Christ.

That was a very pretty scene.

And now came the high-light of the gathering. "Joy to the World" by Wats-Handel. The song arose, triumphant, radiant, pouring its splendor over everything. The tenor carried them all away with his overwhelming ecstasy.

It was an inspired glorification of the world.

The Handel-melodies embraced them. The crystal-souls.

They glorified the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The fulfillment.

Melody was everything.

"We wandered on the silver road"—spoke the poet . . .

The automobiles rode away.

The chauffeur demoted to a lackey helped the guests to get into their autos.

Mrs. Broidin marched thru the kitchen.

"John, everything was very good"—she said, without stopping for even a moment.

A whole mountain of table service towered before Nickles.

:-: The Ricsha Mission and Strikes :-:

By SINBAD.

SHANGHAI, China (By Mail)—The living conditions of the ricsha pullers of which there are approximately half a million in Shanghai are too terrible for description. As one who knows living conditions have effects too threatening for existing capitalist society so that in order to suppress any murmurs of "discontent" without elevating their conditions, capitalist society is forced in this case to rely on and to upkeep the Ricsha Mission.

To quote from the Ricsha Mission's report, "Agitators are frequently at work among the ricsha men and laboring classes generally, instigating strikes and labor troubles. The mission strenuously endeavors to counteract those pernicious efforts, teaching the men that their only hope of recognition and help lies in their industry and good conduct."

By the above we can see that not only do the American capitalists use the same phrase in describing the causes of strikes and the means of breaking strikes but that in Shanghai and in every capitalist country in the world it is the same and the object of suppressing the uprisings of an oppressed group or mass is attained in the same manner. "The mission strenuously endeavors to counteract those pernicious efforts." This is a rank outspoken statement that the Ricsha Mission, an organization whose only purpose is supposed to carry on evangelistic work among the pullers, is working for the interests of the owners by, as they say, "endeavoring to counteract those pernicious efforts." The way they endeavor to counteract those pernicious efforts is by "teaching the men that their only hope of recognition and help lies in their industry and good conduct." This phrase differs not a bit from the phrases used by the preachers who are sent to various strike centers in America to quell and quiet the revolts which may there arise. "Industry and good conduct." The church which capitalism has established has gained for them all that it cost in upkeep and many times over and by means of the richsa mission it aims to control the uprisings of the burdened down coolies.

How the Mission Works.

In July, 1924, there was a strike of ricsha coolies which was in small part instigated by a few small owners which was supposed to have been on a small scale directed against the new type of ricsha called the pedicab which is more comfortable than the ordinary ricsha. The idea was to have the strike last for only a small time. But now the coolies had a chance to demonstrate against their own ills and the strike spread like wildfire thru the city. The Ricsha Mission got to work at once and the result can be deduced from the following letter:

Shanghai Municipal Council
Police Force,
July 21, 1924.

George Matheson, Esq.,
Hon. Director,
Mission to Ricsha Men.

Dear Mr. Matheson,

I wish to express my thanks to you and your colleagues for assisting the police in maintainingg order amongst the public ricsha pullers during the recent strike engineered by certain disgruntled owners of public ricshas of poor standard. The good effects of your constant efforts to prevent these men from becoming the tools of agitators is apparent and is much appreciated.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) A. Hilton Johnson.

(It is needless to repeat that the phraseology is still the same and still savors of the certain sponsority of the mission by the capitalist interests of Shanghai.)

The "efforts" of the Ricsha Mission have their effect not only on the ricsha pullers, but also on the laboring classes in general who come into contact with its long slimy feelers. This effect can best be judged by the report. "In directing attention to the great numbers of the laboring classes coming directly under the moral influence of the mission, it must be observed that during the past years Shanghai has wonderfully escaped strikes and labor troubles frequent in other parts of China and it is gratifying to relate that the efforts of the mission in this direction are officially recognized."

OF course, it is not the usual thing for an employer to thank, in such kind terms, the employe for something that the employer pays the employe to do, but the relations between the Ricsha Mission and such organizations as the Shanghai municipal council, etc., the latter being the employer, and the former the employe, are made to appear much different only to throw sand into the eyes of those, who may be thoughtful enough to realize that perhaps the Ricsha Mission and the municipal council are both tied together by invisible bonds. They have but the one purpose which is the purpose of world capitalism, to exploit the working masses!

The Bolshevization of Our Party Press

IV. The Character of our Press

IF the Communist press is to be a mass press, if it is to exercise influence over millions, it must speak the language of the masses. This is a platitude, and almost every Communist editor would be indignant if anyone thought it necessary to mention it to him. And yet the Communist press sins greatly in this respect, though in two diametrically opposite directions: There are Communist newspapers whose endeavors to adopt a popular tone have led them to speak the language of the masses to such an extent that the masses themselves reject them. And again there are other Communist organs who understand their mission of raising the masses onto a higher level in such a sense that they address themselves to the masses in a language which is not even comprehensible to the whole of the Communist Party. (This danger is the greater at the present time when a great part of the Communist press is plunged into the profoundest reflections on the role to be properly played by the party, only too often forgetting that the role of the party becomes an empty phrase if not played actually among the masses.) The majority of our Communist newspapers can be classified under this heading.

It is the task of the Communist press to speak in a language comprehensible to the millions of the working class, and yet unceasingly emphasizing the leading role of the Communist Party.

"Write to us on the conversation held in the workers' circles, on the character of these conversations, on the subjects selected for instruction, on the questions put and replied to by the workers on the organisation of propaganda and agitation, on the connections with society, with the army, with the youth; write most of all about the complaints which the workers most often raise against us social-democrats, about their questions, protests, etc." (Lenin: "How can we make our newspapers real organs of the labor movement?")

"Why is it not possible to speak in of simple, general, well known, ob- 20 to 100 lines, instead of 200 to 400, vious matters, already fairly digested by the masses, such as for instance the despicable treachery on the part of the Mensheviki, the servants of the bourgeoisie... or the scornful grim of the American millionaires at Germany, etc." (Lenin: "The character of our newspapers.")

IF we take Lenin's second warning to heart, we shall have space enough in our press to observe the first, and shall find the way of solving the problem of how to speak in the language of the masses without sharing their delusions, of coping competently with mass movements and organising them under the leadership of the Communist parties. The first task of the Communist press is agitation, not propaganda, that is, it must explain Communist policy to the masses on the basis of visible facts, not on that of Communist theory.

Among the greatest enemies of Communist policy in our own ranks, and not only of policy, but of press agitation, we must count the revolutionary phrase.

"The revolutionary phrase consists of the repetition of revolutionary slogans, without taking into account the objective circumstances of the present curve of events and the present situation. Wonderfully captivating and intoxicating slogans, without any firm ground beneath them, are the essence of the revolutionary phrase." (Lenin: "The revolutionary phrase.")

TWO different things may be comprehended under revolutionary phrase in the Communist press. There are Communist papers which invariably follow the principle of employing the strongest and most urgent phraseology which they are capable of compiling, and which give the impression that the writers must have been in a state of high fever. Viewed as agitation, this fail to make any effect upon the masses, repels them, and has besides this the disadvantage that when the newspaper has to deal with some special situation, it finds its vocabulary exhausted. A second variety of the revolutionary phrase is the ceaseless employment of Communist slogans without any internal connection with actual events in the eyes of the workers. Frequently the simple narration of facts is more effective than the artificial and wearisome repetition of Communist slogans. More faith in the thinking powers of the reader! "Less intellectual talk, closer contact with life!" (Lenin.)

THE Communist newspaper must have inexhaustible reserves of love and care at its disposal if it is to exercise an influence over the masses. There are many journalist devices at the disposal of sensational press supported by the bourgeoisie and by social-democracy, means by which they attract the backward masses, but which cannot and must not be employed by the Communist newspaper aiming at effective press agitation. But a correct principle may be transformed into its reverse if it is falsely applied. Contempt of the methods of bourgeois journalists has led to a neglect of language and style in a section of our party press, and under certain conditions this may become a political danger. In a great number of Communist newspapers we find a crude mixture of "intellectual" terminology alternating with an express hostility against any clear sustantiation and exposition of a clear Communist slogan. It is perfectly evident that such organs will never command the interest of the masses. Among the lesser but none the less treacherous enemies of Communist press agitation we may for instance name the unecessary use of foreign terms.

"I must admit that the needless use of foreign words annoys me, for this hinders our influence upon the masses." Thus wrote Lenin in 1920, at the session of the political bureau of the C. C. of the Russian C. P. when discussing the Communist press with Comrade Bucharin.

The foreign word hinders our influence upon the masses, because the masses do not understand it, and experience shows this lack of understanding to form an immediate bridge to indifference, or even to actual antipathy against the revolutionary party. Just at the present moment, when reaction rules, and bourgeois influence is exercised upon the working class in the thousand different forms of journalistic agitation (and it is an unfortunate fact that the bourgeoisie has a much better idea of agitation among the workers than we Communists), the utmost importance must be attached to the removal of all elements hampering our influence upon the masses, and thus to the selection of suitable language.

THE character of a newspaper depends not only on the careful or negligent preparation of the different articles and notes, and on good or bad editorship, but also to a great extent on the technical make up. In technical respects, as in many others, the Communist press is still hampered by the remnants of bourgeois and social-democratic traditions. Is it really an unalterable law that every newspaper must consist of a headline, a leading article, a chronicle of events, etc.? Many of our Communist newspapers have emancipated themselves from this troublesome inheritance. But the greater part still feel themselves bound to enter into competition in this respect with the bourgeois and social democratic press.

The technical make up of a paper should be determined by the purport of the contents, by the aims of the agitation pursued. This applies especially to the first page of the paper. The effect of the headlines does not depend solely on their striking the right nail on the head, but much more upon the technical arrangement of the material to which they draw the readers' attention. Many of our newspapers still retain the custom of entrusting one member of the staff with the work of supervising the technical make up of the paper. In a Communist editorial staff this function should be absolutely prohibited. Rosa Luxemburg, as editor of the Roten Fahne, never left the office until the proofs had been corrected.

To sum up. Those Communists who have been entrusted by the party with the difficult and responsible task of spreading abroad its ideas must never forget for a moment, even when writing the very smallest note for the press, that thousands of astute workmen's brains will test and examine it with the intensest interest, and will form a judgement. It is only by means of the development of this sense of responsibility that we will be enabled to form that army of Boshevist journalists so greatly needed by our West European parties.

V. Systematic Agitation

"The role of the newspaper is however not confined to the mere propaganda of ideas, to the political schooling and winning over of political allies. The newspaper is not merely a collective propagandist and collective agitator, but a collective organizer." (Lenin: "The newspaper as collective organizer.")

THE first prerequisite for the attainment of the goal aimed at by Lenin is systematic and manysided Communist press agitation. This must be capable of not only giving every stratum of the population that which interests it, but it must be capable of doing this so systematically, and with such complete political consciousness, that the masses are guided into channels advantageous to the Communist movement. A striking example of properly understood and properly executed strategy in press agitation is given by the workers' editorial staff of the factory newspaper Leuna Prolet. They write in their report:

"The articles in the Leuna Prolet may almost be said to be adapted to the individual peculiarities of our colleagues. For we must give everyone something. Though we apparently come to meet their moods, in the end it is our views which we impose upon them. Our attitude towards the fascist movement, towards the social-democrats, and the yellow trade unions, can be expressed clearly and unequivocally.

"Our relations to the employes are somewhat more complicated. Here we find so many groups, some pro-labor, some anti-labor. Foremen and such people are generally represented in our newspaper as speeders up and slave drivers. The severest terms are suitable with respect to them, for they are the conscious and willing trustees of our class adversaries. Masters superintendents, accountants, proletarians disguised behind a white collar, are worthy of little more than derision. We sketch them in ridiculous positions, scoff at their triviality and petty errors. This has the effect of inducing them to act with less severity towards their subordinates; the famous Leuna discipline weakens. Our attitude towards the employees must be adapted to the circumstances of each individual case, the motives of action being carefully examined into.

"Besides this, the "Leuna Prolet" must supplement the factory reports by articles aiming at political enlightenment. But this may safely be done in a round about way. Among our colleagues there are still many who do not want to hear anything about politics, especially anything about political action. They are however none the less anxious for more wages and better working conditions. These colleagues must be clearly enlightened as to the fact that the question of improved economic prosperity is at the same time a question of political power. Things must be discussed which the factory council cannot tell the workers. ("The Leuna Works and its Communist factory nucleus.")

NOTHING could be more to the point. The Communuist press must adapt itself to the "individual peculiarities" of the masses. It must give everybody something. It must be capable of the systematic and effective use of every medium of agitation.

"The Pravda has published many poems written by workers. These poems have not been perfect from the standpoint of the patent literary critic, but they have reproduced the actual trends of feeling among the working masses much more effectually than many a lengthy article. The average workman is well able to appreciate a happily chosen designation, a well earned jeer at the opponent. A good caricature, really to the point, is considerably better than a dozen difficult and wearisome so-called 'Marxist' articles." (Zinoviev: "What must our newspapers be like?")

"Individual" agitation not only does good service in bringing the different strata of the working population into closer contact with the Communist paper, but it opens a thousand floodgates thru which the living humor of the working class, the wit of the people, forming in itself the best of all methods of agitation, may flow into the columns of the Communist press.

To the DAILY WORKER: Enclosed you will find a manuscript titled Un-Sung Heroes, which I am submitting for your critical inspection. Whether the submitted article merits or contains any constructive value or not—I leave for you to judge.

A little matter I would appreciate if you could possibly spare the time is, I desire a correspondent or two who are sincere and class-conscious. Sex, age and nationality are not to be considered in the choosing, as I realise there is only one race and that is the human race. This appeal comes from a class conscious worker, who has aroused the animosity of the ruling class to the extent that ten years in prison is my condemnation. I have endeavored to carry on a correspondence with christians, theosophist and all-around bug-house occultists—but I find that they have a conception of life that we can never agree upon. If I am not imposing upon you I would certainly appreciate this favor of obtaining a real Red correspondent for me.

With best wishes for your personal success and happiness, I am fraternally your comrade, Hearne M. Haislip, Q. Q. B., C. E. P. O. Box 37112, San Quentin, Calif.

MAX EASTMAN BLOWS UP

tral Committee, Trotsky wrote:

"If I have chanced to revert to the formula 'Permanent Revolution' in any particular instances since October it was only in the sphere of party history—that is, a reversion to the past, and not in the sphere of present problems."

Personalities.

WHEN Eastman gets down to discussing the personalities of the leaders of the Communist International, his petty slanders become nothing less than scurrilous. When he speaks of the president of the Communist International as "a notoriously timid man," I am tempted into repeating a private conversation in which Eastman in 1920 refused my invitation to join the Communist Party on the ground that he "did not want to get arrested." Even to discuss this sort of stuff is an indignity to Zinoviev. From the realm of opinion Eastman slips into a veritable goulash of incoherent lies. He writes of Zinoviev that "from being the least influential of the leaders he has become almost the mouthpiece of the party" during the past year. Tell me, Eastman, who has been the mouthpiece, not "almost" but officially, of the whole aggregation of all Communist Parties of all the world as expressed in the Communist International, for the past six years? Is it not the president of the International, the old collaborator and co-author with Lenin, Lenin's choice for the post, Gregory Zinoviev? Zinoviev became the president of the Communist International during the prime of Lenin's health and activity, and in accord with Lenin's desires—and this alone blows to chaff all of Eastman's bosh and melodrama of the bed-chamber. It is curiously interesting to trace to their source Eastman's comments upon these soldiers of the revolution. Zinoviev "has never been a popular Bolshevik!" This is a remark which can be derived from exactly one source alone. Anyone who was in Russia in 1918 knows that Zinoviev was the most "unpopular," the most virulently hated of all the Bolshevik leaders—in a certain circle: among the frightened petty-bourgeois riff-raff of the cafes. So fixed was the tradition among the rumor-nourished bourgeoisie, that Zinoviev was the "worst devil of them all" (a tradition that is reflected even in this month's Current History Magazine), that I recognize in Eastman's remark the unconsciously absorbed current gossip of the Nepman. But to the industrial workers of Leningrad (then Petrograd), who were as all know the backbone of the revolution, it would be hard to say that any other than Lenin himself was more popular than Zinoviev—and this fact has long been a by-word.

WHAT of the other veterans whom the elegant Eastman calls "these faint-hearted Communists?" I will waste no time on his peurilities about Kamenev and Stalin—the fact of Lenin's complete trust in these leaders is established and outweighs all pretense to the contrary—and outweighs Zinoviev's and Kamenev's admitted mistake of October, 1917 (which Eastman grossly misrepresents). Of Bucharin Eastman writes, "We have Lenin's own word that Bucharin does not understand" the intellectual method of Lenin. He also says "Bucharin's prestige rests, by about one-half upon his personal popularity." Stop and think of this gem of American election campaign journalism! And the following gem of Berkmanism: "Revolutionary self-denial and devotion and courage and simplicity of life are the causes of it." He continues that Bucharin's books, Historic Materialism, "is at once so scholarly in appearance, and so utterly undigested and confusing to the(Eastman) brain, that most people are willing to concede his mastery of Marxism in order to avoid having to read and study this book. What Lenin said about Bucharin is that he 'does not understand the Marxian dialectic'" etc., etc.

Now it is on record that Lenin, in the prime of his health after October, said in the most serious way, "Bucharin is a Marxist," but the evidence of single sentences is trivial beside the fact that Lenin repeatedly during the last years chose Bucharin of all others to present the most difficult Marxian analyses on questions so profoundly complicated as to tax the best capacities of the Russian Communist Party. You will note that in the most important Marxian and Leninist task of re-writing the Program of the Russian Communist Party—surely not a "scholastic" task—Lenin chose Bucharin as his collaborator and joint spokesman.

The Joker in the Deck.

MAX EASTMAN'S complaint that the party's "admission of an enormous number of workers in the shops, and an expulsion of 'intellectuals' at just that moment, must inevitably strengthen the hold of the bureaucracy" (meaning the old guard) merely makes us laugh happily. Now we have the essence of it. Max Eastman has become a professor again: "It is perfectly clear. . ." writes he, "that only a man having some time for critical study, could save himself except by a rare emotional intuition, from becoming the dupe of the official machine"; and Trotsky's support "remained firmest in those sections of the party possessing intellectual leisure and the habit of critical thought."

With that we are about thru with Max. Not that we are among those who feed upon the crude mechanical conception that educated men are dispensed with in the proletarian revolutionary movement. On the contrary we know that the greatest leaders of the working class revolutionary movement from Marx to Lenin (and on to Zinoviev and Bucharin!) have been and are among the most profoundly educated men of their time. We won't even draw the line against artists—it would be possible to show reams of poems written both by Marx and by Engels in their youth. Also we confess to having gotten some comfort out of the fact that Frederick Engels was a talented cartoonist!—and in fact, he published an excellent cartoon in the Deutsche Bruesseler Zeitung, in 1947, the same year in which he collaborated with Marx in writing the Communist Manifesto. No, we won't disparge Eastman for being an "educated" man, nor for being an artist.

But there is a difference between the highly trained mind which completely identifies itself with and becomes an inseparable part of the working class revoltuion, and the mind which sympathizes but holds itself aloof and presumes to criticize the revolutionary movement from "above the battle"—that is, between the professional revolutionist and the professional litterateur. Max Eastman is the professional litterateur, scolding at the revolution which he has "investigated" but has not joined.

THE meaning of Eastman's sally can be understood only in connection with a series of other incidents—and in connection with the time. Not only Eastman but also a whole flock of pseudo-Marxian litterateurs (as well as a horde of social-democrats, liberals and anarchists) at this particular time begin to respond openly to the stimuli of capitalist morale. The Dawes Plan has not in reality "put Europe on rations," but it has irretrievably put a thousand Eastmans and Philips-Prices to rationalizing a retreat from the Communist position. Never having understood Lenin's thesis upon this as the period of the proletarian revolution, their faith breaks at the first passing episode of temporary and partial stabilization of the capitalist system. Some desert openly. Others are mentally so constructed that they have to find a quarrel "between two factions" in the International, and rationalize themselves out of the International in that manner. Eastman is on his way. His subtle vulgarity: "Since Lenin Died," is not even unrelated to those crass, stupid and treacherous products of the next layer below: the products of Berkman and Goldman.

As one who, from the first news of the Russian party controversy, has been absolutely convinced that the old guard is correct against Trotsky, I may be permitted to remind the reader that Comrade Trotsky is far above this mess of Eastman's and will doubtless repudiate it. Eastman is a lesson in the fact that it is impossible for an "intellectual" to be a Communist if he does not immerse himself completely in the daily official, machine work of the Communist Party. I would recommend to the reader not to waste time on Max Eastman. It would be better to turn to a little book written by what Eastman calls an unimaginative bureaucrat, Comrade Stalin: "The Theory and Practice of Leninism" (Workers Party, publisher, Chicago). It is a more artistic as well as a wiser work.

(NOTE: — Since writing the above, we have received the news that Comrade Trotsky, altho not yet having read Eastman's book on Lenin, disavows any connection with it and expresses his scorn for the reported asperions on the Russian Communist Party. Of course. And when Trotsky shall have read the book, we shall expect Max Eastman's skin to be nailed to the door of Comrade Trotsky's new quarters in the office of the Supreme Economic Council.)

Sharpening of Class Antagonism and Absolutism in Japan

By G. VOITINSKY.

THE situation in Japan constitutes at present a great exception among the imperialist countries as regards the development of its economic and political crises, which have continually increased during the last eighteen months or two years.

If one can speak of a relative stabilization of capitalism in England, France and America, and even to some extent in Germany, as far as Japan is concerned, not even the most right wing elements of the international Communist movement could bring forward the least proof in support of a theory of stabilization.

Let us take for example two exterior features of the post-war crises of the capitalist countries: Valuta and exports. During the last year the value of the Japanese yen has continually fallen, altho in the previous year it was already considerably below par. At present 100 yen are worth 38 American dollars. (Par value: 100 yen—48 dollars.) In regard to exports, however, the past year constituted a record as far as unfavorable trade balances are concerned. The balance of trade of the past year shows an import surplus of 650 million yen. The present year promises no better result: The months of January and February reveal an import surplus of 210 million yen.

The causes of this phenomena must be sought in the interior as well as in the foreign political situation of the country. As regards the interior factors responsible for the condition nearing a crisis of the economic situation the earthquake of September, 1923, with all its consequences for industry and trade, and the bad harvest of 1924 play the chief role.

THE results of these catastrophes expressed themselves in the destruction of an enormous quantity of raw material and semi-manufactures, in the destriction of the textile and silk industry, of a great portion of the electrical industry, as well as in enormous damage to the war industries and in the loss of a huge quantity of military equipments, amounting altogether in value to about 10 milliard yen. The relatively insignificant loans which the Japanese government have received from America and England (about 550 million yen) were employed by the ruling clique, partly in the interest of the monopolists and partly for military adventures in China. The interior loans, the issue of banknotes and paper money, amounting in value to 2 millard yen, have not only not improved the situation of the country, but have resulted in an immediate collapse of the yen. And it is only the recent export of gold, amonnting in value to some hundred million yen, that has served to slow down the rate of depreciation, without however stopping it altogether.

The bad rice crops of the past year likewise meant a great blow ot the economic situation of the country. About 20 million bushels of rice had to be imported. And here the Japanese government is encountering great difficulties: the price of Japanese rice is increasing, at the same time as the valuta is falling, and along with it there is a general decline in the purchasing power of the peasantry.

These conditions, under the rule of the government consisting of representatives of the bureaucracy and of agents of monopolist capital, led to an increase in the economic chaos in the country, as the government itself practically encouraged the speculations of the great capitalits following on the earthquake.

THE most important foreign political factors leading to the sharpening of the economic crisis are: the fact that Japan, at the end of 1922 and the beginning of 1923, had to evacuate the Russian territory in the Far East; the enforced limitation of Japanese influence on the Chinese coast, under the pressure of America and in consequence of the Washington conference, and finally, a certain political victory of Japanese influence in North China, towards the end of the past year, which led to strained relations with America and England.

Immediately after the conservatives came into power in England, the plan for the construction of a naval base at Singapore was taken up again. This, of course, means an immediate danger for Japan; it must therefore not only hasetn with the construction of warships, but also with the creation of an air fleet. In spite of its relative weak industry and the very unfavorable trade balance, Japan is endeavoring (regardless of the decisions of the Washington conference, which fixed the relations of the fleets of England, America and Japan in the proportion of 5:5:3) to outbuild the American fleet by the year 1928-29. There will take place in the near future the naval maneuvers of the United States in the Pacific ocean, with the open intention of demonstrating the power of the American fleet in the Far East. This, of course, provokes a mood in Japan which finds expression in the military budget of the government.

THERE is not the least doubt that the increase in military expenditure, which already amounts to 40 per cent of the total budget, will tend to aggravate the economic crisis, as it deprives the government of the possibility of supporting the middle and petty bourgeoisie to the same extent as it was compelled to do in recent times.

The alterations in the budget, even in Japan where questions of state income and expenditure do not require to be ratified by parliament, can lead in the present circumstances to a political crisis of the government.

The antagonisms which are developing in the Far East between the most important imperialist countries are having preceptible effects upon the whole interior situation of Japan, and are increasing the economic and political crisis of the country.

THE JOB HUNTERS OF GARY

about the rent he owes but is unable to pay? Or perhaps he has not the heart to come "home" to his family without money to buy bread.

The miserable conditions of the workers in the Gary Steel plants surpass anything within imagination. Here one could obtain enough material to write a second "Inferno" exceeding in cruelty and suffering that of Dante's. The monstrous blazing stoves and the fiery surroundings give one the picture of a hell on earth. But were the workers in this hell only to reap the fruit of their labor, then there would be a justification in their labor, for they would then enjoy the products of their hard labor. But instead they only slave for a pittance in order that a few parasitic idlers could accumulate all the products of their slavery. That's civilized robbery!

The greater number of workers in the Gary Steel plants are what such parasites as Gary, chief of the Gary Steel plants, Rockefeller, Morgan and others classify as "common laborers." In order to prove that the miserable conditions of the Gary Steel workers are not exaggerated, I shall give the following facts and figures:

THE wages of the average "common laborer" is 40 cents an hour. He slaves 7 days a week, and is off only one Sunday in the month, every fourth Sunday. The average payrol is from $85.00 to $92.00 for 4 weeks, 3 Sundays included. This would make about $21 to $23 the average week.

As already stated the laborer in the Gary Steel plants works 3 Sundays in 4 weeks. Yet, he would be only too willing to work 10 days a week, were it possible. And he is not to be blamed. It is the universal rule of self-preservation. To fight for his existence the worker would do anything, even slave without a cessation. With the wages indicated above life in this world is a very miserable one. Many of the workers have whole families to support with these wages—hence their willingness to keep on slaving for a pittance for themselves and the products of their toil and blood for the capitalist Moloch.

The living conditions of the Gary workers are as one could imagine with the wages already indicated. The average workers "residence" rather resembles a den for animals. A few broken pieces of furniture is all that the woker could claim as his own. The unmarried worker's lot is more fortunate. He just rents a room in a boarding house.

THIS is all the Gary worker gets in return for his slavery. Just enough to keep him alive. He works and slaves like an animal, nay, even harder, he works as if he were a part of a machine. Sometimes it is hard to tell which is the human worker and which is the machine. And sometimes when a woeful sound is heard it is hard to tell if it is the human worker or the hammer that fell.

How fitting it would be to hang up a gigantic electric sign at the entrance of the Gary Steel plants with the following lines of Dante's "Inferno"!

"Thru me ye pass into the city of woe; Thru me ye pass into eternal pain."—And ... "All hope abandon, ye who enter here."

Fairy Tales for Workers' Children

By HERMYNIA ZUR MUHLEN,

Translated by IDA DAILES.

THE question of fairy tales has always been a rather sore one with the radical movement. Despite all the admonitions of teachers and parents, the children would persist in reading the fairy tales and acquire a dreamy psychology filled with beautiful princesses, fearless knights, ogres, dragons, witches and whatnot. Such a condition was anything but healthy for the development of the working class child along the lines of his class and class interests. It diverted his thoughts from the miseries of the proletarians all around him, even made him, to a certain extent, lose sight of his own troubles, and directed his energies into organizations which offered the closest thing to the fairy tale dreams: the boy scouts and similar bodies.

But even in this distressing field the radical movement has now entered with startling success! Tales for working class children are no longer the monopoly of the bourgeoisie. The imagination, the feeling of allegiance, and the spirit of sacrifice can now be directed along working class lines. Stories, just as lovely and entrancing, and more true, than any others you have ever read in your childhood, are now at the disposal of all.

THE four tales of Hermynia Zur Muhlen, so beautifully printed by the DAILY WORKER, form a book for which no child will ever cease thanking you. While you will not find there any fair medieval princesses or fairy godmothers, there are plenty of real human animals and children whose stories are woven around incidents which bring home the position of the workers in capitalist society and the class war without falling into the weightiness of a tract or thesis. The child who reads this book—and we are certain that the reception it has received will assure further volumes—will reluctantly turn the last page with a new spirit. The tale, "Why" will be repeated in life by a similar question from all the readers and they will readily find an answer to all the queries and doubts that are born in their minds by the other stories that follow. Why are here poor people and rich? Why must the hen produce its eggs for the satisfaction of the market and not for the hungry lad? And the whole book will be the beginning of the answer which the wise owl hinted at.

"THE LITTLE GREY DOG," "The Rose Bush," and the other tales tell their story in the best manner of the old fairy tales, and with far more conviction and interest, for both the symbols and the realities will be easily understood by every child. You will find that before long the book which you will inevitably purchase will go the rounds of the whole neighborhood of children. An old idea put into such a new form; the wine of centuries of children's fiction made truer, more real and poured from the jug of modern realities.

Not to be left behind by the beautiful makeup which fairy tales usually have, this volume is something we can be proud of. The excellent, faithful translation of Ida Dailes, and the beautiful drawings and color pages of Lydia Gibson are on a plane with the fine stories themselves. A copy to your child or to some little friend will be bread on the waters of the working class and revolutionary movement. They will return to be more enthusiastic fighters in the cause of labor.—Max Shachtman.

Museums vs. Movies

As Many Go to Movies in Day as to Museum in Year.

PROF. JAMES J. WALSH, at a dinner recently held of the national board of review, compared the attendance at the motion picture theatres in New York alone with that at the Metropolitan Museum of Art—one of the greatest storehouses of art treasures in the world. Those in charge of the museum told him that the attendance each year ran to something less than a million—nine hundred thousand some years, nine hundred fifty thousand others.

The bureau of licenses is authority for the statement that every day in New York City alone a million people attend the movies.

A million a year show enough interest in the achievements of the past to visit the museum—but a million a day seek the latest hoakum of the day in the movies. Anyone can get into the minds of the masses—if only he can "Say it with movies."

COMMUNIST-CHILDREN'S-COLUMN

THE STORY OF THE PIONEERS

(Translated from the official organ of the German Junior Groupe)

IN a large city lived a young boy. His parents were so poor that they often did not have enough food to eat or had any new clothes. Therefore Ernest which was the boys name was forced to go to work. Everyday he could be seen with his bootblack box. During the rainy weather or sunny weather he was forced to go out and earn his living. He could not associate with the rich children or those whose parents were well off. Life was miserable to him. He could not go to school and Ernest just loved to learn about science. One day Ernest thought, "I hope that the workers will become free and if I had the chance I would give my life for that cause which fights for the working class. I wonder when the time will come when there will be neither rich nro poor but everyone equal."

As Ernest stood there thinking he heard a noise which startled him. He looked up and there stood a long line of children singing and talking happily to each other! "I wonder who these children are," thought Ernest as he noticed the the peculiarity in their clothes. Here were a group of children dressed in white waists with red handkerchiefs. In their hands they held little red flags which were inscribed "Jung-Spartikus-Bund" (Young Spartans Group). After seeing these happy children Ernest decided to follow them and find out who they were. He came to a large building where all entered and he followed. In the room were seated around the long table the group of juniors. Each one talked of the working class daily struggles. Around the room were many pictures of revolutionary leaders such as Marx, Engels, Lenin and Liebknecht. These were new to him. Ernest became very interested and for the next two weeks he could be seen in there. He became acquainted with the Russian revolution and learned of how the workers had taken over the factories, schools and all enjoyment for the workers. Ernest was now familiar with the great revolutionary leaders and had become a member of this group. In a few weeks Ernest had become one of the most active members in the group. At the next demonstration Ernest could be seen at the head of the group with his white waist, red chief and red flag waving high in the air. He was singing wildly for at last he had found a real working class party who would lead the workers in their struggles.—Albert Glotzer.

AS WE [illegible]

By T. J. O'F[illegible]

ARTHUR BRISBAN[illegible] vertising manager [illegible] papers, has been congratulated by Major General Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service, U. S. A., for the prophecy that the price of real estate in Los Angeles was only beginning to rise and also that chemical warfare carried on from airplanes would be a vital factor in the next war. Arthur is a big real estate operator in Los Angeles and it looks as if he owned stock in some airplane factories.

• • •

GENERAL FRIES deprecates the kind of propaganda that would draw a lurid and horrible picture of chemical warfare. In fact, the general tells us that there is no form of murder half as pleasant as putting the tin hat on an animated piece of protoplasm thru the medium of chemicals To quote the mild and kindly general: "Chemical warfare is cheapest, most effective, most humane; it is ignorance and pacifist propaganda which has cast discredit upon it. . . . But while the effect of chemical warfare may be made swift and devastating, paralyzing an enemy with incredible completeness, it is humane and in the end less deadly than shrapnel and machine gun fire."

BEFORE we take leave of the general and heartily apoligize to him for our suspicions of the aims and objects of his humane murder department, let him dissipate a few other popular fantasies that have found lodgement in the brains of the masses thru the wicked propaganda sent out by "Bolshevists and pacifists" in order to make chemical warfare unpopular with its intended victims. Listen to Major Fries again: "It is only a popular delusion that a gassed man becomes easy prey to pulmonary diseases. Before a congressional investigating committee recently leading scientists testified, that a soldier gassed is less liable to become a victim of tuberculosis, and if he does because of being gassed, he recovers more quickly."

THOSE of you who were in difficulties about the selection of the lethal weapon most conductive to sending you off on the long journey from which there is no return, should be properly grateful to General Fries and to Arthur Brisbane for giving the general something to talk about. It is not unlikely that new schools of healing will seize on Major Fries' statement and use it to convince their clients that doses of tear, mustard and laughing gas will nicely supplement spinal manipulations and rectal electricity charges. Before long we may have a chemical warfare department in every hospital.

• • •

IF liquid fire and the other products of the war laboratory are so conducive to good health why not let us have wars often and conveniently located so that even the poorest workers can afford to pay his fare to the scene of carnage. It might be possible to have miniature wars during the noon hour where the tired workers and even the tired business men might get either rejuvenation or death. The general did not say that his pet poisons always cured. Sometimes there are accidents and there is a fatality. But people who live in Chicago should not worry over the mortality table of a war. The nice general has taken considerable of the sting out of death.

SHOE BOSSES IN MASSACHUSETTS START WAGE CUT

Want Workers to Accept Slash

By TOM BELL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, June 7.—The shoe bosses, following the lead of the textile barons, are preparing a campaign of wage slashing in this section.

In Brockton, the situation is acute. The bosses are spreading the idea that only the "high" wages of the workers prevent the factories running steadily and the following letter is typical of the preparatory methods used:

To Our Employes.

We find ourselves up against competition which compels us to appeal to you seriously as to your future steady employment.

We are being offered very large orders for good shoes only, to retail at $5.00-$6.00; this type of shoe with the material demanded is impossible to produce at the present labor bill. That these shoes will be produced somewhere goes without saying. If we could get a labor price that compares with the concerns who will surely get this business, if we cannot take it, we could run our factory up to 100 dozen pairs per day, 50 weeks yearly. A price for labor low enough to obtain these large orders means that you would actually earn more a year than you do now, to say nothing of the future.

Shoe business in the future in Brockton at present prices, holds out little hope for steady employment.

We, therefore, appeal to you to co-operate with us in trying to put this business in our factory. We are ready to place before your representatives a price list for various operations which will enable us to take this business.

Are you seriously interested enough to jointly consider with us this slightly lower labor bill, so we shall be able shortly to take on this very large business? If so, please write on the back of this slip without signing your name.

(We are willing to consider your offer.)

Or

(We are not willing to consider your offer.)

Remember, this means steady work and more earnings to you in the future.

CONVICTS BEATEN TO PULP IN HELL-HOLE N. C. PRISON CAMPS

GASTONIA, N. C., June 7 — Convicts in County camp number two have been beaten with sticks until the blood streamed from their bodies, the grand jury declared in a report today.

The convicts were whipped with sticks eight feet long, during the hours the convicts were at work.

The report revealed that a guard whipped the men while he was drunk, and recommended his dismissal.

RED DEPUTIES FIGHT MOTION PRAISING KING

Opposition Crawls to Fascist Camp

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, June 7.—The Communist deputies in the Italian chamber voted against a fascist motion of devotion to the king, presented on the 25th anniversary of the ascension of Victor Emanuel to the throne. The Communists were alone in their opposition to the monarchistic motion, the opposition parties taking part in the session voting with the fascisti.

The Aventine opposition group, which withdrew from parliament, on June 12, 1924, two days after the murder of the socialist deputy Matteoti by the fascist leaders, is also endeavoring to collaborate with the fascists.

Beg Favors of Black Shirts.

The Aventine group has asked premier Mussolini to withdraw two bills from parliament, and if that is done, promises to return to the sessions. The bills empower the fascists to discharge non-fascist government employes, and give the government the power of royal decree, thus practically abolishing parliament.

The Aventine opposition includes the democratic, republican, Maximalist, constitutionalsocialist and catholic parties.

Club Socialist Deputy.

The socialist deputy Cassinello was clubbed in a fascist demonstration at Orvieto, it is learned here.

Finance minister de Stefani has announced in the Italian senate that Italy cannot at this time consider payment of its two billion dollar war debt to the United States. "The budget cannot support any further burden," he said.

CONNECTICUT GOVERNOR THINKS DEFENSE DAY, JULY 4th, WILL BE BIG DEMONSTRATION OF WEAKNESS

NEW YORK—(FP)—Mobilization Day, termed Defense Test Day this year in the attempt of the administration to dodge fire drawn last year for the militaristic gesture, should be "undertaken at a time when it would not oebe at the expense of the working man's holiday," Governor Trumbull of Connecticut writes the war department.

But the governor approves of the defense test, objecting only to the choice of July 4 as its occasion, not only for the workers but because excursionists leaving cities and towns over the fourth will make the demonstration one of weakness rather than strength! Gov. Fulled of Massachusetts approves completely of administration policy, however, and will call out workers and the military organizations in demonstration.

A telegram from the War Resisters' International, U. S. committee headquarters at 132 W. 12th St., urging governor Al Smith of New York not to co-operate with the war department in its July 4 defense test plans has been sent out. "Let us preserve that day for the expression of ideals of independence and freedom," the telegram reads, signed by Jessie Wallage Hughes, secretary.

1925 RUSSIAN CROP LARGER BY 600,000,000 BUSHELS THAN THE BIGGEST EVER RAISED IN U. S.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, June 7.—Great satisfaction is being expressed in Soviet and Communist quarters with the reports from various parts of the country as to the condition of the crops. By the five-mark system, which is accepted here as the standard scale, the crops in the chief producing districts—the middle Volga, the Ukraine, the lower Volga and the northern Caucasus—have been valued anew at three and a half marks. This raises the hopes that this year's harvest will be satisfactory and in any case won't be below the average.

World's Largest Harvest.

By the official rough estimate the harvest is expected to yield 3,200,000,000 poods. Since out of the 1923 harvest, which was 2,800,000,000 poods, Russia was able to export 200,000,000 poods, the harvest authorities calculate to export from this year's harvest not less than 300,000,000 poods.

Estimating the amount of grain needed for the victualization of the town populations and the Red Army at 600,000,000 poods, for the state fund at 100,000,000 poods and for ex-

EVICT WORKERS FROM TENEMENTS IN EFFORT TO BREAK THREAD STRIKE

HARTFORD, Conn., —(FP)—Striking thread workers of the Willimantic plant of American Thread Co., are to be evicted from company tenements to make way for the importation of outside labor, Don H. Curtis, agent of the mill, confirms. The company took seniority rights from strikers last week and is now using the eviction threat in a desperate attempt to break the several months' strike of workers against 10 per cent wage reductions. The company owns 150 tenements occupied by mill workers.

MINNEAPOLIS COMMUNISTS URGE UNITY

Call for the Support of Labor Slate

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 7.—After one of the most uninteresting and quietest election campaigns in the history of Minneapolis, city officials will be elected here tomorrow (Monday).

The chief interest centers in the aldermanic fight because of the supreme efforts made by the daily papers (including the Minneapolis Daily Star), to discredit the labor group in the council. The attack against these men centers around the fact that they introduced and carried a resolution calling upon congress to recognize the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Later they again aroused the wrath of the reactionaries by adopting a resolution extending an official city welcome to J. O. Bentall upon his return to Minneapolis from the Leavenworth prison after serving a sentence for working class activity. The Minneapolis Daily Star, which was started a few years ago by the workers and farmers of Minnesota and since stolen by Thomas Van Lear, has run daily editorials for the past week calling upon the workers to defeat the labor members of the council for re-election.

Forget Class Struggle.

The spirit of class consciousness that prompted this group in the council to adopt these resolutions in their early political career has unfortunately been absent in the election campaign.

Instead of giving militant expression to the needs and desires of the workers in their campaign speeches, the socialist - labor aldermen are now hedging and trying to excuse any radical acts that may have been committed during periods of emotional stress.

Communists Issue Statement.

The city central committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued and circulated thousands of copies of the following statement after the defeat of its own candidates in the primary:

BUILDING TRADES TO FIGHT LANDIS OPEN SHOP AWARD

New Work Must Be All Union

That the building trades unions of Chicago may return to their policy of struggle against the open shop, disguised as the Landis award, is seen in the reported ultimatum by the Building Trades Council upon architects and contractors that hereafter the building trades will permit no non-union men to work on building construction jobs in Chicago.

Several hundred million dollars of work is in sight, and if the contractors wish to try to fight for the open shop, they will have a merry time getting the work done with scabs.

The notice was officially sent to the officers of the Chicago Building Construction Employers association, which is much excited over it, and the report is that the executive committee of the association will discuss what they shall do about it Monday.

The report is that work now under construction will proceed as before, but that upon new projects, the unions will strike any job where the open shop Landis award committee sends nonunion men to work. Contractors who hold to the open shop are dismaped. "It is the beginning of a finish fight," declared one.

The principal function of the Landis award committee is to furnish nonunion men to contractors. Some of the building unions, in agreeing to the award, agreed to let their union members work on jobs alongside nonunion men furnished by the Landis openshop committee, the institution set up by Judge K. M. Landis, acting as arbitrator.

Chinese Open Civil War Against Mercenaries of Anglo-French Capitalists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANTON, China, June 7.—Civil war was declared here yesterday by the civil government, controlled by the Kuomintang (People's) Party, as the mercenary Yunnanese troops, led by the General Yang Hsi Min, subsidized by the French and British governments with money and arms, began an armed attack on the Canton government in an attempt to overthrow it.

Yang Hsi Min issued a manifesto declaring war in the Cantenese and ordered hostilities to be opened on the Kuomintang people's army under General Li Fook Lum, a major part of whose forces have fortified themselves on Honan island in the Si Kiang river.

Expect Decisive Battle

The Kuomintang forces are ready for action. They have thrown barricades up at all strategic points and are the superior force from the standpoint of artillery, ammunition and morale, altho the Yunnanese have established themselves in the eastern suburbs and control some of the public works and buildings.

Battle is expected within a few hours. The Kuomintang has 10,000 thoroly equipped and disciplined troops, and in addition the loyal support of the Canton unions and the exploited masses generally.

The Kuomintang army includes the cadets from the Whampoa military school, one of the institutions established by the dead Chinese liberationist leader, Sun Yat Sen.

Barricades have been erected the entire length of the Bund. The Yunnanese are controlling the Canton side of the river after capturing the governor's headquarters, the telephone and telegraph offices and the lighting plant. However, another army of the Kuomintang is approaching and will endeavor to recapture the Canton side of the river.

American Consul General Jenkins has cabled Washington and the gunboat Pampanga is expected to reinforce the American gunboat Asheville, already here.

Chinese Factions Join in Support of Shanghai

PEKING, China, June 7.—Chinese newspapers here report that General Feng Yu-Hsiang, controlling the army which has up to now been the mainstay of the Peking provisional government headed by President Tuan Chi-Jui, has sent a note to that government furiously protesting at the murder of the Shanghai students by foreign imperialist troops and demanding that the Chinese government resolutely support the students and strikers at Shanghai.

What is more, the papers report that General Chang Tso-Lin, Fend's adversary in a military way for the control of Peking, and an agent hitherto of Japanese interests, has also telegraphed President Tuan from Tein-Tsin approving of the attitude and action of the Shanghai students.

The foriegn diplomatic corps today in addressing the Chinese foreign office indicates a slight modification of WASHINGTON, June 7. — The new American minister to China, John Van A. McMurray, will leave Washington for Peking today. He has been engaged in conferences with Jacob Gould Schurman, who recently returned from the Peking post, after receiving an appointment as ambassador to Germany.

Recommendation for Military Training in Schools Before Board

What promises to be the beginning of establishing military training in the schools of Chicago was brought up as a recommendation to the administration committee of the board of education. A request for funds was made for installing the headquarters for the Reserved Officers' Training Camp in the Crane Technical High School.

Trustee James P. Mullenbach spoke against the project saying he had seen military training in the schools of Germany and that that experience has made him decidedly opposed to the practice of militarizing school children.

A delegation of parents of children attending the Cameron school at 1236 North Monticello avenue, came before the administration committee with a petition signed by 800 citizens of the school district protesting the change of the Cameron elementary school into a junior high. Mrs. Wegner, the spokesman, pointed out that the change would necessitate sending small children to distant schools. Action was postponed until the next meeting.

BRITISH TRADE UNIONS PROTEST AGAINST USE OF BRITISH ARMED FORCES IN SHANGHAI STRIKE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, June 7.—In reply to an appeal from the Shanghai strikers to the British trade unions, the executive of the British Trade Union Congress has sent a formal protest to Premier Baldwin against the use of British soldiers in Shanghai.

The protest urges the immediate withdrawal of British armed forces for the reason that the Shanghai trouble is actually a violent conflict between workers and employers.

Much blood has been shed and many workers shot down, the protest adds, and instead of British troops protecting the employers, the workers who are fighting for greater industrial freedom and against unbearable conditions should be supported.

Government Ignore Protest.

The British government has announced that 2,000 British sailors have been landed at Shanghai and reinforcements in addition will soon arrive.

Great Britain also announces that it favors enlarging the scope of the forthcoming conference in regard to Chinese tariffs, so that it would include a general consideration of China's "welfare."

"China For Chinese" —Says Trotsky.

Cables from Moscow quote the Isvestia as emphatically denying that the uprisings in China are manufactured by Communists. The Chinese people, says the Isvestia, are fighting for self determination, political freedom, and that only after the Chinese have driven out the foreign imperialists can the real revolution occur. Trotsky is quoted as saying that "We offer as our program for the suggested Chinese conference the following slogan—'China for Chinese'."

COTTON PLANTER MOURNS LOSS OF NEGRO LABORERS

Industrial North Takes Southern Negroes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, June 7—The American Cotton Association thru its secretary, Harvie Johnson, is very deeply worried over the grand migration of Negro farm laborers from the southern cotton growing country.

Declaring that a million of the white planters' precious "niggers" have deserted their "beloved southland" of banjos, "massa's," "colonels" and the idyllic happiness of the stake and gallows, "Colonel" Johnson states that he is forced to admit that the southern Negroes are gone never to return.

Of the million who, he says, have gone north in the past four years, a large portion have been snapped into the industries, adapting themselves to the factory labor.

The "colonel" declares that the southern planters will have to get the United States government to permit the importation of European slaves for the southern cotton fields.

Meet on State Park.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 7—Governor Jackson was to hold an executive session at 2 o'clock this afternoon with a representative committee to discuss proposed state acquisition of the dune lands for development into a state park.

PARIS WORKERS CHEER RIFFIANS AT EXPOSITION

"International" Angers Painleve Officials

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PARIS, France, June 7.—Crowds of workers who listened to speeches by minister of public instruction de Monzie and several French senators, at the inauguration of the Soviet Pavilion of the Decorative Arts, staged a demonstration against the Painleve government and against the Moroccan invasion immediately after the speeches.

Cries of "Long Live the Soviets," and "Long Live Morocco", rang from the crowd. The workers assembled at the entrance of the pavillion and sang the Internationale. De Monzie and the senators, who were about to go thru the exposition, withdrew indignantly.

Leonid Krassin, the Soviet ambassador, in his speech pointed out the significance of the art of the Soviet Union, as an expression of the transformation that has taken place among the Soviet peoples as a result of the Communist revolution.

Finances On Rocks.

The statement just issued by the Bank of France reveals that the government treasury has borrowed 1,350,000,000 francs. The sundry assets have decreased 463,000,000 francs the statement reveals, and liabilities have increased 678,000,000 francs.

Meanwhile the Moroccans continue to batter the French invaders lines along the Ouergha river. The tremendous cost of the foreign war adds to the financial crisis.

The protest of the workers of France against the imperialist policy of the Painleve government in invading foreign soil to exploit the natives of North Africa, is growing. Large posters condemning the Moroccan invasion have appeared along the streets of Nancy, and the police have been tearing them down.

A dispatch from Tunis, North Africa, states the several arrests have been made following demonstrations of workers against the invasion.

CHINESE STUDENTS IN AMERICA PROTEST LANDING OF AMERICAN MARINES TO CRUSH MILL STRIKE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, June 7.—A protest against the landing of American marines at Shanghai and Tsingtao was made yesterday by Lung-chi Lo, president-elect of the Chinese Students' Alliance in America.

In a statement Mr. Lung-chi said that had the imperialist powers been true to the spirit and letter of the Washington conference, and had respected China's political and territorial rights, the trouble at Shanghai would not have occurred.

"So-called 'red' influence is bound to increase in China if Europe, America and Japan persist in their present efforts to silence all dissenting voices by force," he said. "We do not believe that soldiers and sailors can solve an inherently unjust and economically wasteful problem, namely, that of inhuman working conditions in the cotton mills."

to the manufacturers in return for the privilege of collecting union dues from the workers. Any worker who refused to pay dues is fired by the boss on the demand of the union dues collector. No union conditions are demanded by the union officials in return for the label—the union keeps the workers in control for the bosses.

Workers Have No Voice.

The local unions of the Boot and Shoe are all under "local O." This means that a commission appointed by the international officials are in charge of the locals. The members are only allowed to attend meetings, but cannot decide any question. "Local O." is used by the reactionary officials to stifle any rank and file revolt against their mismanagement of the union, and their collaboration with the bosses which had made out of the union the finest company union in the country.

But the conditions of the shoe workers are growing worse. The results of the recent Boot and Shoe convention held in Montreal have stirred the workers up. The convention raised the dues from 25 cents to 35 cents. The assessment limit of $5 a year was abolished and the sky was made the limit. The salaries of the officials were raised $2,500 a year. Every decision of the convention strengthened the control of the officialdom.

Rallying to T. U. E. L. Program.

The program of the Trade Union Educational League for the boot and shoe industry has the only solution for the problems of the Brockton shoe workers. This program is being taken to the workers by the T. U. E. L. adherents, and there is growing in Brockton a movement of progressive shoe workers which will eventually assume leadership of the thousands of shoe workers here. The wage cuts, and unemployment are constantly facing the workers, and this shows them the necessity of making a determined struggle to make of the Boot and Shoe a real union and a weapon for the struggle against their terrible conditions.

GREAT DANISH STRIKE ENDS IN VICTORY FOR THE WORKERS' DEMANDS

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 7.—The strike which lasted for eleven weeks and became general with the inclusion of the transport workers, paralyzing the industrial and commercial life of the whole nation, has been settled with a victory for the strikers according to announcement made late yesterday.

A proposal of government arbitrators, supposed to be a compromise, but insuring the union's concessions was accepted by both sides. The employers had insited up what amounted to an open shop.

Up to the last minute the matter looked insoluble and the king who had gone to a summer resort had returned to the capital by special train to be present to endeavor to use his influence against the stike.

FEDERATED TRADES COUNCIL OF MILWAUKEE BOOSTS AMERICAN NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 7.—At its last meeting the Federated Trades Council of Milwaukee endorsed the resolution introduced by the Molders' Union to give an active support to the American Negro Labor Congress and instructed the executive secretary to help in bringing it to the attention of the unions.

There appears to be an awakening consciousness among the workers and the understanding that the Negro worker must be admitted into the unions on the equal scales with the white worker as otherwise the bosses will use colored workers against them. In the unions where the colored workers are admitted, they prove to be very good and loyal union men.

FALLON, NEVADA, GREETS MOTHER BLOOR ON TRIP WITH SPLENDID MEETING

FALLON, Nevada, June 7. — "Mother" Ella Reeve Bloor, who is hiking from Los Angeles to New York, speaking at Workers (Communist) Party meetings and securing subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER, had an enthusiastic meeting here.

Eight new subscriptions and one yearly renewal to the DAILY WORKER were taken at "Mother" Bloor's meeting. The meeting was held in a large tent donated by Dr. Harrison. Old time German comrades arranged the meeting.

"Mother" Bloor's next meeting will be held at Salt Lake City. She wires: "Am riding constantly thru the desert now."

Street Carmen Agree to Continue at Old Wage of 75 Cents

The Chicago street car men's union and the Chicago Surface Lines have, thru representatives, agreed upon continuing the present wage scale. The union had at first asked an increase from 75 to 80 cents an hour. The company proposed as a counter-demand, a reduction to 70 cents an hour.

The scale had been agreed after the 1922 strike, with a maximum wage of 73 cents to be increased to 75 cents the third year.

The union has other demands as to working over hours. The controversy has been adjusted, according to President Quinlan of Division 241, by the company promising to operate its night cars so that all will be in the barns before 7 in the morning.

The present negotiations will be placed before the membership of Division 241 at the next meeting.

McAndrew Tries to Put One Over on New Board

Superintendent McAndrew is doing some hard pushing to sell his teachers' salary schedule to the new board of education. The other day he sent a letter to the board of education in which he set out to prove that there was no deficit in the school treasury. There has been a new auditing of the books and McAndrew's claim in this letter was that there is not only no deficit in the school treasury but that there is a surplus of $17,000,000.

Investigation of the report, however, shows that the $17,000,000 surplus belongs to the building fund and cannot be used to take care of deficits in the educational fund. Also that the true conditions of the fund is that it is overdrawn by $19,000,000.

U. S. CONSUL AT SHANGHAI, THRU LIPS OF CAPITALIST INTERESTS, TELLS HOW SHANGHAI STRIKE GROWS

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Details of the growth of the strike against foreign mill owners and foreign intimidation in Shanghai, as conducted by Chinese students, are given by the state department in a summary of cabled reports from Consul General Cunningham dated June 3.

On June 2, following the landing of American and Italian forces to "protect" public utilities, the students held numerous meetings which adopted "violent" resolutions such as:

1. That police officers (who had ordered the fatal volleys fired into the strikers' ranks) must be "humiliated and intimidated."
2. Groups of men should be sent to "create disturbances."
3. Traffic should be interrupted.
4. Delivery of mail and telegrams should be prevented.
5. Infliction of damage upon property of "persons opposed to the students."
6. Measures be taken to cut off supplies of provisions and materials used for industrial and business purposes.
7. Creation of disturbances at various residences.
8. Boycott of foreign bankers to be rigidly enforced.
9. That all schools in Shanghai be requested to join the general strike.

Between the lines of this report can be seen a dominant class view of the revolt of the Chinese against foreign mastery, and a fear that the revolt will sweep over China's 400,000,000 people to a degree that may change the status of foreigners in all China henceforth.

"Handbills," says Cunningham, "were circulated denouncing foreigners for murdering Chinese and advocating extension of the strike to the public utilities and to workmen who are indispensable to foreigners." This latter group included all chauffeurs, cooks, clerks, policemen and detectives.

"Some Chinese," he adds, "including officials, make proposterous demands for the release of all Chinese arrested, punishment of policemen and indemnity to families" (of the strikers and students shot down in the streets).

The Washington Post warns the Coolidge administration to be very circumspect in the face of the Chinese uprising, and to limit its use of armed force to the guarding of American life and property.

its previous arrogant attitude, by saying that it "withholds judgement" of the Shanghai uprising until a commission of foreign legation secretaries report on the situation. The commission is to leave Peking for Shanghai Monday. E. G. Greene will represent the United States. The present note was in response to the second protest of the Chinese foreign office.

Chinese students in many cities are joining in sympathetic demonstrations in behalf of the Shanghai strikers.

The Shanghai Teachers' Union has addressed a protest to the diplomatic corps at Peking, sending it thru Soviet Ambassador Leo Karakhan, against the murders of Chinese students by the foreign troops. The Soviet ambassador is formally the head of the diplomatic corps, but the other foreign representatives ignore him, take separate action and are not expected to reply to him in the matter of the protest. However, his strength with the Chinese teachers is indicated by their action.

Shanghai Still an Armed Camp

SHANGHAI, China, June 7.—Fully 250,000 Chinese workers are still on strike and the situation as regards food in the foreign settlement is getting worse. Little is obtainable there except flour and canned goods, fresh meats and vegetables having been entirely shut off by the strikers.

The town hall has been turned into a food supply station and is under heavy guard. The foreign population is taking care of its own needs from the remaining food, leaving the 750,000 Chinese living in the foreign settlement to shift for themselves or go outside, to the Chinese controlled territory for supplies.

The Kuomintang party has called for a general strike and boycott against British goods. The American marines, with fixed bayonets still are occupying the Kuomintang party's school, known as the people's college, under the excuse that they are ousting "red influences."

The Soviet Consul General, E. Osarnin, denies that the Soviet government is responsible for the riots. In a written statement he declares statements by other foreign interests as "nothing else but prevarication aiming to discredit the Soviet government. The consulate," he says, "has no connection with the strike, nor does it give instruction to anybody regarding the same."

Soviet Consul Issues Denial of Lies

Meanwhile boycotts and strikes against foreign interests are spreading up the Yangtsze valley. At Chinkiang, above Shanghai on the river, rioters stormed the British municipal building and burned the furniture.

Chinese Raid British Concession

The American gunboats Penguin and Paul Jones are being ordered to Chinkiang by Rear Admiral McVey. The British warship Woodlark is due to arrive there Monday. The rioters tore down the British flag over the building in the concession.

In Nanking, capital of Kiangsu province, the shops are closed, the markets refuse to sell anything to foreigners and the Chinese workers employed by American and other foreign firms are on strike.

An additional 400 American marines are being landed today at Shanghai.

ENGDAHL ARRESTED IN PARTY DRIVE FOR COMMUNIST OPEN AIR MEETINGS

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, was arrested Saturday night in the renewal of the drive of the Workers (Communist) Party to hold the corner at W. North Ave. and Orchard St., for party open air meetings. Engdahl was locked up at the Hudson Ave. police station but released on bail furnished by Thurber Lewis, representing the Labor Defense Council. The case will come up this morning in the Chicago Ave. police station. A jury trial will be demanded. This and other cases, involving the arrests of other comrades, will come up for final disposal on June 10, with the Communists fighting to declare the city ordinance demanding permits for open air meetings unconstitutional. Open air meetings in other sections of Chicago Saturday night were not interfered with.

ROUSE HAS ROUGH RACE IN BIGGEST PRINTERS' UNION

3000 Votes for the Left Wing Program

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

The dictatorship of Leon the First is crumbling. This is the outstanding and significant fact resulting from the recent election of Typographical Union N. 6, of New York.

Leon Rouse, the president of Big Six, had, for the past ten years, ruled without serious rivalry the affairs of this big and important organization. It is particularly significant that an opponent who with only a few short weeks of preparatory campaign rolled up almost 3,000 votes as against the approximate 5,000 votes of Rouse.

Darcy Milliken, the candidate for president against Rouse represents the anti-thesis of the policies that Rouse, for the past ten years, has been fastening upon Big Six. Rouse with his high-handed and dictatorial methods has almost completely abolished every last vestige of democratic form in Local Union No. 6. Rouse himself has appointed all committees of the union, including the executive committee. Consequently, this machine built by Rouse is fighting savagely to prevent its destruction.

Rouse Sacrifices Rank and File.

Rouse's attitude towards the employers has been one of collaboration and the avoidance, at the expense of the rank and file, of all militant conflicts between the workers and the employers. This high-salaried executive fights only for his own personal aggrandisement. He never fights for the demands of the rank and file.

"Doc" Milliken on the contrary represents the rank and file revolt against Rouse. Milliken is a printer of many long years standing, foremost in the progressive movement, and recognized widely as a leading left winger in the printing industry. He works daily at his trade and in his spare time edits the Industrialist—advocate of amalgamation in the printing trades industry, and Eastern organ of the left wing in the printing trades. The Trade Union Educational League printing trades group has taken a leading part in the campaign.

Milliken's platform, which was distributed thruout the entire New York printing industry, while not a full left wing platform embodies many progressive policies, which if carried out by Big Six, would make it a fighting trade union.

The attempt to displace Rouse, was not merely the effort of one or two indivduals, but was the beginning of a real rank and file movement, led by the class conscious elements, to develop militant policies in the printing trade unions of New York.

Milliken Carries Big Shops.

An analysis of the votes cast for Rouse and Milliken is significant. Milliken carried almost solid the votes of the printers in the big book and job offices of New York. For instance, the printers in the Federal Printing Shop, the biggest book and periodical shop in the United States, voted for Milliken, as did those of McGraw-Hill and others. Milliken carried almost all the newspaper offices. He, for instance, carried the American by 96 votes, which two years ago was carried by Rouse. On the other hand, the shops, which gave Rouse the majority were the small—one, two and three men shops.

This election struggle has laid the foundation for a crystalized left wing movement in the printing trades of New York. The lesson of this struggle is that the rank and file are in open revolt against the class collaboration of Rouse. They are demanding and will not rest, short of a militant leadership, and a policy of struggle against the employers rather than Rouse's policy of collaboration.

Coolidge in Minnesota To Inaugurate New War On Workers and Farmers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, "Silent Cal" Coolidge is in Minnesota trying to make a noise for the republican party.

"But why Minnesota?" the millions will ask. Why all this trouble crossing half the continent to present himself at the so-called Norse-American centennial celebration? Why this long journey in the heat of early June?

• • • •

The reason is not hard to find. It is the same reason that inspired the late Sam Gompers, during his final days as head of the American Federation of Labor, to send his "red baiting" agent, Paul Smith, to Minneapolis, to make war on the Communists and force the expulsion of Communist delegates from the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly.

It is the same reason that inspired Senator Robert M. LaFollette, with the presidential bait dangling alluringly before him, to issue his declaration denouncing the June 17th National Farmer-Labor Conference, at St. Paul, last year.

All united in the war of the capitalist reaction against the efforts of the Minnesota workers and poor farmers, in harmony with labor thruout the land, to build their own class power.

• • • •

Three years ago when Cal Coolidge, then vice-president, tried to peddle some of his New England "open shop" piffle at the Minnesota state fair, the occasion for an annual outpouring of Minnesota worker and farmer masses, he was hooted down. The gathering, tired of his bunk, refused to listen to him, and he had to leave the platform, sticking his typewritten speech in his pocket. That was in the days when the Farmer-Labor movement was on the upgrade, when the workers and farmers in increased numbers were breaking away from the old political parties of the landlords, the bankers and the food speculators.

Three years ago the republican party of Wall Street was slipping fast in Minnesota. Not even the reactionary elements from the middle class democratic party, that joined it, could help it very much. Magnus Johnson and Hendrik Shipsted went to the United States senate and the governorship was in reach.

But instead of consolidating their class power the workers and farmers allowed their movement to be overrun with political careerists and hungry job hunters. Political deals between the so-called leaders of the farmer-labor movement and the old parties became the order of the day. Class action was fought as "Bolshevist." Treason to the class interests of the workers and farmers was cloaked in the garb of "Americanism" and now Coolidge comes from Washington to Minneapolis to reap the harvest, and with him comes Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, the corporation lawyer, who was defeated by Johnson as the Farmer-Labor candidate. For him it is a triumphant return.

• • • •

This "united front" against labor finds its symbol in the dirigible "Los Angeles," sent all the way from Lakehurst, N. J., to take part in the ceremonies at Minneapolis today. This giant weapon of American militarism for the oppression of labor at home, for the subjugation of Wall Street's colonial slaves, and for making war on rising Workers' Rule, as in the Union of Soviet Republics, or the aspiring revolutionary movement in China, becomes a spectacular feature of the "Back to Wall Street" drive.

• • • •

On the Coolidge reception committee will be Mayor Leach, supported in his victorious race for re-election by the Van Lear-Harthill "socialists." Leach was an ardent supporter of Coolidge's campaign last year, that helped put a republican standpatter in the governor's chair in the statehouse. What a spectacle, therefore, today! From the greatest capitalists to the pinkest "socialists," they all kneel today to do obeisance to the strikebreaker president.

• • • •

Alone the Communists call to the workers and poor farmers to enlist on labor's side of the class struggle to break the power of the republican party—of capitalism itself—in the state of Minnesota. Against the republican party of Wall Street, against the democratic party of the well-to-do farmers, the little bankers and small businessmen, against the betrayers who parade as LaFolletteites and "socialists," against all these the Communist inspired masses are called to struggle.

Coolidge's visit to Minnesota today must mark the drawing of the class lines more clearly, the beginning of greater struggles for the robbed and the oppressed, in the cities and on the land.

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

of course, the inevitable Soviet gold and "tons of Bolshevik propaganda." When the thing blows over, those same lying correspondents will write books a la Sir Philip Gibbs, entitled, "Now it can be told." Gibbs was knighted for lying for the allies during the war. He is now making money telling the truth about the same events. Had he told the truth during the war, he would be beheaded instead of knighted.

THOSE who are reading General Bullard's war memoirs could do worse with their time. The general is a typical militarist of the fascist type. Putting a bullet into one of his own soldiers does not bother him any more than treating the enemy to a dose of lead. Several American soldiers were executed during the war for infractions of discipline he tells us. But more British were shot. The notorious "Hard-boiled" Smith deserves the highest praise, declares Bullard, but when Smith was being made the scapegoat for his crimes of the high army authorities Bullard kept his mouth shut.

ONE thing you will learn from Bullard's story and that is the lack of heroism about a capitalist war. Desperate men drugged with liquor were sent forward to fight men they never saw before for a cause that meant nothing to them. They went forward as condemned men walk to the gallows, some nervous; others with resignation. There was little of the bunk we see in the moving picthures to be observed in the trenches. Bullard throws much needed light on the condition of the French armies in 1917 and 1918.

• • •

IT is quite evident that the allies were beaten to a frazzle in 1917 and 1918 and came within an inch of being decisively defeated even with the addition of the American forces. While the fake peace terms of the hypocrite Wilson were a factor in destroying the German morale the real cause of the German military debacle was the Russian revolution. It was the propaganda of Lenin and not the propaganda of Wilson that demoralized the great Germany military machine on the western front.

COOLIDGE TRIES OUT MINNESOTA IN NEW SPEECH

Howled Down by Workers and Farmers in 1922

By LAURENCE TODD,

WASHINGTON, — (FP) — Three years after he received, at the Minnesota state fair grounds, the most humiliating rebuff ever given a vice-president of the United States by a great gathering of voters, Calvin Coolidge has gone back to Minneapolis to deliver a speech. He hopes to get a reception that will seem to be an ovation, and thereby put the stamp of approval—even in Minnesota—on his achievements as a political agent of super-finance and federated big business. Incidentally, he hopes to kill off the insurgent movement in the nortwest.

How bitter must be his recollection of that disastrous day when he ruined the Old Guard's chances of returning Kellogg to the senate is indicated by the fact that he has since made Kellogg ambassador and secretary of state, tho the Minnesota Old Guard has never forgiven him for their discomfiture. Last year they sent a Lowden delegation to his renomination convention at Cleveland.

Gets An Awful Jolt

Twenty thousand Minnesotas were packed into and in front of the grandstand on that afternoon when Calvin Coolidge, the "simple farmer boy," vice-president of the nation, was introduced to the Minnesota farmers. For 40 minutes they listened silently to his reading of a speech which in substanc was the same as the advice which drove the North Dakota farmers to organise the non-partisan league.

He told them that they could solve all their problems of deflaction and bankruptcy by going home and going to work. Then some one of his harsher phrases was met by a round of hand-clapping. Coolidge looked pleased. The clapping continued, and spread out into the crowd. He looked more pleased. Then it spread farther, and slowly Coolidge realized that it was a steady, metholical, disapproving clap-clap-clap-clap a deadly counting out process, in which 20,000 men and women had joined as tho by common inspiration. It kept up, five minutes, ten, twenty, until Coolidge abandoned his place, trembling with mortification, and left the grounds. Next morning the Associated Press and the republican papers tried to psycho-analyse the crowd, as a preliminary to breaking the news that the vice-president had been driven from the rostrum by a tremendous mass-rejection.

Just Like British Prince

The nearest approach to this treatment given Coolidge, found in modern fiction, is probably that description given, by D. H. Lawrence in "Kangaroo," of the terrible "counting-down" of the British prince by the infuriated Australian troops at the Palestine front during the war. Before the final, ex-communicating "ten" had been reached by the shouting lines of veterans, the prince rushed forward, pleading pardon. Coolidge simply took the count and disappeared from Minnesota.

First principles of machine politics require that the Old Guard fill the president's audience, this time, with thousands of trusty shouters who will toss hats in air and yell themselves hoarse after each paragraph, and then tiy to get near enough to shake the hand that signed the appointments of Kellogg and Humphrey and other anti-farmer stalwarts. And since Norwegian settlement of America is being celebrated, Coolidge will presumably pay tribute to the late Knute Nelson, faithful servitor of the steel trust.

Steel Trust Snaps Unemployment Whip

MONESSEN, Pa.—The steel trust is taking good advantage of the unemployment situation here. While thousands of miners are idle in this district the steel trust is getting very particular with the men, and is making them to do a great deal more than they had to do this time last year. The tin mill here, for instance, is getting men to do a great deal of little things that they did not have to do before. This week they sent a man home for a week because he would not do the "little things" they wanted him to do.

There is something lacking with the workers in this town, or they would put up a fight as did the workers in the McKeesport tin mill, which went on strike and abolished the "little things' they had to do.

If it can be done at McKeesport, it can be done here.

Labor Disorganized and Living Standard Low

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

A vast population forced by caste to adjust itself to an extremely low standard of living is revealed by the United States bureau of agricultural economics in a report on the cost of living among colored farm families in the south. The report shows that when the cost of living of the average white farm family in the same regions was $1,437, colored families were averaging only $612 a year.

Here is maintained a reservoir of cheap labor that employers are increasingly drawing on to undermine white labor standards. Steel workers feel it whenever they attempt to organize. Coal miners know it thru the competition of the unorganized southern mine fields. Northern textile workers are feeling it indirectly in their inability to maintain standards and compete with southern mills paying much lower wages.

Study Covers Three States

The study covers colored and white farm families in Kentucky, Tennessee and Texas during the year 1919. The families fell into 3 groups, owners, tenants and croppers. The last group are farmers that take a share of the crop in return for their work.

The cost of living for colored families owning their farms was found to average $682 for the year, contrasting with $1,635 for white families in the same class. For colored farm tenants the cost was $673 and far white tenants $1,378. Croppers' living costs averaged $536 for colored families and $947 for white.

The bureau shows the average expenditures of colored and white families as follows:

Average Family exp. for 1919	Colored Farmers	White Farmers
Food	$327	$632
Clothing	107	255
Rent	41	140
Furnishings	5	29
Health	25	67
Advancement	28	84
Personal	9	17
Insurance	14	37
Miscellaneous	56	276
Total	$612	$1,437

The national industrial conference board, an open shop employer organization, determined the minimum cost of living for a textile worker's family at this time to be $1,386 and, on a slightly more liberal standard, $1,658. The food item alone in the minimum textile budget was $601.

Expenditures for food by the southern farm families averaged as low as $284 for colored croppers compared with $500 for white croppers. As these expenditures include not only purchased food but the market value of all food produced on the farm for home consumption it is apparent that the colored families are dangerously restricted in the important item of diet. At that they were spending more than half their entire budget for food.

The bureau's figures show the contrast between the living standards of actual families. But they imply an issue which labor cannot dodge—the inevitable sapping of higher living standards of the worker by the lower.

Pick Leahy as Wheeler Prosecutor.

WASHINGTON, June 7.— W. E. Leahy, who was special prosecutor in the Nicky Arnstein case, has been employed by Attorney Gen. Sargent to assist in the prosecution of Senator Wheeler in Washington. Eleven other lawyers have been trying to convict LaFollette's recent running-mate.

NATIONAL DEMOCRAT "A MYSTERY"

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Mystery deepens and thickens around the National Democrat, weekly organ of the Democratic national committee, published in Washington by a recent "lockout" for the ku klux klan, and edited by Oscar Underwood's late campaign publicity manager. Oscar is anti-klan.

Elrod, the newspaper man, sent here from Indiana when Stevenson was running the klan and the republican machine in that state two years ago, is publishing the National Democrat. He says he has cut off his klan connection. Last summer he was klan scout at the republican and democratic national conventions. The Democrat is printed at the same shop where a klanish weekly is printed.

Before Elrod took hold, Col. Winfield Jones, a veteran republican publicity man and press correspondent for G. O. P. papers, controlled the National Democrat for a time.

ITALIAN BAKERS MAKE PROGRESS IN BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Wages Are Determined by Volume of Work

NEW YORK—(FP) — The Italian bakery workers of Brooklyn, Local 12, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, are following the successful example of their brothers in Newark and are gaining better conditions, including an average $5 weekly wage increase. Wages are now determined by the volume of work performed: first hand gets $37 and second hand $32 for a weekly production of 4,000 loaves figured at 14 batches. If more batches are required for the same number of loaves $1 a batch extra must be paid. For 5,000 loaves in 19 batches, first baker gets $45 and second, $40. For 6,000 loaves from 19 batches first baker gets $50, second $45.

Above 6,000 loaves first baker is paid 70 cents and second 60 cents per hundred loaves. For setting sponge 50 cents, if worker is called from home, or 25 cents if he is in the shop. Six days constitute the week's work and work must be done without interruption during the day. The closed shop is to be enforced and the union bread label used. A new employing bakers' association has already agreed to the union demands.

The fight of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Bakery Local No. 3 against Bohack bakeries continues. The chain store concern failed to get an injunction restraining the union from its organization work.

The New York Hotel and Restaurant Workers' branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers is conducting a vigorous organization campaign.

TO EXPLOIT THE SOVIET COPPER AND GOLD FIELD

MOSCOW, —(By Mail)—An important contract was concluded yesterday when Piatakoff, president of the Supreme Concessions Committee, in behalf of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Messrs. Brown and Gwinn, representatives of the Lena Gold Fields company, signed a preliminary agreement providing for the exploitation by the company of the Lena gold enterprises, the Altai red metal and the Uran copper and iron ores in the Syssersk and Rejinsk regions.

The contract grants a three months' term for the ratification of the preliminary agreement by the company, whereafter the Soviet government has another month for ratification. The terms are fifty year for the Ural and thirty for the Lena concession.

GERMANY HOUSING WORKERS IN THE WORST HOVELS

Families in Rooms and Even Piano Boxes

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, June 5.—Finding living quarters for her people is one of the most serious questions confronting the German nation. Practically every large city tells the same story of thousands living in attics or cellars; often several families in one room. The same applies in the villages. Everywhere young couples who desire to marry cannot do so because there is no place for them to live. Some are fortunate enuogh to rent a garden plot from the city and erect a piano-box shack but these are few, comparatively speaking.

During the war years there was no building and since, with the treaty of Versailles and the inflation period, the little that has been done is a drop in a bucket. Private capital found richer pickings in industrial enterprises and the funds of savings societies and co-operatives have been largely swept away. The government has been too busy looking out for the big employers and speculators to pay attention to the people. So they crowd in on each other until the laws of health and decency have been thrown to the winds.

The housing department of Berlin reports that while 258,175 dwellings were required in 1924 only 25,769 were available. Plans call for the construction in 1925 of 10,000 new dwellings, the city aiding private and co-operative capital and in most cases owing the location. To meet the demand there should be at least 250,000 new dwellings but this is out of the question. I saw one of these new apartment blocks of 300 dwellings. Each apartment contains two rooms and a kitchen with common bathroom for several apartments. The rent will be $15 per month with 20 per cent additional for water, gas, light and taxes. With the average workers' wage about $24 a month only a small percentage can take advantage of the new accommodations. The high rental is explained probably by the high cost of building material, since labor is cheap and the site belongs to the city. Interest rates for money run from 8 to 10 per cent.

In all municipalities dwellings are rationed according to the list of applicants. People in better circumstances in apartments are limited in the number of rooms they may use, but this does not reach the owners of mansions and the very wealthy. Rents are limited to a 76 per cent increase over pre-war. In Leipsic registrants will have to wait four and five years. In the meantime they are fortunate to get a furnished room from $10 to $12 a month, with linen, light, gas and heat extra. In Dresden only 300 apartments were found last year as against calls for 15,000.

San Francisco Cooks and Waiters Stage a Neat Little Strike

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7—The entire staff of waiters at the fashionable St. Francis hotel, 100 strong, walked out for 24 hours because their union agent was discharged. Guests had to line up at the kitchen and wait on themselves. The waiters returned next day when the discharged man was reinstated.

The Cooks' Union has a new agreement with the St. Francis and the Palace, San Francisco's two most exclusive hotels. It provides for a minimum wage of $30 instead of $25 for cook's helpers, and $55 instead of $45 for cooks. The average wage increase is $4 a week. The agreement improves working conditions, runs for two years and provides for monthly conferences between the employers and the union.

Coast Guards Quit Service.

NEW YORK, June 7.—A number of coast guardsmen employed on Staton Island are planning to leave the service at the end of their enlistment, charging that they have not had enough shore leave during the drive against rum runners. After 21 days at sea, they claim, they had only 48 hours shore leave. They say that their lives are too much in danger from firing by machine guns on rum ships. Officials are whispering that the men have been won over to the bootleggers, where conditions may not be better but returns are greater. The men deny this.

SPRINGFIELD BOARD OF COMMERCE PAID EXPENSES OF EX-SOLDIERS CONVENTION, BUT NOT ENOUGH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 5.—The annual convention of the Disabled Veterans Association was wondering today how and why it had come to Springfield.

Representative Thomas L. Fekete, Jr., of East St. Louis, member of the Illinois legislature, charged on the floor of the house that Springfield "was not fulfilling her promises to the veterans after sending representatives of the chamber of commerce personally to invite various posts to the capital city."

He specifically cited a visit al-leged to have been made to the Peoria Post, in which " a representative of the Springfield chamber of commerce promised a great entertainment for the convention."

C. E. Jenks, manager of the local chamber, declared his organization knew nothing of the convention until Commander Trabank, of the Springfield Post, came to him for financial assistance. Even Trabank, he said, did not know who invited the veterans.

Jenks said he had advanced what pecuniary assistance the chamber of commerce could give and that he was "very glad" the veterans had come here, but that if the entertainment was less than promised he did not want to be held accountable.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 7.—Weavers of Salt's Textile Manufacturing Co. are striking against the introduction of the unit system of productioon in the plant. The workers assert that their work has been irregular enough already and the new system has proven equal to a wage cut of one-half. The company manufactures velvets and plushes, employing 700 workers.

Fear Mexican Treaty Raises Bars Against Spokesmen of Labor

WASHINGTON,—(FP)—Mystery in official quarters concerning the terms of the frontier-regulation treaty which was discussed in the joint meeting of Mexican and American government officials at El Paso, May 15-25, has raised suspicions that a new scheme of secret espionage upon persons moving to and from Mexico is involved in the plan proposed by the Washington spokesmen. The proposed treaty, which will not be made public until the senate foreign relations committee shall have looked it over in the event that the Mexican government accepts it, will cover immigration, smuggling of narcotics, liquor, merchandize and aliens, and disputes concerning fisheries and diplomatic procedure.

In the American delegation were L. C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury; H. S. Creighton, customs agent in San Francisco, W. R. Vallance, assistant solicitor of the state department; L. G. Nutt, chief of the narcotics division; F. J. Henning, former assistant secretary of labor; H. R. Gamble, federal attorney, and Consuls Merrill and Dye. The joint report has still to be written up as a treaty and signed by the two governments' foreign offices before it goes to the respective senates for approval.

If there is in the proposed treaty a scheme of espionage that will serve to keep labor's spokesmen from crossing the border, or which leads to their being "tagged" for their industrial views, that clause will be fought in the American senate and in the Mexican congress.

Machinery to Put Typists on List of the Unemployed

NEW YORK June 7—The photostat machine, or photographic method of reproducing records, will put an end to typists' copying of records, Annie Mathews, registrar of New York county, announces after an investigation. Application to the board of estimate for immediate purchase of a photostat machine is being made.

Miss Mathews estimates that $500,000 will be saved by general use of the machine in place of hand typists. The rate for copies of documents is now 15 cents per 100 words. The register of New York paid $54,000 last year for recording work.

Print paper on which photographic records would not fade had to be guaranteed before photostat could succeed, says Miss Mathews. She claims that the recording offices of Cook County, Illinois, Chicago's county, are using photostat.

GREED OF COAL BARONS CAUSES UNEMPLOYMENT, WASTE AND ALL MISERY IN BLACK DIAMOND FIELDS

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The social waste accompanying development of basic industry for private profit instead of public service is revealed in a study of the Illinois coal situation by U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics Ethelbert Stewart. He shows that 84 Illinois mines employing 49,206 workers 300 days a year could produce 7,000,000 tons more coal than was actually produced by 338 mines employing 95,499 miners an average of 149 days.

Stewart's analysis is based on statistics of the Illinois department of mines for the year ended June 30, 1924. He says the bituminous coal situation in Illinois may be taken as a fair picture of the industry as a whole.

Waste By Bosses

"This means," he says, "that 254 of the 338 principal mines in the state represent an unnecessary expenditure of money so far as the capital invested in the mines themselves is concerned; that they simply prevent the adequate number of mines from producing an adequate amount of coal on a reasonably efficient basis; that the railroads must distribute cars to 254 unnecessary mines in a single state. It means that the industry wastes not only the money actually invested but the time and energy of the officials and clerical help that must be on hand the year round even when not producing unnecessary coal."

The average number of employes, number of days worked per employ, average daily production per employe and number of men necessary to secure the same production on a 300-day basis for the 338 mines, classified according to tonnage, was:

Illinois Mines producing	Number actually employed	Average days worked	Tons per man-day produced	Employes required on 300-day bas.
Under 10,000 tons	834	46	2.9	127
10,000 to 24,999	2,437	74	3.5	603
25,000 to 49,999	4,054	85	3.6	1,147
50,000 to 99,999	10,690	98	4.0	3,502
100,000 to 149,999	9,268	129	4.8	3,991
150,000 to 199,999	5,081	152	5.0	2,574
200,000 to 249,999	7,267	150	4.5	3,642
250,000 to 299,999	6,662	147	4.6	3,269

500,000 to 599,999	9,773	159	5.6	5,171
600,000 to 699,999	3,042	216	4.9	2,186
700,000 to 799,999	5,020	200	5.1	3,417
800,000 to 899,999	3,635	198	6.0	2,394
900,000 and over	6,021	189	5.5	3,786

The 84 mines producing 300,000 or more tons in the year ended June 30, 1924, employed more than half of all the miners and produced nearly two-thirds of the 70,328,322 tons of coal. Operated steadily on a 300-day basis they would have produced 77,743,800 tons in the year.

BOSS IS HARDBOILED FIGHTING WORKERS BUT AN EASY MARK FOR HIS FELLOW SKINFLINTS

By CARL HAESSLER

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

He may be hardboiled and flintshelled toward the worker but he's P. T. Barnum's own easy mark when it comes to extending credit to the confidence men in his own line. So he is putting up $2,000,000 to protect himself against the pirates and buzzards of his own kind. He has ponied up $108,500 in Chicago alone.

"He" is the collective American business man and financier. He has gathered together one million from his clan in 12 American cities and put it at the disposal of the National Association of Credit men. The credit men will employ superdetectives, will organise card index files of credit criminals and patiently teach the shrewd American business man how to take care of his purse where the armor is soft and full of blowholes. Another million will be raised outside the 12 cities already touched.

The American institute of accountants, the premier society in its field in the country, estimates that $160,000,000 to $400,000,000 is lost annually by reason of credit frauds.

From the investigations of the institute it seems that while the American employer has to be virtually blasted or dynamited into giving his workers a raise of a cent or two an hour, this same skinflint will extend almost unlimited credit to the first greengoods man posing as a fellow exploiter who comes along.

It isn't even necessary to come along. The institute cites instances where unknowns have ordered large consignments of goods by wire or credit and have obtained the stuff, only to sell it and skipp before the collector could make an appearance.

But the boob business man, and they are all boobs in the credit line, need not worry. The hundreds of millions lost in credit frauds each year are, as the American institute of accountants points out, "ultimately borne by the consuming public." So are the $2,000,000 raised by the boobs to fight their fellow commercial bandits.

Bay District of San Francisco, Cal., Picnics on June 21

SAN JOSE, Cal., June 7.— Local San Jose, Workers Party, will give a picnic Sunday, June 21, at Congress Springs, near San Jose, (a mile or so from Saratoga). This is a beautiful and well-known park. The English Local at Palo Alto and the South Slav local at Mountain View will participate, also the Mexican local at Redwood City, without doubt. Comrades with automobiles from the whole Bay District should load up to the gun wales with their friends and drive over. Persons arriving in automobiles are charged 25 cents for entering the park. Admission is free to those who patronize the electric cafs from San Jose or elsewhere.

Speech making or other program features have not been promised, but doubtless there will be some surprises in this line. If the Young Workers League of San Francisco and Oakland should decide to attend with their international chorus and other musical and dramatic features there will be entertainment for all. And who knows but District Organizer Tom Lewis and other party spell binders may not decide to attend. We are making no promises, but why not? Let's all go! Come over Santa Cruz and Felton. That's a beautiful drive. Come up Watsonville and Morgan Hill and towns down that way. Get acquainted with San Jose. Come down San Francisco, Cotati, Santa Rosa, Napa, Richmond, Berkeley, Oakland, Alameda, Hayward, Niles. It's not so impossible. If you have no auto, just hike. Many machines have room for one more, even on Sunday. Mother Bloor is hiking somewhere in the sultry east. Keep her company. We'll tell them we had the time of our lives. Let's show them how a little publicity in the DAILY WORKER will get out a crowd.

Local President Ask Brindell Be Jailed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, June 7.—An affiday by Charles Johnson, present preside of Local 1456, Dock and Pier Carpe ters' union, sent by Samuel Unte meyer to the New York state pare board formally charges Robert Brindell, former president of t union, with violation of the terms his parole in seeking to regain h hold on New York building activiti

Johnson relates how Brindell a tempted to persuade Johnston into a cepting Brindell's dictation and te subsequent threats to use "stro arm methods" when Johnson refuse the offer to make money by followi Brindell's methods. ITALIAN RADICAL PRESS HAS HARD WORK TO LIVE

Confiscations and Raids Frequent

By CARL BRANNIN.

MILAN, Italy—(FP)—Maintaining a radical newspaper may seem a hard job in the United States but the problem is simple compared to what the Italian workers are up against under the rule of Mussolini. Here the problem is not simply to get out the paper and pay the bills but, in addition, to survive the shock which comes two or more times a week of having entire editions of a good many thousand copies confiscated by the local fascisti prefect as "contrary to the public health and order of the state."

Sometimes a paper will be undisturbed in Milan and the copies sent to a neighboring city will be suppressed by that prefect. This policy has been in active force since early in January and applies to all anti-fascist papers. The Communist and Socialist press are the hardest hit since their financial support is the most slender.

"In spite of all these and other obstacles," says Malatesta, one of the editors of Unita, the Communist daily, "we are not at all discouraged. Every day indicates a growth in Communist sentiment among the workers and peasants. We are unable to crystalize this into organized form because we can hold no meetings nor send out organizers. But money is coming in to meet our extra expenses to the amount of 1,200 lira ($48) a day and we manage to get along."

Thus far, according to Malatesta, there has been no interference with the office of the paper. No editors have been arrested and there has been no smashing of machinery (as happened in Florence and Pisa) but this may take place at any time. Started a year ago, the paper now has a circulation of 40,000 daily. Besides, there are seven or eight regional Communist weekly papers, a special paper for women workers, one for young workers, one for the peasants and Il Syndicato Rosso, edited by Serrati for labor affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions.

At the headquarters of Avanti the same story was recounted. It was stated that every confiscation of an issue meant a total loss of from $400 to $600. Since last June the paper has been suppressed 58 times. Several years ago, before the split in the Socialist party, Avanti was the recognized voice of the class conscious worker of Italy with a large circulation. Avanti is now controlled by the Maximalist Socialists (Centrists). Its circulation is stated to be 100,000 daily. Because of its old tradition of revolutionary socialism it is still bought by many workers who also buy Unita.

Giusticia, the daily of the Reformist Socialists, has the same story to tell of suppression. It prints 60,000 daily now and is read by the bourgeois-liberal, as well as a certain strata of the working class.

Brandeis Refuses to Use Power on Supreme Court to Aid Labor

WASHINGTON, (FP).—California's minimum wage law for women, as well as that of Arizona which has been brought before the federal supreme court on an appeal, is in danger. The court has permitted W. H. Pillsbury, a San Francisco lawyer, on behalf of the Industrial Welfare Commission of California, to take part in defending the Arizona statute because the law in the two neighboring states has the same foundation. That foundation is undetermined by the decision of last year, nullifying the law in the District of Columbia.

Pillsbury, in his brief, takes the line pursued years ago in like cases by Brandeis, now a member of the court. He points to the discussion, deliberation, legislation and administration in many parts of the world, in eight provinces of Canada, and in the United States, to prove that the people—supposed to be sovereign—want this kind of law and have insisted upon it. He appeals from legal and constitutional hair-splitting to common honesty and humanity toward working women.

Justice Brandeis will take no part in the decision of the issue because he was counsel in defense of the Oregon minimum wage law which was upheld years ago. Four of the remaining justices—Southerland, McReynolds, Butler and Vandevanter, helped to kill the District of Columbia law. Stone is a new member. Taft, Holmes and Sanford upheld the district legislation to safeguard a minimum wage for women in industry.

BUILD ILLINOIS ROADS LIKE THE ROMANS ONCE DID

That Is to Say, with Slave Labor

By TOM TIPPETT

HILLSBORO, Ill., June 7.— Truck drivers on the hardroad construction between Irving and Hillsboro, Ill., have forced a 20 per cent increase in wages. The raise cost a few of the truck men their jobs and was the result of a one day strike. The trucks are owned and kept up by the drivers who are paid on a piece-work basis for hauling gravel and cement from railroad cars to the roadbed. The price paid, before the strike, was 30c for the first mile and 20c for each additional mile per two ton load.

The job has been contracted by the state of Illinois to Smith Bros. Contracting Co. of Dallas, Tex. There are state inspectors to see that the proper amount of cement is put into the road but the contract does not stipulate labor conditions. Building hard roads is mean work. The cement dust necessitates goggles and the men at work in the cars wear a tin contraption over their mouths like a gas mask to protect their lungs. Nearly all the men have to race against huge machines. Two workers have been carried off the job, over-heated from shoveling for the mixer that mixes concrete by gas power.

Much of the preliminary work on the roadbed is done with teams. Men who own their teams are hired at 50c an hour for two horses and a man, out of which feed must be bought for the animals. The common laborer wage is 35c an hour which is also the rate paid to men who unload cement as well as the concrete handlers who lay the roadbed. Ten hours is supposed to be the length of the work day, but many of the shifts work 12 and 14 hours. And there are some that work 16-hour shifts. All but the concrete men work a 7-day week.

There is much dissatisfaction among the laborers but most of them have been unemployed for months and those who accept the work need it so badly that agitation is done with caution. The old Roman roads could hardly have been laid under worse labor conditions.

Movie Magnates Ask Better Service from U. S.

Charging that the interests abroad of the American movie magnates are not adequately "protected" against discriminatory import legislation, Senator Smoot proposes that a special motion picture bureau be added to the U. S. department of commerce. Thus if any attempt is made to cover some Kinglet's harem costs by a tax on canned melodrama the navy might be more quickly mobilized to insure the freedom of the films. And the consular business agents will be more effectively directed in pushing the sale of reel-life Tong wars into the theaters of China.

The proposal had an immediate echo in other countries, reports the Film Trade Journal, and now "German producers are demanding protection because they see in the American proposal a move aginst German films."

Both American and German film capitalists, like all others of their class, have no illusions as to what their government is for. But how they squawk when the Russian working class learn the same lesson—and apply it!

The embalmers of Chicago are being organized, it is reported. The embalmers who are now getting $30 to $35 per week are said to be demanding higher wages.

The Bolshevization of Our Party Press

VI. Factory Newspapers, Worker Correspondents, and the Communist Party Press.

THE worker correspondent may be counted among the best gauges of whether a Communist newspaper is in real organizatory contact with the masses or not.

"It is a complete misapprehension to suppose that precisely the literates, and almost exclusively the literates (in the professional sense of the word) are capable of successful work upon a newspaper. The reverse is the case; the newspaper does not awaken to real life or capacity for continued life until 500 or 5,000 non-literates add their contributions to the work of five leading and permanently active literates." (Lenin: "How our newspapers are to be made into real organs of the labor movement?")

But it would be an equally grave error to limit the worker correspondents to members of the party. In this respect there is a lack of clearness among the sections of the C. I. Thus for instance, the resolution passed by the conference of the worker correspondents of the Roten Fahne contains no word about inducing non-party worker correspondents to contribute to the Roten Fahne.

It is understandable that during the preliminary phase of development of the young worker correspondents' movement the worker correspondents are active members of the Communist Party for the most part. But the worker correspondents' movement would, from the very commencement sever itself from its chief sphere of utility were it not to aim at inducing precisely the unorganized workers to take part in the movement. The non-partisan worker should and must be given the opportunity of expressing his wishes in the Communist press, and even of bringing any complaints which he may have against the Communist Party. The worker correspondents already contributing to our press should regard it as one of their most important tasks not only to write themselves, but to urge non-partisan fellow workers, and acquaintances sympathising with the Communist Party, to become correspondents.

THE Communist daily press has an important and indispensable task before it in the organization and discussion of the factory newspapers. The factory newspapers are among the most hopeful signs of proletarian activity and initiative. They represent one of those new forms of revolutionary agitation to which the Communist Parties must accord the greatest attention and support at precisely the present juncture. It may be safely maintained that hitherto the factory nucleus newspapers have been carried on without any great measure of support from their big brother, the daily press. An organizatory report issued by the German section of the C. I. speaks as follows of the factory nuclei newspapers:

"Here the spell has been broken. The example given by the numerous factory newspapers which has appeared has broken down all resistance. As soon as the fears of the factory councils have been overcome, we shall succeed in the course of time in providing every large undertaking in Germany with its own newspaper."

THERE is however nothing to be found in the whole report as to whether and how the Communist press is aiding the factory nuclei newspapers. The supply of material and technical assistance is not sufficient. An uninterrupted organizatory contact must be maintained between the editorial staffs of the Communist daily press and the worker editors of the factory newspapers of the corresponding town or district. The mutual exchange of experiences, the mutual discussion of the best methods of agitation and their effect upon the working class, will open out to both new and direct paths to the heart of the great masses.

And this is the essential and decisive factor in the slogan of "Bolshevization of the press." Closer contact with the masses of the readers!

AMERICAN WORKERS SEND $1,500 TO RELIEF IRISH FAMINE SUFFERERS

The Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee has forwarded the sum of $1,500 to the relief of the famine sufferers in the west of Ireland, according to a statement issued today from the national office of that organization, at 19 South Lincoln Street, Chicago.

"Not only is there terrible distress in the west of Ireland continues the statement" but all over the country thousands of workers are unemployed and the unions are organising demonstrations and demanding that the government provide work at trade union rates or maintenance. The Irish Transport and General Workers Union organizes the unemployed and gives them representation on its executive committees.

"Even the Free State government which has repeatedly denied the famine stories issued by our committee was last week forced to appropriate almost half a million dollars for unemployment relief. This money, however, is given to favorites of the ruling party. Funds raised by the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee will be distributed without regard to political affiliation thru working class channels." All contributions should be sent to The Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 South Lincoln street, Chicago."

The following is a list of contributions received for Irish famine relief from May 1 to May 15:

Labor Member of the Canadian Parliament Nicks Imperial Pride

OTTAWA, Can.—(FP)— A charge of disloyalty thrown across the Canadian house of commons at J. S. Woodsworth, labor member, by the minister of national defence, was promptly retracted when the labor member stood by his guns.

"We have our own song, Britannia Rules the Waves," Woodsworth had said, "and I am not at all sure that it is much preferable to Germany over all. They both exhibit the same spirit, the same desire to dominate."

Challenged by the defense minister, who was formerly in the law service of the British Empire Steel corporation, Woodsworth repeated his statement. Thus challenged the steel trust henchman speedily retired, saying that the second Woodsworth declaration was slightly different.

Communist Resolution on Child Labor Adopted by Croatian Society

TACOMA, Wash., June 7.—The Croatian Benefit Society "Istra" at its last regular meeting had a discussion on child labor in which the vicious capitalistic exploitation of the youth of the working class was emphatically attacked. After the discussion the Workers (Communist) Party resolution on child labor demanding the immediate ratification by the state legislatures of the child labor amendment was unanimously adopted.

The resolution demands full education for children of workers and poor farmers and government support of those children whose parents cannot provide for their support during their period of education.

The Resolution.

It says in part:

RESOLVED, That the trade unions repeal from their constitutions all discriminatory clauses against equal rights in the unions of young workers; also that the admission fees and dues be made lower for young workers to enable them to become members of the unions which will thereby become strengthened in their struggles against the bosses; and be it

FURTHER RESOLVED, To call upon all other working class organizations to unite with us in a common political struggle against child labor exploitation and for full government maintenance of the school children of workers and poor farmers.

Joe Tencech, Secretary.

"Empire Day" in Great Britain Glorifies Greed and Oppression

LONDON, — (FP) — "On Empire day," writes George Lansbury in his Labor Weekly, "many children (and grownup children) will be listening to lectures and speeches, trying to make them believe the empire is something to be proud of. On the contrary it is nothing to be proud of. The Empire is a record of oppression and greed."

Empire day in England roughly corresponds to the Fourth of July in America in quality of the speeches and official propaganda.

Raids High and Mighty

DETROIT,—(FP)—There is much scandal and indignation in Detroit's high places and much mirth in such low places as labor unions. Carey D. Ferguson, collector of the port, raided the steamer Noronic on which 425 Detroit board of commerce members were about to embark on an annual cruise. He confiscated 24 cases of whisky and 126 cases of beer. Ferguson used to be business agent of the Detroit local of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes.

"This is a reflection on what you might call the elite of Detroit," said T. L. Alborell, member of the board of commerce cruise committee.

COMMUNAL LAND HOLDINGS GROW WITH SOVIET AID

Technical Advance Is Slow But Sure

MOSCOW—(FP)—One of the many measures of the Soviet government to aid agriculture is to strengthen the communal or collective farms. Although after the revolution these soviet estates were comparatively flourishing, their number dwindled to about 4,000 with the famine and the advent of the new economic policy. With the improved economic situation the number of these farms is increasing again rapidly. There are now about 20,000 with 1,500,000 members.

The present policy of the government is to draw the whole peasant population into the state agricultural program by embracing them in agricultural cooperation. These collective farms are an important form of soviet agricultural cooperation.

A conference of representatives of the collective farms from all over the Soviet Union in Moscow formulated plans for adapting the Communes to the great technical improvements that must be made. Machinery must be introduced on a larger scale and the cultural level of the members raised.

With the coming of the new economic policy the communes, though admirable attempts at the ideal form of communism, tended to become isolated from the surrounding economic system. The conference recognized that these communes must run on a business-like basis corresponding with the new conditions of open market, currency and exchange and must be self-supporting.

One of the problems is land distribution. Sometimes the lands of these farms are scattered, making efficient communal farming very difficult. The state agricultural organs are to remedy this. These communes still play a dominant role in soviet agriculture, so far as they embrace the most advanced elements of the peasantry. They remain the outposts of Communism in the countryside. More and more poor peasants, unable to till their land for lack of horses or implements, are flocking to them.

Huge Army of Labor Drawn Into the Auto Industry in Michigan

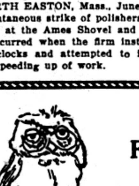
WASHINGTON,—(FP) — Because Michigan is the center of motor vehicle production, significance in present day industrial revolution is attached to a report by the department of commerce on Michigan manufacturers in 1923 as contrasted with those of 1921. Manufacturing establishments whose output during the year was valued at $5,000 or more employed 503,492 wage earners, on the average, in 1923, or an increase of 65.4 percent over the number employed in 1921. Total wage payments in 1923 were $768,659,000, or 83 per cent more than in 1921.

In motor vehicle production, the 84,573 wage earners employed in 1921 increased to 149,296 in 1923, or 76.5 per cent. The value of their production rose from $812,379,000 in 1921 to $1,551,990,000 in 1923—a rise of 91 per cent. In both the number of employes and the value of product, the motor vehicle industry is the most important in the state.

These figures indicate an almost unparallelled growth for a single industry in time of peace, and a vast rearrangement of the lives of breadwinners drawn from other occupations to find jobs in the automobile factories.

Strike For $1 Raise.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 7.— Union plumbers and steamfitters in Scranton are striking for $1 a day wage increase, bringing the scale to $10. About 160 men were out the first day and 35 others were on jobs where employers had settled at the new scale.



FAIRY TALES
For Workers Children

Only a very short while ago—there was no book published in the English language that adequately filled the need for real working class stories for children.

The publication of "Fairy Tales for Workers' Children" not only fills this urgent demand but supplies at the same time a work of real merit.

The author, Herminia Zur Mühlen, is a German writer of children's stories of the very highest order—stories of a distinctly new character. Her work is a definite promise of the new proletarian literature of the future.

The translation by Ida Dailes, brings into bold relief the beauty of these stories, breathing so fully the spirit of the working class.

Besides the many drawings from the original edition, the American publication is enriched by four beautiful full page drawings in two colors and front and back cover designs by Lydia Gibson.

The book is a real children's "story book size" of 9x12 inches—with large, clear type.

It is issued in two editions. To enable every worker's child to own one, the first is bound in "Duroflex" covers—durable, leather-like and very attractive in a rich red color.

ELECTRIC TRUST ALSO HAS EDGE ON CASH RESERVE

With Subsidiaries It Holds Nation in Net

From Niagara to the Gulf of Mexico the distribution of the power on which industry and employment will depend is being rapidly monopolized by the General Electric Co. Recent negotiations for purchase of the Southern Power & Light Co. by Electric Power & Light Co. represent an important step in the unification of this super-power trust.

Electric Power & Light is a subsidiary of Electric Bond & Share Co., a General Electric dummy which in turn controls a series of electric power companies serving territory with a population approaching 10,000,000. The properties include part of the holdings of the Electric Power & Light Co., American Power & Light, National Power & Light, Southeastern Power & Light, American Gas & Electric, Carolina Power & Light, Lehigh Power Securities and Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern. The area served by Southern Power & Light, which is being added to the chain, is bounded by Little Rock, Ark., Memphis, Muscle Shoals and Jackson, Miss.

The Morgan interests behind General Electric are creating a dictatorship over what is coming to be the prime essential of the mechanical age. They are establishing themselves where they can levy a twofold profit, first the profit on the huge quantities of electrical equipment they will manufacture in their role of General Electric and sell to themselves in their role of power combine, and second the operating profit from the sale of power.

General Electric profits for 1924 show how large the manufacturing profit will be. With a record business of $299,251,869 it reported a manufacturing profit of $134,343,331. After adding other income and subtracting depreciation, federal taxes and interest charges there remained $39,235,548 for the stockholders which meant $21.09 a share for the holders of common. General Electric since 1899 has distributed dividends totaling 330 per cent. It is the third largest holder of cash among the country's industrial corporations with $117,713,797 in this account. Ahead of it stand only U. S. Steel and Ford Motor Co.

AGRICULTURE IN SOVIET UNION SHOWS TREMENDOUS ADVANCE SINCE 1922, IN QUALITY AND OUTPUT

MOSCOW, June 7.—The report of the secretary of agriculture of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republics, shows a tremendous improvement in agriculture since 1922. The crops have increased not only in quantity, but have improved in quality as well. Agricultural experiment stations have been founded, and much help was given the drought regions.

Extracts from the report declare:

Progress Since 1922.

Russian agriculture has made a remarkable headway since 1922. The seeded area in 1923-24, in comparison with that of 1922-23, has been increased by 18½ per cent, the number of cattle increased by 17 per cent. A demand for agricultural implements on the part of the peasants has been continually growing. The peasants in all parts of the R. S. F. S. R. are trying to adopt the new methods of cultivation of their lands.

The stabilization of Russian money and the development of industry have played an important part in the progress of agriculture. At the same time, two factors—the lack of horses in 1924 and the drought of 1924 have greatly hindered the development in the agricultural field in accordance with the plans for 1924-25. But notwithstanding these drawbacks, the seeded area will be larger by 3½ million dessiatin than that of 1924.

Quality Improved.

Not only the area seeded has been increased, but also the quality of the cultures has been improved everywhere in R. S. F. S. R. The area seeded with rye was increased by 3.5 per cent; with wheat—by 18 per cent. The following figures afford an interesting comparison in regard to other cultures: the area seeded with potatoes in 1924 was 46.5 per cent of that of 1913; seeded with flax—84 per cent; seeded with hemp—106 per cent; feed grass—127 per cent; seeded with sunflower—179 per cent. These figures show that the agriculture has been quickly reaching the pre-war mark, and in many cases has already passed it.

Crops Better.

The condition of the crops, according to the latest reports of the department of agriculture, is as follows: North region—Crop is fair; no damages. North East region—The winter crops are in fair condition; the North West region—The winter crops are developing nicely, recent rains have noticeably helped the growth of crops. Central region—In the most parts the condition is fair, in some parts—poor. Western region—The rye is in good condition, the wheat—somewhat worse. Blacksoil region—Condition fair. Upper Volga region—Condition fair. Middle Volga region—All over, with exception of a small part, conditions are fair. Lower Volga region—Except Penza Province, the conditions are fair. North Caucasia regon—The condition is fair.

Rotation Crops.

During the last two years, 160,000 farms, with an area of one and one-half million dessiatins, adopted the method of rotation crops.

Experimental Stations.

The department of agriculture, with a view of introducing in the villages newest methods in agriculture, has been continually increasing the number of agricultural experimental stations. In 1923, there were 1,500 of such stations; in 1924, 1,900; in 1925, 2,101 agricultural experimental stations. There were also 1,300 veterinary stations.

The seed fund of the R. S. F. S. R. is expressed in 54,000,000 poods. Out of this fund 32 million poods of seeds were sent to the drought regions. 3,200,000 poods of seeds were distributed for re-seeding the winter crops. Over 10 million poods of selected wheatseeds, 800,000 poods of flax and 73,000 poods were distributed among peasants.

Except 32 million poods of seeds, eight million rubles for the purchase of cattle and seven and one-half million rubles to feed the children were distributed in the drought region. Seven and one-half million rubles for the development of agriculture and 17 million rubles for melioration work were also sent to drought regions. During the last year, 7,778,000 dessiatins have been affected by melioration.

JUDGE BUSICK TO DECIDE ON JUDGE BUSICK

Incidentally Connors, I. W. W., Is Re-tried

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 7.—The retrial on appeal of Tom Connors for alleged jury tampering is now on in Sacramento before the notorious judge C. O. Busick who denied a plea by the defense for change of venue.

Connors was arrested in San Francisco, April 6, 1923, while acting as defense secretary for his labor union, the I. W. W. A charge of jury tampering was brought against him with criminal syndicalism implications, as a result of his legal efforts toward defense of a criminal syndicalism case then on trial.

The first trial of his case resulting in a disagreement. His second trial, presided over by Busick, resulted in a verdict of guilty and Connors was sentenced to five years imprisonment, the maximum penalty.

At about the same time and in the same vicinity, a nonunion contractor was tried on the charge of jury-tampering in a bootleg liquor case. Upon conclusive evidence of guilt in this case, the sentence handed out was five days in county jail. No evidence of intention to bribe a juror had been brought forth in the Connors' case Connor had simply distributed leaflets by mail and express and no actual juror got one.

The California Defense committee says: "The city of Sacramento is the central point for employing and shipping men to construction and lumber camps. It is the distributing point for farm labor. That is why the officials of Sacramento county continue to arrest working men and charge them with the alleged crime of having joined the labor organization of their choice."

Slight Improvement of Phoenix Brings in Over Supply of Labor

PHOENIX, Ar., June 7.—After four years inactivity due to the shutting down of industries, drouth, slump in cotton prices and of building operations in 1920-1921, the Phoenix unions are again coming to life. New unions are also being formed, the Central Labor Union revived and the Women' Trade Union Label league reorganized.

With the revival of mining and building old-time union men are drifting back and with them hundreds of disillusioned California - prosperity hunters who are willing to work for a small wage to get a stake and pull out of the valley before the heat of summer. As a consequence of this invasion of cheap labor many resident mechanics are jobless.

Problems confronting the coal industry of the United States will be thrashed out in open discussion by members of the National Coal association in their eigth annual gathering in Chicago June 17, 18 and 19 at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Each discussion will follow an address on the subject by an expert.

The list of speakers includes W. D. Ord, Landgraff, W. Va.; W. L. Robinson, Cleveland; C. E. Bockus, New York; Robert K. Cassatt, Philadelphia, and J. E. Johnson, Lewisville.

GOLD IS KING AND HIS THRONE IS IN WALL ST.

But "Stabilization" Is Only Temporary

Gold is again acknowledged king and the workers of the world will continue to do homage to this symbol of the stability of capitalist industrialism. This is the significance of the statement by the advisory council of the federal reserve board on England's return to the gold standard. It says:

"This event marks an epoch in the financial history of the post-war period. With the United States, England, the Dominions, Sweden, Holland, Germany, Austria, Hungary and other countries now returned to a gold basis, the sway of gold over the world's leading financial systems once more has become an unchallenged fact. For the United States this development is one of the vastest importance."

The council feels confident that in the annals of the federal reserve system the arrangement by which the Federal Reserve Bank of New York assisted England with a $200,000,000 credit will be writen down as one of its proudest achievements.

The importance to the United States is seen by the council, first, because America owns approxmately half of the world's monetary gold; second, because its prosperity is dependent on exchange stability; and, third, because foreign markets only as long as it con- its huge excess production can find foreign markets onl yas long at it continues to invest heavily abroad. Safety of such foreign investment requires that the credit of its customers be on the strongest basis.

Without this step, the council asserts, terrible consequences like another exchange collapse might have followed with further reductions in wages and living standards abroad and social consequences which the United States could not have escaped.

This is a thinly veiled statement that the entire world order, in which the United States is equipped to play a dominant role, might have collapsed if England had not restored the gold standard. Through the federal reserve, its magnates claim, U. S. bankers have come to the rescue of world capitalism and assisted in restoring the gold monarchy. Back of King Gold, however, stand these same bankers, for the vast profits of the war period placed half of the world's gold in their control.

"Face to the Village" Is New Soviet Slogan to Aid Land Workers

MOSCOW—(FP)—Better times for the peasant were among the principal themes before the 14th conference of the Russian Communist party in May.

During the first period of the new economic policy—that of restoring the country's industrial system, the main field of action was the town. Now during the second stage of further devolopment of the country's resources, the government has to concentrate on the villages and increase the productivity of agriculture. The keystone to this policy is to furnish the peasantry with manufactured goods and bring their economic standard up to that of the workers. For this the main slogan has been the Smitchka, or link for establishing closer contact between the towns and the villages. The latest party watchword is Face to the Villages.

The reduction of the agricultural tax will help the middle and small peasants. The recent decree permitting peasants to hire agricultural laborers under the labor laws aids in the employment of surplus labor for the harvest, but at the same time protects the farm laborer from exploitation at the hands of the rich peasant.

Greater assistance is to be given the communal or collective farms. The agricultural cooperatives are given financial assistance through the state agricultural banks. This will increase the purchasing power of the peasants and lessen the divergence between the purchasing price of commodities and the selling price of grain. It will take trade in the villages out of private hands. Cooperation is growing at a great pace in the country. The number of agricultural cooperatives has grown to 40,000.

How About This, You I. W. W. Lumberjacks?

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 7.—That Arizona's forests are to be cut by labor imported from the unorganized lumber camps of the south is evident from a report of the state tax commission. According to the report McNary, a northern Arizona town of 3,000 to 3,500 is peopled mostly by Negroes imported from Louisiana by the lumber mills. Colored children have their own school taught by a colored teacher.

Japanese Construct R. R.

HARBIN, June 7.—According to information received from Dukow, the Japanese have enlisted there more than 10,000 laborers for the construction of the Tacnanfu-Tsitsikar railway.

Chicago Units Respond

IT is in the shop and the factory that the workers most feel the need of the DAILY WORKER. In Detroit, Shop Nucleus No. 1, doing such splendid work as has already been reported, now has a rival in Chicago Shop Nucleus No. 5.

These workers, who responed so generously with funds during the DAILY WORKER Insurance Campaign and did good work thruout the recent Daily Worker Week, propose to duplicate these accomplishments during RED WEEK (June 15 to 21) with a door-to-door distribution of the DAILY WORKER and have already pledged to get at least 15 new subs.

With this fine example set, the North Side Branch of Chicago, also has gone on record with a pledge to get the same number of subs—to add to real accomplishments already turned in during this campaign.

Politicians Begin Battle

Recently Comrade Cyril Lambkin of Detroit, candidate for State Judicial office on the Communist ticket, challeenged Comrade E. Levin of Los Angeles who in the local elections there polled 26,000 votes for the Communist ticket, to get as many new subs for the DAILY WORKER in the proportion that he got votes in the election.

Undaunted, Comrade Levin, who is a man of action, wired back this message to Comrade Lambkin:

"CHALLENGE ACCEPTED. LET'S GO."

And now watch the fur fly and the subs come in—for Comrade Levin meeting performance with promise—immediately sends in another new sub to show Comrade Lambkin that he is already on the job. We are holding our breath in expectation of further developments and word from Comrade Lambkin who dared to throw this challenge.

Ging Wong, for Whom There'll Be No Tomb, Says, "Me No Got Job"

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 7.—The tragedy of being jobless knows no color line. Ging Wong Lee, aged Chinese laborer of Vancouver, was too old to work so he took poison in his wretched Pender street hovel and left a note which, translated literally, said. "White workmen got unions, so got jobs. Which is very good business. Me, I no got jobs for I am too old to learn special jobs like artisan. Many friends with white man I have before, and now I die with love and friendship for them, my friends. If I born white man, maybe I learn trade when young, and now be honorable mechanic with fine salary and job and house with babies. But I am only Chinese, have no job nor trade, so I like to die. No more from Ging Wong Lee, tired man who die now."

CHINESE-E. R. R. MAKES STEADY FREIGHT GAIN

HARBIN,—(By Mail)—The administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway has published the returns for the first half of the current working year, which coincides with the assumption of functions by the new board.

During this period, namely from October 1st, 1924, to March 31st, 1925, the railway carried 133,162,000 poods of commercial goods, as against 101,665,000 poods during the corresponding period of the preceding year—an improvement of about 31.5 million poods. (The military and service loads are recorded under a special head.) On the mentioned total, grain loads account for 91,393,000 poods, as against 61,842,000 poods last year.

The average revenue from the "pood-verst" last year was one twenty-sixth kopek (1 kopek equals half cent gold), while, this year, it is one twenty-oneth part of a kopek.

Of all the export goods carried by the C. R. R. during the period under review, there were transported on to the Ussuriisk railway: 30,554,000 poods of grain loads and 1,366,000 poods of bean oil, and to the South Manchurian railway: 54,164,000 poods of grain and 5,000,000 poods of bean oil.

The financial results for the mentioned period were also the most favorable, though their exact estimation is to be made known later.

National Guard Is Aid to Businessmen, Says Colonel Conway

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 7.—The real purpose of the national guard was made known to the members of the Arizona industrial congress by Col. B. Power Conway, commanding officer of the Arizona national guard. In a In a speech entitled Protection of Industry, he declared the guard an asset to the state in that it affords protection to industry by supplementing the regular army which is too small for an emergency.

"They (the business men of the state) do not seem to realise that they are the beneficiaries of a competent national guard for the protection of their property. The officers of the national guard are taking every opportunity to explain to the citizens of the state the aims of the guard and it is vitally necessary that the business men of the state lend their active support to the organization if their property is to be adequately protected," he stated.

China's Warning

Unity among the Chinese factions is the result of the bloody attacks on students and strikers by foreign troops, and this indication of national solidarity is the most encouraging feature of the whole situation.

Every imperialist power tries to have at least one tuchun on its payroll and most of the internicene strife in China has been brought about by the intrigues of the foreign governments masked by some factional leader, bribed to betray his people.

Dispatches report strong protests made to the embassies by both Feng Yu Hsiang and Chang Tso Lin, and each of these leaders has an army of considerable size. Feng is called the "christian general," but his sympathies of late seem to have been with the Soviet Russian policy of uniting the Chinese nation rather than with the American interests who operate under the cover of christian missions.

Chang Tso Lin is, or has been, under Japanese influence with France as a secondary backer. That these two military leaders join in a formal protest in support of the students and strikers in Shanghai is indicative of the new spirit, first evident in the revolution of 1911, in the ascendant during the world war, temporarily halted by the treachery of American diplomacy, but rising steadily since the Russian revolution—a feeling of pride in China and Chinese achievements and resentment translating itself into action against foreign interference in internal affairs.

In the south Yunanese troops, under French influence, are about to begin hostilities against the supporters of the nationalist liberation movement led by the Kuo Min Tang. The correspondents of the capitalist press are practically unanimous in admitting that the tools of French imperialism are in for a fine cleaning which means that South China is following the instructions of Sun Yat Sen and waging a disciplined struggle for freedom.

The Soviet press always speaks authoritatively on Chinese affairs. After pionting out that American imperialism cannot afford to fight the battles of Japan in China, it remarks that the present upheaval in China is a purely nationalist movement caused by imperialist aggression and gives cold comfort to the capitalist world with the information that the real revolution will come after the robber nations have been forced to withdraw from China.

As for the Japanese rulers they are confronted now with the choice of abandoning their policy of force and establishing one of agreement with China and Russia. Making their textile barons and other exploiters submit to Chinese law or finding themselves in conflict with both nations, their own growing labor movement and the imperialist nations of the west.

The strike and boycott movement spreading like wildfire over China and in which all but the biggest merchants and landlords are joining, together with the growing tendency toward national military solidarity, are forcing Japan to a decision.

As for Americans and American missionaries and business interests they must get out of China. They will, once the American working class demands and enforces the withdrawal of all troops and warships.

A Squelching Reply

The war against Soviet Russia in England is not confined to the capitalist class. A few British labor leaders and intellectual prostitutes claiming to be socialists never miss an opportunity to take a shot at the workers' and peasants' government. But most of the responsible British labor leaders are friends of the Soviet Union, and one of the most sturdy and militant of those is A. J. Cook, secretary of the powerful miners' federation.

Recently the secretary of the Social Democratic Federation issued a statement on affairs in Russia. The statement was distributed among the trade unions and other labor bodies. It was expected to prove an antidote to the report of the British Trade Union Delegation, which won such wide unpopularity among the capitalist class.

Angered by the action of the socialist stoolpigeons of the capitalist class, A. J. Cook wrote a scorching letter to hte secretary of the Social Democratic Federation. He says in part:

"I note that you seem to be delighted with the capitalist press of this country to use every stick possible to attack Soviet Russia. Surely there are plenty of wrongs to right in this country without concentrating your time and energy by attacking the Workers' Government in Russia. I am sure it would be of far greater interest to the working class movement of Great Britain if the Social Democratic Federation would concentrate its own energies upon seeking to relieve the terrible conditions existing here, and would help forward the forming of organizations which would get rid of capitalism."

The Social Democratic Federation has lost all interest in freeing the working class from wage slavery. It feels more at home pimping for capitalism.

The Riffian Victory

Reading between the lines of a Paris dispatch on the hostilities in Morocco it is not difficult to come to the conclusion that the French forces have suffered a severe defeat at the hands of the Riffians.

The French government refuses to publish a casualty list but in the usual fashion attributes all the losses to their opponents. That the Riffians are making progress there can be no doubt. It is also obvious that the French losses are very heavy, else there would be no purpose served in keeping them hidden.

It appears that the Riffians have found themselves strong enuf to take the offensive and have launched an attack on the French positions with the object of capturing Fez. Even French bulletins admit that the Moroccans have gained ground, tho the claim is made that the French have recovered the lost positions.

With a shaky government at home, a financial crisis, and complications with Britain, Germany and the United States, France is not in the best condition to liquidate her trouble in Morocco and the Riffians have seized a golden moment to rid their country of the most formidable invader. More power to them.

The Enslavement of China

By Wm. F. Dunne

Introduction to "The Enslavement of China"

EVENTS of world importance are taking place in China—events that may mark the beginning of another world struggle like that which ostensibly began with the murder of an Austrian grand duke at Sarajevo in 1914.

If a world war grows out of the murder of Chinese strikers and students by troops of the imperialist nations it will be because these nations have pursued for years a certain line of policy having as its object the subjection of the Chinese people and the partition of China among themselves. Today they unite to crush the Chinese independence movement but tomorrow they may be at one another's throat.

JUST as the Balkans are the key to the Near East and no one power can be trusted with control of these puppet states and a constant struggle for supremacy goes on there, fomented by the imperialist nations, so do the imperialist nations seek to divide China and rob her at their leisure. The Chinese liberation movement, the New China whose foundations were laid by the life-time labors of Sun Yat Sen and his party, the Kuo Ming Tang, is trying to unite the Chinese people to rule themselves. If successful this spells the defeat of imperialism in the Far East.

THE jackals are snarling and snapping at the Chinese dragon and because the success of the Chinese liberation movement means unity with Soviet Russia—an anti-imperialist bloc from the border of Poland to the Pacific Ocean and the resultant weakening of the power of imperialism all over the world, with all this means to the workingclass, we workers should know something of the process thru which millions of white workers have been made to believe that the armed occupation of China, the breaking of strikes and the murder of workers and peasants by soldiers of a half-dozen nations is not only necessary but admirable.

The following articles make no pretense to originality. They contain information compiled from a dozen different sources, a number of which are referred to in the text, and are intended only to give in as concise a form as possible a history of the long series of unscrupulous intrigues by which the imperialist nations have entrenched themselves in Chinese territory and sown the seeds of another world war.

ARTICLE I.

AMERICAN, British, French, Italian and Japanese warships have sailed into Chinese ports, landed armed forces and have killed workers and students for making peaceful mass protest against foreign robbers.

China, a nation of 443,000,000 people, with a civilization antedating that of the west by 2000 years, apparently has no rights that the imperialist nations are bound to respect. By the capitalist press of the world this state of affairs is accepted as normal.

How has it come about? By what processes of diplomacy, investment, trickery and force has China been forced into the position of a colony with not one, but a host, of rulers?

The relations of China with other nations became critical enough to attract world attention in the early 80's when the aggressive policy of Japan, having as its chief objective the seizure of Korea, forced other imperialist powers to consider carefully their future course towards China.

BUT long before then, in the late 30's and culminating in the "opium war" which ended with the treaty of 1842 and the establishment of Kong Kong as a British port, Great Britain had been putting pressure upon the Chinese nation.

France also had ambitions in China and had been designated by the Vatican as the protector of catholic missionaries in the Far East. Between opium, a British source of revenue and the missionaries, a French field of enterprise, China led a miserable existence. Any resentment of the interference of the missionaries and the opium peddlers with the internal affairs of China brought French and British gunboats and reprisals.

IN 1883-84 war broke out between France and China, provoked by the constant and growing arrogance of the missionaries, encouraged by the French who wanted a pretext to grab some territory and establish a permanent base in eastern Asia.

This war ended by China ceding Annam and Tongking to France.

In the meantime Russia had been pushing into China from Turkestan and Manchuria, threatening her from the north and northwest.

The United States adopted a "friendly" attitude towards China but this did not prevent her, together with Great Britain, from persuading Korea to sign a separate treaty and thus indirectly strengthen the drive Japan was making to wrest Korea from China.

IN 1882 China sent Yuan Shi Kai with a force of 3,000 men to Korea to check Japanese aggression. The relations with Japan grew more strained while Russia, also with her eyes on Korea, became more arrogant towards both oriental nations.

In 1894 Japan declared war on China, defeated her and took her navy. China was forced to surrender unconditionally and accept terms that were a confession of utter helplessness.

China, by the terms of the treaty recognized "Definitely the full and complete independence and autonomy of Korea." This was the occasion for almost delirious rejoicing on the part of the early advocates of self-determination the world over but Japan bound herself to nothing in this connection and proceeded to make the most of her new opportunities in Korea.

IN addition to abandoning her sovereignty of Korea, China was forced to pay an indemnity of $200,000,000, cede the Island of Formosa and the Peninsular of Liaotung. Liaotung is in the extreme southern point of Manchuria, which we have already seen was a section coveted by Russia, and the acquisition of this peninsular, containing the strong fortress of Port Arthur, was a blow at Russia as well as China.

Russia now appears as the friend of China, and backed by France and Germany, both aroused by the success of Japan, demanded that Liaotung be given back to China. What these three powers said was couched in plain terms compared with the usual amiguity of diplomatic communications:

> Such territorial acquisition constitutes a menace against the capital of China, renders Korea's independence merely nominal, and jeopardized the perpetual peace in the Far East.

IT was Li Hung Chang who engineered the interference of Russia in the guise of a friend and thus laid the diplomatic basis for the penetration of China by Russia which followed.

Speaking of a conversation he had with John W. Foster, an American diplomat who sided with Li Hung Chang in the Sino-Japanese negotiations, H. H. Morse says: ("The International Relations of the Chinese Empire," Vol. 3, Page 47) Mr. Foster declares that he first heard of the demand during his stay in Peking, April 24 to May 2, and that "Li Hung Chang waited anxiously for some indication from Russia, but none was received by him until we reached Tientsin on our return." This disposes of any possibility of any direct assurance having been given; but none the less, the viceroy (Li Hung Chang) must have had a reasonable expectation that the action would be taken.

JOHN W. FOSTER had this to say of the incident which was the first direct step towards the Russo-Japanese war that ended so disastrously for Russia:

> I have reason to believe that the demand for territory on the mainland of China was contrary to the better judgement of Marquis Ito... In my conversations with Count Mutsu, I told him that I was satisfied Russia would not permit Japan to occupy the mainland so threateningly close to Peking, and that it was not good policy to insist upon it. ("Diplomatic Memoirs," Vol. 2, Page 153.)

Japan by her victory over China, the acquisition of the Chinese navy and Formosa, giving her a strategic position from which to dominate the province of Fukien, had also secured a foothold of major importance on the Chinese mainland by which she could harass and check the advance of Russia, her most dangerous rival at the time, altho in 1897 under the pressure of Russia, France and Germany she relinquished Liaotung—only to seize it again in 1905.

JAPAN had become a world power. There were other consequences of the war and the peace. The necessity of finding funds for the huge indemnity provided for in the peace terms forced China to turn to western capitalists for loans.

France and Russia loaned her $80,000,000. British and German financiers loaned her $160,000,000. The British government played its usual role of guardian of British investors and took the customs duties collected at sea ports as security with the further provision an Englishman should be collector of customs as long as British trade was the largest coming thru Chinese ports.

The immediate result of this provision was to make it a first order of business for Japan to overtake and pass Great Britain in the race for Chinese markets and thus deprive Great Britain of the favored position which her grip on the Chinese revenues gave her.

THESE loans were the beginning of a policy which made China dependent almost entirely upon foreign finance—a policy that enslaves the Chinese people to this day.

Russia, as the rival to Japan in the north, and because of her supposedly friendly intentions in China, succeeded in securing by treaty the lease of Port Arthur and Dairen—the best fortified base on the Chinese coast. In other words, Russia secured the very territory that she had forced Japan to let go of.

All the great powers had, since the time China had been forced to pawn herself to western bankers, worked unceasingly for just such strategic bases as Russia had secured.

Germany was the initiator of this policy and in 1897, when two German catholic missionaries were killed, she not only collected the usual punitive indemnity but brought pressure to bear on the Chinese government to cede Kiaochow for a period of 99 years. Included in the lease was the port of Tsingtao which Germany began to develop and fortify.

FRANCE was not idle. On May 27, 1898, she secured a lease of the harbor of Kwangtung, on the southern coast of the province of Canton, for 99 years.

The astute Britons, egged on by jealousy of the Russian success and envy of France, increased the pressure on China and on July 1 of the same year leased Weihaiwei, Shantung province, "for as so long a period as Port Arthur shall remain in the occupation of Russia." (China, Captive or Free," Page 7—Gilbert Reid.)

The acuteness of the imperialist rivalries resulting in these onslaughts on China's territorial integrity are best shown by this last move of Great Britain. The port of Weihaiwei is opposite Port Arthur, on the opposite side of the Pehchili Gulf and also opposite to Tsingtao on the Shantung peninsula.

Great Britain thus served notice on both Germany and Russia that she was in China to stay, to protect to the utmost her great financial interests and her favored position as the collector of Chinese customs revenues.

CHINA was being rapidly cut up into sections dominated by some one great power. The ceding of these fortified bases, with the control of the adjacent seacoast which they gave, marked the culmination of another policy of imperialism, that of locating socalled "spheres of influence" of which we hear much these days but which was first brought to the attention of China by France after the war of 1883-84.

The beginning of the "spheres of influence" policy or as it was first called, the sphere of "interest," together with its affect on the Chinese nation, will be dealt with in another article.

Minneapolis Communists Urge Unity

in a determined effort to regain control of the city council. In order to accomplish this end thousands of dollars are being spent in all the labor wards.

They are concentrating all of their efforts on the aldermanic fights because they already have the mayor—both Leach and Elwell represent the financial interests of this city so it does not matter to the bosses which one is elected.

If this "open shop" crowd is successful next Monday, they will use their control of the city government against the workers. A renewed effort will be made to reduce wages in all industries. Hours of labor will be lengthened and working conditions will be worsened. If the workers strike against these attacks the city police force under the control of the mayor, backed up by an "open shop" city council, will be used to drive you back into the shops under the terms of the boss.

Defeat the "Open Shop"

This gang must be defeated in this election and the only way they can be defeated is by all workers' organizations uniting behind the SOCIALIST-LABOR aldermanic candidates for re-election.

Your class interests in this election demand that you vote for the following socialist-labor aldermanic candidates in each of the wards listed: First Ward, Richard Dunleavy; Third Ward, G. T. Lindsten; Sixth Ward, John Peterson; Ninth Ward, A. E. Voelker; Tenth Ward, George Guider; Eleventh Ward, Louis Beneke; and the Twelfth Ward—Theodore Jenson.

In urging you to work and vote for these candidates, the Workers Party does so merely because they are the lessor of two evils. During the two years that these have been in office they have not fought for your needs as representatives of labor should. They have played petty politics with the reactionary city officials when they should have been out in the open exposing them. When the Citizens Alliance started their attack against the workers with the intention of destroying your unions, reducing your wages, lengthening hours and worsening working conditions, these labor councilmen should have used their time and energy to rally the workers for a counter attack against the bosses. They should have aided in preserving and building the trade union movement. Instead of doing this the socialist-labor aldermen have been and now are concerned only with holding their job.

The problems of the workers are not going to be solved merely by electing a few individuals to office. And individuals elected to office are not going to fight your battles unless you have strong economic and political organizations that will force them to recognize your needs. The reasons that the present socialist-labor group have not fought for you is because they are not under the control of any labor organization.

Build the Labor Party.

The most urgent problem confronting the working class of this city and nation at the present time is that of organization.

The thousands of unorganized workers must be brought into the trade unions, these unions must be united into powerful industrial unions and a fight on the basis of the class struggle must be waged to regain the wages. hours and working conditions that have been lost during the "open shop" fight. Until such time as the workers organize their forces and fight back, their conditions will continue to get worse.

One of the most powerful weapons used by the capitalists is the political power of the state which expresses itself by the use of the police, the militia and the courts in almost every struggle against the workers.

In order to overcome this, the workers must organize a labor party that will unite all labor organizations, economic and political, for the conquest of political power. This power when obtained must be used to better and protect the conditions of the workers and their interests only. The Workers (Communist) Party pledges itself to the task of uniting in such a party.

TEACHERS FIGHT OVERTIME WORK IN N. Y. SCHOOLS

Superintendent Orders Playground Duty

NEW YORK, June 7.— The New York Teachers' Union charge that the "voluntary playground plan" would lead to compulsion of teachers to do duty in school yards before and after school hours is proving correct, according to the union's communication to the board of education. In one district the local superintendent calls for 250 volunteers, about 25 per cent of the teaching force, the union claims, and asks principals to bring the names of teachers to the monthly conference.

The principal of one school posts an instruction sheet which plainly states that he has not had sufficient volunteers and "to carry out the directions of the city superintendent I shall be obliged to assign as follows" with a list of teachers' names. Similar assignments to playground duty were made in other schools.

The Teachers' Union stand is not against opening school yards for playgrounds but rather that they be adequately supervised by playground specialists and that the plan of getting teachers for overtime duty will lead the way to requiring them to work in summer vacations.

Now It's the Alcohol Trust.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The synthetic alcohol trust is forming in place of the tetra-ethyl lead gasoline combine, according to John Collins in the Nation for June 10. "Du Pont making the fuel alcohol, the Standard Oil company distributing it, and General Motors controlling the high-compression engines in which to burn it," he says and adds that it is trade gossip that Du Pont is negotiating with the Germans for American rights to the new synthetic alcohol motor fuel. He suggests that this may explain the readiness of the Ethyl Gasoline corporation, subsidiary of Standard and General Motors, to drop its tetra-ethyl lead product when its danger to workers and public was shown.

BILL GREEN NOT SURE NOW THAT PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IS GOOD AS IT WAS AT MONTREAL MEETING

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 7.—President Green of the American Federation of Labor, replying to a request from President Coolidge's advisory Muscle Shoals commission for his opinion as to what should be done with the government's vast power plant, modifies his former attitude—taken when public ownership of railroads was under hot debate in the Montreal convention of 1920—to the extent that he does not now ratify the policy adopted by the organized workers in the industry affected. He does not approve government productive power as a general principle.

"So far as ownership is concerned," says Green, "it cannot be determined in advance that any specific type of ownership will under all conditions give invariable results. The decision upon ownership ought to be made with reference to each power undertaking after an examination of conditions and factors to be dealt with."

When the railway workers asked the A. F. of L. to endorse their program of public ownership and democratic operation of railroads, in the 1920 convention, Green made a vigorous speech upholding their right to have labor back them up in what seemed best to safeguard their industrial progress and the progress of the country as to transportation. He pointed out that the coal miners claimed the same right, and that no government agency ever had failed to be called in to repress the workers under private ownership and operation of railroads or mines.

With his own statement to the Muscle Shoals commission Green enclosed the resolution adopted at the Portland convention in 1923, endorsing "coordinated public development and control of water resources, for the service of the people at cost."

MELLON O. K.'S MORGAN LOANS TO EUROPEANS

Approves Gold Dollar on Italy's Neck

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7.—Secretary of the treasury, Andrew J. Mellon, has approved the foreign loans of the J. P. Morgan and company bankers.

In a statement today he declared that Morgan's loan would "astist foreign governments in stabilizing their currency, and will place them in a better position to pay their official debts."

Morgan recently loaned the Italian government $50,000,000.

VOTE F ANK STAHL AND DEFEA ARRY JENSEN IS PLEA OF RANK AND FILE CARPENTERS

On the 13th of June, the carpenters of Chicago and vicinity will go to the polls to cast their ballots for officers of the district council for the coming year.

Those who are acquainted with the facts concerning the conditions in the building trades and the disharmony existing between the carpenters and the other crafts in Chicago, must conclude that the time is ripe for a change in leadership and different tactics from those that have been followed in the past.

Unless our organization prepares to take advantage of the preesnt building boom, it will not be able to stand the slack period which is in store for us in the near future.

One year ago the official family of the carpenters district council with the aid of General President William L. Hutcheson, tricked the membership in Chicago and vicinity into reelecting them by signing a so-called "closed shop" agreement and securing wide publicity in the capitalist papers one day before election. Jensen told the members thru the bosses' press that a closed shop agreement had been signed. When this agreement arrived in the locals three months later, (only one copy being sent to the secretary of each local) it was found that this was an open shop agreement, almost word for word the same as the Landis award.

It is not yet known what election tricks Jensen and his gang will pull on the carpenters this time, but it is almost certain that some old gag will be tried. Already the Jensen machine is talking of organizing the millmen, while at the same time they are going around telling the locals that there is no use talking about

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE real estate broker who took to his bomb proof cellar whenever Herbert Hoover came to town, fearing that Hoover's radicalism would impel him to hurl a few bombs promiscuously around, had nothing on the military loon who raved about the 100,000 Bolsheviks, his superheated brain, found hiding in the city of Chicago. And what "reds" this martial moron dug up! Jane Adams is one of them, and while this lady undoubtedly has good intentions, she is much more concerned about making safe for capitalism than bringing about a social revolution, which would very likely make our local gunmen look to their laurels from the point of view of casualty lists.

THE mental defective who bears the title of lieutenant colonel unloaded his mental offal on the North Shore Kiwanis club. He picked the right place. The ignorance of the American business man was a household word even before he was immortalized by Sinclair Lewis and the word babbit added to our vocabulary. When the word "finis" is written to the political career of the petty bourgeois in America, it is more than likely that this addition to the American language will be Mr. Babbit's sole whole and only contribution to the machinery for the distribution of thought.

MOST of our readers have only a very hazy idea of what kind of intellectual garbage goes over at a Kiwanis dinner. The colonel takes the stand. "You say there is no danger from the Bolsheviks in America" (they said nothing of the kind; they were too drunk) said the colonel. "Well, here is a button of the organization I purchased at Carmen's Hall on Ashland avenue where William Z. Foster, spoke to 3,500. This man is worth more than a quarter of a million dollars." This is getting the goods on Bill alright! Now we know why the labor fakers hate him so well! They are jealous.

THE colonel proceeded to tell of his valiant battle in behalf of Americanism, of his hand-to-hand encounter in the cellar of the Seven Arts Club, with an army of radicals. He berated the Kiwanis for standing idly by while the Colonel's shield was emitting sparks from the impact of radical javelins. The Kiwanians applauded the Colonel and took another dring grunting: "Ain't we giving them hell."

'CZAR' HUTCHESON OF CARPENTERS' UNION TO VISIT CHICAGO

(Special to The Daily Worker)

William L. Hutcheson, general president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners will be in Chicago, this week, according to an announcement made by Harry Jensen, president of the carpenters' district council. What business is bringing Hutcheson here just now was not divulged but it is surmised that it has some connection with the elections for the district council which take place this week end. Hutcheson is one of the most reactionary fakers in the labor movement and wants to see his local tool, Harry Jensen, elected. The rank and file carpenters are expected to reply to Hutcheson's visit by electing Jensen's opponent, Frank Stahl.

NEW HYSTERIA OF LABOR-BAITING FOUGHT BY LABOR DEFENCE; TO HOLD CONFERENCE, SUNDAY, JUNE 28

A general survey of cases before the courts of the country in which workers are the defendants for engaging in workingclass activity seems to indicate that a new hysteria of labor-baiting is about to seize the land. Outstanding among these is the struggle in West Virginia where attempts are being made to unionize the coal fields.

More than 200 men and women have been jailed in northern West Virginia for an attempt to resist the open shop offensive of the coal operators.

These men and women are in jail for violating the usual anti-picketing injunctions that in this case says the union miners shall not, "inuence or persuade any person to quit, cease or refrain from working, or do any acts whatsoever in the furtherance of any combination or conspiracy for the purpose of preventing the mine owners from operating their mines."

TEXTILE BOSSES RUSH PLANS FOR NEXT WORLD WAR

Government Places Big Orders for Material

By ESTHER LOWELL,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, June 8.—Textile mill owners of Rhode Island are abetting the United States war department's plan of industrial mobilization for the next war. The war department has addressed a letter to the Rhode Island Textile Association explaining the mobilization. Officers from the army base at Boston are beginning the allocation of orders for various textile products for the war department in the event of war.

At the request of lieutenant H. A. Gardner, quarter master corps, Boston, secretary E. F. Walker of the R. I. Textile Association is preparing a list of all mills in the state and their equipment, products and capacities.

Place War Orders.

Lieutenant Gardner will make a survey of Rhode Island when he receives the data and later factories will be specifically informed of the amounts of different materials the army will need from each. Contracts will be prepared with the government and production will begin immediately upon notification from the war department—in other words, as soon as tho next war breaks out.

Bandages Already Ordered.

"For the manufacture of breeches, overcoats, service coats and leather jerkins, more than 97,000,000 yards of 20-ounce melton olive drab will be required, and of the 30-ounce more than 37,000,000 yards will be needed. About 290,000,000 yards of cotton cloth olive drab will be required for breeches and coats and 35,000,000 yards of cotton olive drab are needed for ammunition pouches, cargo covers, tentage, etc.

"Medical requirements include: cotton flannel bandages, 108,000 dozen; gauze bandages, compressed, 216,000 gross; muslin bandages, 899,000 dozen; muslin bandages, triangular for slings, 528,000 dozen; gauze plain, 12,950,000 yards; unbleached muslin, 8,130,000 yards."

FOOD TRUST PLOT TO ADULTERATE FOOD IS CHARGE

Doctor Files Protest at White House

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Dr. W. Wiley, health expert, has filed charges with President Coolidge that a gigantic conspiracy, fostered by "food adulterators," is in existence for the purpose of defeating the provisions of the pure food and drug act.

Dr. Wiley stated in a paper left at the white house for the president's attention that since 1917, executive orders have been issued at the instance of various secretaries of agriculture which served to completely nullify the outstanding features of the pure food law.

Under these orders, he said, it is possible to use sulphur dioxide, sulphites, benzoic acid and benzoates in the "embalming" of beef; alum in the making of bread and the preparation of pickles and the use of caffeine.

Under existing law, Dr. Wiley alleged, these orders are illegal.

U. S. SUPREME COURT JAILS BEN GITLOW

Upholds N. Y. Criminal Syndicalist Law

(By Labor Defense Press Service)

Benjamin Gitlow must go back to Sing Sing! This is the first shot of what is unquestionably the beginning of another court drive on the advance guard of the labor movement. This decision upholding the New York "criminal anarchy" law comes strangely on the heels of the sudden reopening of the Pennsylvania "sedition' case against Fred Merrick and others.

It is the foreshadowing of what can soon be expected of the Ruthenberg appeal to the same court upon which hangs the faith of William Z. Foster and thirty other Communists in the Michigan trials. This is a declaration of war! It means that the greatest defense battles in the history of the working class are about to begin. It is a signal for the workers to rally in a fight against this offensive.

The Labor Defense Council is going to carry on a great fight against these attacks to the finish. What will you do to help? Tens of thousands of dollars are needed for the legal and defense battle.

Split in Supreme Corut

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The question of freedom of speech and of the press developed a clear cut split in the ranks of the United States supreme court.

Upholding the constitutionality of the New York criminal anarchy law, a majority of the court ruled that free speech did not mean "unrestricted and unbridled license," while a minority consisting of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and Justice Louis Brandeis held that no possible abridgement of the right of free speech was intended by the constitution.

"If in the long run," said Justice Holmes, "the beliefs expressed in proletarian dictatorship are destined to be accepted by the dominant forces of the community, the only meaning of free speech is that they should be given their chance and have their way."

FRANCE CONFERS WITH ENGLAND ON TEUT SPOILS

"Security Pact" Is Subject of Confab

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, June 8.—Foreign Minister Briand is conferring with Great Britain's foreign minister, Austen Chamberlain, at Geneva, on the terms of an agreement whereby the French and English imperialists agree on the division of the spoils to be extracted from Germany.

The Painleve government insists that Germany be refused permission to extend her eastern frontiers at the expense of Poland, controlled by the French imperialists. Great Britain on the other hand, is trying to extend Germany's frontiers, so that by controlling Germany, England will be able to break France's domination over Poland.

Germany precipitated the conferences when she demanded a "security pact," including in the terms of a European treaty the extension of her eastern frontiers and the withdrawal of allied troops from the Ruhr and Rhine regions.

At home, Minister of Finance Caillaux is making desperate but so far unsuccessful efforts to stabilize the franc. When asked if he has started to use the $100,000,000 Morgan loan, Caillaux refused to say. He declared that if necessary the entire amount would be thrown into the exchange to prevent the further fall of the franc.

The Riffians are preparing a new offensive with 10,000 native troops on the French army which has invaded Morocco, the war office announces.

Hands Off China! Call of the Workers Party to Workers and Farmers

The upheaval of China, the new feeling of militancy manifested against the atrocious exploitation of the Chinese toiling masses by foreign imperialists and the attempted insurance of that exploitation by brutal armed intervention and invasion of Chinese territory by foreign arms, is causing the great powers to gasp with astonishment—and also to eye each other with suspicion that the expected re-apportionment of the loot may not leave a rival imperialist in control. This situation, at once unjust to the Chinese nation of over 400,000,000 people, but a constant cause of imperialist friction leading to war, is the subject of the following manifesto issued today by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America:

N. Y. CHINESE STUDENTS IN PROTEST MEET

Resent Foreign Imposition on China

NEW YORK CITY, June 8—About 300 Chinese students assembled at the International House, 500 Riverside Drive, protested against the shooting of their comrades by the foreign troops at Shanghai.

Several committees were organized to take charge of phases of the work of relief and protest. A letter was sent to the state department at Washington and the following resolution passed by the meeting:

Over Mill Strike.

"Whereas, the Chinese workers in Japanese cotton mills at Tsingtao and Shanghai have been repeatedly abused by their employers, and are now pursuing a peaceful strike in protest against the inhuman working conditions;

"Whereas during the strike at Shanghai, the foreign powers, including the United States, have unscrupulously resorted to armed force and have been responsible for the killing of more than twenty-five students and wounding several scores more who showed sympathy with the cause of the workers; and

"Whereas during the demonstration at Shanghai, the students and workers were entirely unarmed and evidently intended no violence:

"Be it resolved, that we Chinese students in Greater New York stand as a unit behind our brother workers and fellow students in their fight for social justice and national honor; and

"Be it further resolved that the recent actions of the foreign powers at Shanghai should be condemned for violating not only the sovereign rights of China but the fundamental principles of peace and justice."

Ask End of Foreign Imposition.

The students decided to subscribe money for the relief of the strikers. Committees were appointed to raise the money.

Another resolution was directed toward the abolishment of extra-territoriality, which the meeting regarded as the seat of the trouble.

GREEK TROOPS CRUSH REVOLT ON SAMOS ISLE

Had Taken Control of Asia Minor Port

LONDON, June 8.—Greek troops occupied the port of Vathy, in Samos, today, and chased the rebels who have held the island since Saturday into the mountains, according to dispatches from Athens, a report here stated.

Martial law has been proclaimed. Rebels of the number of 600 occupied the port of Vathy, it was officially announced earlier.

The rebels confiscated half million drachmas from the state bank. Greek troops disembarked from destroyers to blockade the island.

Samos is a Greek island off the west coast of Asia Minor, and about forty miles from Smyrna. It is 27 miles long and ten miles wide, with a population of more than 50,000. While its ruler is a Greek, he is nominated by the Sultan of Turkey and the island pays annual tribute to Turkey.

London Threatens Further Invasion.

LONDON, June 8—Hhe Chinese situation was viewed seriously by the foreign office today. The powers are only able to protect foreigners living in the treaty ports.

If the Chinese government is unable to give protection, serious consequences must be expected, it was said.

GET OUT OF CHINA!

Withdraw All Troops and Warships from China! Stop Strikebreaking and War on the Chinese Workers, Peasants and Students!

Statement of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

To all Trade Unions, Workers' Political Parties, Working Farmers and the Workingclass in General:

COMRADES:— American troops are raiding, jailing and shooting striking textile workers who have revolted against the oppression of Japanese capitalists.

American troops have raided Chinese schools and universities, have shot, beaten and jailed Chinese students who have protested the foreign invasion.

The biggest American war fleet ever assembled is in the Pacific.

The Chinese masses are defending their right to national freedom as the American colonies did in 1776. They fight against the rule of foreign capitalists and landlords and all the capitalist nations are united against them.

Gunboats of the British, French Italian and American government are in Chinese ports with their batteries trained on Chinese cities. The imperialist nations are ready to murder thousands of Chinese workers and peasants in order that foreign capitalists may continue to rule and rob unhindered.

In China a new world war is being prepared. United to crush liberty in China, these imperialists are watching each other jealously. Each wants the biggest share of the loot.

Japan and the United States are rivals for the control of China while Great Britain and the United States are rivals for the control of the world. But when we speak of rivalry between these nations we mean rivalry between their capitalists and the capitalist governments.

The workers and farmers of these nations have no quarrel with one another.

They do not want to butcher one another to determine whether Japanese, British, or American imperialism shall rob the Chinese workers and peasants.

But if we allow the imperialists to have their way with the Chinese masses and crush the growing liberation movement, then they will try to hurl us at one another's throats in a war that means the slaughter of millions of workers and slavery for those who survive.

We must not wait until war comes to fight war.

We must show the imperialists that this murder of workers and farmers in the colonial and semi-colonial countries is known to us for what it is—a rehearsal of the methods by which the capitalist class intends to suppress us when we refuse to be enslaved any longer.

Why does the house of Morgan, the Rockefellers and the rest of the big bandits want to force the Chinese people to bow to them?

Because China is a rich country, and there are millions of workers to be forced to labor for low wages. The fabulous profits beaten from the blood of the Chinese workers and peasants will be used to finance armies and navies to enslave us—to strengthen capitalism at home.

The Chinese workers and peasants, in their brave struggle against imperialism, are fighting our fight. Their enemies are our enemies—whether they be British, Japanese, French or American imperialists.

We must aid the Chinese masses!

We must demand that American militarists stop their murderous work in China. No one has sent them there but the bankers and industrial lords and their government.

Has any worker or farmer been asked to give his approval of the dispatch of troops and warships to China?

Have the trade unions and the farmers' organizations been consulted?

Have the American masses, who will be called to fight and die for capitalism if war results from the imperialist rivalry in the Pacific, been asked for their consent to the murder of the Chinese workers and peasants?

THE ANSWER IS NO!

Neither will we be consulted when the greed of the fat robbers has brought war to us. Then we will be ordered and not asked to fight!

The time to act is NOW!

A United Front of the workers and farmers against the use of the armed forces of the American government to crush freedom in China is the order of the day for us in America.

A United Front of all workers and workers' organizations against Imperialist War.

A United Front for the withdrawal of all troops from China.

Bring home the businessmen who rob the Chinese masses day in and day out and who then yell for gunboats and marines when these masses will be robbed no longer.

HANDS OFF CHINA!

Mass Meetings, Demonstrations, Protests to Congressmen, Senators and the President!

Resolutions of Protest from Unions, Workers Fraternal Societies and Farmers Organizations!

Demand that the Pacific Fleet be Brought Home!

Demand that the Chinese Workers and Peasants be let alone!

Pledge Support to the Chinese Liberation movement led by the Kuo Min Tang Party!

Unite with the workers of Soviet Russia and all countries to end imperialism! Support Young China against the imperialist robbers!

Central Executive Committee
Workers (Communist) Party of America,
William Z. Foster, Chairman,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

20 MINERS ENTOMBED BY BLAST IN ANOTHER KENTUCKY COAL MINE

STURGIS, Ky., June 8.—An explosion in mine No. 9 of the West Kentucky Coal company here entombed twenty miners today. The miners were working at a depth of approximately 500 feet. Debris obstructed all passages into the shaft where the men were working.

At 2 o'clock six men had been rescued alive, but suffering slightly from gas and wounds caused by falling timbers.

Of the fourteen men remaining in the wrecked mine eleven are Negroes. Mine officials said they hope to bring them to the surface before nightfall.

KUOMINTANG AT CANTON DIGS IN AS PEOPLE'S ARMIES MARCH TO RELIEF AGAINST MERCENARIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANTON, China, June 8.—Civil war grips Canton following the firing begun yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock between the Kuomintang troops and the army of mercenary Yunnanese led by Yang Hsi-Min and Lau Chun-Wan.

Late Saturday several of the Cantonese (Kuomintang) gunboats steamed up the river past Shameen for Homan, the fortified position of the Kuomintang forces, dropping shells as they went into the Chinese section of the city occupied by the Yunnanese.

Machine gun fire across the Canton river continued until 5:30 in the afternoon.

Say One Thing—Or Another

The Yunnanese claim that they support the policies of the dead leader Sun Yat Sen, but this is discredited by their acts which can find no other explanation than that they are fighting the battles of imperialism by attacking the heart of the Kuomintang party by armed force.

The trouble broke when the Yunnanese demanded that the Kuomintang cease moving troops in such a way as to place them in at position of disadvantage if hostilities began between the two armies. Evidently they wished to assume the position of enemies under the guise of friends. The Canton forces replied with discipline, officially announcing the removal of the Yunnanese generals and the appointment of Chu Pai-teh to command of their forces.

Two Armies March to Reinforce Cantonese

The Cantonese are expecting heavy reinforcements of the people's army, commanded by Hsu Chung-Chi approaching from Skelung and Chu Pai-teh arriving from the north. But both are being opposed by Yunnanese forces under General Yang and General Lau.

Much depends upon the highly drilled and expert leadership of the people's army, the Whampoa military cadets, the pride of the Kuomintang. Still more depends upon the support furnished by the workers of Canton and the peasants in the immediately contiguous territory. The cargo loaders at the wharves are already out and the Kuomintang party may ask the workers to walk out on a general strike against the Yuannanese.

Foreigners are fleeing Canton, the boats to Honk Konk being crowded.

More U. S. Troops in China.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, China, June 8—Three hundred more U. S. marines rushed here on the U. S. S. Jason from Fort Cavite in the Philippines were landed and began patrolling the boundary line of the foreign settlement today.

Yu Ya Ching, head of the local Chinese Chamber of Commerce, named by the Peking government to serve on the government's investigation board, appealed yesterday to the foreigners for protection, saying that his life was threatened because he had not sided with the strikers and students.

ANTI-BRITISH RIOTS IN SHANGHAI WRECK LONDON BOND MARKET

LONDON, June 8.— All Chinese bonds were shattered on the London foreign market last week as ominous news came in from Shanghai, French government bonds also fell sharply with the weight of the declining franc, dropping point for point.

American Counsul Wants Lots of Troops.

Chinese do not credit such reports and are somewhat more suspicious of the statement of the American consul general, Cunningham, that because other Chinese officials are afraid to approach the consular body, he advocates retention of all armed forces until the students and strikers arrested in the whole trouble are safely tried and convicted. Cunningham is notorious for his opposition to the Chinese liberation movement.

Chinese point out that the Chinese officials who do not approach the consular body may share the disgust of the balance of their countrymen and not want to see Mr. Cunningham.

No Lies Allowed Printed.

The strike situation is quiet so far as violent outbreaks are concerned, but the embargo against food for foreigners is still clamped down tightly and with increasing effectiveness. A Japanese member of the white guard volunteer corps was captured yesterday and taken to the Chinese section where he is held.

The house of a Chinese foreman on the China Press, an American newspaper, was demolished in return for his scabbing. Printers who are working are forbidden to print any lies about the situation, reflecting on the Chinese.

British and Japs Worst Hated.

The American armed forces have taken an outrageously provocative attitude, raided the People's university and led the military strikebreaking, so they and the British and Japanese have been the chief targets of Chinese hatred. The general strike, of course, has affected all foreigners alike.

News arriving from the interior shows that the masses of China are just beginning now to express their dislike of the foreign exploiters. The situation may appear quiet, but the undercurrent of revolt is deep and spreading all over China.

Labor Defense Council Fights New Hysteria of Baiting Workers

tion of the union miners is pitiful, their larders are empty, and their families suffer from dire want.

In Pittsburgh, on June 15th, there will be opened the notorious "sedition" cases against Fred Merrick and ten other defendants, all of whom have distinguished themselves in the struggle to unionize western Pennsylvania. Under the czaristic sedition act one can be arrested for saying almost anything. In none of the cases has there been a charge of an overt act.

Frame Up Union Men

An indictment has been handed down by a Rochester, N. Y., grand jury charging William B. Fitzgerald, vice president of the Street Railway Union, and W. P. Collins, general organizer of the A. F. of L., with conspiracy to dynamite the high-speed train on the International Railroad near Buffalo on August 17th, 1922. This is an obvious frame-up and is merely a reward for the activity of these union leaders who, until their arrest, were recently active in Detroit.

Efforts to effect the release of Joseph Roth, a Cleveland Post Office employee and president of his local union, who was framed-up by the authorities in 1923 for his activities, have so far not met with success. He was charged with taking money from the mails but the words of the judge in sentencing Roth to five years imprisonment are an indication of the reason he is really serving: "Had you been more concerned with your duties and less with your rights, you might not have been in trouble."

Arrests in California

In California, where eighty men are in jail under the infamous criminal syndicalism law of that state for being members of the I. W. W., another trial is in process. Tom Conners, former secretary of the California General Defense Committee formed to defend the I. W. W., has been brought to trial for the third time on a charge of "attempting to influence a juror". His cases is before the infamous author of the equally infamous, "Busick Injunction", Judge Chas. O. Busick of the superior court of Sacramento.

Report from Honolulu tell of the jailing of 77 Fillipino sugar workers for striking against the inhuman wage paid them on the plantations of the sugar trust.

All this in addition to numerous deportations of foreign-born workers of late and the almost certain prospects of widespread industrial unrest that promises to sweep the country soon, seem to make highly timely and necessary the conference called by the Labor Defense Council to convene in Chicago on June 28th to devise ways and mans for rallying all forces in the labor movement for workers' defense.

Didn't Get to Twin Cities

LAKEHURST, N. J., June 8.—Forced by engine trouble to turn back at Cleveland while enroute to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., the United States navy's drigible Los Angeles returned to the naval air station here early today.

Hearst's Seattle Paper Remains Scab

SEATTLE, Wash., —(FP)—After one year of publication by strikebreakers, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer is still at outs with the Typographical Union. The union printers called the strike June 1, 1924, when the Hearst daily after many months of stalling finally refused to pay the same scale and meet the same conditions prevailing in all the other daily plants in Seattle. The stereotypers and mailers were locked out the same time when they refused to handle scab material sent down from the composing room by imported strikebreakers.

KELLOGG HURLS BRICKS AS CAL COMPLIMENTS BLOOD SONS OF THOR

MINNEAPOLIS, June 8.—While Coolidge confined himself to eulogising the ancient gods of Norway and throwing boquets at their descendants, his secretary of state kellogg, threw a few bricks at those who strayed away from the G. O. P. within the past few years.

Kellogg attacked the farmer-labor movement by implication, assailed those who advocated "class tyranny" and told those who wanted to take the power away from the capitalists to go "where they can find a government which does satisfy them."

The speech was regarded as a threat by the workers and farmers of Minnesota and will not aid the G. O. P. in bringing back the wandering voters to the fold.

FOSTER ASKS AID FOR PARTY PRESS AT ITALIAN PICNIC

Fight Reformist Betrayals, He Urges

"The betrayals of the labor fakers and social-democratic leaders have now demonstrated to great masses of workers throughtout the world the utter bankruptcy of reformism," declared William Z. Foster, national chairman of the Workers (Communist) Party, Sunday afternoon, in a short but vivid speech delivered as a special feature of the picnic of the Chicago Italian branches of the party, at Garden City Grove.

Comrade Foster pointed out clearly that the co-operation of British and Russian unions in the great movement for international trade union indicates that the workers of Great Britian are ceasing to look to Amsterdam for leadership and are turning their eyes toward Moscow. This, he showed, is an important factor in the unity movement.

Appeals for Italian Organ.

Comrade Foster closed his address with a ringing appeal for support of the Italian organ of the Workers Party, Il Lavoratore. He pointed out that the growth of the Italian section of the party is bound up with the growth of Il Lavoratore. No sacrifices must be spared, he said, to build up the paper, declaring that it must be transformed from a weekly into a daily at the earlist possible moment.

Following Comrade Foster, Jay Lovestone, the party's research director, spoke, calling attention to the opportunities now before the Italian federation. "The Communist movement is everywhere confronted with great difficulties," he declared, "but we must learn to face them and conquer them." He reiterated Comrade Foster's remarks in support of Il Lavoratore.

International Color to Picnic.

Altho arranged by the Italian branches, the picnic proved to be a thoroly international affair. Workers of all nationalities were present. Towards evening the "tombola", contest was held.

The annual picnic of the Young Workers League was held in the Beyer's Grove, California Ave., and Irving Park Blvd. Max Schachtman, editor of the Young Worker, who has also recently returned from the Soviet Union, was the speaker.

At all the picnics, the revolutionary merry makers enjoyed the dancing, and ample music, entertainment, and refreshments.

Bootleggers Get Jail Privileges.

Frank Lane and Terry Druggan, Chicago's bootleg barons, have been playing ball and smoking cigarettes in the jail yard. They are serving a sentence of one year for contempt of the federal court. The two wealthy beer kings played ball with two prison guards. It is rumored that the two bootleggers have been granted special privileges following a liberal bribe.

Restore Tolstoys House.

MOSCOW (By Mail)—The restoration has been undertaken of Leon Tolstoy's house in the Khamovniki sector of Moscow. The custodian of this museum-house is Tolstoy's married eldest daughter, who is seeking to restore the whole house in all its minutest details as it was in the famous writer's lifetime. This work is to be completed very shortly.

Beer Runner Arrested for Shooting.

Charged with the killing of Harry Hassmiller and the probable fatal shooting of Walter O'Donnell, in a suburban road house, Tony E. (Red) Mallon, was arrested today. Authorities assert he is a beer runner and himself in the "transfer business." Sixteen other men are being detained for questioning.

Expect Loeb to Recover

JOLIET, Ill., June 8.—With slight improvement in Richard Loeb's physical condition noted today, Joliet prison physicians advanced the hope that his mind will become normal again.

He was, however, still strapped to his bed and constantly under guard of two men.

CAL PRAISES ANCIENT GODS OF NORSEMEN

G. O. P. Paying Court to Petulant Vikings

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, June 8.—The sons of Thor and Odin, gods of ancient vintage, one time worshipped by the ancestors of the Norwegian voters of the Minnesotan plains, never fought more valiantly to bring rival gods to their feet in meek suplication than did the leaders of the G. O. P. in seeking to bring back to the republican fold the voting Vikings, who have trekked into other political camps of late years and have forsaken the republican gods, for others.

The Norwegians are celebrating the centennial of the first organized movement of their race to what is now known as the United States. Those hardy pioneers made their way to the great northwest and established themselves there. As long as the price of corn held good, and freight rates were not too high, their votes brought joy to Wall Street, because they were cast for the G. O. P.

But Wall Street got too greedy and the modern viking learned that they could not live on Thor and Odin and they did not like the idea of waiting for their goblet of mead until they visited Valhalla the nagan Scandinavian heaven. So they began to make trouble. Senator LaFollette came along, and tho not of the Viking breed, his words sounded good to the ears of the Norsemen. Then Magnus Johnson, made his appearance and his voice boomed all over the prairies, and Wall Street shuddered, tho why the devil it should be afraid of Magnus it is not easy to tell. But crooks are notoriously timid, popular opinion to the contrary.

The Norsemen, once so loyal to Wall Street, talked of farmer-labor parties and actually formed one. Now, this is what the gentlemen of Wall Street call a class party. And they don't like "class tyranny." Radicals consider this party very tame, but they welcome it as a step in the right direction. The capitalists are more afraid of what this labor party will do in the future than what it will do now. They feel that in the nature of things, radicals will mould it along more militant lines and carry their propaganda inside it.

Words of Praise

Hence the invasion of the north west by Coolidge and company. Cal went and told the Norsemen that they were the salt of the earth but me thinks, as John L. Lewis would say, that he committed a blunder. And again perhaps he did not. Cal takes the credit for discovering America away from Christopher Columbus and hands it to Lief the son of Erik, who according to Cal discovered this country 500 years before Christopher. Here is good news for the ku klux klan. But there will be gnashing of teeth among the Knights of Columbus, tho the Irish will not worry, for they claim Saint Brendan, made the grade ahead of the Norwegian and they are just as well pleased to let Lief the son of Eric have the credit as Columbus is not Irish by a long shot.

Take The Prize

The following excerpt from Cooldges speech, wins the stuffed hot dog in the great piffle contest. Paying tribute to the blonde sons of Norway, the president said: "They found the western ocean, and it was a Norseman who first traversed Bering strait and demonstrated that there was no land connection between Asia and North America. Within a very few years, one of them first traversed the Northwest passage from Atlantic to Pacific; and the same one, Amundsen, carried the flag of Norway to the South Pole."

An Irish-American politician by the name of Fitzgerald, running for mayor of Boston, convinced the Jews of that city that the Irish were descended from one of the lost tribes. He was elected. But the Norsemen of Minnesota are not as emotional as the Jews. They are more businesslike and are not so likely to be led away from their material interests by neat compliments to their ancestors. The workers of Minnesota of Norwegian descent are more interested in higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions than in the glory of Thor or Odin.

JURY TRIAL WEDNESDAY IN FREE SPEECH FIGHT OF WORKERS PARTY

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, was bound over to the municipal court yesterday when he demanded a jury trial at the Chicago avenue police court, following his arrest at the Communist open air meeting at W. North Ave. and Orchard St., Saturday night. The case was set Wednesday morning, June 10, 9:30 o'clock, in Court Room 1106, City Hall. Other cases growing out of the free speech fight conducted by the Workers (Communist) Party at the same place are also scheduled to come up Wednesday.

Class Conscious Labor Is Invited By Kellogg to Get Out of Minnesota

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the best way to judge Cal Coolidge's trip to Minnesota, to make the state safe for the republican party, is thru his selection of William D. Mitchell, the St. Paul corporation lawyer, as solicitor general of the United States to succeed James M. Beck, director in big banks and insurance companies.

Coolidge has been good to Minnesota; the Minnesota of the great capitalists. Frank B. Kellogg, one of the pets of Minnesota's capitalists, ex-U. S. senator, is now secretary of state; Pierce Butler is an associate justice of the U. S. supreme court, and now Mitchell is solicitor general; three legal battlers for capitalism entrenched in powerful positions in the government.

• • • •

There is unity between this trio. Mitchell once belonged to Butler's law firm. Butler rose to fame and wealth as legal adviser of the now bankrupt Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad. He was also an ardent defender in court of the "open shop" Twin City Rapid Transit Co., the traction trust that has Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and other Minnesota cities in its grip. Mitchell is a graduate of this "open shop," pro-corporation school. But his job in Washington, as solicitor general, is to fight the criminal corporations. His record up to the present time is a prophecy of the Don Quixote struggle that he will carry on. He will be good—to big business.

• • • •

It is also interesting to note that Mitchell is a democrat, appointed by a republican president. That is easy to explain.

When the Minnesota city and land workers organized their Farmer-Labor Party, the democratic party was crushed. It was ground to pieces in the developing class struggle. The republicans welcomed the democrats, their former enemies, with open arms, offering them a place of refuge. So Mitchell, the democrat, last fall supported Coolidge, the republican, for president. In order to seal that demo-republican marriage, Mitchell gets a fat job for himself and a strategic position for great capital in the government at Washington.

• • • •

But the Coolidge-Kellogg-Butler-Mitchell combination is not above making overtures to the place seekers who have found a spot in the sun on the shoulders of the worker and farmer masses of Minnesota. The reports state that farmer-labor and nonpartisan league officials participated in the Coolidge program at the Minnesota state fair grounds, when the strikebreaker president said, of the migration of the Scandinavian peoples to these shores, "it has nothing about it of class or caste," and when Secretary of State Kellogg later declared:

> "Either stand wholeheartedly behind the government and institutions of the United States or go elsewhere and find a government that satisfies you. There is no place for you here."

• • • •

Kellogg thus admits that there is a class cleavage among the peoples of the northwest. His speech was a direct challenge to the class conscious workers and farmers, not only of Minnesota and the northwest, but of the whole country. When that challenge was delivered the men who have been pushed into high places by the rise of the farmer-labor movement were found class-collaborating on the side of the capitalist interests they were chosen to fight.

Every incident of Coolidge's trip to Minnesota shows that Minnesota's masses must build anew and more solidly on the basis of the class struggle. They must fight the leaders who have betrayed them.

Let the slogans of the Workers (Communist) Party, raised in the Minneapolis municipal election on the day that Cooldige came into Minnesota, ring in the ears and stir to renewed and more intelligent action the masses in that state: Defeat the "open shop" bosses! Join the trade union of your trade! Amalgamate the craft unions into industrial unions! Build the Labor Party! Join the Workers (Communist) Party and aid in the fight to realize this program!

• • • •

The traitors to the workers and farmers have been revealed again in Minnesota. Let the laboring masses make the most of it.

11 WORKERS DIE CAUGHT IN TRAP BY FREIGHT TRAIN

Others Die in Wreckage of Coal Cars

BULLETIN.

CONVERSE, Ind., June 8—The toll taken by the C. & O. railroad wreck near Converse this morning mounted to 17 dead and several seriously injured late today when a second coal car was raised and 7 additional bodies were recovered. Eoffrts at identifying the bodies were being made at Peru.

CONVERSE, Ind., June 8.—Eleven bodies have been recovered and eight or ten men are missing from a section gang of twenty-five men, caught under fifteen coal cars which were derailed on the C. and O., railroad near here, where the C. and O., runs beneath the Pennsylvania trestle.

Three of the section hands dug from beneath one of the coal cars were living while eleven others, dead, were also recovered. Wreck trains from the C. and O., and Pennsylvania railroads are seeking additional bodies from beneath the piled up coal cars.

Both Negro and White Dead.

Among the known dead is M. A. Mathian, of Peru, Ind., head brakeman on the train who was killed when the train left the tracks. Floyd Landess, white, and George Keel, Negro, two of the section hands would probably live. Most of the dead were taken to Peru, in ambulances.

The section crew was repairing the track directly beneath the Pennsylvania tresle when the C. and O. freight train No. 83, westbound, passed. The locomotive and a few of the cars passed thru the tunnel safely, before the rails spread.

The section crew was lined up against the wall in the tunnel and one of the freight cars loaded with coal, fell on them, burying them.

The names of the dead were unobtainable early this afternoon as they had not been identified. The crew was working out of Peru.

Promise Another "Investigation."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 8.— A thoro investigation into the wreck at Converse resulting in the loss of eleven lives was orderd by John McCardle, chairman of the public service commission, immediately after he was officially informed of the mishap shortly before noon today.

McCardle despatched Ray Ribbons, railway inspector of the commission, to the scene with instructions to make a comprehensive probe of the accident.

Known By First Names Only.

PERU, Ind., June 8.—Considerable difficulty was being experienced here this afternoon in identifying the bodies of seven section hands brought here from the scene of the wreck at Converse.

Officials explained the section gang for the most part was composed of Negroes and Italians who were known by their first names only and a careful check of the payroll was being made to learn the identity of the dead.

Only one body, that of William McMinn, 19, white, of Peru, was identified of the seven brought here this afternoon.

Communists Denounce Monanchy.

ROME, June 8.—The opposition parties joined the fascists in proclaiming the monarchy during the celebration of the 25th anniversary of King Victor Emanuel's rule. The Communists were the only party refusing to take part in the demonstration.

SCOPES' DEFENSE DODGES ISSUE OF CHURCH DOPE

Catering to Powerful Anti-Labor Parsons

..NEW YORK, N. Y. June 8.—John T. Scopes, teacher of biology in the Dayton, Tenn., public high school, is coming here this week to confer with the Civil Liberties Union officials on the conduct of his defense against the indictment for teaching evolution. Clarence Darrow will also take part in the conference, it is said.

So far, most of those connected with the defense have not defended the Darwin theory of evolution, but have confined themselves to demanding the abolition of the Tennessee anti-evolution law on the grounds that the right to teach a theory is granted in the federal constitution. The defense lawyers seem anxious not to offend the preachers.

Afraid to Offend

Prof. John R. Neal, attorney for Scopes, announced that he is "in charge of the religious aspects of the case, and expects to call eminent theologians, both orthodox and liberal to the witness stand." Neal is trying to show that the teaching of evolution and the statements of the bible regarding the creation of the world in six days do not conflict.

Neither Darrow nor the Civil Liberties' officials have so far showed, in their statements on the case, that religious teachings are used by the exploiters as a tool to keep the workers doped. The priests and ministers of the country are preaching against trade unions, against Communism, against the Soviet Union, and are promising the workers a pleasant time in heaven after their life blood has been sucked out of them in the factories on earth. But the Civil Liberties Union and Scopes' attorneys have maintained a discreet silence on this aspect of the case.

Scopes' attorneys are expected to make a motion to quash the indictment when the case comes before Judge John T. Raulston on July 10, on the grounds that the charge is vague, and unconstitutional.

Darwin's Law on Evolution.

LONDON June 8.—Speaking before the Victoria institute here, professor of geology, George McCready, of Union College, Nebraska, declared that "scientific facts bear out the literal truthfulness of the first chapter of Genesis," and that "evolution is false."

Leonard Darwin, 75 year old son of Charles Darwin, the great scientist, and originator of the theory of evolution, declared that no scientific man disputes evolution. He said:

"This attack on evolution is a retrograde movement, but it is only a passing phase which will fade away. No scientific man disputes evolution, altho he may argue in regard to the manner in which evolution came about.

"Every human being originates from a child and originally from a germ or small particle of organic matter. In the process of development from the original germ, there is no break in the series. We cannot say where mind or consciousness begins.

"My father was subject to a certain amount of abuse when he published his work. He took it quite calmly. The attacks died down.

"I feel sure American scientific men will meet these cruel attacks in the same fearless spirit and I am certain it will be with the same results."

Shepherd Jury Nearly Completed.

The jury for the trial of William D. Shepherd, charged with having caused the death of his ward, William Nelson McClintock, may be completed by nightfall.

This became a possibility today when, with two panels accepted and sworn and three members of the third panel tentatively agreed on attorneys began examination of the last prospective juror.

Its Purpose is to Strengthen the Labor Unions by Amalgamation of Existing Unions, Organization of the Unorganized, and by Replacing Reactionary and Class Collaboration Policies with a Unified Program for the Transformation of the Unions into Organs of Revolutionary Class Struggle for the Overthrowal of Capitalism and the Establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

T. U. E. L. IS ONLY HOPE OF SHOE WORKERS

Boot and Shoe Only a Company Union

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

The shoe industry of New England is faced with a serious crisis. The manufacturers in the three principal New England shoe centers of Haverhill, Lynn and Brockton are all talking wage cuts. The gossip at Lynn is 15 to 30 per cent wage reductions, while at Haverhill the amount of reduction spoken of is 20 per cent.

At Haverhill, the Protective Shoe Workers' Union is well organized and it can be depended upon to lead a militant struggle against wage cuts. At Lynn, the unions are divided mainly between the Amalgamated Shoe Workers and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Unions. At Brockton, all the plants with the exception of three, are controlled by the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

Conditions Getting Worse.

In spite of this apparent organization, the shoe workers are very much divided. Along with the threatened wage reductions, speeding up methods of production are on the increase, unemployment is rife, and many factories are moving from the small towns back to Boston. Many say the reason is that the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union functions effectively in Boston for the bosses.

After years of struggle, the New England Shoe Workers find themselves faced with this unfortunate situation. Sentiment for amalgamation of the unions, in the shoe industry, is probably more wide-spread than in any other single industry.

The sentiment for amalgamation is crystalising into an organized movement. The activities of the T. U. E. L. among the shoe workers, are mainly responsible for this. Last January, the T. U. E. L. held a conference at Boston, and adopted a program, which fits exactly the existing situation in the shoe industry.

Amalgamation Elemental Demand.

The heart of this program calls for the amalgamation of the independent unions, to be followed by general amalgamation on the basis of demands upon the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, which if put into effect, would change it from a "company" union into a trade union, and make general amalgamation possible. It can plainly be seen from recent happenings in New England, that the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union has degenerated into a "company" union.

In Brockton, where the bitter revolt against the employers and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union took place a couple of years ago, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union exists today only by virture of its "union" label agreement with the employers. The rank and file of the shoe workers at Brockton have no union privileges as ordinarily understood. Local "O" rules the roost, under the dictation of the "quarter meter." (The business agent who goes thru the shop and collects 25 cents, now raised to 35 cents per week.)

The Brockton Strike Result.

The story of the Brockton strike and its aftermath is well known to all the New England Shoe Workers. To overcome the odious reputation of the B. & S., thousands of dollars are being spent in the city of Lynn, to convince the Lynn shoe workers that unity with the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union will be their salvation. This propaganda has been making some headway among would-be leaders of the workers. The reaction of many being: "We know the boot and shoe is rotten, but if the workers all join it, and no other organization exists, then the workers will be forced to organize a real union."

This sophistry was overheard by myself and acting District Organizer Tom Bell, at conferences recently held both at Lynn and Brockton. The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union itself has recently given the most effective answer to this sophistry and to all of the would-be "amalgamators" who want all the unions to give up and have their members join the Boot and Shoe. The answer was: The convention of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union just held at Montreal, Can.

The B. & S. Convention.

This was described by some of the delegates as a debauch from beginning to end. A majority of the time being spent in guzzling good Canadian beer, and whenever the convention did get into session, it was controlled by the Bain and Lovely machine, which is run on ball bearings.

The heads of this machine—Bain and Lovely, had their salaries raised from $5,000 to $7,500 per year.—The per capita tax was increased from 25 cents to 35 cents. Penalties of $25 for engaging in illegal strikes was passed. The five dollar assessment limit in one year was taken off. The sky is now the limit on assessments.

The entire proceedings of the convention are known in detail to every intelligent New England shoe worker, and the thousands of dollars being spent in Lynn cannot counteract the effects of this convention upon the rank and file.

Expect Early Treachery.

The rank and file shoe workers say openly. "Now that the officers are all set with their increase in salary we here in Brockton can expect reductions in wages."

In the midst of this confusion and bankruptcy, the T. U. E. L. is heading a militant drive for real amalgamation. In New York City the T. U. E. L. is primarily responsible for the present conferences being conducted between the representatives of the Protective and American Unions.

These conferences are looking toward the amalgamation of both organisations. The recent conferences of militant shoe workers at Lynn and Brockton, will intensify the work and link up nationally this rank and file movement for amalgamation thruout the length and breadth of the shoe industry. The T. U. E. L. is looked upon as the foremost champion, not alone of unity between the organizations, but of a militant struggle of the workers against the employers.

PIPE LINE LABORERS REJECT WAGE CUT AND GO OUT ON A STRIKE

BELLAIRE, Ohio.—Refusing to accept a 50 cent reduction in their daily wages, more than a score of laborers in the employ of the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co. here, laid down their tools and went on strike.

Similar action, it is understood, was taken by labor gangs at Martin's Ferry, and Bridgeport, Ohio.

The men were receiving $4.50 a day (nine hours). They received notice of a 50 cent reduction in wages effective at once. In Bellaire the labor gang which was laying new pipe lines, working last week on north Jefferson St., also went on strike.

Boston Building Laborers' Battle.

BOSTON, June 8. — Building laborers are holding out in their strike for 77½ and 80 cents an hour. A conference of contractors, strikers and building trades council representatives to endeavor to settle the strike was held, but contractors remained adamant in their determination not to increase wages from the old 67 to 70 cents scale.

WORLD TRADE UNION UNITY IN MILWAUKEE

Subjects Interests All But Reactionaries

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—At the last meeting of the Federated Trades Council, the question of the world trade union unity was taken up and theroly discussed. A majority of the delegates had an opportunity to become acquaintted with this very vital and important problem.

The attention of the delegates was called to the fact that recently the manufacturers' association pointed out that there is a considerable difference in the scale of wages received by the German and American workers, and that the world economic equilibrium cannot be maintained very long under such conditions.

This report indicated that there will be another attempt to lower the standard of living of the American worker by using against him the labor of other countries. It was also pointed out that the international bankers are establishing their rule over the entire world and that only a unified world trade union movement is capable of coping with this situation.

Reactionaries Make Attempt to Stop Endorsement.

The reactionaries immediately got busy to sabotage this move, but seeing the sentiment of the rank and file and fearing to oppose it they compromised by making a motion to refer the matter to the executive committee. In this way the question will again come up at the next meeting and the majority of the delegates will have an opportunity to become acquainted with this important question.

Already some of the militant members have been invited by unions to address them on this important question.

CUP WORKERS OF EASTON, PA., ARE BADLY TREATED

Long Hours in Smoky Rooms at Low Pay

By A. HOFFMAN
(Worker Correspondent)

EASTON, Pa.—Here is news of the Dixie cup shop conditions. Here are about 225-50 workers employed in this mill and about 100 of them are young girls (the youngest about 16 years of age) and women. Young boys about 15 in number.

The lowest wage for young girls, to start, $10 per week, for women workers a few dollars more.

After six months' service they get $11.50 per week which shows only $1.50 increase. Young boys are getting $15 per week and adult laborers from 30 to 40 cents per hour. Besides, the workers are getting a "bonus" if they are fortunate enough, but that depends more on your face than your skill.

Skilled mechanics are only getting 60 cents per hour. The machines are guarded as law demands, but some girls are working in damp and smoky rooms, which is strong enough to choke anybody. Regular working hours are 50 a week, in rush time 54 hours for girls—in some cases 60 hours for men; dinner hour, 45 minutes off.

Wage Reduction.

About two months ago there was a reduction of 25 per cent and "bonus," which comprises the bulk of the workers' weekly pay. This was a slash at least of from $3 to $6 per worker off their weekly pay which was adjusted according to their wages. The management is said to be "very poor."

The feeling among the workers is one of dissatisfaction with all kinds of patriotic collections.

If you want to defend yourselves against your bosses and wage reductions, you must energetically organize a shop committee of all department workers, men, women and girls, also, look to no race barriers, whether colored race or foreign, because a unified organization by shop committee will be the only solution to fight your bosses against any more attempts to reduce wages. Better your condition and demand the bosses recognition of your shop committee!

Another appeal to Dixie cup workers. You must subscribe to the following working class papers, the DAILY WORKER, $2 for three months, $3.50 for six months and $6 for one year, or to Young Worker, weekly paper (for Young Workers), one year $1.50—85 cents for six months. All subscriptions sent to address 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

MACHINISTS! RALLY TO THE LEFT WING!

To All Supporters of the Left Wing Organized Around the T. U. E. L. in The International Association of Machinists:

THE election of Grand Lodge Officers for the I. A. of M. is over and the Johnston-Davison administration has counted itself into power again, in spite of the majority of votes cast by the rank and file against it.

Due to numerous so-called technicalities, and by throwing out the ballots from a score of opposition locals, as well as by counting of ballots from Johnston's "blue sky" locals sent in after May 4th, and also due to a number of other violations of the constitution, the class-collaboration administration has again succeeded itself in office.

THE left wing forces organized around the T. U. E. L. conducted its own campaign for its own candidates and program in the nominations, but were not able to secure the necessary support to be pledged on the ballot—and therefore supported the Andersen center opposition slate in the referendum, tho sharply ciritizing their lack of any program and other confusion.

It has been proven now that only thru the support of the left wing forces was the center group able to poll such a great number of votes in this election. We repeat again that the T. U. E. L. militants are the only elements in the union with a practical program of struggle and that only the left wing program and left wing leadership will be able to build the I. A. of M. and make it a powerful weapon in the hands of the machinists in this country.

WE appeal to all militant and progressive Locals to immediately protest against this unfair counting by the administration and urge them to demand an investigation and recount. We propose that every District Council in the important industrial centers elect a committee for a national investigation of the referendum and how the ballots were counted.

We further recommend immediate calling of local conferences of all militants and progressives to consider ways and means to make an honest election possible in the I. A. of M. Such conference will be called shortly in the city of Chicago and other industrial centers.

A NATIONAL conference of all militant and progressives must be called in the near future to consider how to save the organization from becoming merely an auxiliary to the bankers' association. The left wing forces will continue to carry on a militant struggle against the reactionary leadership of Johnston and Davison until the I. A. of M. has become a real fighting organization and a real factor in the class struggle.

The left wing forces in the I. A. of M. call for a united struggle against the class collaboration plans of Johnston & Co., for the amalgamation of all metal trades organizations, for the right of minority expression in the union and for a labor party.

Defeat this latest attempt of the "B. & O." sharks and crush the attempt to turn the union over to the capitalists.

Rally to the left wing program!

PROGRESSIVES HAVE QUESTIONS FOR BRENNAN-CAPPELLINI AND HERMANSON IN DISTRICT ONE

By ALEX REID
Secretary, Progressive Miners' Committee

In District 1, United Mine Workers of America, the fakers have fallen out with each other and the reaction ridden miners are being treated to an exposure of Cappellini, Lewis tool and friend of the operators, and another exposure of Brennan, no less a faker than Cappellini, who is running against him.

Brennan, no better than Cappellini, has with him supported the Lewis machine since his election. Class collaboration has been the policy of Brennan as it has been the policy of Cappellini. The miners of District 1 will not be fooled into voting for Brennan by his attack on Cappellini. They are twins of the same canary stripe and the miners will remember the accusations against one can in most cases be used against the other.

Fakers' Catechism.

At present, Brennan is circularizing the district with a statement that miners should take note of, as from it a few choice examples may be taken, as shown below.

Brennan first asks Cappellini why he received $10,000 from a coal company for the loss of an arm, when the Luzerne county court records show he received only $500.

It is hardly to be doubted why he received the $10,000. Could it be imagined Cappellini got $10,000 from an operator for taking care of the interest of the miners? Why did Lewis get a half million ($500,000) from the operators, as hinted by Frank Farrington? Why, if not for the same reason both Cappellini and Brennan have made class collaboration their chief policy in the miners' union? Payment for treachery!

Why So Late?

Again Brennan asks, "why did you, Cappellini, advise the men in No. 6, Ewen, to work longer hours, when one of the principles of the U. M. W. of A. is no backward step in wages or conditions?"

Brennan, where were you on that meeting date? Why did you not challenge Cappellini at the very time he made that statement and show him up at that time? What were you promised for not doing so? And what happened since to bring you to life?

Again Brennan asks, "Why did you, Cappellini, allow the Penny Coal company to shut down the Old Forge and Butler collieries for five weeks when all other collieries were working?"

Referred to Farrington

Brennan, we will answer that. Cappellini did this for the same reason your fellow faker Farrington permitted the operators in O'Fallon, Illinois to operate one mine and shut down the other and refuse to give the miners an equal share of the work—permitting the operators to violate the contract. Are you so dumb, Brennan, that you don't know why, or are you only trying to mislead the miners?

Simple Question

Brennan asks, "Why did you, Cappellini, remove Mike Forlock as president from local union 699, when the only complaints are that he is too friendly with Edmunds, who is not too friendly with Lewis and will not worship Cappellini?"

Let us answer again. Cappellini did this for the same reason that all the fakers in the U. M. W. of A. are expelling their opponents; for the same reason Tom Ray and Jim Oates were expelled, because no militant will be permitted to interfere with the smooth operation of the collaboration policy of the official machine and its campaign of betrayals to the bosses.

For similar reason, Alex Howat was expelled by Lewis-Brennan and Cappellini, both actively supporting Lewis in doing so; Myerscough, McDonald, Thompson and Watt were expelled for this reason—because they are militant fighters against wage cuts, longer hours, loss of conditions, because they fought for higher scales, a six-hour day and five-day week, unemployment insurance, a minimum wage.

Another Aspirant.

Hermanson, another aspirant for presidency against Cappellini, feels the urge and calls out in the wilderness. It is not, so he says, that he seeks office, O, no! His irresistable urge is to care for the people!

Hermanson, before you claim any right of support of the progressives, you will answer the following questions—and remember our policy as progressive miners is based on the following demands:

Wage increase of 25 per cent; minimum wage of $7.50 a day; abolition of conciliation board; when idle by company's fault, payment at the minimum wage rate of $7.50 a day; for a Labor Party; international trade union unity; nationalization and workers' control of the mines; the absolute right of free expression within the union; six-hour day and five day week; etc.

Where Do You Stand?

Hermanson, those oposed to the above principles are opposed to the miners. We have been betrayed time and again, but we have learned and we advance our policy and demand where candidates stand.

The Progresive Miners demand no class collaboration with the boses. We demand our leaders stand flat-footed on the basis of the class struggle, and fight for our demands. What do you say?

LAWRENCE MILL SLAVES FACE STARVATION

Boys and Girls Are Undernourished

LAWRENCE, MASS. — The Dyer and Finisher Local Union No. 784 of the United Textile Workers of America has made the following statement:

"We, of the Dyers' and Finishers' Union of Lawrence have read all the great speeches that have been made for nearly three years by all the great textile men. We have also listened for nearly three years to them telling us the great things that we would have in—first the fall, then the spring.

"But none of these great speakers have told us how we are going to live on wind. We have been working two days, three days, one-half day, and no days—and reading notes from school teachers saying our children were under-nourished.

"We have read the weight of our boys and girls with tears in our eyes, but we cannot get bread and butter out of stones. So we have begun to believe that the real cause of this depression is the systematic cutting down of production to increase the unemployed army and frighten the workers still at work with the fear of being fired—so that changes in piece work rates and speeding up devices, such as adding more looms to the weaver and spindles to the spinner—may be put thru without resistance by the textile slaves."

I. W. W. MARINE WORKERS ISSUE CALL FOR UNITY CONFERENCE HAVANA, CUBA, JANUARY 15, 1926

NEW YORK CITY.—The Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W., has issued the following call to the marine workers of the Western Hemisphere in the union's official organ, The Marine Worker—issued for June.

"To All the Marine Transport Workers of the Western Hemisphere (OFFICIAL)

"Fellow Workers:—The first internationall conference of the Marine Transport Workers of the Western Hemisphere was held in New Orleans, March 1st, this year. Due to the short space of time that the several unions had to prepare for this conference, many were unable to send delegates. Despite this handicap, the conference was very successful and laid the groundwork for closer cooperation and solidarity among the unions of the western world.

"The experience of practically all the workers of North, Central and South America, and especially those countries bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, clearly demonstrate that isolated strikes seldom succeed and that the combined forces of capitalism can only be met with the concerted action of the workers on an international scale.

"Realising this, the New Orleans conference decided to hold another conference in Havana, Cuba, January 15, 1926, in which all progressive marine unions of the Western Hemisphere should be invited to attend.

"We invite you to send an official reprsentative to this conference so that we may devise ways and means of achieving real unity among all the marine transport workers of the Westrn Hemisphere."

No Wonder Sailors Are Seeing Red!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY—To those who have doubted that workers' conditions are different under Soviet rule, the following news story published in the New York Times as an Associated Press dispatch (a source hardly to be considered Bolshevist), should be interesting:

"Soviet Sailors' Snap; Short Hours, Never Jobless, Vacation with Pay."

"LIVERPOOL, May 25—The Soviet steamer Bordinney, which visited Liverpool recently, attracted much attention among British sailors not only because of its social halls, elaborately furnished, for all members of the crew, but also because of the long rest periods provided for the men. On all Soviet Russian ships the seamen work four hours with eighht hours off, while the stokers do four hour shifts with a twelve hour break between their turns of duty.

"The Bordienny was visitied by members of the British Independent Labor party, who were shown the social halls and the sailors and firemen's reception room, the latter of which has a Lenin corner, where photographs of Lenin, Karl Marx, Rosa Luxemburg and other noted Soviet leaders are shown.

"It was explained to the British visitors that Russian seamen are never without a job or a ship. If their vessels are tied up or in dock for repairs the pay goes on regularly until they go to sea again, whether in the same or another vessel. One month's leave, with full pay, is granted annually, when the seamen either visit their homes or bring their families to the port of their arrival, the expense of travel being borne by the state.

"Most Soviet vessels carry an orphan boy, to whose upkeep all the crew contributes. This money accumulates until the young man becomes of age, when it is for him to decide what trade or profession he will follow. Most of these boys come from the Ukraine and do odd jobs about the ship."

Jewish Farmers in Soviet Russia Get Land for Communes

WASHINGTON, June 3. — Fifteen thousand Jewish families, says a report to the Russian Information Bureau from the council of nationalities in Moscow, have applied for land on the 120,000 acres recently set aside for Jewish farmers by the Ukrainian Soviet government.

By the middle of April, 1,450 of these families had organized 94 cooperative farms. The American Joint Distribution Committee is helping them. Another 27,000 acres in white Russia have been set aside for Jewish farmers, and 1,200 families will be settled there this year.

A long-term credit of $70,000 has been arranged for them by the central Soviet government.

Bulgarian Minister Resigns Post, But He Don't Go Back Home

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Stephen Panaretoff, Bulgarian minister in Washington since the beginning of the world war in 1914, has resigned. He will continue to live in the American capital, however, rather than risk the disturbances that have marked recent years in Sofia.

Panaretoff remained in Washington during the entire war, while his government was at war against the allies. President Wilson preserved a technical neutrality with Bulgaria, presumably in the hope of breaking down the Central European combination.

British Balloon Forced Down

BRUSSELS, Belgium, June 8.—The English balloon "Elsie" one of the eighteen balloons which left here Sunday in the international race for the Gordon Bennett cup, was reported this afternoon to have been forced down on the railroad tracks near Etaples, a seaport near Boulogne, France. The balloon was said to have been destroyed. Pilot Johnson and his aide were reported unhurt.

Red International Proposes Program of Action for I. W. W.

The Red International Affiliation Committee, which is appointed by the Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions to represent it in its relations with the Industrial Workers of the World, has issued the following proposal for a program of action in the I. W. W., aimed to revive that organization and develop better understanding between it and the other revolutionary unions of the world:

THE Industrial Workers of the World, once the leading revolutionary organization of America and foremost champion of working class unity and struggle, is today theoretically confused and organically disintegrated.

The 1923 convention represented 38,828 members in good standing. The 1924 convention represented 30,722; while in March, 1925, since the "emergency" split has taken some and allowed thousands to drop out, the membership paying dues for March, 1925, is shown by the general office bulletin (Chicago) to have fallen to only 13,620. The "emergency" split for the same month reports 1,086 members for Industrial Union No. 310 and 1,635 for Industrial Union No. 120, which is practically all the "emergency" split can claim. Thus the whole I. W. W. can show only 16,341 in both factions.

Granting the seasonal gain expected for Industrial Union No. 110 during the harvest (which will disappear when it is over), and the more healthy growth of the Marine Transport Workers since it has adopted the policy of the united front, still the I. W. W. is losing.

Causes of Present Demoralization.

This has come about largely because the I. W. W. policy has not developed in conformity with changed relations between the world's working class and the world's capitalist class since the latter began its historical ascendancy to power in the Bolshevik revolution and establishment of the Soviet power.

Small minds which cannot comprehend historical change that conflicts with or modifies their out-grown theories, chronic oppositionists who seek prominence by fighting the forces and facts of change, self-seeking demagogs, paid spies and disrupters playing upon prejudices, and honest workers whose vision is so fixed upon the beauties of the yet distant future society that they do not see nor deal with the hard realities of the long struggle to that desired goal—all have led the I. W. W. into a blind alley of anarcho-syndicalism, sectarianism, pacifism, decentralization and decay.

Confusion Fertilized Disruption.

This has made a field wherein the "emergency" split has worked. Only such widespread theoretical confusion, however honest it may be, could have made possible the ruin brought in by disruptive elements. Had not it been for this wrong theory, Rowan, Bowerman, Grady and Raddock would have made no headway at all when they got out injunctions in the capitalist courts, gave stool pigeon testimony before a capitalist judge and recklessly called for a split—a course of disruption which merited their expulsion.

Only such confusion could have lost to the I. W. W. its old position as an advocate of the overthrowal of capitalism and lost its conception even of industrial unionism, proof of which is seen in the tendency toward "mass" conventions and the Seattle plan of I. U. No. 310 to abolish the industrial unions.

When the Misunderstanding Began.

From the famous fighting and healthy organization that persisted thru all persecution before and during the war, the I. W. W. began its gradual decline in 1920 and 1921. The issue arose when the general executive board which reported to the 1920 convention that it had decided in favor of affiliation to the Third (Communist) International, gave as its reasons:

> "The board believed that in so far as the Third International was the only workers' international that had ever come into existence thruout history that disagreed with the meek and mild parliamentary programs, that we should show our approval of it as opposed to the opportunism of the Second International, and particularly so, because we were convinced that our Russian fellow workers in Russia are only maintaining the political character of the first Soviet government to hold and gain power temporarily during the transitory period from capitalism to industrial Communism."—SOLIDARITY, May 15, 1920.

Marxians Naturally Turn to Leninism.

The R. I. A. C. points out this statement of the G. E. B. in 1920 as proof of the natural tendency of the Marxian revolutionary elements to evolve towards Leninism, which is Marxism in the historical epoch of capitalist-imperialism's decline. It was a recognition, clear and unequivocal, of the necessity of some form of organized force, some form of state power, some form of government, political in nature, but wholly devoted to the interests of the proletariat during the long period of transition.

The G. E. B. statement of 1920 and the conscious and friendly response to the Soviet power that arose among the working class of all the world, was a recognition of the fact that the act of seisure of state power did not end, but only began the revolution, that only thru and under the protection of the armed workers' government, can capitalist resistance be crushed out, the indifferent and ignorant slowly brought up to the level in class consciousness of the revolutionary few and all ideological and mechanical factors of civilization be put to work to erase the heritage of superstition, selfishness, ignorance lack of production due to civil war's ruination and the whole category of the evils of capitalism.

The Great Mis-Step.

The failure of the I. W. W. to proceed upon this path of understanding and harmony with the forces of history, its failure to recognize that the necessity of a revolutionary government requires as a corollary a revolutionary party of disciplined workers devoted to attaining the revolutionary ideal by whatever means necessary, stands in the foreground as one of the great stumbling blocks of theory over which the I. W. W. has shattered its possible strength.

Failing to learn from facts, refusing to acknowledge the error of trying to apply its old criticism of the yellow socialist party to the revolutionary party of Communism, and closing its eyes to the international struggle of Communists, the I. W. W. has clung to the dogma of anti-politics and persistently misinterpreted "politics" as "parliamentarism." Considering its experience with the old socialist parties, this mistake was not unnatural but the fault of the old socialist party was not that it used parliamentary action, but that it made election to parliament an end in itself, subordinating everything to winning and keeping office within the capitalist government structure—parliament.

What is Communist Politics?

The Communists on the contrary, devoted to winning, not office, but the revolutionary goal by whatever means are necessary, regard election campaigns and agitational positions in parliament as only one of many, and not always the most important, means of mobilizing the exploited masses for the revolutionary overthrowal of bourgeois power both in government and industry. These facts should cause the I. W. W. officially to revise its attitude toward political parties, as many of its members have revised their individual views and found their place as revolutionary workers in the revolutionary Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Again, it will come as a surprise to many members of the I. W. W. to learn that the following question once carried on referendum:

> Resolved, that we endorse the Third International with reservations, as follows: That we take no part in parliamentary action whatsoever and that we reserve the right to develop our own tactics according to conditions."

Fraudulent Vote Counting in Headquarters.

The above question, one of three upon the subject, was carried by general referendum in 1920, reported in "Solidarity" of December 18, 1920; the voting being 1,111 in favor and 994 opposed. But by a vote counting fraud as rotten as any ever pulled off in the A. F. of L., the ballot committee with the consent of the G. E. B., counted 127 "NO" votes twice, and blandly stated that, "Therefore, the entire referendum on the Third International was defeated."

The rule of censorship never before known in the I. W. W., and of expulsions of Communists and all other members who, after the organization of the economic international, the RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOR UNIONS, advocated affiliation of the I. W. W. to the R. I. L. U., grew along with anarcho-syndicalist confusion and led directly to the split and loss of membership and spirit.

Red Internationalists Urge Revival.

Today, with several mutually hostile anarcho-syndicalist groups wrangling over petty constitutional quibbles, there exists no group, except the adherents of the Red International, to formulate and advocate a program of action around which the censored, disfranchised rank and file may rally to re-establish the I. W. W. as a vigorous and revolutionary economic organization with a future better than its past.

The preamble, good as it is, does not serve the place of a program of action. If any contend differently, let them explain how it is that the organization has fallen into its present tragic state notwithstanding the excellence of the preable. Preambles do not make an organiastion revolutionary. The preamble of the United Mine Workers, an industrial union with a militant membership as well, states that labor is entitled to the value it produces, yet the U. M. W. of A. is floundering in the morass of class collaboration and decay. The same goes for the more "revolutionary" preamble of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, another industrial union which is, take notice, independent of the A. F. of L.

For a Program of Action.

Just as in these other organiaztions, so in the I. W. W., the hope of progress lies in the propagation and adoption by the rank and file of a left wing program of action ,and the raising of every point of such a program as an issue in every discussion on organization policy; particularly by the demand of the rank and file, whether of individuals or groups, from every nominee for responsible office in the I. W. W., a statement of his stand upon each point of such a program of action. The habit of nominees for high office hiding out and pretending to be indifferent while cliques of personal friends are intriguing for their election is "politics" of the worst kind under a mask of pretense that they are not politicians. Members must rout these nominees out of their hiding places and demand that they speak up and say what they stand for.

For this purpose, the Red International Affiliation Committee proposes the following program of action to the membership of the I. W. W., and urges that each member insist upon discussion of it upon its merits and insist as well that every nominee for any office, from top to bottom of the organization, state whether he favors or opposes each issue it raises and explain why.

Unity Within the I. W. W.

1. Unity on the job against the bosses, to attain common action of all workers, including those rank and filers who have gone "emergency."

2. Joint meetings of conflicting branches; joint delegate conferences of industrial unions which are split—with the agenda to be limited to the one question of unity.

3. Any general convention of either faction shall be pledged to elect a permanent committee on unity, to formulate and publish its terms for unity with the other faction, and to set a date and place for joint meetings to discuss and agree upon terms acceptable to both.

Organize the Unorganized.

In the agricultural industry of the United States there are engaged approximately 2,000,000 wage workers, the I. W. W. has organized only 980 of them (with seasonal variation of the harvest increasing this figure). In the lumber industry there are about 250,000 workers, and the I. W. W. has 5,435 of them (counting the "emergency" split of 1,635); in marine transport there are about 150,000 workers, and the I. W. W. has about 4,000 of them; in metal mining there are approximately 110,000, out of which the I. W. W. has organised only 1,980. In general construction there are tens of thousands the I. W. W. has never touched with its present 660 members belonging to the regular I. W. W. and 1,086 in the "emergency." These figures are taken from per capital payments for March, 1925, published in the General Office Bulletin and the "emergency" bulletins.

In the above industries the I. W. W. has little or no competition. That it has best succeeded in these fields is shown by the fact that the five industrial unions covering these industries embraced 88 per cent of the whole I. W. W. in 1924, while 24 "paper" industrial unions, which have no industrial union existence but live at the expense of the general organization, lost 65 per cent of their membership during 1924 and 21 of them together have only 550 members—or 26 members on an average in each so-called "industrial union."

Therefore, practical organization should proceed upon the following basis:

Concentration on Unorganized Fields.

1. All organising forces, funds, organizers, propaganda and delegates shall be mobilized to reach, upon a unified plan, the unorganized workers in agriculture, lumber, general construction, metal mining and marine transport.

2. In those industries in which the I. W. W. does not function as a union and in which there are other unions, craft or industrial, functioning, the I. W. W. shall function only for what it is, a propaganda body for revolutionary industrial unionism. It should be known that the R. I. A. C. does not advocate the "liquidation" even of these "paper" industrial unions, nor require their members to "give up their cards" in the I. W. W., but it does advocate that such propaganda bodies become constructive factors in uniting the workers and cease their destructive dualist tactics of attacking other unions as unions and of cajoling members to leave existing unions, thus antagonizing the whole labor movement and resulting in no effective organization, as the recent farce of Gas-bag Lindstrom and his costly adventure to break up the Structural Iron Workers' Union shows.

Do Constructive Work.

3. Instead of such fruitless efforts in which the funds of the large industrial unions have been squandered right and left year after year, the unorganized millions should be organized, as recommended above; and in the industries where the I. W. W. is really a propaganda group among workers already organized, such I. W. W. should ally themselves with the revolutionary left wing of the existing unions organized around the Trade Union Educational League, winning the confidence of the workers by constructive work in and for the existing union, while simultaneously leading them on to industrial unionism by amalgamation and to the goal of proletarian revolution.

4. The goal to attain for every member of the I. W. W. should be one union in each industry, completely organized and revolutionary in action.

Shop Committees.

To appeal to the unorganized masses, definite demands must be proposed which they approve and support and a form of grouping them be set up which the union can use as a recruiting ground. This structure is the shop, job or ship committee. Such committees are elected by all workers on the job, regardless of craft, color, race or union affiliation, mobilizing both organized and unorganized for joint action with the union and under its leadership—which it gains by initiating the committee formation and directing its struggles. The job committee connects the unorganized mass with the union.

Immediate Demands.

In order to rally the unorganized around the job committees and finally induct them into the union, the I. W. W. must offer them benefits more pressing and immediately comprehensible to them than the future co-operative commonwealth. Vigorous organization campaigns must be carried on around the following slogans:

1. Resist wage cuts. Instead of lower wages—demand higher wages and action with all workers' organizations which will co-operate on this issue.

2. An immediate fight to shorten the hours of labor in each industry, particularly for the three watch system on ships.

3. A united front with all workers' organizations to release all class war prisoners, repeal all criminal syndicalist laws and resist anti-labor injunctions.

4. All hiring to be done from union hall, with transportation to job to be furnished thru the union and paid for by employers.

5. In migratory indsutry, employers must furnish, without charge, baths, hot water and dry house, clean bedding and laundry service in camps.

6. Support all demands formulated by the New Orleans Marine Workers' Conference, and the call for the Havana conference of next January.

No Substitution for Revolution.

It must be clearly understood that these demands are not intended to be a substitute for revolution. The theory that is held by the so-called "job unionists" that immediate demands are enough and the I. W. W. must exclude consistent revolutionary teaching, and the theory held by the sectarian element of the I. W. W. which thinks the union can or should limit its members to revolutionists and its teachings to utopian preachments of the future society, these are both wrong. The union must attract and weld together all workers while permitting the freest right of opinion in order that the revolutionary element which must organize itself definitely as a left bloc, may educate and lead the backward workers and by proposing and fighting for official adoption of militant issues in the daily struggle of the classes, inculcate class consciousness and point the way to revolution. The left wing must lead, not by intrigue, but by best expressing the needs of the wider masses.

Genuine Rank and File Control.

1. All power to the job branches. The job branch must be in practice and not merely in theory, the basic unit of the industrial union; all industrial union and general organization ballots to be valid only when vouched for by the job branch.

2. District and industrial union conventions shall be composed of elected delegates from job branches.

3. Hall branches as now constituted shall have no control in the affairs of the industrial union or the general organization, but each shal continue to function in its appropriate sphere thru a joint propaganda committee, which shall conduct the halls as a recruiting center, reading room, a place for general and joint meetings, to raise funds, conduct open forums, handle local and routed speakers and carry out general and special education.

Control of Oragnization Press.

1. The intolerable censorship which has been disguised as "control by the G. E. B." must be completely abolished. Members of long standing have been denied expression upon matters of purely of policy, not only in Industrial Solidarity, but also in the General Office Bulletin. This usurpation of power by the G. E. B. must stop.

2. On all matters of general policy, free discussion must be given to the members in all organiaztion papers; no one editor or official to be allowed to reject such articles; any rejection to be made by committee, which must record the reason for rejection in its minutes, furnish the contributor a copy and publish its reason in the same paper to which the rejected article was sent by the member or members.

International Unity.

1. The I. W. W. and its separate industrial unions should endorse the action of the Anglo-Russian unity committee in proposing a world congress of all the unions of the world, the delegates of which are to meet without conditions upon this issue, to unite the two great labor union international, the Red International of Labor Unions, and the International Federation of Trade Unions, together with all other unions, into a new and single giant international based upon the class struggle. Moreover, the next convention of the I. W. W. should instruct its general officers to aid in the movement and stand ready to participate in any general conference.

2. A delegation representative of the large industrial unions of the I. W. W. should attend the next World Congress of the Red Intternational of Labor Unions.

For Committees of Action.

Capitalism in its final imperialist stage is closely organised on an international scale to crush every attempt on the part of any section of the worlds workers to emancipate labor or even to gain better conditions. Fascism, war and murderous counter-revioution are taking the lives of tens of thousands of valiant workers.

This should lead at once to the formation of committees of action in every key industry, especially in every transport center, to unite all workers for defense of their class brothers and to prevent aggression against workers engaged in struggle.

The need for world unity of labor grows hourly, and the leading position in the movement for unity of the Red Intetrnational of Labor Unions, is well illustrated in the formation and activity of the Anglo-Russian committee for international unity. The I. W. W. must not fail to give its utmost support to the movement, and by its delegates atending and reporting the next R. I. L. U. World Congress, the members of the I. W. W. may realise that only by affiliation with the R. I. L. U. can the I. W. W. take its place in the vanguard of the revolutionary unions of the world.

For Responsible Officials.

The officials of the I. W. W., as in all unions, always exercise an influence and power for good or ill, that is beyond control of constitutions and by-laws. Officials must be chosen wisely, but this cannot be done when candidates do not make known to the members the issues and policies they believe in.

Names and personality mean nothing to the members outside a limited few. Running "John" against "Arthur" in the last election, for instance was a blind confusion to the member, moreover, it is a craft union fakers' custom which leads to corruption.

Let every candidate for all offices be required to state publicly to the membership the policies which he intends to carry out if elected. Then give him power and respect so long and only so long as he carries out these policies.

The Red International Affiliation Committee proposes especially to the rank and file member of the I. W. W., that they demand every candidate for legislative and executive office in the I. W. W. to declare himself openly as to his stand, for or against, every item of the above program of action, and explain why.

Typographical Union Votes Assessment to Equip Its Hospital

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The International Typographical Union has voted by a majority of approximately 15,000 to boost the members' monthly assessment of ten cents for the benefit of the union printers' home at Colorado Springs, it was announced at headquarters here.

This action will increase the union's income by $85,000 annually, which, it was stated, will be diverted toward completing, and equipping an addition to the hospital to care for helpless patients.

Radio Helps Avert Collision at Sea

BOSTON, June 8.—The collision between the passenger liner Carolina, en route to New York, and the United States destroyer Paulding, anchored alongside a captured rum ship off the Massachusetts coast, was averted by a radioed warning piercing a thick blanket of fog, it became known today.

RINK CORDAGE COMPANY MAKES PROFIT EASILY

Boys and Men Need A Shop Committee

By GEO. BENDER
(Worker Correspondent)

EASTON, Pa.—This company is manufacturing all sorts of rope, cables and twines for the use of steam and coast ships and well drilling. The company employs about 50 workers in all, including shop foremen. Workers consist of Americans and Italians only.

Wages vary. For adult workers that have been working there for the last 15 to 30 years, about 45c per hour, and some "bonus" if he works fast enuf. For other workers the wages are from 38 to 42c per hour. For boys the wages for learners is 27c for first few months, other boys 32c for practically same speed of work as men do.

The company also employs young workers at the age of 14 to 20 years engaged in spinning with five double spooled machines. About 15 young workers are employed of which three attend partial school, and the company's machines are already worn out and unsafe to work with, especially for young workers.

Young Workers Demand Increase of Wages.

In the first part of March about ten of the young workers decidead to ask the boss (Mr. Rinck, the owner of the firm) for a raise.

As usual he refused to come to terms with the young workers. so the young workers, in turn, quit the job. Of course in a few ,weeks some returned and others looked elsewhere.

Cordage young workers, to fight for wage increase you must all organise in a shop committee of all departments and you must also appeal to the adult workers to assist you in a united shop committee (as above) to help you fight the bosses for increase in wages, for better conditions (the shop wash room is unsanitary and drinking water is unfit to drink), and recognition of the shop committee.

A Young Working Girl Injured.

The company also employes a few women and young girls. One of them got hurt some time in March. She was engaged in the spinning department. Her dress got caught on one of the gear wheels and mangled her leg below the knee requiring 21 stitches. This shows the company has failed to safeguard the workers.

To cordage workers in general: to find out the conditions of other shops in various cities in the U. S. and other lands you must subscribe to the DAILY WORKER and Young Worker, and be thoroly informed of working class struggles. Address 1113 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Fascist Unions Are Seated by the I. L. O. of Allied Robbers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Switzerland—By a vote of 66 to 31, Edmundo Rosini, who was officially designated by the Confederation of Fascasti Syndicalist organizations to represent Italian labor at the International Labor office (the veriform appendix to the league of nations) was admitted to a seat in the I. L. O.

Rossini has been objected to for three years on the ground that the General Confederation of Labor of Italy was the organization to receive representation. However, the fascist union leader has finally won his seat.

Rossini was once a resident of the United States and editor of the organ of the I. W. W. "Il Proletario." As head of the fascist unions Rossini really represents a mixed organization of both workers and employers. This has been one point of objection, but the I. L. O. at last let him in.

SOCIETY IDLERS HEAR TERRORIST ATTACK WORKERS

Horthy White Guard Guest of Parasites

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Charlotte de Geocse, white guard Hungarian and foe of the workers, and delegate for the Horthy government to the conference of the international council of women held in Washington, spoke to an audience of fashionable white guard sympathisers here.

The white terrorist spoke in the fashionable church of the covenant, and denounced the attempt of the workers of Hungary to maintain a soviet government, which was drowned in a bath of workers' blood.

Mrs. Haviland Lund, of the "club women's protective association," who made herself ridiculous last winter by begging the house committee on irrigation to abandon the Boulder Canyon dam plan "because public ownership is Bolshevism inspired from Moscow" also spoke.

This idle lady spoke on the "menace of Bolshevism" in the women's clubs of the United States.

Chief Justice Is Vicious, Shepherd's Lawyer Charges

CHICAGO, June 8.—The courtroom of Judge Thomas J. Lynch, the William Darling murder trial continued. The seemingly endless tossing back and forth of panels in an effort to obtain a jury continued. Chief Justice Harry A. Olson of the municipal court appeared in the state's attorney's office and asked for a transcript of just what has been said about him in the trial thus far by William Scott Stewart, of counsel for Shepherd. He was particularly interested in Stewart's charge, voiced while questioning a venireman, that Judge Olson has been "vicious and vindicative" in pursuing Shepherd and that he has been actuated by a financial motive.

Hawaiian "War" Showed Nothing.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—In his first statement after arriving here from the war maneuvers in Hawaii, Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, chief of staff of the army, admitted that it could not be stated that Hawaii must strengthen its military forces in order to prevent an actual landing of foreign troops.

"It is, of course, extremely difficult to say," said Hines, whether the landing would have succeeded in an atcual case. The local umpires on the spot were of the opinion that the landing on the north coast had succeeded, and on the west coast had failed."

Soviet State Bank.

MOSCOW (By Mail).—Mr. Toumanoff, director of the State bank, states that the bank [illegible] henceforth make no difficulties in discounting bills of exchange of private firms and persons. Assistance is also to be extended by the State bank to societies of mutual credit patronized by petty and middle tradesmen.

RUSSIAN CZARIST BISHOPS AND AMERICAN PRIESTS MAKE COMMON CAUSE AGAINST SOVIETS' WORKERS

By M. A. SKROMNY.

What was supposed to be a public memorial meeting for the late Russian Patriach Tichon was held at the Central Y. M. C. A.

When I came up to the doors I was asked for a ticket.

"Why, I thot it was a public meeting," said I pulling out my reporters' card.

"A newspaper reporter?" asked the head of the door committee looking over my card.

Must Battle for Entrance.

"O, we know you, no, you can't go in," was his decision.

I began to protest. He called over a few other members of the committee and they had a hurried conference.

"Well, you may remain here, but you can't ask any questions, no discussion, you know," explained the chairman of the committee. I calmed him explaining that I came as a news reporter, not to talk but to listen. At the same time I began to ask him questions as to the relation of his church to the last appeal of Patriarch Tichon in which he called upon his followers to recognise the Soviet government. He was sorry, but he couldn't explain, he was too busy.

Then came along the priest of the Russian South Side church. The committee explained the matter to him. He hurried out. Came back in a few minutes and told the committee in a "whisper" loud enuf for me to hear: "The bishop said you must not admit him!"

Many Russians Barred.

I happened to become deaf at that moment and did not move. The chairman of the committee was thoroly convinced that I was "safe" and did not feel like forcing me out of the hall, so I remained.

Every newcomer was asked for a ticket which had been distributed to trusted people only. Some Americans who came up were held up at the doors. They all repeated my sentence: "Why, I thot it was a public meeting." And then one of the committee would remark: "He is an American, let him in." Only Russians were kept out of this meeting in honor of the Russian Patriarch.

There were about 250 people. Russians and Americans, in the hall when the meeting finally began. There are said to be about 35,000 orthodox Russians in the city of Chicago.

Czarist Priests

The chairman, Bishop S. M. Griswold, annunoced that there were a few "extras" on the program: a Greek bishop from Boston, an American bishop, etc. On the platform sat a solid company of priests, a colonel, the secretary of the czarist former council, etc. The counsel himself sat in the front row.

The Russian bishop, Theophilos Pashkovsky, was the first speaker. He spoke first in English and then in Russian. Did he call upon his hearers to obey the testament of Patriarch Tichon! Not at all! Far from it. He attempted to prove that the church is stronger than the Communists and that the church will yet destroy Communism and save the world . . . for democracy? No, he did not mention democracy. He was thinking of czarism whose colors were spread on the wall on both sides of the flag of "democracy."

The Greek bishop made a similar talk mentioning those barbarian Bolsheviks.

Then came the civil hero of the evening, the layman, "Col." A. F. Bragin, with a talk on Russian history and the church. He spoke in Russian. He compared the Communists to the tartars who overran Russia in the fourteenth century. "They are the foreigners, the unbelievers." He saw in the church the only possible savior of Holy Russia from the evil of Communism. As proof to his statement he said that "the best elements of the Russian immigration were grouping around the church," those best elements consisitng of the white guard counter-revolutionary colonels and generals who covered themselves with the blood of the Russian workers and peasants in a futil attempt to crush the revolution.

Then came the raving against the horrors of Bolshevism from the American priest.

Will Never Rule Again.

Finally the chairman. Bishop S. M. Griswold, did his christian duty and made a collection speech, which was called on the program a memorial address. He made a bum job out of it, Bill Dunne would beat him at it any time.

The choir of the Russian Holy Trinity cathedral sang some prayers ending with "America." The two American priests that were on the platform and another few priests in the audience joined in. The Russian colonels and generals did not yet learn "My Country" but they are learning fast, as they have lost all hope of going back to rule again over the Russian workers and peasants.

LAST STATEMENT OF RAPED GIRL ACCUSED KLUXER

State Refuses to Make It Public

INDIANAPOLIS, June 8.—William H. Remy, Marion county prosecutor, refused point blank this afternoon to acoede to a demand that he make public an alleged dying statement of Madge Oberholtser with whose murder D. C. Stephenson, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry are charged. Stephenson attacked her before she took poison, her statement disclosed.

The demand was made by Eph Inman, chief counsel for the accused men, on the ground that the law permitted him to scrutinize the purported deathbed statement.

Remy's action forecasts a spirited legal battle at Noblesville, where the case recently was venued, Monday when a hearing will be held on Inman's seeking possession of the statement.

CLASS PRISONER GETS HOPE FROM LABOR DEFENSE

June 28th Conference to Rally Workers

The call issued by the Labor Defense Council for a national conference to rally all forces in the labor movement to workers defense, in addition to being sent to all workers' organizations, was also mailed to class-war prisoners now confined in the jails throughout the country. These prisoners number 128 and are confined from California to Maine.

It was of course known that the prisoners would scarcely be in a position to attend the conference, but the enthusiastic welcome the move for enlarging the scope of workers' defense is being accorded by these workers is indicated in the following letter from Thomas Harty, who has been in the Penitentiary at Thomaston, Maine, since the seaman's strike of 1921.

Renews Prisoners' Hope.

"I received your welcome letter and copy of the manifesto last night. You can easily imagine with what mingled feelings I read it. When I tell you I have been here four years, hearing nothing of the struggle, seeing only capitalist newspapers, not having received so much as a package of tobacco or a word of cheer from anyone, your letter came as a sunbeam to one buried alive, renewing hope and stirring old aspirations.

"I was a member of the International Seamans' Union of America (Fireman's Section) for thirteen years prior to my incarceration. My last activities being on the picket line, in Portland, Me., during the seamen's strike in 1921.

To Be Deported.

"I have now served four years on a sentence of seven to twelve years, growing out of a strike riot during said strike. I have still three years to serve before my parole and already they have a warrant waiting, calling for my deportation to Ireland.

"Owing to my imprisonment and my being so long out of touch with the Labor World, there is little I can say except that I will appreciate hearing from you as often as you find convenient, and that it is my wish that you forge ahead, knowing that you have my every sympathy and sincere best wishes."

Aid Class Prisoners.

One of the chief purposes of the coming conference for Workers' Defense to be held at Ashland Auditorium, Chicago, on June 28th, is to devise ways and means to give widespread and systematic material and moral aid to all class-war prisoners and their families.

"Free" Press Costs Plenty.

A single motion picture company, Famous Players, spent almost three hundred thousand dollars on magazine advertising alone the past year, rising to 66th place in the ranks of national magazine advertisers. This does not include the costs of high-pressure press agents and other incidentals of "free" publicity.

BUILDERS AT WORK

THE NEW ISSUE IS READY!

Distribute the June Workers Monthly.

To those skeptics who may raise a doubting eye-brow when the statement is made that "the June issue of the Workers Monthly is the best yet"—all we can say is to "get it and see for yourself."

Without question, this issue has had no equal. And to our Builders who are working to build the Communist movement thru the sale and distribution of Communist literature, we pass the good word along: GET IT!

Never was such a list of proletarian writers and artists gathered between two covers. Outstanding leaders of the International and American Communist movements have given some of their best work to this issue. And a rare collection of art features is included. Maurice Becker, Lydia Gibson, Fred Ellis, Juanita Preval and a number of others have done much to raise the Workers Monthly to an even higher standard.

Among the number of proletarian poets in this issue Jim Waters is included—and in his work you will sense clearly a working class feeling that will make you look forward to other contributions from this most promising poet.

Order a bundle of this issue to distribute and sell . . . and you will reach many workers with literature so many-sided that it is sure to have something of interest for each and every worker.

Seldom have we had such a splendid tool for building—but unless it is fully taken advantage of the full value of it will be lost. Be sure to order a bundle at once.

• • • •

Have You Sent Yours in?

We are now tabulating the bundle orders for RED WEEK. Thousands of copies will be sent to individuals every day during the week of June 15 to 21 for free distribution to make sub-getting easier. Have you sent for your bundle? Has your branch decided to go out full force? Tell us how many copies you want!

New School Board Bill Would Give City Council Power to Recall Trustees

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 8.—A bill which would give the city council power to appoint and recall members on the Chicago board of education is before the legislature.

The bill calls for appointment of members of the board of education by the city council upon recommendation of the mayor and the termination of their tenure by the same body if there is cause, after six days notice is given. Salaries of the eleven members of the board provided in the bill are $10,000 a year.

The bill has the backing of the Teachers' Federation and Margaret Haley is one of the committee to lobby for the bill.

Why an Editor is Accused.

This article had been printetd the day before in the social democratic organ, Narod, in Sofia, which was naturally not confiscated.

Kemal Disbands Opposition.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 8. — A cabinet decree has surpressed the only opposition party in Turkey—the progressive party.

CZARISTS SHAKE DOWN THE PORK PACKERS' WIVES

Hold Ball to Aid Traitorous Loafers

The kept press of Chicago has united with the wives of pork packers and other millionaire exploiters of labor and with the czarist Russians residing in Chicago who fled the Soviet Union as soon as the "if you want to eat-work" edict went into effect, in conducting an anti-Soviet ball.

These czarists, together with a few menshevists, have been getting a lucrative living in Chicago, by dragging their outworn and abdicated "titles" among the upper crust. Now they are shaking down the portly matrons who fight off boredom by espousing "causes" against the workers, by giving a ball aimed "to aid penniless Russian students."

The Chicago Tribune, harlot of the traction trust, and all the other trusts, and labor hating dope sheet, declares, "It is a most worthy cause," and sprinkled thru the society column can be picked out such phrases as "flames of hell," "bloody present," and "unfortunate land." The Tribune is trying to sweep the Russian workers and peasants with the flames of the capitalist hell which are also turned against the workers of America.

Among the czarists and mensheviks who are to take part in the affair are Serge Borowski, Philip Bellows, and English stool pigeon, "Col." Michael Laseref, and "Col." Shumkoff. Every loafer who is thrown out of the Soviet Union for opposing the workers seems to admit the title "Col." upon hitting the U. S. A.

Included in the society morons who are sponsoring the ball are Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. George Meade and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham.

Soviets Import Machinery.

MOSCOW (By Mail).—According to the returns of the commissariat of foreign trade, the imports of foreign goods into Ukrainia have considerably increased during the last few months, the biggest percentage of increasing falling mainly on agriculture machinery and implements.

At the same time, the sale of the newly imported foreign goods in the Ukrainian home market has been quite satisfactory, the average monthly turnover amounting to some 2.5 million roubles.

Figures on Murder.

SOFIA, Bulgaria.—According to the latest news the agents of the [illegible] government committed in January of this year alone 150 murders of officials of the trade unions, co-operatives, and of the radical movement of the Macedonian workers and peasants. In the course of the last one and one-half years 15 members of parliament have been murdered, of whom four were murdered in the last five months.

Soviets Sell Cement.

MOSCOW (By Mail).—The "Rusturc," a mixed Russo-Turkish joint-stock company, has purchased over half a million poods of Portland cement and several thousand tons of Donets coal for the needs of the Near Eastern markets. The products are to be exported on ships of the state shipping board. It is being rumored in competent quarters that the sale deal in coal is the beginning of systematic exports of Donets fuel to the Near East.

Soviets Export to Turkey.

MOSCOW (By Mail).—The "Rusturc" has sent a sample order of [illegible] carloads of wood materials to Turkey, and it is expected that the exportation of such matetrials will soon develop to a very considerable extent.

Shoe Workers' Wages

The shoe capitalists in Massachusetts are getting ready to cut wages. Their excuse is the moss-grown one of "high labor costs." This is only an excuse and not a reason, for workers should never figure that their wages are too high simply because the boss is not making as much profit as he would like to.

But let us examine this of the bosses contention on its merits.

We have before us the monthly bulletin of the department of labor. In it is an article by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, lauding the efficiency of American industry. In this connection he cites some figures on the shoe industry.

Wages of boot and shoe workers according to this report, increased in the New England 48.5 per cent since 1916.

But the efficiency of the workers measured in output per man-hour, has increased 25.1 per cent. In other words the workers' wages, so far as the bosses were concerned, increased but 23.4 per cent. But living costs have risen, according to a diagram in this same report, from an index figure of 115 in 1916 to 150 in 1925 so that the shoe workers are actually receiving less wages, measured in purchasing power, than in 1916.

Let us see what this increased efficiency means, measured in pairs of shoes and labor time.

In 1916 it took 1 hour and 42 minutes of a shoe worker's time to produce one pair of shoes.

Today, 1925, it takes but 54 minutes.

Let us see now what the boasted efficiency, praised so highly by that enemy of the working class, Davis, has done to the wage earners in the shoe industry.

We quote further from the department of labor bulletin:

> The census of 1923 shows that there are 1,542 boot and shoe factories in the United States. Fourteen per cent of these do 65 per cent of the total business now, but IF THEY OPERATED TO FULL CAPACITY AND FULL TIME THIS 14 PER CENT HAS THE ABILITY AND THE POWER TO PRODUCE ALL THE SHOES REQUIRED IN THE COUNTRY. Aside from the plants constituting the 14 per cent, 47 per cent of the shop manufacturers produce 32 per cent of the output, and these could with their present equipment increase their production 50 per cent. (The emphasis is ours.)

What do these figures mean to us workers?

It is not that wages are too high, but that they are too low. The workers do not get enough wages to buy back even an important portion of their product.

The shoe workers of Massachusetts, confronted with a demand by the bosses that they accept a reduction should take these figures and study them well.

What is true of the shoe workers is true of all the workers in the United States. They are being speeded up and their output increased in comparison to their wages.

Under these cirumstances wage struggles are basic struggles of the working class. To accept wage cuts without the best fight possible only adds to the misery of the workers immediately affected and weakens the resistance of the whole working class.

Fight ALL wage cuts EVERYWHERE.

Coolidge Klucks in Minnesota

President Coolidge in his speech to the Norse-American society in the Twin Cities made no statements that could not have come from any lad of sixteen. It was composed of a string of platitudes so trite that we feel now that the burlesques of politicians' speeches heard from time to time in vaudeville are not exaggerations but are little pictures from life.

One thing he said is of interest, however, as showing what the legal fraternity calls "the state of mind."

He referred to "the blond sons of Norway" and their deeds of derring-do with the evident purpose of showing his loyalty to the prevailing moronic legend concerning the natural superiority of the Nordics over the darker-skinned peoples.

The kluxers will be delighted with the president's effort.

It was one of those home-and-fireside speeches that have been the stock in trade of American capitalism's tools for years without a single new thought or idea.

The 10,000,000 Negroes in the United States and the 3,000,000 or more that are ruled by bayonet and machine gun democracy in the colonies, should read the president's speech with care. They can then ask themselves why it is that he takes a trip half-way across the continent to pat Norwegian farmers on the back while his government cannot raise a hand to stop lynching, peonage and forcible disfranchisement of the millions of black men and women.

The answer is that these Norwegian farmers have shown signs of revolt against the republican party and its Wall Street leadership. These farmers have organized, not very well, but well enough to worry the big capitalists.

Nothing can take the place of organization. American capitalism will do nothing for the Negro until he forces it to act by showing that he has determined to live on equal terms with the "blond Nordics"—socially, politically and economically.

Trouble in Chile

Two Communist papers were suppressed in Chile and the strict censorship on news established by the government makes it impossible to get a correct line on the situation at this moment, it appears that serious strikes are in progress and that the workers are in a state of revolt in the nitrate region.

Machine gunners were landed from a cruiser and as usual the victims of the machine gun's attentions were workers.

Chile, like every other South American government is a creature of foreign capitalism. The Standard Oil subsidiary, the Anaconda Copper Mining company and the Morgan-dominated Guggenheim interests are the real government. The workers of South America have not yet learned to walk in harness as well as their better trained brother robots in the highly industrialized countries.

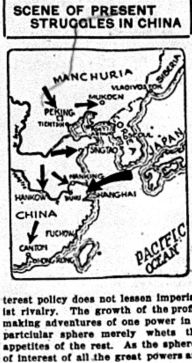
The revolt against capitalism is world wide, tho it does not break out everywhere simultaneously. There are even rumors that Wall Street's good man Calles in Mexico is not going to have it all his own way. It is reported that the peasants who were promised the land want it now and not one hundred years from now.

The Enslavement of China

By Wm. F. Dunne

ARTICLE II.

SCENE OF PRESENT STRUGGLES IN CHINA



TO force recognition by China of spheres of interest was a joint program of the imperialist nations growing out of their desire to exploit unhampered either by Chinese government influence or the intrigues of rivals.

Speaking of the application of this doctrine T. W. Overlach in his "Foreign Financial Control of China," says:

> Its essential element is a negative one: namely, the term expressed the principle that NO OTHER POWER except the one in whose favor the "sphere of interest" exists shall be permitted to acquire concessions or exert and control of influence whatsoever—not to speak of military occupation—at the same time giving the privileged power a monoply of the right to seek concessions.

NO policy better calculated to make of China a group of semi-colonies—and at the same time intensify the imperialist rivalries rather than submerging them—could be devised. Even with such a policy adopted by common agreement the great powers have never ceased to encroach on each other's spheres of interest and intrigue against one another by bribing Chinese officials and generals and in other ways deliberately corrupting the social and political life of China. In view of these facts the description of "the essential element" by the author quoted as "negative," is far from accurate.

BEGINNING with the French drive for a sphere of interest in the province of Yunnan, bordering on Annam—ceded to France after the war of 1883-84—and the acquisition by French interests of concessions in that province, all of the great powers extended their control.

After the war between China and Japan French influence made itself felt in the provinces of Kuangtung and Kuanghsi.

GREAT BRITAIN, aroused by the rapid advance of France forced granting of additional concessions for herself in Yunnan and Kuangtung—proof complete that the sphere of interest policy does not lessen imperialist rivalry. The growth of the profit-making adventures of one power in a partciular sphere merely whets the appetites of the rest. As the spheres of interest of all the great powers are gradually enlarged the central government of the beleagured country becomes weaker and less able to resist the unceasing demands of the foreign robbers.

EVIDENCE of the truth of this conclusion is seen in the fact that, responding to British pressure, resulting from the now powerful position of the French interests, China agreed in July, 1886, to cede Burma to Great Britain unconditionally.

The limbs of the Chinese dragon in southeastern Asia were being lopped off, one by one.

Russia had forced the recognition of her paramount interests in the three Manchurian provinces and consolidated her position by the lease of the fortified Liaotung peninsula in 1898. This action met with a protest from Great Britain but as Germany was also busy in Kiaochau Great Britain had her hands full and had to yield when Russia refused to allow interference with what she called her right to make her own terms with the Chinese government.

BUT Great Britain was disturbed by the trend of events and the opinion of her representative, Lord Salisbury, as given by H. B. Morse in "The International Relations of the Chinese Empire," was:

> England had no desire to see the "break-up" of China, of which these successive cessions (of 1898) seemed to be the beginning; and, acting on her unvarying policy in China, her one wish was to maintain the equality of opportunity which had existed up to that time.

We can take this to mean that Great Britain, having control of the Chinese customs revenues and with a navy far superior to any two of her rivals, was opposed to the extension of the sphere of influence policy believing that the favored position she already had would serve to keep her in the lead. She, therefore, could afford to advocate a "liberal" policy, appear as a champion of China opposing the ravenous host of competitiors.

The "break-up" of China thru the acquisition of concession territories by France, Russia, Germany and Japan simply a lessening of her opportunities to plunder undisturbed.

NOT ready for war over Chinese concessions, British diplomacy wriggled and twisted, one day a champion of the integrity of China, the next a member of the international robber crew.

In particular is this dual policy of Great Britain illustrated by an extract from the note in reply to the German protest aroused by the lease to Britain of Weihaiwei which Germany interpreted rightly as the first step to Britain's encroachment on her preserve. Written at the same time that Great Britain was officially on record against the "break-up" of China, the note says:

> The British government, in view of the approaching occupation of Weihaiwei, has spontaneously intimated to the German government that it has not the intention of injuring or calling in question German rights or interests in the province of Shangtung, or of creating any difficulties for the German government in that province.

The thieves were assuring one another that there was honor in the ranks of the fraternity.

BUT agreements between the powers could not stop the policy of grab when rich natural resources were to be had for the taking. Great Britain announced that all of the fertile valley of the Yang-Tsze, including the province of Szechuan, was to be looked upon as her sphere of interest. She obtained many concessions there but was met always by Japanese competition and was unable to prevent these inroads even by recognizing Japan's leading role in Fukien province.

The Russians also invaded the Yang-Tsze valley but an agreement was finally reached between the two countries specifying that t heRussians were not to attempt to secure railway and mining privileges in the Yang-Tsze valley and the British were not to engage in similar enterprises north of the Great Wall.

BETWEEN Great Britain and France no formal agreement was ever reached and they each conducted a sort of guerilla warfare in the other's spheres of interest.

America had no special sphere of influence at this time but took an active part in the drive for commercial, industrial and railway concessions. American interests acquired the concession for the Hankow-Canton railway line and this became the basis for future American penetration in China.

Russia had the concession for the Chinese Eastern railway across Manchuria—the railway line that since the Russian revolution has been such a bone of contention and which, now operated jointly by the Chinese and Soviet governments, links two great anti-imperialist nations with a bond that the imperialists are striving mightily to break.

FRANCE began to build a railroad penetrating Tongking and tapping Yunnan. The Germans were building another across their Shangtung sphere of inuence from Tsingtao to Tsinan-fu.

But Great Britain had the edge on all her competitors in this period both in mining and railway concessions. Says J. O. P. Bland:

> In 1898, with the acute development of the "sphere of influence" regime and the assertion by Great Britain of special rights in the Yang-Tsze valley, five exclusively British railway concessions in that region were extracted from China under severe diplomatic pressure by the British minister. ("Recent Events and Present Policies in China." Page 270.)

The Peking Syndicate, a British concern, had secured concessions for all the rich coal land in the provinces of Honan and Shanse.

GREAT BRITAIN, by her control of customs revenues and the huge extent of her holdings, was the dominant power in this era which preceded the Boxer uprising, ending in 1900 after a siege of the foreign legations which was broken by the combined military might of all the imperialist nations with the United States playing a leading role with troops which had already wrested the Philippines from Spain.

The Boxer uprising ended the existence of China as a Nation until the revolution of 1911 led by Sun Yat Sen.

PROVOKED by the brutal disregard of all Chinese rights, by the arrogance of missionaries and commercial representatives of the imperialist nations, the boxer uprising was made the excuse for punitive measures so harsh in character that one wonders at the audacity with which they were conceived.

The protocol signed by nine powers and China gave to foreigners so-called "extra-territorial" rights by which they evaded Chinese law and could be tried only in courts of their own countries. It mortgaged the salt and customs revenues to the payment of the huge indemnity and left China with a government that could function only at the pleasure of the imperialist ambassadors and ministers.

THE Russo-Japanese war of 1904, however, brot new alignments among the powers which were strangling the Chinese people and without making any striking internal changes prepared the way for the rise of the Chinese national spirit and the events which follwoed.

This war and its effect on China and international relations will be dealt with in another article.

Elect Stahl, Defeat Jensen, Carpenters' Plea

using only union material, because there are not enough union mills to produce it. What about organizing the unorganized mills?

The Progressive Program.

Realizing that it is not enough to express individual opposition to the treachery perpetrated on the membership by Jensen during the past few years, the progressive elements in the union have organized a caucus inside the union, in order to put up candidates for the present elections. A program has been widely circulated by the progressive caucus which is given here in full:

"Election time is coming around again for district council officers and it is very important to every real union man that those whom we elect to office declare themselves, so we know what they stand for.

"In our opinion no man, running without a program should be considered by the voters in this election and we submit the following program as a basis for the nominations and for the unification of all progressive forces against the present administration:

"1. No renewal of the present agreement, nor a similar one.

"2. No agreements to be entered into that compels carpenters to work with non-union men in other trades.

"3. All agreements to be ratified by the rank and file.

"4. A uniform wage and working agreement with all other building trades. All to expire at the same time.

"5. To work for the organization of all mills. Only union material to be used on union jobs.

"6. A five-day, forty-hour week.

"7. We pledge ourselves to stringent economy of administration expenses, elimination of unnecessary attorney's fees.

"8. Right of minority opinion to freedom of expression within the union.

"9. We will vigorously oppose illegal suspensions and expulsions or the use of police against union men.

"In addition to the above program, we endorse:

"1. The amalgamation of the building trades upon a departmental basis, along the lines laid down by the 1913 convention of the building trades department. This will abolish the ruinous jurisdictional disputes, as well as centralize the activities and unify the forces of all building trades workers.

"2. A labor party of, for and by the workers."

Roils Charley Sand.

This program is like a red rag to a wild bull to Charles Sands, secretary of the district council. Not so very long ago Charley was as red as a turkey cock's neck, but he is now as yellow as a banana and just as slippery. Thirteen years ago Sands was editor of the Swedish socialist paper, called Svenska Socialisten. This paper is still in existence and is now a Communist organ under the name of Ny Tid. But Charley has changed considerably, and one would now imagine by hearing him talk that he was society editor of the Chicago Tribune.

Sands is visiting the locals looking for votes and his method is to take up the program of the progressive caucus which has nominated Stahl against Jensen and attempt to discredit the planks in the progressive platform. Sands seeks to justify the scab agreement signed last year by Jensen, with the naive excuse that it has not yet hurt anybody. The next two points are skipped over and point 4, which calls for a uniform wage and working agreement and the expiration of contracts, the same time as other building trades workers, he considers impossible.

The carpenters don't want a five-day, forty-hour week, says Sand. The last referendum proved that he declares. Charley is thru with the time when he believed it was the function of a leader to lead the workers along the lines of their best interests.

Boasts of the Courts.

The proposal to reduce attorneys' fees does not appeal to Sands. He tries to prove that the carpenters have made great gains by appealing to the capitalist courts, despite the number of injunctions against labor that are issued daily by these institutions of the master class. If the rank and file of the carpenters have won any victories in the courts, they are blissfully ignorant of the fact.

Of course some of the better informed carpenters will remember one famous "victory" we won in 1922, when the court told us we were right and that we could come again and demand aid again if the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award did not behave itself. But we were also told that our hands were not clean, and therefore had no standing in court. This piece of hocus pocus was called a victory by the present administration.

Points eight and nine which demand the right of minority expression within the union, and the discontinuation of illegal expulsions and suspensions as well as the use of the police against union men, were disposed of by Sand with the assertion that some members got themselves into trouble and were to blame. No doubt he was referring to the five members of Local 181, that had an illegal expulsion and a fake reinstatement on account of their opposition to the scab agreement, which the Sands-Jensen administration put over last year to keep themselves on the payroll.

Fears the Communists.

The two additional points which the renegade ex-red Charley Sand made a great outcry about, were those calling for the amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions and the demand for a labor party. Here is where Sand saw the cloven hoof of the Communist devil. His yellow soul rebelled against the idea of the workers having a unified industrial movement or a labor party.

He declared this program in its entirety came directtly from Moscow and that 98 per cent of the progressive caucus were members of the Workers (Communist) Party. He said the carpenters were already amalgamated inasmuch as the carpenters claim jurisdiction over all woodwork. He stated that what the progressive caucus wanted was a labor party like the Workers Party. Sand knew he was lying when he stated that 98 per cent of the members of the progressive caucus were Communists. The great majority of them are not Communists but the caucus is an effort of those who have the interests of the union at heart to get rid of fakers like Jensen and Sands. While those who may replace them are not Communists, and do not pretend to be, they have stood for the program given here and unless they stand by their promises they will have to explain to their conduct to the rank and file, who will judge them as the carpenters are now judging Jensen and company in these elections.

Mass Labor Party.

Sands may not know it, but the kind of a labor party that the progressive caucus wants is a labor party, built on the unions and not a duplication of the Workers Party or any other conception of a Communist labor party. Communist parties are based on individual membership, while the labor party would take in unions as a whole including people like Jensen and Sand.

The carpenters have seen the futility of depending for relief on the democratic and republican parties. They must break with the Len Smalls, La-Follettes and Coolidges and with all the other tools of the employers in the employers' political parties if they are even to make a start on the road to their emancipation.

Unity Is Required.

"There is nothing to be amalgamated," says Charley Sand. "We claim everything." But that's not the point. The thing is that it would be better for all the workers in the building trades to get together to fight the boss than be separated into various groups fighting each other over who had the right to do this or do that. The question is one of getting together and agreeing on a common program. Nobody but a mental defectvie would question the value of unity against craft division.

Every day we hear of railroad companies consolidating their lines in order to make for more profits and more efficiency in transportation service. Today we have seventeen international unions in the building industry, responsible to no one but themselves. We have the building trades department of the A. F. of L. with no authoriyt except to exclude those who do not agree with its rulings. The carpenters brotherhood is at this moment outside the building trades department of the A. F. of L. tho still paying per capita tax to the American Federattion of Labor.

To Prevent Friction.

When amalgamation was adopted by the progressive caucus, it was pointed out that only thru this method could harmony be secured in the building trades. This can be done upon a departmental basis in other words thru a central executive composed of representatives from every international or union in the building industry; this body to have jurisdiction over all local building trades councils on national matters and local matters over which there was disagreement, to such an extent that it could not be settled by the local council.

The need for such a body is demonstrated today by the fact that unions are scabbing on each other and not only that but the building trades department itself has started dual unions of carpenters in several cities like Cincinnati, Denver and other places.

A big job in Chicago was struck recently by unions affiliated with the local building trades council. When the men returned they were forced to work with scab carpenters. Our general president does not seem to be bothered with these matters.

It's a Good Program.

Charley Sand says that the program of Amalgamation and a labor party comes from Moscow thru Foster. As Frank Stahl, candidate for district council president on the progressive caucus slate, said: "It does not matter where it came from, it is a good program, and it is the program that the carpenters must adopt if they want to make progress."

Because William Z. Foster is hated by the capitalist class and the crooked labor leaders, Charley Sand, the renegade socialist, tries to use his name as a bogey man among the carpenters. But the carpenters who have opposed the Landis award and the scab agreement are not afraid of bogey men and they know that a man who is hated by the bosses because he has fought for the workers is the friend of the carpenters.

Harry Jensen argues that union cannot be run on red propaganda, but Jensen's policy is to run the union and ruin it with scab agreements and with the aid of the capitalist press. He simply wants to get elected by hook or by crook and keep on good terms with the boss.

The thing for the progressive carpenters to do now is to vote the progressive slate straight. Elect the ticket headed by Frank Stahl. A change of leadership is badly needed and the Stahl ticket is the best in sight just now. Send Jensen into retirement. The way to do it is to vote for Stahl.

iterated his assertion that Jane Adams was a bad girl, in fact was a more disloyal citizen that even William Z. Foster, who is the official bad man of American capitalism. This is about all we have to say about the colonel.

TALKING of the "mass convention" of the defunct socialist party recently held in Cleveland, Joseph Sharts, a lawyer of Dayton, Ohio, described the affair as "the biggest thing ever happened in Cleveland," bigger we suppose than even the expulsion of the socialist Willert from the city council, which is the big splurge in the history of Cleveland, according to said Willert. But that was in the nature of a calamity.

SHARTS is rather unhappy in his choice of a simile. Being more or less of a poet he cannot resist the temptation to take a chance on sacrificing utility to beauty, or rather sacrificing sense to sound. The convention, he writes, was "like the coming of a soul to a dead body." Now, what do you think a normal soul would do after coming to a dead body? He would sniffle at the darn thing and take to the nearest drug store for a whiff of ammonia. That is what the socialist soul probably did to the Cleveland corpse, tho the DAILY WORKER correspondent, Alfred Wagenknecht, did not even see much spirit around there. What he described to us looked or seemed to look very much like a spook.

SHARTS is funnier than the colonel, but in a different way. He means well, but Wagenknecht could not have written a more humorous skit on the socialist gathering than this: "Socialists trooped in from all sorts of forgotten holes, by train, traction, bus flivver, and foot... the call sent out to come to the Cleveland convention was like the trumpet sounding for the resurrection day. They crawled out of their intellectual graves, brushed off the dirt and mold, blinked around, stretched themselves—and came." Yes, brother Sharts, they came, and they went and it will take the trumpet of a real Gabriel to wake them up again. They are as dead as your party.

SULU'S ARE DISARMED AT FORCED APPEARANCE FOR WALE'S ENJOYMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

ESHOWE, South Africa, June 7. Twenty-five thousand Zulu warriors with shields and other war equipment were made a spectacle for the Prince of Wales on his arrival at this Zululand town but were forced to give up their arms during the ceremonies, "so they could not start fighting."

Eshowe had a population of 500, but for the prince's visit the population was swelled to 6,000, most of the visitors coming in from the surrounding country in automobiles.

The Zulu warriors were compelled to appear before the prince, by order of the English ruler.

By T. J. [illegible]

THE task of bringing about unity in the trade union movement, nationally and internationally, in order to more effectively wage the struggle against capitalism is one of the most important immediate problems of the workers of the world. And in view of the charges of disruption hurled at the Communists by the social democrats it is interesting to watch the developments in the negotiations now taking place between the red international of Moscow and the yellow international of Amsterdam.

WHO are the disruptionists? Who are sincerely in favor of unity? No honest worker will have any difficulty in reaching a conclusion on this question if he will read the correspondence between the two organizations, published in the European press and in the DAILY WORKER. It is quite evident that the leaders of the Amsterdam International are placing every obstacle in the way of unity, going even so far as to refuse a meeting with representatives of the Russian unions, the latter only demanding an unconditional conference.

SO outrageous has been the conduct of the officials of the Amsterdam International that a great wave of protest has arisen over Europe against it. This is most apparent in England, the backbone of Amsterdam. Lest some of our readers might think that the opposition to the Amsterdam obstructionists which is growing in England comes mainly from the Communist elements, I will quote the following editorial comment from Lansburry's Labor Weekly on May 30:

THE Russian Trade Unions have replied to Amsterdam by asking again for an unconditional conference. The Amsterdammers, however, are still trying to make them promise to join up with the International Federation of Trade Unions as a condition of being allowed to confer with it. This, of course, is sheer obstructionism. The I. F. T. U. leaders abroad don't want unity, and this is their way of trying to stop it. The next move is with the British representatives; for the I. F. T. U. will think twice before it turns them down, at the risk of losing their support. They must press for the absolutely unconditional conference that obviously ought to be called.

The Russian reply makes it plain that they want to come in, and that they won't stickle about the exact wording of the I. F. T. U. statutes. But they want to be assured that they are really being invited in as friends,

CURLEE STRIKE NOW TAKES OUT 800 WORKERS

St. Louis Sweatshops to Be Cleaned Up

By MARTIN A. DILLMON.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 9.—The opening gun has been fired by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in its offensive against St. Louis unspeakable sweatshop clothing factories, as a result of which about 800 workers, largely girls, are on strike and others are expected to quit their post shortly. The strike is in protest against the wholesale discharging of employes for union membership. The big issue is union recognition. The strikers also demand a 25 per cent increase of wages, 44-hour week and time and a half for overtime work.

Amalgamated organizers have been in the city for months conducting an organization drive. The campaign of necessity was secret, as the shops invaded were most hostile to labor organization and known possession of a union card meant immediate forfeiture of one's job. The campaign of unionization has been highly successful, according to General Organizer Frank Rosenblum, commander-in-chief of labor's offensive. Other shops will be "pulled" wherever the union's demands are rejected or where a concern attempts to discharge employes for joining the union.

Curlee Shops Centre of Fight.

The strike thus far only involves the S. H. Curlee Clothing company, the most anti-union, "open shop" industry in St. Louis. Finally came the Amalgamated with its quiet organization drive. A few days ago seven Curlee employes, known to have joined the

BULGAR WHITE GUARD MURDERS 50 WORKERS HELD AS PRISONERS

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, June 9.—The newspaper Vreme prints a dispatch from Sofia today stating that fifty prisoners accused of belonging to a Communist organization were murdered by their military escort near the railroad station at Ichtiman while being transported chained together. The soldiers—who are white guards—try to explain that the Communists tried to escape, so the soldiers shot them.

BRING CROUCH, TRUMBULL HERE ABOUT JUNE 26

Place of Confinement Not Yet Announced

HONOLULU, Hawaii, June 9.—Paul Crouch and Walter Trumbull, now imprisoned in the 27th Infantry guard house at Schofield barracks, near here, for defending the Soviet Union against newspaper attacks, will be sent back to the mainland on June 26, if their sentences are approved by the war department at Washington.

As yet their destination has not been announced, and they do not know where they will be confined.

The two United States soldiers were arrested in March, charged with the "crime" of being Communists. They were sentenced to 40 and 26 years in the federal penitentiary.

Their sentences were later cut to three years and one year following a world wide protest against their imprisonment for their opinions.

DOCK WORKERS ON STRIKE HERE FOR BETTER PAY

From two to three hundred dock workers are on strike at the Goodrich Boat docks, at East Water St., North Dock. The strikers, who generally only get a chance to load freight only about three or four hours a day, and who have been paid 30 cents an hour and one meal, are demanding forty cents on hour. Another demand is decent food.

The freight handlers declare that the food given them has been too rotten to eat, worse than prison food, and they demand food that at least, does not small bad.

Police have covered the docks, and the West Madison street employment offices are sending many workers to do strike breaking duty. They are not told there is a strike on.

The Goodrich company sends from 12 to 15 boats to Milwaukee, Racine, Benton Harbor, Muskegan, Grand Haven and other ports.

The strikers are unorganized.

COURT DECISION IN GITLOW CASE SETS PRECEDENT

Opens Way for Attack on Other Communists

(By Labor Defense Press Service)

The decision of the United States supreme court against the appeal of Benjamin Gitlow and upholding as constitutional the New York state criminal anarchy law, constitutes the first action of that court on criminal anarchy and criminal syndicalist statutes on the books of 35 states.

The adverse decision of the Gitlow appeal with associate Justices Holmes and Brandeis dissenting, is an indication of what the probable ruling will be on other appeals in similar cases.

Outstanding among these, is the appeal pending before the court in the case of "Ruthenberg vs. the state of Michigan," the outcome of which involves William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne and 28 other Communists being tried under the Michigan criminal syndicalist law.

Anita C. Whitney of California has also appealed the constitutionality of the syndicalist law of that state under which eighty members of the Industrial Workers of the World are serving time in San Quentin and Folsom prisons.

Case Pending Since April 1923

The Gitlow appeal has been pending since April 1923, when Gitlow was released on $7,500 bail set by Chief Justice Taft. Gitlow was the first of five Communists to be sentenced to from five to ten years for publishing and distributing what was known as the "Left Wing Manifesto," a statement issued in June 1919 by the executive council of the "left wing" section of the socialist party.

The other defendants, C. E. Ruthenberg, I. E. Ferguson, Jim Larkin and Harry Winitsky were pardoned by Governor Al Smith while Gitlow's appeal was being taken.

Gitlow, who was the managing editor of the Revolutionary Age, the organ of the "left wing" in which the Manifesto was published, was given a sensational trial before Judge Weeks of New York. It was during this trial that prosecutor Rorke said of Gitlow, "He would make America a Red ruby in the Red treasure chest of the Red terror."

Show Court Prejudiced

Judge Week's conduct of the trial and his prejudicial instruction to the jury called forth much adverse comment at the time. Gitlow was defended by Clarence Darrow. He was sentenced to Sing Sing on January 1920 for a term of from five to ten years.

GITLOW SERVED TWENTY-SEVEN MONTHS IN SING SING FOR COMMUNISM

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

NEW YORK, June 9.—Benjamin Gitlow, who was the candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party for vice-president in the last national election campaign, will probably be taken to Sing Sing prison after the clerk of the United States supreme court transmits the decision denying the Gitlow appeal to the supreme court, ot the United States marshal at New York.

Benjamin Gitlow was one of the leaders of the left wing in the socialist party. He was manager of the Revolutionary Age. Gitlow was arrested on November 8, 1919, charged with violating the New York criminal anarchy law. He was tried in January, 1920, and sentenced to from five to ten years in the penitentiary following his conviction.

After serving 27 months in Sing Sing, Comrade Gitlow was released on appeal on May 1, 1922. In September the sentence was upheld by the state supreme court, and Gitlow was taken back to prison.

In January, 1923, Comrade Gitlow was released on a writ of error, and his appeal was argued in April and again in November, 1923.

Comrdae Gitlow's bail was fixed at $7,500.00 by Supreme Court Justice Howard Taft in April.

The Gitlow case is considered the test case for all criminal syndicalism laws.

TRY TO BLAME ENGINEER FOR FATAL ACCIDENT

Twelve Killed When Bad Rails Give Way

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVERSE, Ind., June 9.—An official investigation was started by the Chesapeake and Ohio railway company here today into the accident which killed 12 and seriously injured five members of a section gang of thirty.

The accident was blamed on the engineer by the railroad officials. They claim he ran the train too fast over the rails which had just been laid.

The men were laying new rails near the scene of the accident and some opinions were expressed that the rails at the fatal spot had not yet been securely fastened down.

The debris had been virtually cleared away by three wrecking crews and traffic again resumed.

FAKERS SPLIT LABOR'S RANKS IN MINNEAPOLIS; BOSSES WIN

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 9.—Complete returns from yesterday's municipal election shows that the treachery of Robly D. Cramer and other former progressives to the labor movement, bore fruit in the election of a reactionary majority to the city council.

The campaign against the Communists by so-called progressives could have only one result; to split the forces of labor and make it possible for the enemy to break thru the lines. The new council will be made up of severi labelled radicals and 19 conservatives.

CHINESE SEAMEN STRIKE AND ALL FOREIGN CONSULS ADOPT SOFTER TONE TOWARD SHANGHAI MILITANTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, June 9.—The Chinese Seamen's Union struck this morning, tying up ten British river and coast steamers. The union threatens, if the demands of the Chinese students and strikers are ignored, to tie up all shipping, including trans-Pacific and European liners.

Strikers are directing their chief efforts against the Japanese and British, attempting to effect a nation-wide boycott on goods of those two nations.

A communication delivered to the foreign press representatives by the Shanghai-American Retired Students' club yesterday said:

"The Shanghai crisis was precipitated by the foreign police killing unarmed student demonstrators against inhuman labor conditions. Post mortem examinations of the victims show that they were shot from behind, and after only ten seconds warning. A solution of the situation is possible only upon justice being done."

Evidences of a new and undoubtedly frightened conciliatory tone in the attitude of the foreign consular and other imperialist representatives have are seen in many quarters. The reluctance of Japan to take up an aggressive and belligerent position in spite of all the attacks upon her interests, and the note of the consular body on Sunday indicates that the home governments of the great powers are not altogether anxious to venture into large scale intervention, each of them realizing that such an action might mean war with the others over the loot.

Imperialist Backing Up.

The consular note of Sunday was conciliatory, promising a full investigation of the rioting and adding that if the British Sikh police troops were at fault, court action would be taken against them. They tried to excuse their action following the first shooting, the calling for troops, by saying that when the international settlement was faced with an anti-foreign uprising the only course was to defend or even to attack—"to protect the Chinese residents"—as well as the foreigners.

Limit Strike.

Yesterday in the Chinese city some speakers at mass meetings advised workers other than those attached to British and Japanese firms and persons to resume work.

Chinese Soldiers to Protect Chinese.

It is reported that the Peking government is ordering 2,000 troops here under command of General Lu Yung Hsiang to protect Chinese against abuse and attack of foreigners—at least those abuses and attacks not legalized by the so-called treaties the great powers have in the past thrust upon China against her consent.

Shanghai continues under martial law and 200 more Japanese marines from the Tatsua were landed yesterday. Two Japanese gunboats and two Japanese destroyers went on up the Yantsze river to protect foreigners at the upper river ports. Two other Japanese destroyers have arrived and will remain at Shanghai.

SALARY BOOST FEELER BEATEN BY FIREMEN

Fight on Censorship of Political Beliefs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, June 9.—The convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen passed thru another sweltering session today. Two major propositions were up before the delegates and the discussion on them indicates that there is a ground swell of discontent that finds expression in various ways.

A resolution proposing to increase delegates per diem from $14 a day to $16 a day was hotly contested. It finally lost. Unemployment among firemen is very acute at this time. Many members of the brotherhood are unable to find work on the railroads and are compelled to labor in other fields at a wage scale of 40 and 50 cents an hour.

To have gone back to the boys at home with a $16 per diem would have made necessary a lot of explanation that must in their very nature have failed to explain.

It was common talk among the delegates that the proposition to increase their per diem was put out as a feeler to get a line on the sentiment for an increase in salary of the brotherhood officials.

Another resolution which would allow the brotherhood to dictate the political affiliations of the entire membership is before the convention as this is written. The debate has at times been quite caustic. Some of these delegates come from the northwest where "farmer-laborism" continues a potent factor in the political situation. They do not relish the idea of having their bureaucracy assigning their political affiliations here to an elephant, there to a jackass and it is probable that this resolution will be disposed of by being tabled.

There is nothing here that can be considered a real left wing. However, the deplorable working conditions on the railroads, the reluctance of the officials to adopt a policy of struggle against the bosses and for the improvement of the conditions on the job has made for a discontent, which, if it can be organized for action, will change the character of this convention from a gathering of smug Babbitts to a convention of a working class organization.

LETTERS FROM CHINA TELL OF BITTER STRUGGLE OF CHINESE WORKERS AGAINST ALIEN BOSSES

(Editors Note: On Saturday we printed a letter from Shanghai, China, written by Comrade Sinbad. We have received more letters from him showing the conditions which led up to the present uprising against the foreign imperialist invaders. We are sure the readers will be interested in these letters which throw light on the situation in China, darkened so much by the capitalist press in this country. Today we are printing his second letter; another will be printed tomorrow. These letters, written at the time the first strike broke out in February, reveal the conditions against which the Shanghai workers are striking today, as the first strike was beaten by hunger. Now the workers are out again, on the same demands, with the strike becoming general and political.)

GOVERNMENT BACKS A COMMERCIAL AIR FLEET TO FURTHER WAR PLANS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—Plans developed for commercial aviation in this country were prompted by a study and report made by the war department and turned over to leading business men, of commercial aviation in Europe, it was revealed here.

The New York and Chicago airline, soon to be established, also has the support of the government, which is endeavoring to build up a commercial air fleet.

The fleet could be easily converted into a war fleet, it is explained.

Down With American Imperialism!

Manifesto of the All American Anti-Imperialist League

AMERICAN imperialism has shown its hand in China. It is a bloody hand, dripping with the blood of defenseless Chinese workers and students. All China is aroused at the latest imperialist outrage at Shanghai.

Unarmed students who dared to show their sympathy for the underpaid striking employes of big foreign-owned textile mills have been shot down in cold blood by American, British and Italian troops in the streets of Shanghai.

From strike-breaking and murder the foreign troops have proceeded to complete military occupation, not only in the so-called "foreign quarters" but over the whole city. All police powers have been usurped by them. Chinese newspapers and leaflets have been confiscated. Students and teachers have been forcibly ejected from the university of Shanghai, which now serves as a barracks for American marines.

Over 200 Chinese have already been killed.

This is the practical outcome of the innocentsounding "rights of extra-territoriality," which the imperialist powers long ago forced China to accede to and which permit them to maintain their own military and police force, their own courts and their own legal systems in the foreign quarters of Chinese cities. "Extra-territoriality" is now revealed as the opening wedge to assumption of supreme authority, leading to the further partition of China among the imperialist powers under the slogan of "white supremacy." The road to super-profits in the Far East lies over the dead body of the long suffering Chinese republic.

Soviet Russia, alone of the great powers, is a staunch friend of China.

American forces took the lead in the brutal rape of Shanghai. The excuse offered is that T. G. McMartin, an American dentist, was wounded by Chinese "rioters." But McMartin had forfeited all claim to consideration. He was wounded after he had taken up arms against Chinese people as a private in the volunteer army recruited from the rag tag and bob tail of imperialistic hangers-on among the foreign colony of Shanghai.

American diplomatic officials in China have now cabled to Washington for "more naval assistance." British and Japanese diplomats have done the same. War looms in the offing—not only a combined imperialist assault upon China, but ultimately a fierce struggle among the imperialist robbers themselves, over the division of the spoils.

Is it a coincidence that the militaristic might of American imperialism is just now being flaunted before the world? Is it by chance that the biggest American fleet in history has been demonstrating in Far Eastern waters and is now on a "friendly" visit to Australia? Is it accidental that President Coolidge has proclaimed July 4 as Mobilization Day thruout the United States? Wall Street is preparing its gigantic new profit-war and Washington is nothing but an administrative outpost of Wall Street.

The assault upon China is welltimed. It aims to take advantage of the temporary disorganization following upon the death of the great leader, Sun Yat Sen, to shatter the Kuo Min Tang Party and destroy the Chinese nationalist movement. But the Chinese are offering a heroic resistance. Over 250,000 workers are on strike in the Shanghai area, tying up every factory, mill, telephone, street car and restaurant in the locality. All shops have been forced to close. The walls are covered with posters denouncing the imperialist legions. The students of Peking, Hankow, Tientsin, Mukden and many other cities have declared their support of the Shanghai students. Even the weak Peking government has been obliged to send a note of protest to the imperialist powers.

Everywhere the Chinese are demanding:

Abolition of imperialistic privileges in China.

Cancellation of "rights of extraterritoriality."

Removal of the maritime customs, chief source of national revenue, from the administration of foreigners.

Prosecution of foreign policemen involved in the shooting of students.

The All-American Anti-Imperialist League, representing the peoples under the heel of American imperialism in Latin America, Hawaii, and the Philippines, as well as revolutionary workers in the United States, makes common cause with its exploited Chinese brothers. It protests before the whole world against the latest imperialist outrage at Shanghai, and particularly against the actions of the hypocritical United States government, the pretended "friend of China," the so-called enemy of imperialism which has shown itself over and over again to be the leading prototype of capitalist imperialism in the world today.

The All-American Anti-Imperialist League calls upon all the peoples who are victims of American imperialism to rally to the support of our Chinese brothers.

We also call upon the exploited wage-earners of the United States, who feel the lash of Wall Street no less than the other oppressed peoples, to repudiate the imperialist ventures of their government and to demand the immediate withdrawal of all American naval and military forces from China.

To the mighty Kuo Min Tang Party of China, the courageous embodiment of the struggle for Chinese liberation, we extend a fraternal greeting. We pledge ourselves to take up your fight, which is also our fight, to the end that the Chinese people may be able to throw off this curse of imperialism which is clutching at their throats.

Down with American imperialism!

Down with the attempt of the capitalists of America, Great Britain, Japan, etc., to wage a new imperialist profit-war!

Immediate withdrawal of all American troops from Chinese soil!

Immediate withdrawal of every American warship from Chinese harbors!

Hands Off China!

ALL-AMERICAN ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE,
Manuel Gomez, Secretary.

COMMUNISTS IN COURT ON FREE SPEECH CHARGE

Five Face Jury Today in Fight for Party

The fight of the Workers (Communist) Party defending the right to hold open air meetings at W. North Ave. and Orchard St., goes before a jury in municipal court, Room 1106, City Hall, this morning, at 9:30 o'clock.

Five members of the party have been arrested at this corner within the past few weeks, including J. Louis Engdahl and Karl Reeve, of the editorial staff of the DAILY WORKER, Thurber Lewis, of the Labor Defense Council, John Hecker, of the Young Workers League, and D. E. Early.

Engdahl was arrested last Saturday night and booked on the charge of "speaking on the street without a permit." This, the police declared, is in violation of an ancient city ordinance that was long ago declared unconstitutional.

Last month Karl Reeve, Thurber Lewis, and John Hecker were arrested on the same corner, and booked under the same charge.

D. E. Early had previously been arrested. The charge against him was at first the same as against the other Communists, but later a "disorderly conduct" charge was added. All those arrested are out on bail.

COURT DECISION IN GITLOW CASE SETS PRECEDENT

Opens Way for Attack on Other Communists

He served 27 months and was released on appeal to the state supreme court May first 1922. The sentence was upheld and he was again remanded to prison in January 1923 then he was released on a writ of error appealed to the supreme court in April 1923.

Must Go Back To Prison

The attorneys for Gitlow are waiting for the full decision of the court to petition for a rehearing. But it is expected that this will avail little. Gitlow will be sent back to the penitentiary as soon as a court order releases his bail. It is thought that Governor Smith on the strength of the precedent in pardoning Gitlows fellow defendants will act similarly in this case. But it is also pointed out that the decision of the supreme court might have a serious effect on Gov. Smith's future considerations.

The Labor Defense Council, realising that the legal fight for Gitlow is over is undertaking to initiate agitation for Gitlow's release. Gitlow was sentenced at a time when the post-war hysteria was running high. His conviction was a plain case of railroading The court records read like a fourteenth century heresy trial.

In his dissenting opinion, Justice Holmes writes, "If in the long run, the beliefs expressed in proletarian dictatorship are destined to be accepted by the dominant forces on the community, the only meaning of free speech is that they should be given their chance and have their way."

It is recalled that Judge Weeks in his thanks to the jury for finding Gitlow guilty, said of him, "A young man, 29 years of age, of intelligence, a striking example of the educational system of the country, able bodied, of full intellect, confesses he owns no property—employed at $41 a week the last time he was employed and never accumulated any property!" That seems to have constituted the large part of Gitlow's crime in the eyes of the judge whose whole speech of thanks to the jury was on the theme, protection of private property.

Gitlow Case Considered Test

The manifesto for which Gitlow and the others were convicted was in part a historic resume of the proposition that some societies are overthrown by force. It was this section of the manifesto for which the five defendants were convicted, altho no overt act or any intention of an overt act was proved by the prosecution or even introduced. Now that the word of the supreme court on its attitude toward criminal syndicalist laws has been spoken in the Gitlow decision that has been looked upon as a test case, the Labor Defense Council is planning a great campaign for the fighting of the dozens of court battles that will be the result.

SUN OF RAMSAY MACDONALD BRANDS "ZINOVIEV LETTERS" FORGERY—INDICTS HIS FATHER'S POLICIES

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, Australia.—(By Mail.)—Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, son of the ex-prime minister of Britain, who is at present in Australia, declared during the course of a public speech at Sydney that the notorious Zinoviev "letter" released during the last British elections was an impudent forgery.

This admission is considered in Australia to be tantamount to an indictment of the labor government of which Mr. Ramsay MacDonald was at once the head and the foriegn secretary, for the apparent acceptance of the genuiness of that letter by MacDonald was dirctly responsible for the disastrous effect which it had upon the fortunes of the British labor party in the general elections.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee believes that the United States should give up its extra-territorial privileges in China, just as it has been compelled to do in Turkey. He declares, in the midst of the storm raging about the foreign-controlled settlement of Shanghai, and in the face of threatened popular uprisings that may expel British, Japanese and other foreigners from China, that China should be administered by the Chinese.

No Withdrawal of Invaders.

This declaration by Borah has found no echo in the White House or state department. President Coolidge hopes that everyone will remain calm, so that things in China may settle back into the old grooves, Secretary Kellog promises that there shall be no military "occupation" of China by American armed forces, and he thinks that the American forces now in Shanghai will be enough to meet the emergency of the general strike. But he and his chief offer no pledge of withdrawal from Chinese territory, such as is demanded by the student striker movement.

Momentary excitement has been created by the Associated press theory that Japan and the Soviet Union are about to start a war in China, using the Manchurian bandit-dictator, Chang Tso-lin and the Christian general Feng as their respective implements. But White House and state department deny knowledge of the essential facts alleged—that Russian munitions of war are being poured thru Mongolia into Feng's hands, and that Japan is drilling Chang's army.

The state department has made public numerous reports from its agents in the Far East, that the Soviet ambassador, Karakhan and the Moscow adherents were encouraging the Chinese demand for liberation from foreign overlordship.

But it is not at all sure that the Japanese government is going to start a civil war in China that may greatly increase Soviet power in Asia. It knows that the Tokio politicians fear revolutionary risings at home, and will step carefully.

Very Doubtful.

Whether Borah will be able to get a majority of his senate committee to favor American withdrawal from extra territorial power in China, during the coming session of congress, is doubtful. Few of the senators have studied the Chinese situation; their feeling is that it should not be disturbed at all. If China does not accept foreign dictation, then maybe we should send more warships to persuade her. However, if staying in China shall have been shown, during this summer's struggle, to be very costly to the American treasury, that fact will have weight.

Minister MacMurray, before leaving Washington to take up his duties at Peking, has received full instructions from Secretary Kellogg. These instructions deal largely with policy to be followed in the tariff conference which the foreign diplomats are soon to hold, to decide what rates on imports China may charge.

Boston Steamer Hits Derelict.

BOSTON, June 9—Lives of thirty members of the crew of the freight steamer West Saginaw were imperilled today when the ship crashed into a submerged derelict in a fog in Vineyard Sound.

Wireless messages from the West Saginaw said her forward plates were punctured, that temporary repairs had been made and that she was proceeding to Boston, her original destination.

WOOD'S PHILIPPINE COSSACKS MURDER 6 MORE MORO PEASANTS

MANILA, P. I., June 9.—Six Moros were killed and three Filipino constabularies were wounded in a pitched battle in the Lake Lanao region of Mindanao province, according to reports here today.

The Moros are in rebellion against the American dictators who are murdering the Moro peasants under the direction of Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood.

REPORT CHINESE ARMY LEADERS AGREED UPON SUPPORT OF STRIKERS

PEKIN, June 9.—The vernacular newspapers report that Gen. Feng Yu-Hsiang, "christian general," has issued a circular dispatch supporting the student agitation against foreigners and also that he has wired to Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian war lord, urging that the military leaders co-operate with each other and with the nation to obtian "the rights of the Chinese people."

Chang is reported to have replied, agreeing with these sentiments.

SENATE PASSES DUNLAP STATE COSSACK BILL

Small Agrees to Aid the Manufacturers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 9—The senate today passed the Dunlap state police bill, providing for a force of 700 mounted cossacks to be available for strikebreaking duty, by a vote of 28 to 8.

The Dunlap bill is the original measure defeated and backed by the Illinois Bankers association, the Illinois Manufacturers association, the state chamber of commerce, and other organizations of big business.

The house will rush action on the Dunapl police bill, while the Barr bill, creating a similar force under the direct control of Governor Small, is allowed to die in committee. Small arranged with the manufacturers to allow his bill to die and pass the Dunlap bill, as a more effective weapon against organized labor.

The women's eight hour bill is also slumbering in the senate committee on corporations and industry.

All bills not reported out of committee today are automatically killed, by the ruling of the senate.

Employes Save Life in Loop Fire Which Made 200 Flee Flame

Heroism rose above smoke and flames when fire sweeping the eighth and ninth floors of the Morton buildnig, 538 S. Dearborn St., drove 200 men and women down stairways, elevators, and fire escapes to safety in the street below.

The men who helped many to escape and prevented possible deaths and injury were Otis Williamson, a fireman of engine company 15, Robert Heard and Ralph Baird, elevator operators who ran their cars thru flames until the controls refused to operate.

Magnate's Wife Dodges Stand.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Supreme Court Justice Tierney today reserved decision upon the petition of counsel for Mrs. Retta J. McKenna, wife of the late Edward William McKenna, vice-president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, in which Mrs. McKenna asked to be released from court examination preceding the suit due in the St. Louis courts in which her stepdaughter, Mrs. Marie McKenna Mathews, is being sued for divorce.

GENERAL STRIKE AGAINST LANDIS AWARD LOOMING

Workers Lose Jobs in Asphalt-Cement War

The building trades workers of Chicago may call a general strike on all construction work against the "open shop," Landis award jobs, where union men are forced to work with nonunion workers on the same construction jobs.

At the same time, the cement and tile manufacturers and the brickmakers are battling in the city council for the use of their material in construction of building walls. The brickmakers have so far prevented an amendment to the building code which would allow the use of hollow tile.

Dever With Brickmakers.

Not long ago the building and zoning committee of the city council favored the use of hollow tile, and such an ordinance was passed. But Mayor Dever, who is in league with the brickmakers, refused to sign it. Now William Schlake, president of the Illinois Brick company, which has a monopoly on brickmaking, has the backing of the council committee to such an extent that his secretary writes up the minutes of the city council committee's meetings.

Workers Laid Off.

The same sort of a fight is going on as to whether asphalt or cement shall be used to pave the city streets. John J. Sloan, head of the board of local improvements of the city, who owns interests in cement companies, is trying to drive the asphalt companies out, and is endeavoring to have cement used to pave the streets.

Sloan is said to have big interests in the granite and crushed stone companies. He owns, according to reports, holdings in cement plants at La-Salle, Ottawa and Joliet. He is said to be the dominating force in the Union Construction company, which is a cement construction company. He is also reported to be in league with the Ready and Callahan cement concern.

On letting days the board of local improvements, has, therefore, been letting jobs only to these cement companies, and large asphalt construction companies, such as the American Asphalt Paving company, the Standard Paving company, the White Construction company, are losing city contracts.

Work at Standstill.

On the last letting day, only one small construction job was let—on S. Water street from Market to State street. Men employed by the asphalt companies have been laid off by the hundreds, and the fight between the asphalt and cement companies has now been taken to the courts.

Meanwhile the building workers are losing their jobs, and many of them have already been unemployed for a long period.

It is thot that a general strike of the building trades workers is for the purpose of not only abolishing the "open shop," but also of settling these disputes between the manufacturers, and sending the men back to work.

ALLIED VULTURE PICKS BONES OF GERMAN TOILERS

New Treaty to Pool Military Forces

PARIS, France, June 9.— The proposed reply to Germany and British foreign ministers at a conference at Geneva, as published here, grants Germany none of her demands, but on the contrary draws the circle of allied bayonets tighter around the German frontiers.

Under the agreement, Great Britain agrees to act with France in any military move on Germany's western frontier. England also agrees to Poland's retention of her present frontiers. Germany had demanded that her eastern frontiers be extended.

In return, she is ordered by the allied proposal, to conclude a similar treaty with Poland, under the supervision of the league of nations, guaranteeing Poland, which is under French influence, Danzig and Upper Silesia.

Germany has never given up her claim to this territory, refraining from guaranteeing the eastern frontiers fixed in the Versailles treaty. Herriot had declared that Germany must do this.

The proposed treaty leaves Italy out entirely. It is a four power treaty.

England agrees under the treaty to come to France's aid with all her military power, in case of fighting along Germany's western frontier.

Germany is forced to enter the league of nations and obey the Versailles treaty, under the agreement. The note will be sent to Berlin within a few days.

Push Forward in Soviet Republics But Pull Is Backward in Tennessee

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the simple-minded among those who lay claim to some brand of fake liberalism try to draw a parallel between "the Tennesse case" and developing events in the educational system of the Union of Soviet Republics. But they only succeed in stepping on their own toes and revealing their own ignorance.

• • • •

It is declared that the Soviet Union is replacing aged teachers with younger teachers. This is compared to the plan to remove the younger teachers, in Tennessee, and elsewhere, who run foul of anti-evolution legislation.

Yet the difference is clear. The Soviet Union takes its stand on the side of progress, with the most up-to-date methods of teaching, with the modern sciences, when it puts the young Russians, inspired by the new social order coming to life thruout the Workers' Republics, in its school rooms. New ideas, political, idustrial, social, forge to the front. They are passed on to the growing generation that eagerly accepts them.

The passing of the aged instructors, schooled in the reaction of the deposed czarism, is the passing of the black ignorance imposed upon the masses by the old order that disappeared on Nov. 7, 1917. Only those who still hope for the restoration of the czardom will weep at their going. Among these, of course, are to be found the propagandists of the American capitalist press.

• • • •

But in Tennesse, U. S. A. There the simple principles of evolution are under the ban. The youthful professor, "Johnny" Scopes, was indicted under a law passed by state legislators who declared that the theory of evolution "interferes with the bible."

The Russian czardom overworked religion in its efforts to keep the masses humble and contented with their lot. That is the effect of the Tennessee legislation, that wouldn't change a word in the biblical story of creation. The henchmen of capitalism in the Tennessee legislature are in the same boat that harbored the political agents of czarism, who believed that the czars ruled thru divine inspiration, an idea that the late German kaiser also entertained before he lost his job. This belief has also been cherished by great American industrialists, and may still be, altho they manage to keep rather quiet about it.

• • • •

The Scopes trial is one of those harmless things, however, that every liberal likes to play with. Scopes is still very respectable, since he believes in his christianity.

But Scopes must not be placed in the same category these liberals will argue, with the young Communist teachers of the Soviet Union, who are not content to patch and mend the capitalist system, but insist on destroying capitalism completely, even to its smallest roots, to make way for Communism. To them it is a horror to rid the Russian educational system of aged czarist teachers who live in the centuries past, just as they are stricken with terror at the thought that counter-revolutionaries must go to prison in order that the Workers' Republics might enjoy greater freedom and security of development.

• • • •

The liberated men, women and children of the Soviet Union alone may laugh at the antics developed by "the Tennessee trial," for they alone are on the road to complete intellectual, as well as political and industrial liberation. Communism sweeps away all the capitalist rubbish that gets in its path. Liberalism is content with a little court battle in Tennessee; so content that it even fights to have all the rest of the capitalist rubbish remain.' This should help shed a little more light on the meaning of "the Tennessee trial" for the exploited workers and poor farmers of the United States.

Curlee Strike Takes Out 800 Workers union, were promptly discharged. But Curlee overestimated his success if he thought he had weeded out all the union employes, for of his 1,000 employes, approximately 700 carried union cards.

About 85 cutters went out at one of the two Curlee plants, to which company officials replied in the daily papers that production was normal. But the following day the cutters were joined by 700 tailors, pressers and machine operators. One grand mass protest against industrial bondage. Enter, the usual police brutality.

Working Girls Are Good Fighters.

The vigor and determination with which many of these young girls, many without experience in strike praticipation, performed on the picket line was the cause of admiration among old timers. Pickets were rounded up wholesale and carted off to police headquarters, charged with "disturbing the peace," released on bond only to resume their posts on the picket line with even greater vigor.

Strike mass meetings are being held in Gayiety Theater, Sixteenth and Locust streets, where police intimidation is reported almost daily. One striker, a man, came to a meeting exhibiting a black eye and other marks of St. Louis police justice. The enormity of the lad's "crime" seems to be suggested in the fact that he was not among those placed under arrest. District Organizer Oliver says: "That was an outrage. I never in my life saw anything like it."

Organizer Pledges Relief.

The strikers are resolved to "stay out all summer." Regular strike benefits will be paid as soon as a check-up is made of the walkout. Says Organizer Oliver: "We will take action if any other firm goes to the rescue of Curlee. The international union will see to it that no striker is put out for non-payment of rent or goes hungry."

When Curlee had sufficiently recovered from his amazement to regain his speech, he gave the press a lengthy statement in which he blames "outside influence and agitators" for causing trouble among "our contented employes." "Our employes are well paid," wails Curlee, "and some of our employes actually have grown independently rich from their earning with our firm. Unions will do the workers no good."

Strike Spreads.

There is every indication of a successful and eventually victorious offensive against Curlee. This would break the back of the "open shop" clothing factories in St. Louis, as he is the worst offender in the state. Wages and conditions in the unorganized plants here are characterized as "disgraceful," and 100 per cent below the standards prevailing in other cities where the union has agreements. Headquarters for the campaign have been opened at 219 N. 14th St., with preparations to carry on the offensive indefinitely.

With only 85 of his employes out, Curlee defiantly referred to the Amalgamated as a "so-called organization." But he has not been heard from since that 85 jumped to dangerously near the thousand mark with excellent prospects that more will join their shopmates. Much time of the organizers is consumed in getting pickets out of jail. Union representatives were summoned to police headquarters to arrange bond for one of their pickets who had been arrested merely for carrying a sign announcing the strike—in the land of the free!

SCOPES' DEFENSE WILL MOVE TO QUASH THE CASE

Confers with Lawyers in New York City

DAYTON, Tenn., June 9.—While John T. Scopes, Tennessee school teacher under indictment for violation of the state anti-evolution law, is in New York conferring with his counsel for the coming trial, it was announced today that motion will be made in the near future by the defense to quash the indictment.

The motion is to be made on the basis of the law being unconstitutional, claiming it violates several sections of the state as well as the federal constitution, and that it is vogue and indefinite.

The tentative draft of the motion concludes:

"The indictment violates the whole spirit of both the states constitution and the constitution of the United States and is against the policy of the law."

Governor Austin Peay, who asserts "evolution is all bosh," will be subpoenaed immediately to appear at the coming trial, it was announced.

Bryan An Elephant

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 9.—William Jennings Bryan in his activities in the famous Tennesse evolution case is like an elephant in a China shop.

This assertion came from Dr. Harry A. King, superintendent of the Indianapolis district of the methodist episcopal church in the course of a talk upholding the evolution theory.

"We can not help smiling at the efforts he is making in this case against evolution," Dr. King said.

Scopes in New York

NEW YORK, June 9.—John Thomas Scopes, who is to be tried on July 10 for teaching evolution in the public schools reached New York today. Offers of assistance in his trial are pouring in on him from many sources.

The young scientist is the focal point of interest from many distinguished scientists.

Scopes spent the day in a series of conferences with his backers here over defense plans. He conferred with Forrest Bailey, formerly of Los Angeles, now acting director of the Civil Liberties Union.

Scope's schedule of activities for today included a luncheon with the executive committee of the American Civil Liberties Union at the Civic Club and a conference in the law offices of Samuel J. Rosensohn, of the firm of Pitkin and Rosensohn, counsel for the union.

Those attending the luncheon and later the conference, besides Bailey, included Roger Baldwin, Dr. Henry R. Linville, president of the Teachers' Union; Ann Martin, of Reno, Nev., Walter Nelles, of Coscob, Conn., Helen Phelps Stokes, Arthur Garfield, Hayes and Elizabeth Curley Flynn, Rosensohn will preside.

State Breaks Constitution

Tomorrow Clarence Darrow of Chicago will meet Scopes. Dudley Field Malone also will be in on the conferences, it is expected. In the afternoon the conference will include a number of scientists and members of the press.

Other attorneys who will participate in conferences are John L. Godsey and John Neal, of Tennessee.

In outlining his theory of the defense plan, Neal, whose home is in Knoxville, said that no attempt would be made to prove or falsify the theory of evolution. The constitutional questions, he said, will be paramount.

"We believe that the state has exceeded its police powers under both state and federal constitutions," he said.

Bootleggers Freed by Mob; Negroes Meet Different Fate

RICHMOND, Va., June 9—A crowd of 100 men battered down the doors of the county jail at Nottoway, south of Richmond, and freed two young men charged with bootlegging, according to advices received here this afternoon.

Neither the liberated men, known as the Davis boys, or any members of the mob, have been apprehended, the reports stated.

Negroes are never taken from jail by mobs here unless they are to be burned or hanged.

MANUFACTURERS PUSH DRIVE ON MINERS' UNION

Mellon's Company in the Conspiracy

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

Evidence of the "open shop" conspiracy to strangle unionism in the soft coal mines again comes to light in the latest letter of the fuel supply committee of the National Association of Manufacturers to members of the association. Going back to 1922 it says, "The Shopmen's strike had as one of its chief purposes the rendering of assistance to striking coal miners.

"It was believed that industry and the railroads would be crippled to such an extent that strong pressure would be brought on coal operators to accede to union demands." It asserts that 100 per cent unionism in the bituminous coal mines would mean a threat to enforce the union shop on railroads and in industrial plants by depriving non-union plants of their fuel supplies. It continues:

For Scab Mines.

"The menace is serious in our opinion. It lies, it is true, in the future. Yet immediate, prompt and continuous action at the present time by industrialists is necessary to prevent the threat becoming an actuality. Your committee recommends therefore, that in obtaining coal, industrialists do not overlook the independent coal fields."

This is as definite as they dare make their recommendation that members of the national association association boycott union coal. But the members will get the point.

Peabody Co. Breaks Agreement.

Twelve electric loading machines, each enabling 2 men to do the work of 3, will cost 300 coal miners their jobs at the largest mine of the Sheridan-Wyoming Coal Co. The mines of this company are operated by Peabody Coal Co. which has recently been accused of modifying conditions in defiance of the union agreement at its Kincaid, Ill., mine.

The new labor saving machines will be duplicated at other mines of the Wyoming Co. if they prove successful. The company president expects to save 35 cents a ton in cost of production.

"Engineers commenting upon the loaders," says The Wall Street Journal, "state that their use offers one of the best solutions for the present mining problem of labor."

That the Pittsburgh Coal Co. inflated 1924 costs by continued operation of obsolete mines in order to report inability to continue production at the union scale appears from a Black Diamond report on the Pittsburgh district. This report admits that the abandonment of 16 mines has only a remote connection with the union wage scale. These mines were about due for abandonment anyhow. Says the report: "Many were mines in which the coal had been practically all worked out. Others were mines installed to work out certain coal and some of that coal is left but can be mined later by adjacent mines of the company."

This company, controlled by Secretary of Treasury Mellon and his brother, is taking every means to undermine the union wage agreement. All its union mines are now closed.

SOVIETS STOP PROPAGANDA OF 'RELIEF' BODY

Rockefeller Money Is Used for Czarists

MOSCOW, June 9.—The American students' relief association, which has been supplying counter-revolutionary teachers with funds donated by John D. Rockefeller, have left the Soviet Union because their passport visas have expired.

The visas were not renewed, it is reported here, because the organization violated its agreement to confine its activities strictly to relief work, and attempted to spread propaganda against the Soviet Union.

The Rockefeller organization refused to aid the working class students and teachers, giving food only to the counter-revolutionists.

"We do not need any assistance from such capitalist organizations," one Soviet official declared.

The Gitlow Case and "American Democracy"

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

THE supreme court of the United States has handed down a striking confirmation of the Communist contention that American democracy is a sham and a fraud. This confirmation is contained in the decision upholding the conviction of Benjamin Gitlow under the New York criminal anarchy law. The decision was rendered after two and a half years consideration of the case during which the court twice heard arguments.

History of the Gitlow Case

IN order to understand the far-reaching significance of the decision in the Gitlow case a knowledge of the origin of the case is necessary. The conviction of Gitlow on the charge of criminal anarchy grew out of the first attempts to form a Communist Party in the United States. In upholding the conviction of Gitlow the supreme court has declared illegal the advocacy of the principles of Communism and at the same time has held constitutional the criminal syndicalism laws on the statute books of twenty-six states, which were passed during the period of the birth of the Communist Party in the year 1919.

Immediately after the signing of the armistice there came into life in the socialist party a left wing which supported the principles of the revolutionary class struggle that had triumphed in the Russian proletarian revolution. This left wing won the support of overwhelming majority of the members of the socialist party. The answer of the right wing reformist leaders of the socialist party to the attempt of this left wing to take control of the party and affiliate with the Communist International was the wholesale expulsion of the left wing members. At the end of June 1919 the left wing met in New York City to plan its next steps and to formulate a statement of its principles.

The left wing conference elected a national council of which Benjamin Gitlow, James Larkin, I. E. Ferguson, C. E. Ruthenberg, Bertram D. Wolf, John J. Ballam, Louis C. Fraina, Max Cohen, Eadmon McAlpin were members. It authorized this council to publish a manifesto and program of the left wing which would state the principles of Communism as against reformist socialism and on the basis of which the fight in the socialist party would be continued until the national convention of the party.

It was for the publication of this manifesto and program of the left wing in the Revolutionary Age, the official organ of the left wing, that Benjamin Gitlow was convicted of criminal anarchy. All the members of the national council were indicted but only Gitlow, Larking, Ferguson and Ruthenberg were arrested, tried and convicted. All were sentenced from five to ten years in Sing Sing.

In 1922, after Gitlow had served two years and three months, Larkin two years and Furgeson and Ruthenberg a year and half, they were released on bail by the court of appeals of the state of New York, pending a decision in their cases. In August of that year the court of appeals affirmed the conviction of Gitlow and Larkin and reversed the conviction of Ferguson and Ruthenberg and ordered a new trial in their cases. Gitlow's case was appealed to the United States supreme court, Larking pardoned by Governor Smith and the Ferguson-Ruthenberg case is still pending before the lower New York court, with $5,000 bail up for their return to Sing Sing.

The Law and the Issue

THE New York criminal anarchy law was passed in 1901, as a result of the assassination of President McKinley. It forbids the advocacy of the doctrine of "the overthrow of organized government by force, violence or other unlawful means" or by the assassination of public officials. Up to nearly twenty years after the passage of the law, that is until 1920, there had been no indictments or convictions under it. In 1920 it became the weapon thru which the capitalists tried to stop the forward march of the Communist movement.

During the year 1919-1920 some twenty-five other states passed laws modeled after the New York criminal anarchy law, calling them in most cases "criminal syndicalist" laws.

When the Communists were called to answer the charge that their principles violated the provisions of the criminal anarchy law they stoutly denied the charge. They declared from the witness stand, and, as in the case of Gitlow in a speech to the jury, that the Communist program was not the "overthrow of organized government," that is, the abolition of all government, against which the law was directed, but that their program was the overthrow of the capitalist government and the establishment of a proletarian dictatorship in the form of a Soviet government. The New York courts, ruled, however, that big difference between anarchism and Communism was only a little difference so far as the capitalists were concerned, whose government was to be overthrown in either event, and upheld the convictions. This view is now confirmed by the supreme court.

There is, however, another issue involved in the upholding of the New York law and with it the criminal syndicalist laws of other states.

In the first amendment to the constitution of the United States there is the provision "Congress shall make no law abridging the right of freedom of speech, press and assembly..."

That is pretty plain language. "Congress shall make no law..." This is one of the provisions of the constitution upon which is based the claim that the United States government is a democracy and that the constitution protects the rights of the people.

"Congress shall make no law..."

But congress did make laws abridging the right of freedom of speech, press and assembly. It passed the Espionage Law immediately after the entry of this country into the world war, which in a score or two of forms abridged the right of freedom of speech, press and assemblage.

The Supreme Court and Free Speech

WHEN the question of harmonising the provision of the constitution which said "congress shall make no law" with the fact that congress made a law, came before the supreme court for adjustment in appeals from convction under the espionage law, the court found an interesting way out of the dilemma. It declared in a number of decision upholding the constitutionality of the espionage law: Of course, congress has no right to make laws which prevent people from saying what they please or writing what they please, but congress can punish such persons for what they say or write if there is a clear and imminent danger of injury resulting from the speech or writing.

The "clear and imminent danger" rule was applied by the supreme court in all of the war cases. To illustrate the meaning of that rule: A preacher was accused of making a speech against the draft law in Montana. It was proven in his case that all of his audience was above the draft age. Well, said the court, no injury could come from such a speech since no one who heard him could have been influenced not to register, and it reversed the conviction of the preacher.

The rulings of the supreme court in the war cases, while nicely evading the clear and explicit language of the constitution, left, theoretically, some vestiges of the right of freedom of speech, press and assemblage.

In the Gitlow case the supreme court has finished the job. It has stamped out what vestiges of the rights granted by the constitution which were left by its war-law decisions.

The New York criminal anarchy law, as well as all criminal syndicalist laws, do not punish for the results which may come from a speech or writing. They punish the mere advocacy of certain ideas or principles. The court of appeals of the state of New York, from which Gitlow appealed, expressly stated in its opinion affirming Gitlow's conviction that the question whether any one read the Revolutionary Age and a "clear and imminent danger" of injury resulted was not important in the case. It declared that the law punished the advocacy of certain principles no matter when or how they were uttered or written.

The supreme court has upheld this view in confirming the conviction of Gitlow.

From the constitutional provision that "congress shall make no law..." we have come to the ruling of the supreme court that congress or the state legislatures may make any law they see fit to punish the advocacy of ideas which they considers detrimental.

The supreme court has written "finis" under the theory that the constitution assured the people of this country the right of freedom of speech, press and assemblage. It has declared that we have freedom to write, speak and hold meeting about only those things which our masters think are good.

To the Communists the supreme court has given one more proof that the boasted American democracy is a sham and a fraud, one more proof that it is not constitutions but the interests of the capitalists which dominate all the institutions of the government—one more proof that the only way to democracy for the workers is thru the establishment of the highest form of democracy, the Soviets and the proletarian dictatorship.

They Might As Well Admit That Italian Debts Are Bad Ones

WASHINGTN, —(FP)— June 9.—All hope of collection or refunding of war debts due the American treasury is admitted in administration quarters to have shriveled. Finance Minister De Stefani of Italy has admitted that Italy and her neighbors cannot pay, and Morgan & Co. have loaned $50,000,000 more to Italian banks.

SOVIET MODEL FARMS DEVELOP BETTER CROPS

Good Grade Seeds and Pure Bred Cattle

By ALFRED KNUTSON
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—(By Mail)—The Soviet farms have as their purpose to develop pure bred cattle and good grades of seeds and place these things at the disposal of the farmers. These farms are agricultural experiments stations where the farmers in a particular district can go and get good cattle, good seeds and receive valuable information as to how to get the best results out of their work on the farm.

They constitute a land-mark in the development of Russian agriculture and are of tremendous significance for the farmers generally.

Modern Production Methods

It is true that these stations cannot as yet function really well because of the lack of modern farm machinery, but it is only a question of time when this need can be supplied. The Soviet authorities are all the time anxious to make use of the most up-to-date farm production methods available, no matter from what source they may come.

The size of the Soviet farms is about one section or 640 acres, some containing a larger area and others a little less. The one I visited at Ramensko near Moscow has an area of about 250 dessjatina, approximately one section of land, and of this 162 acres are under cultivation, 125 acres in timber land and the rest meadows, pastures and garden land.

A Soviet Farm

The farm has 13 horses, 40 milch cows, 30 heifers and usually employs 22 workers. With the introduction of modern farm machinery the number of workers can undoubtedly be materially reduced.

This farm is now self supporting. The wages of the workmen is 26 roubles per month and they receive in addition living quarters, light and heat without paying anything extra. The board costs the workers' about 9 roubles per month. The workday is 8 hours except in the busiest time of the summer when it is 10 hours or more and then the wages are 50 per cent greater.

Success Assured

The wages are in accordance with the income of the farm, and it is very significant to note that as production increases the wages also increase. The conditions of the workers on this Soviet farm are steadily becoming better from year to year. It is a hard pull, to be sure, but success is assured.

Horse Breeding Farm

Near Tula, about 130 miles south of Moscow, is a horse breeding farm, the purpose of which is to furnish the farmers with good breeds of horses. At the present time the Soviet government is subsidising this farm in the amount of 25,000 roubles per year.

Among the 180 horses now found on the farm, some are considered very valuable. I was shown one stallion really a very pretty animal that the manager said was easily worth 100,000 roubles.

Likes Soviet Management

The manager of this horse farm is the former owner—a bourgeoisie of the old days, and he told me that he was more satisfied with the work on the farm under the new government than during the reign of the Czar.

He was frank enough to admit that the Soviet government was proceeding along far more practical and useful lines than the rulers of the old days.

The walls of the residence are decked with all kinds of large paintings of different breeds of horses and the manager took particular delight in explaining the merits and demerits of the various types. His very life was wrapped up in horses.

When sold the horses usually bring a good price, stallions selling for 1,000 roubles and mares for 600 roubles (one rouble is about 50 cents). The average horse that is used by the Russian farmers generally in cultivating the land is valued at from 50 to 250 roubles.

Government Helps

Under the new economic policy every enterprise is expected to be self-supporting but this farm is not yet able to pay its way. The government helps wherever help is needed and as production in both industry and agriculture increases it becomes more and more liberal with such assistance.

Lame Duck McCumber Gets $7,500 Job on a Workless Commission

WASHINGTON —(FP)— June 9.—Former Senator McCumber of North Dakota, beaten in 1922, has been given a $7,500 job as a member of the international joint commission on Canadian boundary disputes. The death of former Sen. Townsend of Michigan, another recent lame duck, left the vacancy he will now fill.

ted by the Chapei police who were ordered to shoot into the crowd. The number of workers that were killed is not known. The enraged mob beat the assistant manager (a Japanese) until he was rescued by Municipal police and they threw the manager into Soochow Creek.

The municipal council seeing a chance for the endangering "of foreign life and property" rushed a carload of detectives to the scene. The car was likewise pushed into the creek. Some of the strikers then climbed over the walls of the millyards to urge the ones who had remained in the mill to walk out. There is a possibility of a sympathetic strike on the part of other textile factories which will mean that the foreigner will have to open up his bulging pocketbook or else take the other alternative, a bath, this time not in Soochow Creek but in the deep blue sea.

The Mill Strike Feb. 18 1925

The number of strikers has been increased one thousand, the total now being 30,000 strong. The newspapers are expressing various opinions as to the cause of the strike. They infer that the strike is backed by the "reds" and that 40,000 dollars bolshevik gold is at the bottom of the whole strike. Fear is being expressed that the other factory workers will join in a sympathy strike. The police have started action against the leaders. The strike is progressing. It will probably develope into something that will really cause the Japanese textile barons to reconsider the conditions which exist for the slaving textile workers and in the end concede the demands which will be presented in a day or so.

Strike Spreading Feb. 19, 1925.

The total number of strikers at present is 35,000 the slavers from 15 mills. A small fact which may be of interest to the casual observer is that the dividend declared by these factories at the end of the year equals the capitalisation. Little children are forced to work 12 hours a day in order to materialize this dividend.

The plea of the millowners is that the living and working conditions in their mills are no worse than in any others. They think that will vindicate them. The number of strikers has increased 5,000 since yesterday. Demonstration are being held every day but the negotiations for the settlement of the strike have not as yet been sarted.

Then—On Feb. 20, 1925.

40,000 is the total of wageslaves who have started the move for freedom. The mill owners state that they have definite information that Mr. Karakhan is at the bottom of the whole business and that it is to promote rioting and disorder that he is financing it. They also state that it is a carefully planned part of the anti-foreign movement.

It seems that the Japanese owners cannot realize that a people burdened down with years of slavery and living under indescribable conditions, getting at the most 40 cents a day and being beaten by overlording Japanese foremen, will in time rise up as a mass and throw off the yoke of their bondage.

The police have tried to prevent demonstrations from taking place and in all cases have shot two or three volleys into the masses of people assembled in order to consider the vital questions connected with the strike. Yesterday two members of Kuomintang party whom foreigner say are "in sympathy with Communism if not actually agents of the Bolsheviks" were arrested as being the leaders of the strike. The mob enraged by this action stormed the police station but were dispersed by a volley of shots.

What Strikers Want —Feb. 22, 1925.

The demand of the mill strikers as conceived by a local newspaper are as follows:

1. Discontinuance of ill treatment to workers by Japanese foremen. (The Japanese owners answer that they treat their workers better than in any other mills in the city or in China but do not deny that they do beat their workers, which leads one to believe that a general cleaning up of mills all ovre the country is necessary.)

2. An increase of 10 per cent in wages. (The owners say that it is a matter of efficiency and that their rate of payment is higher than most factories. When one takes into consideration that the highest salary paid by th Japanese to unskilled labor is 40 pitry cents a day—about 18 cents U. S.—then it is no purpose that there is fear of sympathy strike on the part of other mills.)

3. Payment of wages every two weeks.

4. Reinstatement of 40 employees dismissed from Nagai mill. (The barons answer that this is a matter of discipline, that the employer has a right to discharge any one from his employ if he sees fit.)

5. Full pay during the strike. (The grafters state that they are already paying 30 per cent of the wages every day but they forget to mention the fact that they pay it only to those who come to the factory daily to work during the period of the strike but whose numbers are too small to make production possible.)

6. Abolition of deposit system. (The details of this system are not given for publication for some reason or other by the Japanese owners, but they say that the deposit system is for the interest of the workers that it resembles a bonus system and that it would be against the interests of the workers to establish it. It seems as if they are taking especial care to "safeguard" the interests of the workers. They should see the absurdity of their answer.)

7. o employee to be discharged without proper reason. (The answer to this demand concides with that to the 4th demand.)

8. Strikers arrested and now in the hands of the police to be immediately released. (Their answer is that they cannot interfere with the procedure of the mixed court, or of justice. Again utterly ridiculous. Would the arrested ones be detained if no charge was brought against them by the owners and if the owners speak in their behalf?)

How Shanghai Workers Live

The homes of the strikers which are so much lauded by the owners as being standing proofs of their generosity to the workers, are devoid of chimneys and the smoke from the fires is forced to find its way out thruout the door way of thatched roof houses.

The ar eforced to live in these hovels the time they are free from their slavery. Whatever the newspapers will tell us about the means of compromising if the conditions after the compromise are practically unchanged, we know that the one tool used against the workers in any strike, besides militia, is that ever sharp tool—HUNGER.

Child Labor

Children are forced to go into factories to manipulate their numb fingers 12 hours a day. 12 HOURS A DAY. In North Homan province there are located several textile mills foreign owned. They employ 80 per cent boys and girls under the age of thirteen. The children are beaten mercilessly to force them to go to the mills.

Pious Christians and hypocritical business men wonder why there exists an anti-foreign movement.

As Sure As Day Or Night--
—Or the Revolution—

The development of proletarian writers proceeds with the growth of the Communist movement.

In this development the Little Red Library offers unequalled opportunities.

All subjects of working class interest can be covered: social and industrial problems, history, philosophy, fiction, poetry and art... the field is well-nigh unlimited.

There are only these main requirements: the work must be clearly of working class character and interest, and ... bear this in mind—

It must for the present at least, be limited to 10,000 to 30,000 words.
Original manuscripts will be given most careful consideration—and translations and suggestions for reprint most heartily welcomed.

HOT SUN MADE DELEGATES TO C. F. OF L. SWEAT

Otherwise It Was Not Torrid Session

Delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor perspired freely, but not owing to their exertions on the floor, at last Sunday's meeting of that body. The session was nuusually quiet.

In fact, the only vocal contribution made during the session that made the delegates sit up and look in the direction of the platform was a speech delivered by organizer Bell, of the Illinois Mine Workers who is lobbying for the anti-injunction bill sponsored by the Illinois and Chicago Federations of Labor.

Negro Held His Audience

Bell, was sent to Springfield to bring pressure to bear on the Negro representatives in the house to support the bill. He not only told his story but he acted it. Compared to Bell's homely, interesting and lucid narrative, the dronings of the other speakers were as monotonous and as empty as the sound of lead nickels falling on a salvation army drum.

Wise Asked a Question

A representative of the people's legislative service was given the floor to boost LaFollette's information and publicity department. The delegates endorsed the service without discussion, tho Joe Wise the self-constituted watch dog of the interests of the A. F. of L. wanted to know if the people's legislative service had the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor. The speaker said it did not but that William Green, heard him speak before the convention of the Iron, Steel and Tin Workers Union and applauded when he got thru. Green admitted that the P. L. S. rendered a valuable contribution to something or other.

Wise didn't look so wise after that. He took his seat with a grunt of dissatisfaction.

It was expected that the fight which the Building Trades' Council is planning to wage on the Landis award would be aired there, but it wasn't.

One delegate said privately that if any representative from locals affiliated with the Building Trades' Council "spilled his guts about anything connected with the affairs of the council, before the federation, he would be called on the carpet. The motto of the officials of the Building Trades' Council is 'give them (the federation) no information and ask nothing off them.'"

Most of the delegates to the federation are old and those who are not so old in years are old in spirit. Those who used to advocate a farmer-labor party a few years ago, now, either keep silent or do chores around the hall. David McVeigh, shows up but hardly ever takes the floor. Charley Wills, is growing stouter of girth, in fact the buckle on his belt is the most prominent part of his haberdashery. Charley has a political conscience that beats India rubber for elasticity. He sits at a little table by the door and sells copies of the Federation News, shakes hands with sundry people and makes himself generally useful to those who command his meal ticket.

It was rumored around the federation building yesterday that Anton Johannsen is going to work at his trade this week. This notice should be placed in a society column, as Anton is after coming from Florida, where he was competing with William Jennings Bryan in selling real estate. But the competition was too one sided. Bryan made a million dollars and Johannsen did not make within ten dollars of that sum. The reason may be that Johannsen believes in evolution and Bryan does not. However Johannsen will be operating at the end of a hammer this week.

It is only a rumor of course, but it is reported that Edward Nockels does not find the federation meetings so exciting as they used to be in the days not so long ago when Foster was there to put some pep in the discussion. It is also hinted that Fitz would rather look on somebody else than on Joe Wise who persist in interposing his forbidding visage between the president and the horizon.

Frank Buchanan of the iron workers' adds dignity to the assembly even when he does not wear his tall hat. Frank usually speaks, tho it must be sadly noted that the delegates don't get very excited over his remarks.

Mary MacInerney, of the Book Binders' Union invited all on Sunday to a pow vow which will be held by the National Catholic Welfare Council, in the Morrison Hotel. She gloated over the number of priests who will strut their stuff on the program, and, most delicious Morsel, an employer would also tell them how capital and labor could get together. If somebody announced that Charley Dawes would be guest of honor there it is quite possible no protest would be made.

Locals of the federation were asked to send telegrams to representatives in Springfield, urging them to support the anti-injunction bill. President Fitzpatrick advised those sending wires to use another telegraph agency as the Western Union was on the unfair list.

HAESSLER FOR LABOR DEFENSE NATIONAL MEET

Ashland Auditorium Scene of Gathering

The manner in which ex-political prisoners are coming to the support of the conference for workers' defense called by the Labor Defense Council to convene in Chicago June 28, is indicated in a letter received by the council from Carl Haessler, managing editor of the Federated Press.

Haessler writes: "The project of a national labor defense conference Sunday, June 28, should enlist the interest of every past political and industrial prisoner in America and of every potential prisoner as well, in these two classes.

In Many Prisons.

"As an alumnus of several of Uncle Sam's compulsory training establishments and as a by no means improbable candidate for more in the future, I am glad to offer my indorsement of the proposed conference. (Signed): Carl Haessler, political prisoner in Atlanta City jail, June 1918; Camp Gordon internment, June 1918; Camp Sheridan stockade, June-September 1919, Fort Leavenworth, September 1918, to June, 1919; Alcataraz Military Prison, June 1919, August 1920."

The Labor Defense Countil announces that the conference will be held in Ashland Auditorium at 10 a. m. June 28. In the evening an amnesty meeting will be held in conjunction at the Plasterers' Temple.

Brown Offers to Speak.

Former Bishop William Montgomery Brown of Galeon, Ohio, in a letter accompanying a hundred dollar check towards the expenses of the conference, expresses his heartiest wishos for its success and offers in spite of ill health to come to Chicago and make a short address at the mass meeting.

Two Hurt in Foundry.

Two employes of the Hodgson Foundry company, 2012 West 13th St., are in the hospital seriously injured, following their fall in the foundry's elevator. The elevator fell from the second floor to the basement.

Instructions for the Labor Party Campaign

Adopted by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

GENERAL: 1. The party shall begin immediately an agitation in all industrial centers for the idea of a national labor party and for the formation of local and state labor parties. This agitation shall be carried on in every labor organization with particular concentration upon local unions. The issue of the labor party shall be raised at all trade union conventions local, state and national, and also at the forthcoming convention of the A. F. of L.

2. Wherever the issue of the Labor Party is raised, this shall be done in connection with and on the basis of the present day issues of the workers, such as a struggle against wage cuts and unemployment, for the right to organize in unions, against imperialism, for the nationalization of the mines and railways, etc. Our campaign for a labor party shall be carried on along the following general lines:

a. Formation of concrete economic demands based upon immediate burning needs of the masses.

b. Popularize these demands among the masses and the labor organizations.

c. Call upon the rank and file in the shops, unions, and among the unemployed to address resolutions, petitions, and to hold mass meetings, demanding that the "labor" ring of the LaFollette progressive combination, the LaFollette group in congress, and the non-partisan political bodies of the trade unions propose and fight for legislation along the lines of the demands of the masses. At the same time we shall create united front organizations from below to carry on the struggle of the rank and file for these demands.

d. By these campaigns unmask the bourgeois nature of the LaFollette movement and of its labor lieutenants, expose the futility of the non-partisan political methods of the trade union bureaucracy and demonstrate the necessity of forming a labor party, a political party of the trade unions and other labor organizations, independent of and opposed to all political parties of big and small capital.

3. The practical objective of this agitation in the local unions of each locality is to prepare the ground for the labor party issue in the central labor councils. The issue should be raised in the form of a resolution committing the local unions and the central labor bodies to the organization of a local labor party. As a matter of general policy every effort shall be made to win the central labor councils over definitely to the labor party idea, and to the formation of local labor parties. The central labor councils shall be made the central strategic point in our struggle for the formation of local labor parties. We shall favor the actual organization of local labor parties when the volume of support for the project in the local unions and in the central labor bodies is sufficient to assure the mass character and the vitality of the organization. But we shall not favor the organization of "fake" labor parties; that is, labor parties consisting merely of the Workers Party and its close circle of sympathising organizations.

4. As part of this campaign there shall be given wide distribution in the trade unions and among the masses of workers the manifesto issued by our party on the experiences of the campaign for a labor party and the betrayal of the labor party by LaFollette.

5. A resolution sharply formulating the experiences in the labor party campaign and the betrayal by the LaFollette movement shall be introduced in the trade unions and a campaign for adoption carried on.

6. We shall endeavor to draw the Trade Union Educational League into the labor party campaign in the trade unions. We shall propose that the T. U. E. L. issue a manifesto initiating a campaign for a labor party in every local union city and state labor body, and at all trade union conventions. The slogan "For a Labor Party" shall be linked up with all the other immediate issues of the T. U. E. L.

7. The Educational Committee of the Central Executive Committee will prepare an outline of agitation and propaganda for our labor party campaign.

10. Workers Party members in this campaign shall in their speeches call attention to the united front program of the Workers Party, to its role in the class struggle and the labor movement.

II. Our Relations to Labor Parties

1. Wherever local or state labor parties are organized having substanital trade union support, we shall endeavor to have the corresponding Workers Party organizations affiliate with such a labor party.

2. We shall carry on a systematic campaign for the upbuilding of such parties thru securing the affiliation of the trade unions and other workers' organizations.

3. We shall make such local or state parties a base from which to carry on a campaign, if local for the organization of a state party, if state for the organization of a national labor party.

4. We shall strive to draw such local or state labor parties into the immediate struggles of the workers and particularly into campaigns initiated by the Workers Party in securing their endorsement and co-operation in such campaigns.

5. We shall carry on a systematic campaign of Communist agitation and propaganda within the ranks of such labor parties.

III. Our Attitude Toward Nonpartisan Political Labor Bodies, the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and Local Progressive Parties

1. There are still in existence in many localities various nonpartisan political bodies of trade unions. These nonpartisan committees and the nonpartisan political policy generally will again be brot forward by the trade union bureaucracy to counter and check any development toward indenpendent political action by the workers. The policy of the Workers Party toward these nonpartisan trade union committees shall be as follows:

a. We must fight resolutely against the nonpartisan system in general on principle and fight for class policy and for a labor party.

b. We shall endeavor to secure the election of party members or supporters to these conferences and figth there for class political action and a labor party.

2. Wherever there are in existence state and local progressive parties or C. P. P. A's. or farmer-labor, however, provided they have trade union affiliations, it shall be the party policy to secure the election of party members or supporters as delegates from unions to all such organizations for the purpose of organising within them labor blocs to fight for independent political action of labor thru a labor party.

3. Should we gain a majority for the formation of a labor party, we shall

a. If there is sufficient mass support make these organizations the basis for the nomination of a labor ticket and

b. Use them as a basis for the formation of a labor party.

4. Where we remain in a minority in such organizations but still have support, we shall strive to form a propaganda committee for the formation of a labor party from such minority delegates. These delegates shall, however, remain within the organization. These propaganda commitees should be united with the trade union propaganda committees which may be set up and conduct a common campaign for the labor party.

5. Where a Conference for Progressive Political Action and labor party organization exist side by side, we shall follow the same policy of penetrating the C. P. P. A., building up support for the labor party and striving to unite the two organizations into a broader labor party.

6. Where farmer labor parties are already organized or are organized by other groups we shall, as a rule, affiliate with such farmer labor parties and work within them. The Central Executive Committee shall make the decision for or against affiliation in each such instance.

7. It is our task in the farmer labor parties to strengthen the labor wing and establish its leadership with a view of ultimately organizing the labor elements into a labor party which will form a bloc with the farmers' organisations.

IV. Local Organizations

1. The approaching municipal elections in certain localities should be utilised for an intensified labor party agitation under the slogan "An Independent Local Labor Party for the Coming Municipal Elections," and where sufficient mass support develops to put up a united front labor ticket or form a labor party.

2. This campaign for a local labor party shall in no way weaken the preparation of the Workers Party to enter the municipal election campaign under its own name where no labor party had been formed.

3. In cities which have municipal elections this fall, we shall immediately begin a campaign in the trade unions thru the introduction of a resolution which shall:

a. Call attention to the coming municipal elections.

b. Emphasize the local use of government power against the workers, citing concrete experience such as the use of police in strikes, injunctions, etc.

c. Urge the necessity of independent political action by the workers and appeal to their pride as a class.

d. Place the unions or other workers' organizations on record as favoring the calling of a conference of representatives of the trade unions and other workers' organizations to consider the question of entering a labor ticket in the election campaign and the formation of a labor party.

The resolution shall not call an actual conference but shall only place the resolutions adopting it on record in favor of calling such a conference.

4. In places where mass support for such a conference develops thru this campaign we shall initiate the calling of a conference for consideration of the question:

a. Of placing a labor ticket in the field and

b. Of forming a local labor party using the list of organizations which have endorsed the proposal as sponsors for this conference. The Central Executive Committee shall decide in each instance whether such conferences shall be called.

5. While we thus use the oncoming election as a means of forming local labor parties where mass support develops, we must emphasize that the labor party is not merely an organization for the election campaign but to carry on continuous political struggles for the workers.

V. Labor and Farmer-Labor Party Election Campaigns

1. Wherever labor parties or farmer labor parties are organized and we are affiliated with them we shall endeavor to place Communist candidates on their tickets.

2. In such places where nominations are made thru primary elections we shall nominate Communists for the labor or farmer labor party nominations. Our candidates must carry on a clear cut Communist campaign for the party program. If nominated as candidates for the labor party or the farmer labor party their campaign for election must be similarly a Communist campaign on the full party program. If elected to office they must conduct a Communist parliamentary struggle under the direction and discipline of the party.

3. As a rule, if our candidates for nomination of the primaries are defeated we will support the candidates nominated on the labor party or farmer labor party ticket, at the same time criticizing these candidates and their program. The position of the party as to supporting the farmer labor party cnadidates is to be decided in each instance by the Central Executive Committee.

4. In conducting our campaign in suppor of the labor party or farmer labor party ticket our speakers, papers, and literature, must carry on at the same time a Communist campaign of agitation and propaganda.

VI. The Role of the Party

1. We must never forget in all the phases of the labor party campaign our fundamental task is to utilize this campaign for the building of the Workers Party into a mass party.

2. Our aims should be to affiliate the trade unions and other labor organisations with the labor party and to draw the individual militant workers into the Workers Party.

3. We must at all times maintain our organizational independence, our freedom of criticism, our press and literature. We must initiate our own campaigns in the name of the Workers Party and endeavor to secure the endorsement of the labor party for these campaigns.

4. We must carry on a systematic agitation and propaganda campaigns among the members of the labor party and systematic recruiting campaigns to win the best elements as members of our party.

AMERICA ORDERS IRON ORE FROM SOVIET UNION

Italy and Germany Get Big Supply

MOSCOW (By Mail).—The South Russian ores trust has received another set of inquiries from numerous foreign firms regarding the possibility of exporting Soviet ores. Thus, a supplementary demand for another supply of from 30 to 50 million iron ore has been received from America, while an important Italian concern has placed a fresh order for 25 million poods of iron ore to be exported thru the intermediary either of the Soviet Trade Mission in Rome or the German firm of "Ravak and Cruenfeldt."

It is learned that the South Russian trust disposes of some 30 million poods of iron ores which it can sell in foreign markets in surplus of the ore already purchased by the German firms.

Lawyer Invents Red Hoax.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 9.—Melvin A. Johnson, a Boston lawyer, got some publicity here when he manufactured another "red plot." Johnson said that the Communist Party of America, controlled by the Russian Soviet, obtained $40,000 for propaganda work from Moscow during January, 1925."

Johnson did not mention the Workers (Communist) Party. He did not say just exactly what the "Russian Soviet" was, and in his long speech before the bar association, due probably ot his training as a lawyer, he did not state a single accurate fact.

WORKERS AID FILM "RUSSIA AND GERMANY" RILES FURNITURE TRUST BUT LABOR FLOCKS TO SEE IT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHEBOYGAN, June 9.—Almost 500 people saw the picture "Russia and Germany" and "Beauty and Bolshevik" in Sheboygan Opera House. The attendance was unusually large considering the fact that this is the first time in the history of this city when a moving picture portraying true conditions in Soviet Russia was shown.

The furniture trust was very much alarmed by the interest aroused in the workers by this picture and by the thunderous applause which was made by the audience every time the hammer and sickle and the pictures of proletarian revolution were shown.

The extent of the fright experienced by the bosses is evidenced by the edidorial which appears in the Sheboygan Press, the mouthpiece of Sheboygan capitalists. The editorial is entitled, "There will never be another," and it calls upon the forces of law and order to suppress the insidious propaganda. The paper further clamors that a spark extinguished in time will not cause conflagration which is but another way of saying that the spark, if not extinguished, will cause conflagration.

Plenty of Inflamable Material.

The plutes have much to fear from the spark because the extent of exploitation is very large. The workers are mistreated and trade unionism is ruthlessly suppressed. In recent years a number of strikes were ruthlessly suppressed by gunmen and police. As the result of this the city has very little organization of trade unions and all of the large factories are unorganized. Wages in the city range as low as 28 and 32 cents an hour with a majority of the workers receiving less than 50 cents an hour.

The list of industrial accidents is running very high. It is a common sight in Sheboygan to see a worker with a mutilated hand or several of his fingers cut off. This is due to the fact that wood working machinery which operates at high speed and requires very close work has practically no safety guards. Very few workers are able to obtain satisfaction for their claims.

Koheler Rules as Lord.

A few miles from Sheboygan there is a large Plumbing Mfg. Co. of Koheler, which dominates the entire city bearing its name and Koheler rules more efectively and has a greater control over the material well being of his workers than any feudal lord ever exercised over the serfs.

Koheler provides the rules prohibiting the workers from buying any land in the city, exercising there almost a complete monopoly. In this way the workers are at his complete mercy even tho they do own the houses. Trade unionism is ruthlessly suppressed at Koheler, but it is rumored that unions in the east are exerting considerable pressure upon the concern in refusing to handle the non-union goods. Conditions of work at Koheler are unbearable. Workers are driven at a high rate of speed and it is positively known by the old timers that no worker can last in that plant for more than ten years, at that time his health has been completely destroyed.

There Will Be Another.

Notwithstanding the assertion of the bosses sheet, the Sheboygan Press that "There will never be another," the workers of Sheboygan who helped to organize the showing of the first picture with such tremendous success, are determined that another picture will be shown in the city in order to acquaint the workers with labor pictures.

Allies Again Rap Germany.

LONDON, June 8.—Germany is "far from the state of disarmament required by the Versailles treaty," the report of the interallied military control commission published here tonight claims.

The report was the basis of the disarmament demands made last week in the note sent Germany by the council of ambassadors.

DEPORTEE MAY NOW GET BOND IN NEW YORK

Hitherto Law Made Bail Impossible

NEW YORK, June 9—The long-standing abuse in the New York circuit of federal courts which prevented prospective deportees from obtaining their release on bail pending appeal is now corrected by statutory enactment and subsequent legal decisions of importance to all unnaturalized workers in this country.

Instead of spending the whole period from the time deportation charges are brot against an individual in confinement on Ellis Island, the person may obtain release on bail while appealing the first adverse decision. In every other federal district the courts allow the individual to obtain release on bail from the beginning of the case, before any decision is given.

Mackiem a Test Case.

"It has meant that it was almost impossible to handle deportation practice adequately," Carol Weiss King, one of the lawyers interested in correcting the evil states. The deciding case on which bail was allowed was that of Omar Lenox Macklem, who is not a radical but is held for deportation to Canada because of alleged illegal entry to the United States.

Macklem was held on Ellis Island from September, 1924, to June 1, 1925, when he was released on bail under decision of Judge Learned Hand of the second district circuit court of appeals.

Red Tape.

No boil is obtainable for individuals when first brot up for deportation in the New York district. They must spend the time at Ellis Island until papers in their defense are prepared, argued, heard and decided upon in the lower court. On appeal to the circuit court of appeals and further appeal to the U. S. supreme court they may be released on bail.

Arms Control Confab Permits Manufacture of Poisonous Gases

GENEVA, June 8.—The arms control conference today adopted America's resolution against war gases.

The resolution offered by Congressman Theodore Burton of Ohio, chairman of the American delegation, provides that a covenant signed by all nations against poison gas be deposited with the secretary of the league of nations until September 30, 1926. It was based on article 5 of the Washington arms conference.

No restriction, however, is placed on the manufacture of poison gas.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD CANNOT FORCE WITNESS

Court Ruling May Be Prelude to Worse Laws

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The United States supreme court ruled today that the railroad labor board, located at Chicago, has no power to compel attendance and testimony of witnesses in a case or controversy over which it was given jurisdiction by congress.

The ruling of the court on this disputed question was asked by the United States district court at Chicago in the case of D. B. Robertson, a labor leader of Cleveland, Ohio, served with a summons to appear before the labor board. Robertson challenged the validity of the court order.

The basis of the supreme court's decision was that a federal court can not compel persons from another district to obey its orders—that it has no authority outside its own jurisdiction.

The results of the decision probably will be that an effort will be made by the railroad companies in the next congress to amend the law so that the railroad labor board will have greater authority to compel attendance of labor witnesses and to enforce its rulings against the railroad employes.

Proposals for abolition of the board have been made in the past and it is expected that these will be renewed before congress in December in view of today's decision, which virtually strips the board of all its supposed power.

Without the authority to get witnesses or enforce its anti-labor decisions, the board is practically helpless, it was pointed out, except as an investigating agency of the federal government.

Alfonso Dodges More Bullets.

MADRID, Spain, June 9.—Rumors of another attempt at Catalonia, Spain, to assassinate King Alfonso were in circulation in Madrid today, but the censor prohibited any Madrid newspaper publishing incidents of what had occurred at Catalonia.

It was said that "persons of high rank" had been placed under arrest at Catalonia and another report asserted there had been eight summary executions.

Rent Sharks Offer No Hope.

Rents for apartments, flats, houses and cottages will remain at the high level now prevailing in a large number of American cities, says the Natl. Association of Real Estate Boards. This countrywide combine of rent sharks finds rents stationary in 72 per cent of 225 cities, 8 per cent rising and a slight downward tendency in only 45 cities. Canadian cities report rents stuck at the peak in every town heard from.

Rents in large cities for the same kind of dwelling average two to three times the rate in smaller cities of the 225 reporting, the association says.

EAST LIVERPOOL DEAD CITY WITH SHOPS AND POTTERIES CLOSED; WORKERS RALLY TO RED LEADERS

By MARY WATERS.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., June 9.—The industrial situation here is about the same as it has been for months; the potteries—the leading industry—working two and three days a week on an average. Some pottery superintendents have told the men that they would have that much work until July 4, but after that, nothing could be promised them.

We are expecting a complete lay-off after July 4 for a couple of months, and that in the fall work will be offered with wages cut all along the line. At least, this method has been used in many cases to cut wages, and at the same time to avoid a strike. The Brotherhood treasury is practically empty because of a strike two years ago, and the men are in no condition to weather another strike at this time.

Too, the merchants in town are in bad shape because of the poor pottery work; and they cannot carry the people thru a strike as they have done heretofore.

R. R. Shops Close.

The R. R. shops in Wellsville, four miles away, which used to employ several hundred men, have been laying them off all along, for about two or three years; until a month ago there were only three men working there, I understand.

The 135 carpenters in East Liverpool, who struck on May 1, for a raise of $1.00 a day, are still out. Six of the union carpenters had been taking some contracts, and they signed for the raise; also one of the outside contractors signed up. The four big lumber companies, and the two lumber companies in Wellsville, refuse to sign. Building would be at a standstill, but for the fact that many of the carpenters are now working "on their own," at the increased rate, and the home-builders are saving money by it, at that.

Negroes Organize.

A full Negro committee of about twenty-five members was organized to take care of the coming Fort-Whiteman lecture; and, later, the local work of the Negro Labor Congress.

Fort-Whiteman Speaks.

The evening previous, the secretary was visited by two men, one in uniform, who claimed to have been sent by the mayor to know what kind of a meeting was to be held next day. Upon reassuring them, and also the mayor, next morning, that it would be harmless, we were allowed to proceed as we had planned.

Comrade Lovett Fort-Whiteman gave a very fine speech regarding the Negro Labor Congress, and afterward a talk to those interested describing his travels, which was enjoyed as much as the address. The lecture was well-attended, two-thirds of the audience being colored people; and it will have good results.

A "Fake" Co-op Mine.

Power Point, near here, (called formerly "West Point,") is resuming work in its soft-coal mines under the following conditions:

Most of the mines are now working with the companies assuming half of the "dead work."

No. 46, owned by the Hammond Coal Co., has been reorganized as an alleged "co-operative." The company is reported to have given the men a lease; and pays them for the coal already loaded on the flat cars.

About fifteen men are working. They bunch their work—managing the mine, assuming all its care and all dead work; and are trying to guarantee themselves $7.50 per day.

Leads to "Open Shop."

Mr. Fleming, the district officer of the union, came to Power Point and told them they could not operate in that way, that they were violating the Jacksonville agreement.

The men have hired a foreman named Peter Naylor, and he and Fleming debated the matter on the floor of the local. Naylor out-talked, or out-argued Fleming, asking him if he wanted to shut down the mine. It seemed to some present as tho Fleming really desired that the men should lose their charter; altho as a matter of form he protested their action.

The whole thing appears to lead toward rendering No. 46 practically "open shop."

Report Shows Infants of Very Poor Have Slim Chance in Early Months

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9—In a recent survey made by the United States Children's Bureau on the question of infant mortality the following facts came to light. Deaths occurring anually from epidemics and communicable diseases are very small while deaths resulting from gastric and intestinal disease are very large.

Approximately 187,000 babies die anually under one year of age and the bulk of those are cases where mothers must go out to work daily while the baby is still very young. The rate of mortality among infants whose mothers are employed is abnormally high.

The report also points out that babies fed on mothers' milk during the early months have a better chance than those fed on the bottle.

Drink Schlitz Again, Union Advises.

CINCINNATI, June 9—Schlitz, "the drink (formerly the beer) that made Milwaukee famous," can once more slake union throats without leaving a dark brown scabby taste in the mouth, the Intl. Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America makes known. A satisfactory settlement has been made with the Schlitz Beverage Co. of Milwaukee and the firm will again operate under strictly union conditions, the general secretary of the international annouce. Pabst remains unfair to organized labor.

The Milwaukee firms attempted to break the strongly organized brewery workers' unions after the war but suffered considerable losses of patronage by union men all over the country instead. Schlitz has surrendered but Pabst, which turned over most of its huge plant to other industries, thinks it can stand some more knocks before giving in.

NEW ENGLAND IS CHOSEN FOR WAR GAME THIS YEAR

Exercises on the Pacific Coast Too Expensive

By H. SIDNEY BLOOMFIELD.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WORCESTER, Mass., June 9—Economy Cal is evidently making his influence felt in the war department. The naval games on the Pacific required no little amount of money hence the decision of the army war college to economise in conducting the final exercises of this year's graduating class which will be held in northern New England and northeasetrn New York state.

New England is going to be organized against a "theoretical enemy." New England was selected as the region for study because it is near Washington and the two weeks' work here will not cost much in these days of economical administration and the time spent here will be a welcome relief to the tender graduates after more than eight months of indoor study.

The officers are picked amongst the ablest in the army and include 19 colonels, 17 lieutenant-colonels, and 37 majors and a small group of naval and marine officers, under the tutelage of Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely. No guns will be heard; there will be no troop movements. Instead, officers will be observed late this month moving rapidly by automobiles from point to point studying large maps to learn how their studies in the war college agree with their observations on the spot.

Fight Theoretical Enemy.

Like the "Blacks" and "Blues" of the pacific fleet games, the game here too will have its theoretical enemies to point out the faults. Among the points considered are the placing of the National Guard units in the N. E. corps area, protection of lines of communication, water supply, localton of artillery, headquarters and airdromes. All this and much more has been worked out by these officers. Their next and final step will be to go to New England and by means of another war game learn whether observation on the ground reveals any faults in their paper plans.

From their maps at the college, for example, they may have decided that so many troops with artillery could be moved over a certain bridge. But when they study the bridge, they may find that it would not support heavy artillery. When they are thru, New England will have been organized—on paper—for war by what is considered "the best brains in arms." Several naval officers will accompany them as naval operations off the coast would necessarily have to fit in any plan of action involving this part of the country.

COAL OF KUZBAS HELPS REBUILD STEEL INDUSTRY

Soviet Union Speeds Up Coke Production

NEW YORK, June 9.—The output of coke is to be doubled at Kuzbas Autonomous Industrial Colony, Kemerovo, Siberia, the New York office reports. By October the second battery of coke ovens will be opened, bringing production to 14,000 tons per month, double the present amount.

Production of coal during April amounted to 1,875,000 poods, equal to 30,125 tons. Owing to the enlargement of the market in Siberia for coal Kuzbas is re-opening the Karl Marx shaft at the Lenin, formerly Kolchugina, mines.

Kemerovo coke is shipped to the Urals where it is used in the manufacture of steel. A recent test of the coal in the Prokopevsky mines, operated by Kuzbas, has shown that it possesses steaming qualities equal to the best Cardiff coals. In addition it can be used to smelt iron ores direct, without being coked first. Such coal will be of immense value in the speedy rehabilitation of the steel and iron industry in Russia, the New York office states.

The production of benzol, amonia, tar, pitch, anthracene and other by-products will be increased with the doubled coke production.

WORKERS PARTY HOLDS MEETINGS ON SOUTH SIDE

Hundreds Hear Talks on Communism

With a regular corps of speakers turning out for the open air meeting held every Saturday night by the South Side branch of the Workers Party and Branch No. 3 of the Young Workers' League, it was decided to start a second meeting at 52nd and State.

Both meetings were highly successful. Comrades Early and Phillips, at the corner of 30th and State addressed a large crowd which averaged over 300 workers, while at 52nd and State Comrades Zokaitis and Cline held a crowd of several hundred.

At both meetings the idea of the Negro Labor Congress was received with interest and enthusiasm. The plan of uniting the forces of Negro labor for a militant struggle against the capitalist class; carried a natural appeal for the Negro workers. The Workers Party stands to gain many new members among the Negroes as a result of the agitation for the labor congress.

In addition to the many copies of the DAILY WORKER which were sold, hundreds of copies of the Young Workers' League leaflet addressed to the Negro youth were distributed.

In connection with the sale of the Daily several interesting incidents can be related. One Negro worker in purchasing his copy remarked that the DAILY WORKER was the only paper which told the truth about the Riffian war, and that was why he was buying it. Another worker stated that his wife scolds him if he fails to bring a copy of the DAILY WORKER home from the meeting every Saturday night. He gave his name and address and promised to subscribe on the next pay day.

Two other workers turned in their names and addresses and expressed a desire to join the Workers Party.

50 New England Jingo Societies Enlisted to Stir Up Patriotism

By H. SIDNEY BLOOMFIELD

WORCESTER, Mass., June 9.—The jingoes of New England are feverishly at work trying to surpass last years' war demonstrations when 200 cities and towns whipped about 1,138,770 civilians and about 31,230 regular troops, national guardsmen and reservists into line last September.

New England is designated as the first corps area by the war department, and because of its position on the map as a strategical point, the showing made by the larger cities naturally attract much attention in the war department. For the purpose of stirring up artificial patriotism, more than fifty jingo societies are being mobilized in this district to supply the much needed enthusiasm.

In the meantime one factory after another is knocked off to the highest bidder at public auction, wages are cut incessantly and the parks and streets are full of idle workers in desperate straights. In some of the small towns the entire populace is unemployed while the bosses are out on a vacation by the seaside or in Europe.

Supreme Court Legalizes Exceptional Laws

The United States supreme court with Holmes and Brandeis dissenting has upheld the constitutionality of the New York criminal anarchy law, upholding the conviction of Benjamin Gitlow and legalizing imprisonment by the states of men and women for the expression of opinion.

The criminal syndicalism and criminal anarchy laws enacted during the war by this decision become a permanent part of the legal code.

"Defense of the nation from the alien enemy" was the excuse given by the spokesmen of capitalism for those suppressive measures, "war hysteria" was the reason given by the liberals. The first lied and the second wanted to keep an excuse for their continued support of American institutions.

We Communists have been fooled by neither of these groups. We told the workers that these laws were on the statute books to stay, that they were there for one purpose alone—to furnish a thin veil of legality for the jailing of workers whom capitalism considered dangerous to its bloody rule.

Those fatuously cheerful ones of the New Republic and Nation type, the yellow socialists who have quivered with resentment when the Communists denounced American democracy as a huge fraud, can now attempt to explain how it is that the most vicious legislation passed during the world war, state laws providing sentences of from ones to twenty years together with enormous fines, have been the only part of the mass of war legislation to be carried over into the post-war period and finally affirmed.

Never fighting on the real issues, never trying to arouse the working class to a sense of the danger, always stressing the legislative formulas, the social-patriots and the social traitors have joined hands here as in every other country.

Every county and state attorney now has the backing of the highest authority in the United States to proceed not only against revolutionists but against any strike of workers. It is to this phase of the criminal syndicalism laws that no one but the Communists have paid any attention. This neglect on the part of labor officialdom and its middle class advisers has largely prevented any activity of the unions for the repeal of these laws.

The fact that the labor unions are not now engaged in any great struggles, that in 1922 prosecution of the striking railway shopmen was carried on under an injunction prosess, has given the trade unions a false sense of security. Just at present the Communists and members of the I. W. W. are the only ones against whom prosecutions are carried. But when the trade unions are forced into struggle by nation-wide wage cuts and unemployment, when they begin to really act as rallying centers for the working class, there will be a different story to tell.

With the criminal syndicalism laws declared constitutional the defense of their most militant fighters becomes one of the major tasks of the American labor and revolutionary movement.

The decision of the supreme court the way American capitalism has of saying that it is going to use its state and national government to the limit to suppress the working class, that it intends to give no quarter in the class war. The workers will have to accept this challenge and, instead of being cowed and retreating must press forward with new vigor and determination.

It seems to us that this decision of the supreme court throws into stronger relief the processes by which the machinery of the capitalist states safeguards the interests of the ruling class. In comparatively peaceful periods, when American capitalism is not called upon to meet the workers in bitter struggle upon either the political or economic field it by no means forgets the class conflict as a large section of the working class are prone to. On the contrary it quietly occupies as many strategic points as possible, repairs its damaged apparatus and establishes firmly those institutions that have been set up for trial and have proved successful in suppressing intelligent and militant workers.

Capitalism works for itself all the time—in war and in peace, in periods of depression and of prosperity.

The workers must be equally as conscious and militant in behalf of their class interests. Only then will the sacrifices of the victims with which capitalism fills its jails begin to bear the red fruit of the social revolution.

Class Justice

The American workers who have gotten rid of the patrotic gudgeon grease with which the brains of so many of our working class population are saturated, need not be told that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor. We see a Doheny and Sinclair who loot the nation's oil reserves and a secretary of the interior who accepts $100,000 in graft for helping in the game, go scott free while poor victims of capitalist society go to jail for stealing a bottle of milk. This is not the only country where such uneven justice prevails. It exists wherever capitalism exists.

The Voice of Labor, official organ of the Irish Transport and General Workers Union, in a recent issue tells of a laborer who was given four years' penal servitude for stealing about $500. The same court, four days later handed out a sentence of nine months to a solicitor who fraudelently converted about $6,500 to his own use. In addition while the poor laborer must slave in the pen during his four years sentence, the solicitor wil really enjoy a good rest, having his own furniture, books and visits from his friends. This is the kind of justice the workers get under capitalism.

The Chilean Strike

Chilean strikers have confiscated nitrate plants and the dispatches state that troops are on their way to the scene.

The Chilean labor unions are 300,000 strong and American imperialism, with all its bribery and debauching of Chilean officialdom is not having easy sledding. What is needed is the linking up of these combined working class and anti-Wall Street movements into one powerful organization with branches in every Latin-American nation, working in the closest harmony with the militant workers of the United States.

The Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League has such a program, That it has a great role to play and that the movement is already taking shape is shown by the rapid extension of Wall Street control of Latin-America and such counter-movements as that in Chile.

Popalarizing War

The textile capitalists view the prospects of another world war with avaricious eyes, itching palms and drooling lips.

They have been given just a wee glimpse of the juicy contracts that will be theirs while the mangled bodies of the working class are buried in the trenches they dug themselves and the wounded fill the hospitals.

Lieutenant Gardner of the quartermasters department, preparing for the test mobilization on July 4, has mentioned to the textile barons just a few of the items that will be required for a good war—97,000,000 yards of 20-ounce olive drab melton cloth and many other items in similar gagantuan quantities.

Will the textile industry be opposed to war? Don't make us laugh.

Then there are smaller items such as 899,000 dozen muslin bandages, 42,950,000 yards of plain gauze, 8,130,000 yards of unbleached muslin, etc.

These items will bring great visions not only to the tired textile barons, starving to death on 20 per cent dividends while their greedy employes actually receive as high as $19 per week, but also to the embryo red cross nurses.

Try to figure out the number of flirtations with officers that could be carried on while 42,950,000 yards of muslin are being rolled into bandages and you will see why all the sex-starved females of the main street middle class will begin to powder their noses and order fetching nurse's uniforms when the tom-toms begin to thunder for the next war.

In every branch of industry the bosses are receiving orders in advance, contracts are being signed and all technical arrangements made for capitalizing the coming slaughter. Allotments of the expected loot are being assigned and all beneficiaries of capitalism organized on the businesslike basis of getting theirs from the treasury while the workers and farmers are getting it in the neck, the belly, the heart, head and all other vulnerable parts, on the battlefields.

The capitalist organization, outside of the test mobilization, which requires a good deal of advertising, is conducted quietly and this quiet is ominous. It means that if the working class waits until actually faced with war, if it does not prepare its resistance now to the bloody plans of the fat murderers, it will be slaughtered both at home and in the foreign nations against whom American imperialism is making ready an offensive.

The Russian Crop and American Farmers

There is considerable food for thot as well as for the Russian workers and peasants in the news that the grain crop of Soviet Russia for 1925 is estimated at 3,200,000,000 poods— actually 600,000,000 bushels more than the biggest bumper yield of wheat ever secured in the United States—for years the greatest wheat-growing nation in the world.

It means that the internal market for the products of Soviet industry will expand much more rapidly than hitherto, that the export trade of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics will take an upward leap, and as a result of improved economic conditions the workers and peasants will begin to draw in ever larger measure dividends from the investment of struggle and sacrifice they made in 1917 and the following years of invasion and famine.

As we say in this land of slang and slavery disguised as democracy, Soviet Russia is "over the hump."

For the American farmers, living in the fatuous paradise of Coolidgeism, the huge Russian crop means that they no longer can sell their product in a market which they dominate. No fake co-operative marketing schemes will help the farmers now. They can either settle down to the dull drudgery the European peasant has known for years or combine with the workers in a struggle to throw the bankers, landlords, the harvester trust and the milling trust from their backs.

The exploited farmers must begin to pay some attention to the problem of organization for and by themselves and kick out the frock-coated "grangers" who betray them to Wall Street.

The Marine Workers' Unity Conference

The early issue of the call for a unity conference by the Marine Transport Workers' Union of the Industrial Workers of the World, to be held January 15 of next year, is evidence that the question of bringing solidarity into the marine section of the labor movement is taken seriously by this union of militant seamen and longshoremen.

The conference requires much preparation because of the chaotic state of organization in the industry and it should be aided by every worker.

The New Orleans conference made a good start. The Havana conference ought to extend the work and lay the basis for a real organization of marine transport workers of the western hemisphere.

Not the least important of its tasks will be the definite organizational linking of the western unity organization with the unity movement of the European and Asiatic nations.

The Wonders of Capitalist Coal Control

Seventeen miners are killed by a gas explosion at Sturgis, Kentucky, in a non-union property.

The cry of the coal capitalists is that there are too many mines and miners. The industry must be stabilized, they say and now that the department of mines has been placed under the care of Herbert Hoover, the stabilization process, hitherto conducted in a rather hit and miss manner, will be standardized, i. e. the government will be still more militant in aiding the operators' war on the union.

In the meantime the surplus mines and miners are being eliminated by two methods—closing down mines and straving the miners or blowing them up and killing the miners outright.

The safety and sanity of capitalist industry are thus demonstrated.

Dispatches tell of great riots in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, where every spark of revolt was supposed to have been stamped out.

But a government that depends solely on the bayonets of mercenaries, even tho backed by the imperialist nations, cannot crush all opposition so easily these days.

There are still workers and peasants in the Balkans who will not lay down their arms until they are free.

Only the Communist deputies voted against the motion of devotion to the king in the Italian chamber of deputies. Catholics, socialists, and fascists joined in the cheers with which the vote was taken.

Make your own comment.

We hope the Norwegian farmers to whom Coolidge spoke in Minneapolis counteracted his hot weather trip by giving him a cool reception. There is no doubt but that the bankers present gave him a warm welcome.

The Enslavement of China

By WM. F. DUNNE

ARTICLE III.

JAPAN became a world power after her victorious war on China in 1894. She came on to the continent of Asia then on an equal footing with the western imperialist nations.

In 1904 the growing rivalry between Japan and Russia over commercial and territorial concessions brought hostilities and again Japan was victorious.

The war was fought with that complete disregard for the territorial integrity of China that has marked all the aggressions of the great powers. Both Russia and Japan violated China's neutrality and she had finally to agree to a war zone for the belligerents within her boundaries which included territory hitherto outside the spheres of influence of both powers.

PEACE was concluded by the Portsmouth treaty of 1905. On the Jacksonian principle that "to the victors belong the spoils"—a principle of American capitalist democracy that the Japanese rulers grasped very readily—the victors not only took over all actual Russian positions and ousted the Muscovites from their sphere of interest but grabbed Liaotung peninsula which had prevoiusly been ceded back to China.

By this simple process Japan became the dominant power in the north while still retaining her hold on Fukien province in the south.

IN the mechanical process of compiling the treaty as well as in the territorial arrangements contained therein, Chinese interests were entirely disregarded. All negotiations were carried on between the representatives of Japan and Russia. When both great powers had got the best terms possible from one another only then was the Chinese government "consulted"—by handing her an agreement drawn by Japanese diplomats which she was told to sign. This agreement specifically recognized Japan's premier position in southern Manchuria.

NOW began the systematic colonization of Korea by Japan. No longer did Japan try to conceal her intention to take Korea by speaking with tongue in cheek of the recognition of Korean independence by China as in the treaty following the Chino-Japanese war. Instead the treaty stated that Japan "possesses in Korea paramount political, military and economic interests." Interference with them would be construed as "an unfriendly act."

Following the appointment of Count Ito as resident general of Korea in 1906, a protectorate was established and by 1910, thru a series of very open maneuvers, Korea had become part of the Japanese empire.

WITH Fukien, Manchuria and Korea in her hands, with Russia reduced to the status of a second rate power in the Pacific, and her now powerful army and navy, Japan was not only equal but superior to other powers in China. Even Great Britain had taken a second place.

In 1911 Japan had signed a new "convention" with Great Britain in which her leading role was recognized and which was in reality the basis of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. A new pact was negotiated with Russia in 1907 and also with France. The Anglo - Japanese pact had been preceded by one signed with the United States in 1908.

WHAT was the purpose of these "conventions"?

One and all recognized in words "the independence and territorial independence of China." Almost the identical phrases are contained in the pact which guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium and which under pressure of military necessity the German government declared in 1914 to be "a scrap of paper."

But China had been worse than Belgianized. Not only had she been forced into a position of neutrality in conflicts that threatened her existence as a nation, but one section of her territory after another had been allotted to this or that power, WITHOUT CHINA BEING CONSULTED.

IT was like a band of burglars entering a person's house, packing up the valuables and furniture and dividing the swag while the owner laid in bed trembling but not daring to say a word. But their trembling did not prevent the Chinese doing a good deal of thinking.

All of these conventions were an important part of the Japanese plan for consolidating her favored position and legalizing the raids she had made on Chinese territory. These documents all contained a clause stating that "equal opportunities for the trade and industries of all nations" would be observed. This was a verbal concession to the "open door" policy of the United States which in turn was a result of the fact that the United States had not as yet succeeded in securing a definitely recognized sphere of influence, but had to make the best of it in various districts in competition with all of the other imperialist powers, Japan in particular.

IT might be well to remark here that an "open door" policy for so-called backward countries, when adopted by one of the great powers, indicates no great flood of friendly feeling for the natives of the backward nation as the apologists of American imperialism are so found of pointing out. It means simply that that particular power has been unable to grab and hold a real base of operations for any or all of a number of reasons and, that like a boxer feeling out an opponent, is merely sparring for an opening. The Monroe doctrine, as applied to Mexico, Cuba, Central and South America is a "closed door" policy whose object is to prevent any European power interfering with the sphere of influehce American imperialism has established there.

OBVIOUS as these reasons giving rise to this policy are, nevertheless it has fooled many Americans into believing that the American plunderbund has no sinister designs in China. It has also fooled the Chinese, just as they were fooled first by a somewhat similar policy on the part of Great Britain and then by Russia. One only needs to read the memoirs of Paul Reinisch, ambassador to China under Wilson, to see how American "liberal diplomacy" first fooled and then betrayed China.

But Japan, whatever else she may have done, has made no pretense of liberalism. Her drive for power has been open and no one has been deceived as to her purposes, least of all the Chinese. In this connection one writer says:

> There has never been anything sentimental in the foreign policy of Japan, and her statesmen have from the first displayed a thoro appreciation of the fact that treaties and conventions between the great powers may serve to conceal, but not to hinder, the processes of geographical gravitation and the ulterior purposes of statesmen. (J. O. P. Bland, "Recent Events and Present Politics in China," Page 293.)

WHILE Japan had been busy extending her sphere of influence and bulwarking it with treaties concluded with all the great powers, the Chinese people had been taking the first steps in the national liberation movement that is today, outside of the rise of Soviet Russia, the most important fact in world events.

"The Manchu dynasty was overthrown by the popular party led by Sun Yat Sen and a parliamentary government established. Yuan Shih Kai became president—actually dictator. Unpopular both with the Chinese masses and with Japan, who remembered his opposition to her in Korea in 1882, Yuan Shih Kai received support from no one except the military chieftains he was able to bribe. He weakened China as a nation temporarily, but the final result of his rule, marked by mass murders and secret assassinations, was to tremendously strengthen the national revolutionary party.

SUN YAT SEN, strange as it may seem, found asylum in Tokio from the persecutions of Yuan Shih Kai, and in 1913 led another revolution that laid firm foundations for the Chinese nation, weak as yet but with a definite form and purpose taking shape.

This period ends with the world war. It finds Japan the dominant power in China, altho Germany has been increasing her influence steadily. Great Britain remains a contender for an important place in Chinese political life principally because of her alliance with Japan. To both nations Germany in China is the nation that must be crushed.

The world war gave them their opportunity, but Great Britain paid a huge price for the destructoin of German influence in the Pacific.

THE important position occupied by Japan just before the world war is described as follows by Bland:

> By virtue of her geographical situation and her new military prestige, Japan could not only assert preponderant political influence at Peking, but she could hope to push her trade and industries thruout China in successful competition with the European powers, her ally included. ("Recent Events and Present Policies in China," Page 294.)

Japan first, Great Britain and Germany on an equal footing, the United States third with France and Russia occupying fourth place. This was the position of the great powers in China when the still fiercer imperialist conflicts in other sections of the globe caused Europe to burst into flames in 1914.

What happened in and to China during the world war will be told in another article.

WHO WOULDN'T GO TO THIS PICNIC IN MINNEAPOLIS?

Next Sunday to Be T. U. E. L. Joy Fest

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 9.—The workers of the Twin Cities do not intend to be cheated out of anything. And they want the best.

That is why they have arranged for a most interesting and delightful time next Sunday—June 14—at the Trade Union Educational League picnic held at West River Road and 34th avenue South.

The refreshments (oh boy!) will begin to be served at 11 in the morning and the lord only knows how late they will continue to be served. Then there are games for the young and games for the old—that is for those who have years but are still young enough to enjoy play.

But the main dish of the day is the speeches, and as there are three good ones, you can take your choice after listening to all three for the one price. Otto H. Wangerin, who has recently returned from an extensive trip thru Europe, will speak on "European Trade Unionism." J. F. Emme, of the Machinists' Local 459 and candidate of the left wing in the past I. A. M. election, will speak on "What Has Happened to the American Unions." Then Dan Stevens, (you know Dan) will speak on "Future Trade Union Policy."

Everybody in and around Twin Cities take note of the place and date: West River Road and 34th avenue south, Sunday June 14. Come and bring all your friends. Picnic is under the auspices of the Twin City section of the T. U. E. L. and not merely trickled into a false position by the reactionaries. They have shown their good-will and real desire for unity. All the obstruction comes from the other side. It is up to the British representatives to get matters put right in the I. F. T. U., or, if they fail, to come out of it and join the Russians in an independent unity movement. But we think they will not fail, if they make their determination plain.

WE are sorry to have to keep speaking of the activities of the International Federation of Trade Unions. But while its Secretary, M. Oudegeest, persists in making himself a world nuisance we cannot help it. Here is No. 18 of his press service, in which he replied to the Labor Magazine. The Magazine had urged the I. F. T. U. that it was strong enough to consent to an unconditional conference on trade union unity with the Russians. "This is an appeal to our magnanimity," smirks Oudegeest, and replies by a long and exceedingly mean attack on the Russians under a thin veil of reasonableness. And he quietly writes as though all his tirade is the official policy of the I. F. T. U.! What business has he, or anyone else, to try and jump in and force his executive's hand?

OUDEGEEST'S attack is transparently an attempt to make both the Russian and British Trade Unions lose their tempers—the British Communists, he says first, are intentionally disrupting the British Trade Union movement. A plain lie. Wild mistakes the Communists here have made; many, variegated and large enough to fill the North Sea. But there is no evidence whatever that they have ever desired to split a single union. Then he suggests that Tomsky and the other T. U. delegates are attempting to escape from the tyrannous control of the Communist Party, and that he, Ougegeest, will now consider whether he will give them his gracious aid. The impertinence of this double-faced Dutchman paralyses our pen. The whole thing is fantastic nonsense. This at least we can tell him, that no class-conscious worker is ever likely to appeal to the Oudegeests and Thomases for salvation. They know too what they will get.

• • •

THE same issue of Lansbury's Weekly carries the following paragraph on the murder of Karl Liebknecht which will undoubtedly be of interest to every reader of the DAILY WORKER. The three last lines deserve special attention, seeing that they are written by a socialist and not by a Communist:

• • •

WE all remember how Karl Liebknecht was killed. He was captured by a group of ex-officers commanded by a Lieutenant-Colonel Hoffmann, and then killed "while attempting to escape." His body was photographed by a Dr. Jacobi, and the police seized the protographs—but overlooked three proofs. These were published by the Vienna Stunde, a non-Communist paper, and are before us now. They show that Liebknecht received two stabs in the head and neck, two bullets in the chest and shoulder, two in the forehead, and two in the back. Obviously, this utterly disposes of the "trying to escape" theory. He was most brutally and cowardly murdered by revolver shots in his face and chest. The revolver has been found to belong to Lieutenant Pflug Harttung.

It only remains to be added that all this occurred under the social-democratic government, and the murderers were let go free."

Renew Child Labor Fight.

WEST BADEN, Ind., June 9—The General Federation of Women's Clubs at a meeting held here passed a resolution pledging the federation to renew its child labor fight. The first step will be working for the reconsideration of the subject by the state legislatures. The vote was 120 to 35 in favor of the resolution.

CENTRA RKERS SENTENCED TO 40 YEARS PRISON BY JUDGE WHO HIMSELF SHOULD BE TRIED

The General Defense Committee of the I. W. W. has made public two sworn statements concerning the frame-up which sent eight members of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union to Walla Walla prison from Centralia, Wash., after the orgy of white terror in that town on November 11, 1919.

It has been the claim of the defense that Judge John M. Wilson, who presided over the trial and who sentenced the eight victims to serve from 25 to 40 years, was prejudiced.

Judge Should Be on Trial.

In the following sworn statement, Wilson's prejudice is proven and the fact that he incited the American Legion men to raid the I. W. W. should not only convict him of inability to have tried the case, but should have placed him in the prisoners' dock as an accessory to the crime.

The Thompson Affidavit.

The joint affidavit of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson follows:

"Andrew Thompson and his wife, Lucretia Thompson, being first duly sworn, upon their oath say:

"We are residents of Parkland's Addition to Centralia, Washington, and have lived in Lewis county for more than 30 years.

"Some time in June, 1919, we attended a celebration held in Tenino, Washington, to welcome the local soldiers who had just returned from the war in Europe. Exercises were held on that day in a public park in Tenino, and the principal address was made by Judge John H. Wilson of Olympia.

"In that address Judge Wilson assailed certain people whom he characterized as radicals and enemies of the government, declared that those who waved the red flag in America were dangerous to the welfare of the nation, and he expressed enmity for the I. W. W. He voiced his opinion that it was up to the returned soldiers to get rid of the radicals.

"In making this affidavit we wish it understood that neither of us is a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, and that both of us are opposed to the policies of that organization. Our purpose in making this statement is simply to help in bringing to light all the facts about the conditions under which the defendants in the Centralia Armistice Day case were tried."

Jurors Terrorized.

Wilson later presided at the trial of the labor defenders of the hall and after a violently prejudiced conduct of the case sentenced eight of them to 25 to 40 years, tho the jury had returned a verdict of second degree murder. A majority of the jurors have since sworn that they were intimidated by the atmosphere in which the trial was held, including soldiers armed and in uniform.

Duffy Affidavit.

Another sworn statement made by Thomas Duffy, also a resident of Centralia shows in some detail the circumstances which led up to the atrocious murder of Wesley Everest, the lumber worker who was wounded and thrown in jail, and late at night taken out and tortured, mutilated and murdered in the most ghastly way by Centralia business men. Duffy's affidavit points out C. D. Cunningham and F. B. Hubbard, local business men, as those who from what he saw happen, were those who led the murder gang under cover of night.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

PEOPLE who talk about the advent of socialism in England by peaceful methods have not reckoned with the fascisti. The blackshirts are growing bolder every day. A few years ago they were a negligible factor and the officialdom of the labor movement treated them lightly. But they are no longer something to be sneezed at. They are organized on military lines and are ready for action in breaking strikes and defending "God, king and country."

* * *

THE London section of the British fascisti, five thousands strong, held a demonstration in Hyde Park on empire day. Two generals were among the speakers. When the national anthem was sung, those who did not remove their hats had their headgear knocked off by the insolent blackshirts. Speakers boasted that two years ago the fascists could not hold a meeting in Hyde Park because of the opposition of the workers. Now they are too strong to be molested. The fascisti are armed, yet the government does not interfere tho it is constantly arresting the Communists who are not armed or organized on military lines.

PERHAPS it is just as well that the British working class should have the opportunity to get a practical lesson in the democratic pretensions of the British government. The fascisti are allowed to use force and violence without government interference, because they support the capitalist system. Class justice again. The fascisti speakers in Hyde Park, London, declared they would use force to beat Communism. On the same day police arrested a group of workers for singing The Red Flag. It appears that the "good old days" are over in England.

THE German monarchists are not letting the grass grow under their feet. The budget committee of the Reichtag approved three bills designed to strip the republic of every vestige of republicanism. January 18, is to be made a national holiday in commemoration of the crowning of Emp. William I, in the Hall of Mirrors in Versailles after the Franco-Prussian war. Another bill gives the president of Germany the right to bestow titles and another bill calls for the repeal of the laws for the protection of the

SCOPES WARNED TO BEWARE OF 'RADICALISM'

Suspect Darrow of Being an Atheist

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, June 10.—The evolution-bible collaborators have been working on John T. Scopes, Dayton, Tenn., high school teacher to be tried on July 10, for teaching evolution to his biology class, trying to induce Scopes to secure Charles Evans Hughes, or some attorney just as conservative, to act as his attorney.

Scopes insists that Darrow be his leading legal light, declaring that Darrow is "not an atheist but an agnostic."

The scientists here who have talked to Scopes argue that he should secure a safe religious lawyer, who cannot be attacked by the preachers. They pointed out that Darrow "is suspected of being an atheist."

Scopes Return to Tennessee.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Prof. John Scopes prepared to return to Dayton, Tenn., today, satisfied that if he is convicted of violating Tennessee's famous evolution law it will not be because he has not adequate legal talent to defend him.

Painleve Nice to U. S. Politician After War Debts

PARIS, France, June 10—The foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies today instructed president of the chamber, Herriot, to arrange a big reception honoring the American politician, Nicholas Longworth, who is visiting in Paris.

Longworth will endeavor to induce the Painleve cabinet to pay France's war debt to the U. S. government, it is said.

UNION LAWYERS AGREE WITH OPERATORS UPON MODIFYING INJUNCTION

WHEELING, W. Va., June 10.—Federal Judge W. E. Baker has modified the injunction he issued recently against the United Mine Workers in behalf of 19 coal companies.

The seventh clause of the original order, dealing with the advertising and holding of union meetings in the Panhandle strike zone was modified by agreement of counsel on both sides. The words "peaceful persuasion" were eliminated and "menacing, threatening, injuring or use of violence" substituted. Arguments to make the order a temporary injunction will be heard in Elkins, June 12.

The official order in the injunction granted the West Virginia Pittsburgh Coal company Tuesday was also handed down. Clause seven was stricken out, as most of the points it contained were covered by other sections. The case will be carried to the court of appeals at Richmond, Va., by the union.

PICKETING BILL MUST RUN GAMUT OF THE COURTS

Allows 'Peaceful' Strike Activity

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 10.—The Illinois house today passed the Cuthbertson "injunction limitation" bill, which prohibits the issuance of injunctions by the courts against "peaceful" picketing in time of strikes. The vote was 78 to 65. The bill has already been passed in the house, and now goes to Governor Small for his signature before becoming a law.

The Cuthbertson bill provides that strikers may "peaceably and without threats or intimidation, recommend, advise, or persuade" others to join them without fearing a court injunction. Of course, the bill will have to be upheld by the courts before the extent of its effectiveness is demonstrated.

The legislature now has less than two weeks more of life. The women's eight-hour day bill was killed when the Jewell bill was sent back to the committee on industry by the senate and the O'Niell bill was killed in the house. Both bills provided for the limitation of the working hours of women in industry to eight hours per day.

More than 1,200 bills have been introduced in this session of the legislature and only 67 have been passed by both houses. Most of these 67 were bills appropriating money for the operation of state departments and offices.

Operators Revising Pact While Lewis Is Fighting Radicalism

ATHENS, Ohio, June 10—No revision of the basic schedules of the existing Jacksonville wage agreement, or lowering of mine wages in the bituminous coal industry, will be tolerated, John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, today told an audience of 5,000 Hocking Valley miners at the Athens county fair grounds here.

The miners who are unemployed thru the operator's closing down the mines found little consolation in Lewis' optimism.

"L" Employes Meet Bosses

The committee for the Elevated Railroad Employes Union is now meeting with the officials of the Chicago Rapid Transit company, discussing minor charges in the contrast between the company and the union. It is that the old contract will be renewed, with few changes. The yearly contract will soon expire.

TROWEL MEN ORDERED ON STRIKE, BUT NOT AGAINST THEIR BOSSES

Three hundred members of the Operative Plasterers' and Cement finishers association employed on the new Palmer House addition and the Hotel Sherman construction jobs, were called off their work by their international officers who are carrying on a jurisdictional war against the officers of the Bricklayers', Masons' and Plasterers' International union of America.

T"here is no strike", M. J. Brady, secretary of the local plasterers' union, to the DAILY WORKER. "The international officers have called the union members out all over the country against the firms which have favored the bricklayers' union."

Employes of the George E. Fuller, the Longrace, and the Thompson-Starrett Construction companies, all national concerns, have been called out. The plasterers' union claims that the bricklayers' and plasterers' union is trying to assimilate their members.

Announcement was made by Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch that the city administration will not protest against the 20 per cent increase in suburban fares for which the steam railroads have petitioned the Illinois commerce commission.

BRITISH NAVY'S BALTIC VISIT ANGERS RUSSIA

Trade Union Women in Cabled Protest

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, June 10.— Considerable indignation is reported to be felt thruout Soviet Russia by the announcement of the British government that British warships are going to maneuver in the Baltic some time late in June.

Dispatches from the Soviet Union state that martial law may be declared in the Kronstadt district as soon as the British warships appear in Baltic waters. There seems to be no reason for the maneuvers except the arrogant desire of Britain to make a demonstration of her sea power. Far from intimidating the workers' republic, however, indications are that the threat only angers the Russian masses, who see in it a hostile gesture at their Soviet power.

A delegation of British women trades unionists, headed by Miss Mary Quaile, adding their voice to the Bolsheviki protest, sent the following telegram to the Central Committee of Soviet Russian Trade Unions, requesting that it be published in the Soviet press

"We, members of the women's trades union delegation now sojourning in Soviet Russia, declare the expected appearance of a British fleet in Baltic ports has created great anxiety among the masses. We consider such anxiety well founded, but believe British trade unionists are awake and understand the importance of such a visit to the Soviet Union."

NEGRO LYNCHING SHOWS INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR

Mob Murder Virtually Unpunished in U. S.

NEW YORK, June 10.—(F.P.)—Lynchings for the first five months of 1925 show an increase over lynchings for the corresponding period last year, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports. Eight person have been lynched up to June 1, 1925 while only five were in that period last year.

Mississippi had two lynchings, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana and Virginia had one each. One victim was manacled and burned alive at the stake in Rocky Ford, Ga.

Only four of the vicitms had charges of assault on a woman alleged against them and in the Florida case the man had been acquitted in court.

"Mob murder still continues virtually unpunished in the United States," asserts James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the National Association, "when the victim happens to be a colored man. So long as the states fail to put an end to this foul disgrace to our country, just so long will there be a public demand for a federal law to put the power of the federal government behind the suppression of lynching."

The Dyer Anti-lynchings bill is scheduled to be presented again in the next congress.

Says Pope Did Not Gige Jazz Poet Right to Lop Daughter

NEW YORK, June 10.—Clarence H. Mackey, multi-millionaire president of the Postal Telegraph company categorically denied this afternoon that a special dispensation had been asked or obtained from pope Pius for the marriage of Miss Ellin Mackey to Irving Berlin, the song writer; that his daughter was engaged to the jazz-composer; and that he himself ever had an interview with Berlin.

27 NEGRO SOLDIERS OF 24TH INFANTRY STILL CAGED AT LEAVENWORTH

NEW YORK, Jne 10.— (F.P.)—Another member of the 24th infantry known as the Houston Martyrs is to go free as a result of the campaign made by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. There are still 27 of the men in Leavenworth, one of whom will be eligible for parole in August.

SHANGHAI SEAMEN'S STRIKE IS CRIPPLING ALL FOREIGN SHIPPING

SHANGHAI, China, June 10.—The Chinese strike leaders today permitted disturbances to subside in the business and foreign settlements of Shanghai, but coastal and river shipping was crippled when Chinese crews continued to leave ships in the harbor.

As a result fourteen British and two Japanese ships were detained. Telegrams were sent to several companies at Hank Konk advising ship operators not to dispatch vessels to Shanghai while strike conditions obtain.

'END RIFF WAR!' SAYS COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

Calls Upon French to Down Arms

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., June 10—The Communist International has issued a manifesto calling on the workers, peasants and soldiers of the French and Spanish armies in Morocco to fraternize with the Riffs, and force their imperialistic government to make peace or else face the responsibility of creating a new world war.

Doriot Demands Discussion.

PARIS, France, June 10—The Communist deputy, Doriot, presented a motion to the French chamber of deputies for an immediate discussion on the Moroccan invasion, which was supported only by the 29 Communist deputies. The socialists, adherents to the second international, who betrayed the workers by supporting the world war in 1914, voted against Doriot's motion.

The socialist party of France again supported the imperialist policy of the Painleve government, declaring themselves in accord with the policy of war against the Riffians who are fighting off the European invaders of their native soil.

Premier Painleve was due to arrive in Morocco by evening. He hurried to Fez by airplane as soon as news reached Paris of the extent of the Riffian attack.

Painleve took with him on the trip Gen. Jacquemont, and M. Laurent Eynas, under secretary of aviation. Painleve, it is reported here, has decided to ship a large number of airplanes to North Africa to bombard the Moroccans.

Riffs Defeat French.

The official communique from Fez admits that two more advanced posts have been abandoned in the face of the Riffians' attack, and that the Moroccans have made further breaks in the French lines.

The Moors on the Taunat sector have well equipped artillery, which it is admitted is inicting heavy damage It is reported that a shipment of .77 calibre cannon reached the Riffians thru the port of Adjir, where they were passed thru as pianos.

ANGLO-FRENCH SECURITY PACT RUNS INTO SNAG

Strong Opposition to It in Britain

LONDON, June 10—Active opposition developed in England today to the Franco-British accord, as announced at Geneva, and which would insure France's western borders by force of British arms.

Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper, the Daily Express, declared war upon the security pact.

Under the heading, "No To The Pact," the Daily Express announced it will campaign vigorously "against this diversion of traditional British policy."

There are large numbers of isolationists in England, and if Lord Beaverbrook can rally them to his banner, he can make the fight interesting. It has been whispered in parliamentary circles that Lord Beaverbrook is anxious to launch a new political party.

While the Morning Post and other government influenced newspapers strongly support the security pact, there was a disposition on the part of the liberal independent papers to be more critical.

CHINESE WORKERS AND STUDENTS JOIN IN PRESENTING 17 DEMANDS TO FOREIGN INVESTIGATING BODY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, June 10.—Two items of interest stood out from the day's developments here. These are the presentation of the joint demands of the labor unions, the shopkeepers' union and the students' union on the foreign investigation commission which has arrived from Peking, and the other, the disclosures at the trial of 23 arrested Chinese students and workers.

Seventeen separate resolutions were adopted at the meeting held prior to the arrival of the "investigators" from Peking, and upon their arrival representatives presented the following demands:

The Eleven Demands.

1. That the powers give up martial law.
2. That naval forces be withdrawn.
3. That arrested leaders be liberated.
4. That the police responsible for the shooting be tried for murder.
5. That the international settlement compensate the families of those killed.
6. That the British and Japanese governments be required to make a joint apology.
7. That the British secretary of the municipal council be discharged.
8. That the Chinese residents in the foreign settlement be permitted to print newspapers and circulars without interference.
9. That the international mixed court be restored to Chinese control.
10. That the foreign consular jurisdiction be abolished.
11. That the British and Japanese naval units be withdrawn from Shanghai forever.

Mixed Court Held "Unfair."

At the trial held by the intensely hated because unfair "mixed court" which dispenses unmixed injustice and in which there are no Chinese but all are "mixed" foreigners usually filled with mixed drinks, two armored cars with machine guns and cordons of police troops and white guard volunteers guarded the sessions.

The usual arrogant attitude was shown by the first witnesses of foreign interets who testified that the riots beginning last Saturday were "incited by Bolshevists" and that the infamously cruel British Sikh troops were "fully justified" in shooting down the

THIRTY-SIX KU KLUXERS JAILED FOR MASS RIOT

Raided Anti-Klansmen in 300 Automobiles

CLINTON, Mass., June 10—Thirty six members of the ku klux klan were brought into district court today following the worst riot of a series in Worchester County caused when members of the ku klux klan attacked antiklansmen.

Many on both sides were injured but as they were taken to their homes the number is not known.

Klansmen in three hundred automobiles attacked antiklansmen afoot. Personal clashes between the two forces were frequent.

State troopers finally broke up the melee and made the arrests, a majority of those taken into custody being klansmen and their sympathizers.

WASHINGTON WORRIES OVER 'CONDITIONS' IN CHINA; COUNTS SHIPS

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Official anxiety over conditions in China were re-emphasized here today when Secretary of the Navy Wilbur transmitted to the state department a list of foreign war vessels in the neighborhood of the disturbed areas.

The list showed not only American warships, but also those of Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy.

ADMINISTRATION WILL USE DEBTS TO BOLSTER G. O. P.

Roumania Is Seeking Another Loan

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Clear indications that an effort will be made in the next congress to establish a definite relationship between funding of European debts to the United States and the reduction of domestic taxation were seen at the capitol today.

Such a policy on the part of republican leaders, led by Senator Borah as chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, would be adopted with a view to bringing the business elements of the country solidly behind the administration in its demands for adjustment of the foreign debts and to make it possible for more drastic action to be taken to compel payment.

The shutting off of private credit in this country to European countries who will not make any move to fund their debts is still being suggested in quarters close to the administration, despite the fact that no hand was raised to stop the loan of $50,000,000 made to a consortium of Italian banks by J. P. Morgan company. It is now reported here that Roumania will soon seek a big loan in the United States and that France is discussing the possibility of increasing the $100,000,000 credit which it has with the Morgan company in connection with the efforts of finance minister Caillaux to stabilize the franc.

RELEASE OF BEN GITLOW NOW UP TO GOV. SMITH

NEW YORK, June 10.— Benjamin Gitlow, member of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party must serve the remainder of his five to ten year sentence under the New York criminal anarchy act, in view of the decision of the United States supreme court in denying the Gitlow appeal, unless Gov. Alfred Smith grants Comrade Gitlow a pardon.

In 1922, when Smith took office as governor, he pardoned all persons convicted under the New York criminal anarchy law, including members of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Later, after the appellate court had denied the appeal of Harry Winitsky convicted under the same act, Governor Smith pardoned Winitsky despite the unfavorable verdict of the higher court, Gitlow's lawyer, Joseph Brodsky, will probably request Smith to act on this precedent in the Gitlow case.

Whether or not, however, Gov. Smith will act in the Gitlow case on the precedent he set in the Winitsky case, remains to be seen. It is unknown whether or not Gov. Smith will issue a pardon in the face of the decision of the U. S. supreme court.

SELFDETERMINATION THE CRY OF YOUNG CHINA AS WESTERN POWERS QUAIL BEFORE UPHEAVAL

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Modern education has given China a new leadership that is determined to drive foreign conquerors from the soil of the flowery republic. Boys trained in American, British, German and Japanese colleges are the real motive force behind the anti-foreign demonstrations that are arousing scores of millions of Chinese. These boys have learned their lessons of world politics and history and economics too well for the present comfort of imperialists in Washington, London, Paris, Tokio.

Just after a dispatch from Shanghai announced that American marines or sailors had "cleaned out" a Chinese college supported by the Koumintang party, the state department made public the demands of the students which were circulated by thousands in Peking, in the form of handbills, by students of the missionary and other schools.

Student Strikers Demands.

These young rebels against foreign control of China demanded:

1. Punishment of those responsible for the Shanghai killings, from consuls to policemen.
2. Release and indemnification of arrested students.
3. Apologies from the foreign governments to the Chinese people.
4. Aid to strikers in Shanghai, Tsingtau and the Japanese mills.
5. Withdrawal of foreign military forces, including war vessels, from China.
6. Abolition of foreign concessions and extra-territoriality.
7. Abolition of unequal treaties and special privileges.
8. Economic boycott against foreigners.
9. Overthrow of "traitorous Chinese government."
10. Overthrow of imperialism.

Getting Rid of British Opium Ring.

The speeches that have been delivered in the streets, on these ten demands of the Chinese people, are especially bitter toward the British and the Japanese, who have extorted the most from China at the point of the bayonet.

British police and British mill-owners are held particularly responsible for the shooting down of unarmed mill strikers in Shanghai, but these students know also that the British government forced the opium traffic upon China, and that much of China's political chaos of recent years is due to the demoralization which was created by that historic crime.

Japan May Follow Soviet's Example.

Hatred for Japanese imperialism is keen enuf, but the leaders of militant young China realise that Japanese political interests now point toward an imitation of the Russian policy of handing back stolen goods to China. They wait to see whether Tokyo will not surrneder its extra-territorial privileges as Russia and Germany have done.

This is no mere religious and nationalistic protest such as was the Boxer rebellion of a quarter century ago. This is a nationwide movement of self-determination based on industrial and commercial and political ideas that are modern. It is a purely modern movement. It has a power that may start the yellow race up from its knees to its feet, looking the white race in the eye, no longer acknowledging inferiority.

BRITISH IMPERIALISM IN CHINA EXPOSED AS GHASTLY BRUTAL EXPLOITATION OF THE WORKERS

By SINBAD.

SHANGHAI, China.—(By Mail.)—British imperialism in one of its latent forms, the Shanghai municipal council, employs Indian Sikhs to do the policing of the settlement. Time and time again acts of brutal beating and mauling of the Chinese coolies are perpetrated.

These columns have contained facts of the inhuman treatment accorded the Chinese laboring class by the foreigner, be he a Britisher, Japanese or American but there exists also another situation.

Savage Slave Drivers.

The Indian sikh is brought from his exploited land, is paid a trifle more than a coolie and a club is placed in his hand. Keep the slaves down at any cost and champion the cause of the foreigner are his orders and as a result we have primitive savagery with the blameless Chinese coolie as the victim.

There hasn't been a day that in passing along the street I haven't been witness to several atrocious punishments inflicted on Chinese by these sikh policemen.

Beaten Like Animals or Worse.

I have seen a coolie at the head of a group of human horses who were straining and sweating in the vain attempt at pulling what would be a motor truck load of wooden boards over Chapoo Road Bridge, beaten into insensibility by a sikh.

Another time I have seen a wheelbarrow coolie who had his ear half twisted off and his bare foot broken by the hand and heel of the sikh who is as I have said sometime ago, the very embodiment of British imperialism in one of its more concrete forms.

Little Better Off Than Their Victims.

Let me again repeat. The sikh, a member of an exploited race himself is taken from his native land, is paid a little more than a coolie to beat that coolie. To some this may sound extravagant, but it is the ultimate result.

KUOMINTANG AND MERCENARIES STILL BATTLING FOR CANTON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANTON, China, June 10.—The fighting which has been going on since Saturday in a desultory way flamed into intensity today with considerable casualties resulting from the battle across the Chukiang river.

Early yesterday four Cantonese gunboats appeared around the fortified island of Honan and opened heavy fire on the Yannanese position on the bund. The Yunnanese answered. The gunboats passed along the river to the Dutch Follies Island, turned and came back pouring in continuous small cannon shot and machine gun fire against the Yannanese. Finally the boats went out of sight around the island of Honan again.

River Fire Ties Up Steamers

But firing across the river continues and river steamers are unable to leave, although crowded with refugees anxious to escape to Hong Kong.

Business in Canton is mostly suspended. Airplanes from Honan province are circling above the city. The bund is deserted except for Yunnanese troops. The custom house is closed and all employes taken to the foreign settlement of Shameen.

Reinforcements For Kuomintang

Three thousand reinforcements for the Cantonese Kuomintang army arrived yesterday from Fatshen and now are at Shek-Wai-Tong station across the river.

Two Japanese destroyers arrived at Canton Monday. The issue between the Kuomintang party of Cantonese and the mercenaries is still undecided. is apparent by the bribe of $100,000 Subsidy by French and British money given the commander of a Cantonese gunboat for deserting to the Yunnanese yesterday. The Yunnanese are fighting against the party of Sun Yat Sen.

Dispatches from Kaifeng, in Honan province, report that the strike movement against foreign imperialist has created a serious situation. From Shantung province news arrives that strikers are in control of petroleum plants.

CHINESE ARMY DECLARED READY TO FIGHT AGAINST IMPERIALISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, June 10.—The Chinese Bankers' Association has promised the students to back the effort to spread a boycott of British and Japanese banknotes.

The delegation appointed by foreign legations to investigate the Shanghai murder of students and general strike, left for Shanghai early yesterday morning. The conservative Chinese and those Chinese leaders who are subsidized by imperialist money are doing their best to use the investigation as excuse for advocaing moderation, cessation of strikes, demonstrations and the boycott. Among these apologizers is Wellington Koo.

Feng Declares Himself

General Feng Yu-Hsiang has circularised all governors of provinces counseling "a firm attitude in the face the unreasonable and bellicose stand of the Shanghai authorities and part of the diplomatic corps at Peking," says a report from Kalgan. He declares that his army is ready to make sacrifices for the Chinese nation.

The directors of twenty-two higher schools of Peking, including Leighton Stuart, American president of the Yenching University, have signed a petition to the president of the Chinese republic, asking that the government request the foreign legations to instruct all consuls thruout China to "cease their barbarous acts." The students have wired Generals Chang Tso-lin and Feng Yu-Hsiang to give military support in the negotiations looking to justice for the Shanghai strikers.

republic which under social-democratic rule were used to suppress the workers and not the monarchists.

ANOTHER bill, abolishing the black, red and gold banner of the republic, missed being carried in the budget committee by two votes. Of course those bills must run the reichstag gauntlet but there is no doubt but reaction is in the saddle in Germany for the time being. And the socialists are entirely to blame. They began by murdering Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, crushing the workers revolution and they wind-up by welcoming the Kaiser's agent, von Hindenburg, to the presidency.

CALVIN COOLIDGE went to Minnesota and delivered a speech. Who wrote the speech we do not know There was nothing remarkable about it except that such a lot of twaddle could be sponsored by an adult, not to speak of the president of a big country. The sycophancy of the capitalist press was never shown to better advantage than in its comment on Coolidge's speech. They praised it fulsomely, tho it did not contain one single idea that does not carry the babbit stamp. "Cal" was out to make votes and he pulled every platitude in the G. O. P. bag. Nothing that he said will be remembered for twenty four hours unless real estate boosters should use some of his compliments to Minnesota scenery in their advertising.

THE Chicago Tribune believes that this country is going to fight Japan. The Tribune scores those who think the conflict can be avoided and urges speed in preparing for the encounter. We must have lots of poison gas to make the Japs turn up their toes when civilisation is to be saved again, this time from the Mikado. But the Tribune does not hate Japan so much that it cannot afford little sympathy for Tokio because the latter recognized Soviet Russia.

SOVIET RUSSIA is represented by a person that looks suspiciously like Leon Trotsky in a Tribune cartoon. Japan is smoking the pipe of peace with the Soviet chief but behind the little yellow man is a gigantic bomb with lighted fuse. Strangely enough, this bomb does not represent a revolution in Japan, but in China, where Japan has no more right to be than has the Sultan of Mumbo-Jumbo. Perhaps if the United States recognized the Soviet Union, there might be a revolution in Cuba or even in Mexico!

SCOPES RETURNS TO DAYTON WITH MOTLEY DEFENSE

York, will be the lawyers to assist the home talent defense of the young schoolmaster.

The aim of the trial is to "heal the breech between science and religion," according to the evolution-religion collaborators connected with the defense.

Scopes expects to be convicted in Dayton, and his lawyers expect it, too. They are rather hopeful he will be for it will then be possible to carry the case to the supreme court of the United States and test the constitutionality of the law. An acquittal would leave nothing for them to appeal.

It had not yet been ascertained, it was said, whether Dudley Field Malone, who attended today's meetings, will be listed officially as one of Scopes' counsel.

SCORE FRANCE FOR CAMPAIGN AGAINST RIFFS

War Waged with Dollars of United States

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.— At a joint meeting of the Pearse-Connolly Association and the International Workers' Aid, held here recently a resolution was passed condemning the governments of France and Spain for their murderous warfare against the Riffian people of Morocco.

The Pearse-Connolly Association is an organization of radical Irish workers who are co-operating with the International Workers' Aid in raising funds to relieve the distress of the famine sufferers in Ireland.

They are veterans in the movement for Irish emancipation from Great Britain and sturdy defenders of Soviet Russia.

The resolution points out that the French government is carrying on the war against the Moroccans with the aid of American dollars.

A benefit dance for Irish famine relief will be given on Saturday evening, June 20, in Knights of the Red Branch Hall, 1133 Mission street, under the auspices of the Pearse-Connolly Association and the International Workers' Aid.

Chinese Workers Present 17 Demands

twelve students who were murdered.

However, several American missionaries apeared and testified that the shooting was uncalled for and that the British Sikh police were decidedly to blame for all disturbances, including the strike.

This missionary testimony flatly contradicted the testimony of the British police inspector who had given the order to fire on the students. Killing a few of the demonstrators was the easiest way to teach the Chinese a lesson, the inspector thot. Anyway if not stopped, the unarmed students might storm the Louza jail and rescue several of their comrades the inspector had previously rounded up.

The resulting events of the general strike had not yet convinced this representative of British imeprialism that shooting a few more Chinese was the remedy for all difficulty and a solution of the problem.

Even Missionaries Shocked.

The conditions can be imagined when even the missionaries who are the spiritual wing of American imperialism are shocked into protest at the brutalities—of the British, of course. Wires from the American legation at Peking state that the legation is much embarrassed by the missionaries' action, and has protested to them that theor attitude is "inexpedient."

The general strike is still on, with especial intensity against the British and the Japanese.

PEKING, China, June 10—Part of the diplomatic corps, which is to say that part which does not have to do with Leo Karakhan, Soviet ambassador, is excited and indignant at the spectacle of Chinese soldiers and police passing out circulars bearing a manifesto of the International Workers' Relief, supposedly signed by Henri Barbusse of France, George Bernard Shaw of England, Upton Sinclair of America, Clara Zetkin of Germany, Olga, Kameneva of Soviet Russia and many other famous intellectuals addressing the Chinese masses a message of friendship.

International Solidarity.

The circular conveys the "heartfelt greetings of 5,000,000, white manual and intellectual workers who join in your protest against the infamous murder of peaceful students and workers by imperialist bandits and the agents of white and yellow capitalists.

"We white workers and intellectuals," it continues, "disavow any connection with the exploiters who wish to oppress your nation and enslave you. Only when united in a common effort shall we achieve freedom and the people of Asia realize their brotherhood with the people of America and Europe."

The circulars were passed out at the giant protest meeting of 40,000 marchers, the biggest gathering ever seen in Peking of its kind. Besides, posters showing Englishmen shooting down East Indians and other bearing photographs of the bloody and mangled bodies of the Shanghai victims are being put up everywhere.

The demonstration, consisted of thousands of students, workers and some of Feng Yu-hsiang's soldiers. From dozens of platforms student orators addressed the great throngs, telling of the wrongs inflicted upon China and setting forth the demands for redress.

English Literature for Foreigners.

Foreigners had been warned not to appear on the streets, as their safety might be imperilled. However, when they appeared the soldiers and students hunted up some pamphlets in English setting for the students' arguments and presented the foreigners with these.

The student agitators are absolutely one upon the demands of China for the Chinese, but the moderate faction wish to devote the work here to relief fund gathering for Shanghai and the boycott of British and Japanese, while the radicals want the Chinese army sent to Shanghai to protect the Chinese there and enforce the demands.

Yes, Counter-Revolution Will Also Be Declared Illegal, But by Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the master class is highly elated over the decision of the U. S. supreme court in the Gitlow case, upholding the constitutionality of America's most extreme exceptional law. This elation finds its expression in the editorial headline of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, "Yes, Revolution is Illegal." It may be well, for the present generation, as well as for posterity, to publish this editorial expression of the mouthpiece of Chicago's "open shop" business interests. It is as follows:

• • • •

YES, REVOLUTION IS ILLEGAL.

> The decision of the supreme court in the case of Benjamin Gitlow settles for all time the question of the right of an American government entity to forbid the dissemination of doctrines which lead to violent revolutionary attempts, whether immediately or in the far future.
>
> The state of New York has the right to forbid anybody from preaching revolution, whether or not the revolutionary attempt is to be made now or a hundred years from now, and whether or not it can be shown that the dissemination of the doctrine has resulted in the commission of an illegal act by anybody.
> Self-preservation is the first law of life. It applies to governments as well as to individuals. A government that neglects to preserve itself deserves to fall. A government that allowed the preaching of revolution would deserve no sympathy when the revolution came.
> The supreme court has laid down the law.

• • • •

Communists are not in disagreement with the logic of this declaration. Communists always have, and will continue to point out in spite of court decisions, that the capitalist class will never surrender voluntarily, that it must be taken and held by the workers against the capitalists. Socialists believe there is some peaceful path that leads to the ending of capitalism. They have sought that path thru Europe, and thruout the rest of the world, especially since the Bolshevik rise to power in Russia, and their wanderings have always ended in the camp of the blackest reaction.

• • • •

The U. S. supreme court justices, capitalism's legal jackals that prey upon the masses while defending the interests of private property, not only declare the social revolution illegal, but even the promulgation of revolutionary ideas is outlawed, on the principle that "a government that neglects to preserve itself deserves to fall."

That is all good precedent for the future. If the social revolution is illegal, then the workers and poor farmers of the land, when they have established their Soviet power, must and will declare with equal firmness that the counter-revolution is illegal.

If the dictatorship of the great capitalists has a right to preserve itself, as it claims, then the dictatorship of the proletariat, in its hour of victory, will have an equal right in the eyes of the workers, to preserve itself.

It is upon this basis that the Soviet victory in Russia has established itself. It is the basis upon which the Soviet victory will be established in time in other lands and maintained, when the workers and poor farmers become convinced that that is the correct position; when their convictions lead them into the struggle to carry this belief into action. Thus the workers will lay down the law before capitalism.

• • • •

Capitalism will be overthrown in the United States just as czarism went its way in Russia.

Czarism tried to outlaw Bolshevism. Kaiserism declared the revolutionary movement of labor illegal. So a host of fascist governments in Europe are attempting today. But the revolution steadily gains in power.

The decision of the supreme court nullifies the "free speech" clause of the "democratic" federal constitution. It will help teach the workers that there can be no free speech for them until capitalism is overthrown and they have firmly rooted their power in the broad masses of American labor.

JAPAN DISCLAIMS AGGRESSION; U. S. GENERAL SAYS POSSIBILITY OF RUSS-JAP WAR RIDICULOUS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, Japan, June 10.—The foreign office categorically denies reports published in England that the Japanese foreign minister, Baron Shidehara, has dispatched a note to the Chinese government threatening to quell the Shanghai uprising if the Peking government would not. The foreign office reiterated that its policy would be only to act in concert with other powers.

The policy toward China is described as one of studied conciliation, as Japan desires very much to overcome the resentment in China against the famous "twenty-one demands" and to pave the way to closer, political, economic and social relations. Hence Japan will not risk increasing Chinese hatred by assuming a high-handed attitude regarding the Shanghai disturbances.

Chinese in Japan Protest.

Chinese students here, affected by the propaganda of the Shanghai students, sent a delegation to the foreign office today, demanding: First, that Japan change her Tsingtao and Shanghai consuls; second, that Japanese employes in Shanghai be punished; third, that Japan pay indemnities for the casualties; fourth, that the Shanghai concession be abolished, and fifth, that extra territoriality be abolished.

The first four demands were refused lately. As to the fifth, the answer was that Japan favored it in principle.

The students also objected to the banishment of Chinese laborers from Japan, which was unsatisfactorily answered.

Cry For Deportation.

The Japanese press is incensed over the attitude of the Chinese students who are receiving their education here, demanding that the students who are spreading anti-Japanese agitation among their fellows should be deported.

Many Chinese students are considering leaving Japan in a body for Shanghai to support the rioters.

The possibility of imminent war in Asia, to be precipitated by a conflict between Feng Yuh-siang and Chang Tso-lin, backed by the Soviet and Japan, respectively, was called absurd today by Brig. Gen. William D. Connor, commanding the American army forces in China, who is here repaying the visit of Japanese generals to America.

American Commander Ridicules Lies About Soviet.

He ridiculed the report circulated recently in the United States that Russia was sending vast amounts of war munitions to General Feng by motor from Siberia, adding that the long haul prevents the bringing in of enough munitions in this way to be worthy of consideration.

France Alarmed

PARIS, June 10—Alarmed at the intensity of the opposition to Franco-British accord aroused in Great Britain, the French foreign office today attempted to set the vehicle of peace pact negotiations back on its wheels and in smooth transit.

A foreign office spokesman, in conference with foreign correspondents, denied that Great Britain had actually placed its army and fleet at France's disposal in the event of aggresisons in the Rhine.

Little Belgium's Big Debt to Be Postponed, Reduced and Not Paid

WASHINGTON, June 10—Belgium's latest experimental cabinet, for her parliament is so balanced between socialists and conservatives that no party really holds power, has promised to send a commission to Washington in July to talk about her war debt to the American treasury.

Terms which the American war debt commission are reported to have offered to Belgium and Italy include postponement of actual payments, with reductions in interest rate and other allowances which cut the bill almost in half.

Will Wages Go Up?

DENVER.—With the equalization of freight rates by the interstate commission, will the state industrial commission order the Colorado fuel and iron company and other coal operators to restore wages.

The coal operators recently secured a wage reduction order of 20 per cent from the state commission on the ground that discriminating freight rates made it possible to meet eastern competition.

The interstate commerce commission at Washington has just equalized these rates, and the operators are jubilant. They announce, "Now we can compete with the eastern field." But they make no mention of their unorganized employes.

BOSSES WANT PASSPORT SYSTEM AND POWER TO DEPORT ALIEN WORKERS

NEW YORK, June 10.—The immigration committee of the National Association of Manufacturers wants a scientific immigration law which will enable big business to further adjust the flow of peoples to America to accommodate industrial needs.

Registration, systematic identification (probably by finger printing) and simplification of deportation (provided in the bill defeated in last congress but due to come up again) are sought by the manufacturers including Bethlehem Steel, International Harvester, U. S. Rubber, etc.

WILLIMANTIC TEXTILE STRIKERS BEING EVICTED FROM TENEMENTS

HARTFORD, Conn., June 9.—Despite hot weather, strikers at the Willimantic plant of the American Thread Co. do not relish the thought of moving out of company tenements into a tent colony. Deputy sheriffs are serving eviction notices on the workers who have been on strike for several months against a wage cut. Notices are being given even to strikers who have paid rent up to date. The workers are still firm in their intention to resist the company and keep their strike ranks intact.

CROUCH AND TRUMBULL IN FURTHER FIGHT

Aid Asked to Obtain Complete Freedom

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HONOLULU, May 27.—(By Mail)—As a result of the efforts of Judge Matthewman, former attorney-general of the territory, who was retained by the American Civil Liberties Union, the sentences of Privates Crouch and Trumbull, Communist soldiers convicted by court-martial on charges of organizing a secret Communist league, were reduced from 40 years and 26 years respectively, to 3 years and 1 year.

Matthewman made a preliminary investigation of the cases at the instance of the local representative of the Civil Liberties Union and presented arguments to the army officials which are believed to have been the cause of the reduction of sentence reported.

Errors Should Nullify Sentences

Members of the local defense group did not feel that mere clemency on the part of the army authorities was sufficient and decided to continue the fight for the liberation of these prisoners of conscience. Due to Judge Matthewman's unexpected visit to the states it became necessary to engage a substitute, and Attorney Fred Patterson, former assistant United States district attorney for Hawaii, was selected.

Copies of the transcripts of the procedings of the court-martial trials were secured from the prisoners and a thorough study and analysis made with a view to appealing to the civil courts. The records of the cases reveal so many errors and irregularities that it is believed the entire proceedings would be nullified if brought into a regular court.

No Law Whatever Was Violated

Analysis of the charges, specifications and records show conclusively that no law or military regulation was violated by the accused. The acts charged do not in themselves constitute offenses under the civil or the military law.

The stool pigeon Fisher was the only witness against the accused, and his testimony was not corroborated, and it contradicted itself. No attempt was made to prove the specific charge embodied in all the specifications, to-wit: actions "to the prejudice of good order and military discipline."

It appears from the evidence that nothing was proved against these men which they did not have a perfect right to do or say. They were convicted, not of any offense, but of holding certain opinions. They were proved to be good soldiers under perfect discipline, and to an unprejudiced observer they appear to be far better Americans than those who sat in judgement over them.

Contributions Asked

The local efforts will be pushed as far as possible in the attempt to secure justice for Crouch and Trumbull. It is probable that outside assistance will be needed if the case is opened up in the local courts.

Parties or organizations desiring to contribute to the local defense fund should communicate with Geo. W. Wright, president Honolulu Central Labor Council and local representative of the defense, or with Paul Crouch or Walter Trumbull direct, 27 Inf. Guardhouse, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

Wheat Crop Only Enough to Care for Home Markets

WASHINGTON, D. C. June 10.—The American wheat crop this year will be the smallest since 1917, the department of agriculture estimated this afternoon.

It was stated that the total crop, which will be about 660,005,000 bushels, will be sufficient to take care of domestic requirements. The 1924 wheat crop totalled $73,000,000 bushels.

CONTINUOUS MURDER OF MINERS IN UNSAFE MINES SHOULD STIR MASS PROTEST AGAINST BOSSES

By ALEX REID.

Another chapter is written to the coal mining history with the lifeblood of the victims of the gas explosions in Coal Glen, N. C., on May 27th.

On the morning of that day the underground slaves crept into or towards their working places, expecting as usual to be permitted to eke out their usual starvation wage, when an explosion, the result of negligence, occurred which cost the lives of 53 miners, to add to the ever increasing total of victims of capitalist greed.

"What are 53 more lives blown out of the industry, 200,000 too many miners now; freeze them out, starve them out," J. J. Lewis practically says, they must be got rid of, as there is no hope with the mines so overcrowded, and it seems we can add another method of getting rid of them by blowing them out.

How Long?

The toll of human lives to gas explosions is appalling, and with the sacrifice ever mounting higher, with the blame, time and time again, placed on the coal operators, yet no criminal action against them, no death or jail sentences against them, we stop to ask how much longer are we going to offer our bodies to be sacrificed on the cross of mammon, to enrich the parasitic coal operators who refuse to have their mines properly ventilated—which would reduce to a minimum these terrible gas explosions with their awful toll of human lives and suffering?

It is reported the explosion wrecked the entrance to the mine thereby leaving the men with no means of escape, and the main explosion was followed by many minor ones, and those not killed outright were suffocated by the afterdamp.

Explosions Preventable.

Nine times out of ten these explosions could have been prevented by a few dollars expended in cleaning up the air-ways, cleaning the falls that have blocked the passage of air, cleaning the roadwyas that are generally covered with coal dust, the expense of watering the roadways or the sprinkling of rock dust. This calls for the expense of a few dollars that the operators feel they can save by taking chances on the lives of the miners, which, if snuffed out by explosions, don't amount to much in view of the fact that there are 200,000 surplus ones to take their places.

Rescue apparatus rushed to the scene after the explosion was successful after four days of effort in returning 53 blackened, torn and crushed corpses to their wretched, distracted and starving families.

A rich reward for a faithful and useful life of toil in the bowels of the earth producing one of life's necessities!

At best the life of the coal miner is extremely hard, disagreeable and dangerous. From the moment he leaves the surface until he returns, he courts all the dangers imaginable; bad roof, march gas, carbon monoxide gas, sulphurated hydrogen, water, damp working places, and the 100 different diseases arising from his employment.

Fight Both Death and Capitalism.

Coupled to that, the continuous struggle for a mere living, with the fight ever growing more intense, with the capitalist class lined up solidly against the colliers and the treason of the miners' officials themselves have indeed made the lives of the coal diggers truly a pitiable one, and the wonder is that the slaves of the pits have not revolted against that condition long ago.

As usual, the dear public sent their messages of sympathy—sympathy to a wife or mother standing at the pit mouth waiting for news of their loved ones, sympathy to the little ones crying for their dad in that hell-filled chamber of deadly afterdamp, sympathy to the starving dependents of the torured slaves imprisoned in the poisoned hole whom they would see no more!

An Insult.

Such sympathy is a deadly insult, as poisonous as the four afterdamp itself, from those people who will not dare to cry out in protest against such a condition that permitted such damnable and preventable explosions to occur.

And what are the labor leaders doing now in this trying period? Messages of sympathy, also. Every labor leader in this country has a duty to perform in this case that requires immediate action.

Need Mass Protest.

Mass meetings ought to be called to protest against this outrage and a campaign carried on thruout the country that will result in the elimination of the conditions that have permitted this awful blight to occur ony too often in the coal mining industry.

The suffering, as usual, is intense, and living conditions are a disgrace to the country. This field is one of the unorganised parts of the industry and the wages are at bed rock, no working conditions to mention, with long hours, and a system bordering chattel slavery in existence.

What Will Union Leaders Do?

Will the labor leaders and authorities rise to this occasion and demand a public inquiry, and that criminal action be taken against the coal operators if found guilty of violation of the mining laws? Or will they as usual pass it by? As it is only a few of the "200,000 too many' coal diggers slaves of the mines.

LUMBERJACKS ARE KILLED BY SPEED FOR MORE PROFIT

Lumber Industry Takes Ghastly Toll

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MT. VERNON, Wash., June 10—The fourth fatal "accident" at the Clear Lake Lumber company's camps in about one month was the crushing to death of Nels Anderson, an old logger, by a rolling log. He was 78 years old. His wife and two daughters are in Denmark, while he had never been able to bring them over, tho he had lived in America for many years and worked for the Clear Lake company for the last seven or eight years.

A day or two before, Frank Gordon, a young Scotchman, born in Aberdeen, Scotland, was also killed when crushed by a rolling log. His leg was crushed and blood poison set in. The leg was amputated but he died anyway, another victim of the speed-up greed for profits of the Clear Lake Lumber company.

The Lyman Timber company at Hamilton took its toll of blood a day or two afterward, when L. C. Van Zant, was struck on the head and back by a flying cable. He is seriously injured for life, if he lives.

NO HOPE FOR 17 MINERS AFTER KY. EXPLOSION

Find 8 Bodies—Same Mine Had Killed 62

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STURGIS, Ky., June 10.—With the finding of three more bodies, the death toll of the explosion-wrecked mine of the Western Kentucky Coal company increased to eight. Five bodies were found previously. Two men were identified as William Thomas and George Richardson. The bodies of six Negroes were so badly burned and lacerated identification was impossible. Nine miners were yet entombed in the mine and no hope was held for bringing them out alive.

Entrance Nos. 3 and 4 was wrecked by an explosion of undetermined origin yesterday, burying 23 miners. Six men who were working near the surface were taken out uninjured, while their less fortunate fellow miners at the 500 foot level were imprisoned in a blazing inferno.

The rescue crews are directed by Neil McCann, a veteran of the explosion of eight years ago which wrecked the same mine of the West Kentucky company and cost sixty two lives.

SUPER-TRUSTS ARE ENTHRONED BY THE COURTS

Open Way for Fixing Prices and Gouging

By LAWRENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON,—(FP)—Scarcely a ripple of serious comment has followed the decision of the federal supreme court—with Chief Justice Taft and Justices McReynolds and Sanford dissenting—that trade associations may legally distribute information among members as to costs, prices, volume of production, stocks on hand, and other elements that enable the members to fix prices and insure high profits. Yet here emerges the super-trust, no longer a slinking outlaw but a respectable and authoritative business institution, empowered to levy new taxes on the nation.

Lower Courts Overturned

It was the Maple Flooring Manufacturers' Association and the Cement Manufacturers' Protective Association that appealed to the final court, after they had been declared by lower courts to be violators of the anti-trust law.

The majority opinion holds that there is no unlawful restrain of commerce when manufacturers in any industry get together and discuss, and exchange detailed information on, the amount of their product that is demanded, the amount on hand, the amount they can produce, the cost of production under various conditions, and so forth. Time after time the federal trade commission has shown that this exchange of "information" was in fact the operation of a check upon production, designed to keep supply below demand and thereby to create artificially high prices and profits. In the production of building materials it has resulted in an artificial increase in costs of construction, which has been passed on to rents, ranging from 25 to 100 per cent according to circumstances.

Agree with Chamber of Commerce

Justice Stone, recent attorney general, in delivering the majority opinion, which has been the opinion of the U. S. chamber of commerce all along, declared that "The natural effect of the acquisition of wider and more scientific knowledge of business conditions, on the minds of the individuals engaged in commerce, and its consequent effect in stabilizing production and price, can hardly be deemed a restraint of commerce.

McReynolds, in reply, asserted that the two defendant associations had "carefully developed plans to cut down normal competition," and that "pious protestations and smug preambles but intesify the distrust when men are found busy with schemes to enrich themselves thru circumventions" of the anti-trust laws.

Now that the court has ruled, the business organizations of the United States may be expected to rapidly develop a system of price inflation that will be as effective as the steel trust dinners used to be, when Gary was whipping the steel industry into line for its fabulous rakeoff.

Competition gives way to a squeezing process, both against the consumer and against the small manufacturer, until an inner ring of the most powerfully financed concerns in each industry dominates the field. The dislocation of employment which may result from this process is evident—and promises to be painful.

LUMBER EXPORTS OF SOVIET UNION REACH HUGE PROPORTIONS—CHINA AND JAPAN GET BIGGEST AMOUNT

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—According to the latest returns, in 1924, 1,900,800 tons of timber have been exported from the Soviet Union for the total sum of 17,400,000 rubles.

Th "Severoles" alone intends to increase its export by 40 per cent.

The greatest part of timber (60-65 per cent) is being sent to Great Britain. Recently, the exportation of timber to Germany and Holland has also been considerably increased. Oak assortments are mostly sent to France.

Foreign Capital

A considerable part of exportation falls to the share of mixed companies, with the participation of foreign capital. The principal mixed companies, specially dealing with timber export are "Russangloles", "Russnovegles" and "Russhollandless". Their boards of directors are abroad in the respective countries, Norway, Holland and England.

In addition to these companies, there is a special Mologa forest concession—"Mologoles"—with participation of German capital, dealing in timber-exportation and the exploitation of forests in a region of the U. S. S. R., specially allotted to this company.

Other mixed companies dealing in importation and exportation of other goods are, to a certain degree, also dealing in export of timber; such are the joint-stock companies "Russoturc", "Russian Trade Company," and others.

The production of birch scale-boards is concentrated in a special scale-board trust, and the production of alder scale-board forms is one of the functions of the State timber-trade societies.

Chief Markets Japan and China

The State timber trusts are mostly working with the help of money given by the State credit institutions. At the same time, some trusts have succeeded in securing the participation of foreign capital, the latter sometimes taking a direct part in the business and sometimes through the mixed societies for the total sum of 2 millions p. st.

The growth of the timber exportation not only in the European part of the U. S. S. R. but also in the regions of the Far East is attracting considerable attention.

The chief markets are Japan and China. In the presence of certain conditions and practically with the assistance of foreign capital, the Soviet Far Eastern timber can be forwarded to European markets.

WHEN CANTON WORKERS AND ALSO FARMERS DEMONSTRATED AGAINST ALL FOREIGN IMPERIALIST RULE

(By Rosta News Agency.)

CANTON, May 8—(By Mail.)—Mass manifestations of protest marked the observation by revolutionary Canton of the anniversary, on May 7, of the presentation of the humilating twenty-one demands by Japan in 1915. A crowd consisting of over 100,000 workers, peasants, soldiers and students, assembled at noon in the University Square.

After this mass meeting, in which there took part the most prominent members of the Koumintang, the procession started for Shameen—the foreign settlement—in the following order: first came the delegates of the labor congress, then those of the farmers' conference, then followed various labor organizations of Canton, the students and the troops.

Demonstrate Against Imperialism.

The demonstration paused in front of the custom house, breaking into an improvised meeting ending with general cries of indignation of people clamoring for the return of the custom house to China. On their way along the embankment of the narrow canal between Shameen and the city of Canton, the manifestants waved numerous banners, shouting demands for the restoration of Shameen and relentless struggle against imperialism.

Thus the anti-Japanese planned protest grew into a huge general protest against all imperialists. The organised columns of the procession were followed by crowds of citizens who supported sympathetically the slogan of the day, which was "Down with Imperialism."

Japanese Advice Unwelcome.

On the eve of that day, the acting Japanese consul had addressed a circular letter to all the schools, stressing the culutral aims of educational institutions and urging the students, in the interest of friendship between the Chinese and Japanese peoples, to forbear from participation in political demonstrations.

Naturally, however, this letter had but the contrary effect of causing general indignation and, as a result, all the students walked out in the 7th of May demonstration.

WORKER FALLS INTO ACID VAT; BOSS ORDERS TRUCK TO CART HIM TO HOSPITAL IN RAG PILE

By A. W. HARVITT, Worker Correspondent.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, O., June 10.—While repairing an acid vat at the big Standard oil plant here one of the workmen fell into a vat of acid. Even tho he suffered only a few seconds exposure to the acid, the skin fell from his flesh in ribbons.

The workman had fastened a hook to a vat containing acid, which had to be moved away so that he could work on the other vat.

He was exerting his whole strength in trying to pull the vat away, when the part of the vat where he had the hook fastened gave way, launching him violently into a vat of acid which was behind him. After running a few steps he sank moaning to the ground.

Worker to the Rescue.

Another worker who was close to him when he fell, ran to him crying for help at the same time. When the boss came up the workman who had come to the rescue of the suffering man told the boss to order an ambulance.

In a few minutes a heavy delivery truck drove up and the boss commenced to gather up old rags and burlap to make a bed for the sufferer on the truck.

When the other worker saw the truck drive up and that it was the intention of the boss to lay the sufferer on the bed of dirty rags; he swore by a terrible oath that he would not stand for this. He demanded that the boss get an ambulance and that damned quick.

In Pile of Rags.

The boss then ordered an ambulance, after the sufferer had waited in agony for some time the ambulance arrived and he was rushed to the hospital. The chances for his recovery are doubtful, as the facilities for first aid were almost nil, a small box of bicorbonate of soda only being available for use on the sufferer.

Altho bicarbonate of soda is very cheap, and a case like this is liable to occur at any moment, as workmen around an oil refinery are continually exposed to the danger of acid burns; the supply on hand was quickly exhausted.

There was so much complaint from the men after this disaster that the company ordered a supply which is now on hand for the next victim.

KING, FASCISTI PAY TRIBUTE TO THE MONARCHY

Opposition Rebuffed by Victor Emanuel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, June 10. — The Aventine opposition bowed and scraped before the king of Italy during the celebration of the 25th anniversary of his reign here. Three Aventine opposition members of the chamber of deputies, one a catholic, one a democrat, and one a liberal, went to the Quirinal palace to present greetings to the king in the name of the constitutional opposition.

King Victor Emanuel, however, was too busy fraternizing with the fascisti to receive them, however, and the opposition deputies were forced to hand their greetings to his aid, Gen. Cittadini.

The Communists refused to take part in the monarchial demonstration.

Vice-Consul F. C. Gowen was merely caught by an assailant in a black shirt who ran up behind him and struck three blows on his head, and then ran back to his marching delegation.

Gowen fainted in the police station, but was assured that he was not fatally injured.

MORGAN TO TAKE STINNES GROUP AFTER CRISIS

Calls Loans; German Industries on Rocks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, June 10.—The Stinnes group of industries faces collapse due to the failure of Hugo Stinnes, jr., to secure a further loan from J. P. Morgan during his recent visit to the United States. This was revealed when the Reichsbank and other leading banks called a conference to confer on the impending financial crisis in the Stinnes idustries.

The Stinnes industries, including coal mines, steel mills, iron mines, newspapers and other properties and factories, face the payment of liabilities amounting to $25,000,000, mostly due to the J. P. Morgan company in payment of short term loans.

Morgan has refused further loans, because his banking syndicate feels it can gain complete control of the entire group by forcing the crisis and entering into the reorganization of the companies.

The bourse reflected the shaky financial condition of the Stinnes industries, sharp declines occurring in mining and other industrial securities.

The same difficulties confront many other German industries. The world powers continue to drive Germany out of the world markets, and a general economic collapse is predicted, to be followed by foreign control of all the large German industries.

One of the clauses in the allied note to Germany orders the destruction of the Krupp nitrate tube lathes on which it is declared rifles might be turned. This hits the German industrialists particularly hard, as their industries would be destroyed just at the time when reparation payments are demanded under the Dawes plan, and when an economic crisis is at hand. The Krupps are now negotiating for a loan from the J. P. Morgan banking syndicate, and fear that this too will be denied.

The Hindenburg government is expected to answer the demand for further disarmament with the demand for the evacuation of Cologne by the French. The cabinet will take the stand that disarmament and the occupation are two unconnected questions.

KNUTSON VISITS SOVIET SCHOOLS RUN BY UNIONS

City of Tula Center of Machinery Factories

By ALFRED KNUTSON.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., —(By Mail)—Tula situated about 130 miles south of Moscow, a city of 120,000, is a great factory center. From 40,000 to 50,000 workers are here busily engaged in making tools and machines of various kinds, it is a literal beehive of industry. The wages for the workers have already reached the pre-war level and the aim is to increase them as production improves and the general prosperity of the workers the country ever becomes better. The Tula workers feel that they are marching towards a happier day.

One interesting and significant feature of factory life in Tula are the technical trade schools for the children of the workers from 14 to 16 years. The courses of study comprise almost everything that has to do with production in a particular factory and one of the purposes of the school is to educate the children to become foremen and technicians. The course is for 4 years and it is entirely practical thruout.

Unions Runs Schools

The schools are operated under the supervision of the trade unions and in order to support them each factory pays into the trade union treasury one per cent of the total wages of the workers. Besides the workers of each factory also pay to the trade unions one per cent of their wages for cultural work among the workers generally. While the children attend the technical school they receive wages of from 12 rubles to 32 rubles per month. About 20 per cent of the graduates receive instruction in the higher branches in the technical schools of Moscow or elsewhere. It should be pointed out that as a rule each factory has its own school.

Delegates Visit Factory Schools

When we, delegates to the cristentern (the Farmers' International), visited one of these schools the students were holding a general meeting, the object of which was to decide on what they should do with their summer's vacation. As we entered the hall storms of applause greeted us and we were immediately elected honorary members of the student's presidium and escorted to the stage. Speeches were delivered by the student's themselves in well-chosen words and with perfect ease. I mention this incident to show how practical the children's education is under the Soviet government.

Workers Use Villas

Near Tula are scores of villas, formerly used as summer resorts for the capitalists, but now given to the workers as resting places when they have their vacation.

The workers here have yet many difficulties to overcome but step by step, with courage and devotion, these are being overcome. They feel that the future belongs to them.

The Workers Party in Action

TO APPEAL CASE ON COMMUNIST STREET SPEAKER

Engdahl Is Fined $25; Other Cases Dismissed

The $25.00 fine placed against J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER for speaking at a Workers (Communist) Party open air meeting, at a hearing before Judge Albert George yesterday, in municipal court, will be appealed, David J. Bentall, attorney for the Labor Defense Council declared. Notice of appeal was given immediately after Judge George had levied the fine.

The cases of four other members of the Workers (Communist) Party were dismissed by Judge George. D. E. Early of the Amalgamated Food Workers was discharged because the complaint signed by Officer Deviney, who made the arrest was faulty.

The complaints against Thurber Lewis, of the Labor Defense Council, Karl Reeve, of the DAILY WORKER and John Hecker of the Young Workers League were dismissed because no city attorney's were present to plead for the validity of the ordinance, on which the complaints were based.

Meanwhile the complaint against Engdahl was mysteriously mislaid, and by the time it was found, the city attorney had arrived in he courtroom. Judge George suddenly decided that the ordinance was valid, and fined Engdahl $25.00.

He refused to listen to Attorney Bentall's brief, declaring, "I can't listen to that, I haven't time, I have too much work to do." He is paid $9,000.00 per year to do nothing but sit and listen.

"We have a clear case," said Bentall to the DAILY WORKER. "Many decisions have been made which show plainly that the ordinance is unconstitutional. The state supreme court has so decided. The court declared that no police chief can be empowered to say who shall speak on the streets of Chicago and who shall not. A permit to speak is not necessary."

Another open air meeting will be held on the corner of North Avenue and Orchard Sts., next Saturday night. It was on this corner that the five Communists were arrested on various Saturday nights.

Kill Prohibition Bill

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 10.—Wet and dry legislation by the 54th general assembly suffered a painful death today when, by a vote of 73 to 60, the house killed the Barbour bill creating a prohibition commissioner and "sponge squad."

CORRECTION.

An article in yesterday's DAILY WORKER stated that C. E. Ruthenberg and I. E. Ferguson, who were convicted under the New York Criminal Anarchy law, along with Benjamin Gitlow whose appeal to the Supreme Court was met with an adverse decision, were pardoned by Governor Smith of New York. This was a mistake. Ruthenberg and Ferguson were granted a new trial by the Circuit Court of Appeals and their cases are still pending, both having been released on $5,000.00 bail.

UNEMPLOYED ARE SEEKING 'PEACE' IN LOS ANGELES

Prosperity Also Keeps Itself Hidden

By L. P. RANDALL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 10.—Los Angeles is busy entertaining nobles of the Mystic Shrine, shaking hands with a Siamese prince, and wasting much good ink on Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army.

In the words of Mayor Cryer, who has issued a proclamation in honor of said Mystics Nobles, Los Angeles is no longer merely a "white spot," but also "A Green Oasis of Abundance."

But, to their sorrow, the 67,000 unemployed of this city have not yet been able to discover this near paradise said to be located here along these "quiet waters of the Pacific coast."

The mayor's greeting to all these people from different parts of the world was nothing but a camouflaged war talk. The members of the delegation from Hawaii at least know that the operations of the army, navy, and air force around that little island were anything but "quiet, innocent and peaceful." They also know that great unrest exists among the exploited wage slaves of the Hawaiian sugar trust. And what about the barbarous sentences so mysteriously handed down to Privates Crouch and Trumbull without any protest from these mystics who now are reading about "quiet waters of the Pacific?"

Disquieting Issues.

The Japanese land question is not a very "quiet one" either. The same is the case with that rebellious crew which the oil tanker Merope brot into San Pedro harbor from Cette, France, a short time ago. The men objected to the use of English oil to kill Africans. And San Pedro itself is a black (even pretty red) point in the "white spot" of imaginary quietness.

Neither are the minds of the unemployed "quiet"—altho it may appear so on the surface. At present a lot of men are sleeping on cement floors, existing on stale bread and skimmed milk while Evangeline Booth will provide for plenty of nice "pie in the sky when you die."

"Since the world war" the Salvation Army has been placed "on a firm financial foundation," she says. So there is no starvation connected with salvation any more.

The mayor also thinks that "it is fitting that you, as the members of a great, ancient and noble order, should be graciously received and royally entertained."

Did you get that?—"Royally entertained." This must be a hint for McAdoo to get busy and do his duty as fitting a crown prince of the Wilsonian dynasty. Altho Doheny has lost some of his oil rights to the government—the executive committee of the capitalist class—he is king in the field of oil. And, in more than one sense of the word, he is also very handy when it comes to handling teapots. So, by all means, Mr. Mayor, put Doheny on the entertainment committee with our native crown prince and said prince of Siam and his flunkeys. Make their affair a similar one to that event at which the late president—Woodrow Wilson—dined from the gold plates of the king of England—after the world had been made "safe for democracy" but a very oppressive and unsafe and hungry place for jobless workers.

Open Library in "The Bronx."

NEW YORK.—"And ye, who now make merry in this room,"—no it is not old Omar Khayyam singing his philosophic quatrains; it is only the chairman announcing the next play at the Comaradie, Sociable and get together of the Bronx comrades celebrating the formal opening of one of the coziest and pleasantest, if not one of the largest libraries in the country. The celebration will take place on Saturady evening, June 27, at the Bronx headquarters, 1347 Boston Rd.; admission is absolutely free; refreshments will be served; games will be played; a good concert has been arranged for, and those who jazz the longest will receive a prize; favors will be distributed and general merriment and good spirit will prevail. The Bronx comrades want to show that they are proud of their achievement of a beautiful library; they are happy about the matter, and want to make everybody else rejoice with them. Come and be merry. Don't forget the date—Saturday, June 27.

Incidentally, if you have any good books or money to spare the library will welcome both. Come around, comrades and look us over. The committee on arrangements for the affair meets in conjunction with the library committee every Tuesday at headquarters, 1347 Boston Road; if your branch has not yet elected its quota of three delegates see that the branch does so at once; and in the meantime, come yourself. We need help in indexing and assorting books; in mailing out circulars, etc., and every willing hand is a great help. Don't be bashful. Come around and get acquainted, you will find pleasant, comradely surroundings, and good cheer from all the comrades. Come with books and money, or come without, but come anyway.—Library Committee, Bronx Workers Party.

Mahoney Completes His Betrayal

elements that demand of a labor party that it function in the interest of the productive workers and exploited farmers—the Communists.

Few organizations responded in any way to the appeal of Mahoney and Harmon to affiliated organizations of the federation for their approval of the new "association," issued immediately after the conference, according to information available. The whole proceeding has discouraged many of the rank and file, which is doubtless responsible for the lack of interest shown. Many organizations disapproved of the formation of the association and demanded a convention of the federation to decide the matter of its future. These have been ignored with the statement that a large majority of those reporting approved of the action of the conference and of the discontinuance of the federation.

While the farmer-labor association is constructed along somewhat similar lines to the federation, its constitution contains a clause that bars Communists from participation in its activities, and has opened the way for political job seekers who completely control the organizaiton. The "boring from within" tactics of the democratic political machine is not attacked, tho the influence of a Communist elected by and representing a legitimate trade union is not wanted.

Mahoney a Case of Economic Determinism.

While the farmer and labor sentiment for a labor party or farmer-labor party held out promise of bringing Mahoney into national prominence he showed a willingness to consort with Communists or anybody that might be used to further his dream of becoming a big figure.

When the opposition of the La Follette boom and that of the labor bureaucrats began to threaten his position as editor of the Union Advocate, he began to plan to save his job at all costs, even at the sacrifice of principle. To regain the lost confidence of labor officialdom, it was most expedient to flail the Communists, and at this he outdid the bureaucrats themselves.

Too Shifty.

Mahoney's habitual reversal of position proved to the reactionaries his unreliability in a pinch, and accordingly he was not permitted to become chairman of the new "association." Used as a tool by the reactionaries to clear out the Communists, his activity in denouncing the "visionaries" gained such momentum that he could not again reverse himself, and indeed, he had the editorship of the Union Advocate to protect. And he is still protecting it. This from the current editorial column of the Union Advocate.

> ". . . the Workers Party is torn by dissention, which will result in a split in the ranks, and the Communists will continue to denounce and vilify all in the labor movement who do not subscribe to their vagaries. We believe the labor movement, both economic and political, will not tolerate any further disruptive tactics from the Workers Party schemers."

Mahoney's sun is rapidly setting. Tolerated by the reactionaries while he was of use to them and lacking the confidence of both reactionaries and progressives, he is passing the way of all who equivocate. He confesses in the same editorial quoted above, that he, after reading the Communist International decision of the American question, cannot determine what the decision is. The caption of the editorial, "Workers (Communist) Party Decides To Bore From Within," implies that his conception is that this policy had been abandoned, or that its abandonment had been contemplated.

The Communist principle will flourish when its opponents and the betrayers of the working class will have been forgotten.

The following letter is the swan song of the farmer-labor federation written by Mahoney and Harmon:

Farmer-Labor Federation of Minnesota.

To all organizations affiliated with the farmer-labor federation.

Dear Sir and Brother:

On March 21, following the unity conference of farmer-labor forces, we addressed a letter to all affiliated organizations, asking them to approve or reject the organization formed at the conference, the farmer-labor association.

We have allowed a sufficient length of time to elapse to give all an opportunity to take action on this matter, and are now in a position to advise that a large majority of the orgnizations have approved the farmer-labor association. We also have the approval of the majority of the state committee of the farmer-labor federation.

On June 1, the farmer-labor association opened its official headquarters in the Labor Temple, St. Paul, and has actively started its work, which is practically a continuance of the work previously done by the farmer-labor federation. The secretary, Frank T. Starkey, is launching a drive thruout the state to enroll new members and organizations and meetings in the various counties are to be arranged in the near future. The association has taken over the farmer-labor advocate as its official organ and this work will be pushed extensively, as without a paper, it is impossible to keep in close touch with the people thruout the state.

The farmer-labor associaion has taken over all the liabilities of the farmer-labor federation and is, therefore entitled to all back dues and the full support of everyone affiliated with the federation. We urge that each and everyone of you will use your best efforts to extend the influence of the farmer-labor association and increase its membership, so that the work of education and organization, for which purpose the association is functioning, may be accomplished between now and the next campaign. There is much to be done and yout moral and financial co-operation is needed.

With best wishes for the success of the farmer-labor movement, we are,

FARMER-LABOR FEDERATION,
Wm. Mahoney, Chairman,
Ralph L. Harmon, Secretary.

LONG ISLAND SILK WORKERS WIN A STRIKE

Wage Cut and Speed-up Are Whipped

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ASTORIA, L. I., N. Y., June 10.—A worker in a factory at Astoria, L. I., manufacturing embroidered silks, became sick and when he returned to the factory he discovered that his place was filled and his job gone. The workers saw the injustice of this, and when their wages were suddenly lowered and the work increased without any explanation they were incited to action.

Everyone of the 100 workers in the factory walked out to a man, leaving the factory empty except for the boss and four or five of his lackeys.

The workers who struck called a meeting to discuss the situation and finally decided to send a committee to the employer to come to terms. The demands formulated were as follows:

1. That the sick worker be given back his job immediately.
2. That wages be raised to former rate.
3. That work be decreased to former rate.

The employer was forced, however unwillingly, to accede to the demands of his employes for the very good reason that he could not obtain skilled workers at the rate that he had been employing these workers.

Exports of German Machinery to France Suffers Heavy Loss

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—The department of commerce states the following with regard to the decline of German machine exports to France, so marked that textile machinery sales to France have dropped off 86 per cent.

"France, which in 1913 was the leading field for many classes of German machinery, now ranks with the moderate buyers of such equipment, according to report to the department of commerce by Vice Consul Magnuson, Stuttgart. German exports of machinery to France have decreased by about 50 per cent for year to year for the past three years and shipments in 1924 approximated only one-tenth of the 1913 volume.

"Prospects for improvement in 1925 do not appear to be favorable, as shipments for the first two months of 1925 show a decline of 2 per cent under 1924, on a basis of monthly averages. German exports of machinery to France, according to officials statistics, diminished from 54,952 metric tons in 1913 to 25,594 tons in 1922, to 10,297 tons in 1923, and 5,992 tons in 1924. Shipments amounting to 948 tons were made during the first two months of 1925."

SOVIET UNION PROTECTS WORKERS FROM OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES, BUT IN AMERICA PROFITS COME FIRST

By M. A. SKROMNY

In the land of the "barbarous" Bolsheviks the genius of invention is always working along the lines of saving human health and human life in contrast with the "civilized" world, where things are invented for making more money at the cost of the health and life of the workers. The tetraethyl gas is a good example.

The danger of lead poisoning is well know to every printer. It has its inception in the dusty printshops. There are many ways of keeping the air free from dust, but they are usually costly. It costs money to install a good ventilating system. It also costs money to keep a print shop clean and in order.

Czar Prohibited Strike

The boss leaves the distribution of type and old forms to the time when "they won't be so busy." To hire another man means to spend more money. They are usually trying to get by without hiring more people. In the meantime dust accumulates on the old forms and every time there is a breeze the dust floats up in the air, gets into the lungs of the printers and prepares patients for the T. B. sanitariums.

In Soviet Russia they know the evil, but before the revolution could not do much against it. In fact, they were unable to do anything at all. There were a few unions which however could do nothing, as strikes were prohibited by the law. It is true there were strikes, but it was against the law and many a leaders of a strike went to Siberia.

No Need of Strikes Now

Now things are different. The union practically runs the shop, and there is no need to strike. In the government print-shops a representative of the government together with the shop committee decide all matters pertaining to the shop. The wages and hours are decided upon by a mixed committee of the union and government representatives. In private shops the union has the final say as to conditions. And the union always has the backing of the Soviet government, contrary to all rules of "civilized" society where the bosses always have the backing of the government. And there are no injunctions nor scab shops in Soviet Russia. (I. T. U. and U. M. W. A. members take notice.)

Scabs Against Law

There are no scab shops for the simple reason that no shop can run there under non-union conditions. It is against the law! Those Bolsheviks also believe in laws, but those laws work always in favor of the workers instead of the bosses as in all the boss blessed countries.

In order to fight the evil of lead poisoning a worker invented a special vacum dust cleaner which is shown here on the cut. It is something new for Russia. We were told that a similar apparatus is also on the market in the United States and in Europa. We questioned old printers about it. They had heard about it, but never saw it in operation. It costs money and the bosses are in business not for their health nor to save the health of their workers, but to make money

The less the expenses the bigger the profits. For this reason a good invention which could save the health of thousands of workers, remains unused.

The Typographical Union does not demand its use. The union does not run the shops. To the contrary, the workers in the print-shops are split up into many separate unions with separate contracts and are often scabbing on each other. Under such conditions, of course, there can be no talk of absolute control over the wages and working conditions in the shop.

Workers Get Month Off

In addition to the usual safeguards for his health every worker in Soviet Russia receives a month vacation with full pay every year. He may go during that time to the special rest homes or sanatoriums, and he does not have to pay any railroad fair either, as this is taken care of by the union and the government.

Yes, it is in the land of the barbarous Bolsheviks where these things are going on.

ARCTIC TRIPS TO ESTABLISH AIRSHIPS BASES

Not Merely Sport But Business for Britain

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

While newspaper readers are engrossed in the adventure and ice colored romance of Amundsen's flight into the unknown polar seas the workers of the world must not forget that arctic voyages of today, for all their romance, are adventures in imperialism that may mean more wars in which the workers pay the price while their masters reap the spoils.

The spoils of the Arctic are the islands that will be needed as way stations for the new trans-arctic airlines that will cut down the distance from America and Europe to Asia. Rival nations are just beginning to see this value in the polar lands that some explorers have pointed out for years.

Stefansson British Agent

Vilhjalmur Stefansson is the most consciously imperialistic of arctic writers and discoverers and it is natural that his latest book, the Adventure of Wrangel Island, should urge the importance of his favored regions to the British crown.

Indeed he has a special reason for such propaganda in this book for he feels it necessary to defend himself against the criticism launched at the ill-fated expedition he sent to Wrangel Island recently for the purpose of planting the British flag there.

Valuable as Air Station.

Wrangel Island, named after a Russian explorer of a century ago, is fifty miles or more in length and lies eighty or ninety miles north of eastern Siberia. It is so hard to reach by ship, because of persistent ice floes, that it has always been uninhabited except for temporary expeditionary forces, but it has—insists Steafansson, a coming value as an air station and a present value for its fur trapping and its reindeer grazing grounds.

Expect Amundsen to Return by Way of Cape Columbia

COPENHAGEN, June 10.—Reports from Oslo today indicated meterologists and representatives of the Dornier Aeroplane works at Spitzbergen now believe the Amundsen-Ellsworth North Pole flyers are endeavoring to reach Cape Columbia. At that point relief could be sent to the party by a steamer expedition.

This belief is based on statements by members of the Amundsen expedition still at Spitzbergen who said Amundsen told them that if he did not return by aeroplane within fourteen days, or was forced to descend, he would make his way to Cape Columbia.

SEEKS TO TEST BIBLE LAW OF DUPONT BARONY

Bible Reading Against Religious Freedom

NEW YORK, June 10—A parent or teacher in Delaware who is willing to accept the legal and financial services of the American Civil Liberties' Union in testing the state's compulsory bible reading law is sought by the union's committee on academic freedom.

The union believes that the law compelling the reading of the bible "wothout comment" in Delaware public schools and colleges violates the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom and Delaware bill of rights. The law carries an amendment to impose a fine upon any teacher failing to obey the act and providing that such teacher forfet his or her certificate.

Delaware is practically the feudal estate of the Du Pont family. The family name clings to every institution, organization, and to streets and the family fortune (much increased by the boom of the American dye industry during and since the war) penetrates most of the state's business.

Control of the press by the DuPonts is complete, control of the schools almost equally so. The DuPonts are the country's biggest manufacturers of explosives and probably of chemicals. They are interested in tetra ethyl lead production used in making high-combustion gasoline known as looney gas, generally accepted as a public menace now. Their latest interest is in the German product synthetic alcohol to be used as high-power motor fuel.

BRITISH LABOR MEMBER SCORES ZANKOV TOOLS

Exposes Hypocrisy of Social-Democrats

The following brief but damning indictment of the social democratic party of Bulgaria was made by C. L'E. Malone, labor member of the British house of commons, in a letter published in George Lanbury's Weekly:

"Dear Sir:—The executive of the second (socialist) international have just published the defence of the social democratic party of Bulgaria for their part in the Zankov terror—and a sorry thing it is.

"It is simply one long scream against Moscow, a raging tirade against the Communists and Stambulisky agrarians, whom (without bringing forward any kind of evidence) they accuse of the cathedral outrage, which they describe as "a crime unparalleled in the annals of the history of humanity," and "a nameless and limitless degradation." They reiterate and reiterate their horror at the death of the unfortunate 200 victims in the cathedral.

"Of the 16,000 persons whom—according to the statement of their own colleague, Vandervelde—hee Zankov government has murdered in the last 18 months, they have nothing to say; of the participation of some of the members of their party in the coup d'etat and the murder of Stambulisky (admitted in their own publication), they have nothing to say; of the party's participation until February, 1924, in the Zankov government, which was engaged in the wholesale slaughter of its political opponents, they have nothing to say.

"They speak of Moscow sowing corruption by its bribes. They are not concerned with the support that their friend Zankov draws from Mussolini in funds and arms, and from the remnant of Wrangel's army, whose officers we saw strutting about the streets of Sofia, in their imperial Russian uniforms.

ANOTHER BUILDER MAKES GOOD

Simon Stein of Chicago, Attention!

Little Comrdae Anna Letchinger of Chicago, who was challenged by one of the Milwaukee comrades to get two new subs for the DAILY WORKER—waited until her hand healed up (she got an awful wallop!) and then went out to make good.

She got two new subs she went after and she says, "I would have had them sooner if my hand didn't stop me."

"And now," she adds, "I challenge Simon Stein of Chicago to go out and also get two subs for the DAILY WORKER. He ought to do it easily before the campaign ends on July first. Two subs in three weeks is a cinch for Comrade Stein and I hope he challenges another Builder when he gets them."

Good words—and good work. Now, Comrade Stein—it's your move!

Japanese Government Bars Out Immigrants from China and Korea

TOKIO, June 10.—The Chuo says that the social bureau of the home office has decided to put a strict embargo on entrance into Japan of Chinese laborers.

It is stated some 150,000 Chinese are working in Japan at low wages, and, with about the some number of Korean laborers, they are making the unemployment situation more serious.

As for the Koreans, the home office authorities are said to be determined not to permit more of them to land unless they can prove they have jobs in Japan waiting for them.

Japanese Steamer Grounds

TOKIO, June 10.—The 750 ton steamship Kankyo Maru was aground off Kyosai, Korea, and 100 of her crew were missing, according to a seoul dispatch to Jiji, Tokio newspaper today. A rescue ship has been dispatched to the Kankyo's aid.

Palestine No Haven of Rest for Jewish Workers, Says Tailor

NEW YORK, June 10—Palestine is "the darkest, most uncivilised country in the world" in the opinion of a New York clothing worker who was deflected from his route to Russia where he had expected to work in the factory of the Russian-American Industrial corporation.

"The only paper one is given to read is the Hebrew Zionist capitalist one, all others are suppressed," he writes to a friend. Zionist spy on suspects on the streets and there is no free expression of thot he claims.

"I you dare to talk against their methods of ruling by the iron heel you go to prison or may be lynched," he writes, without however citing any specific cases.

Teachers in High Schools Work for Return of Councils

The High School teachers are the first to make a move for the reinstatement of the teachers councils in the Chicago schools. They are circulating petitions in the high schools requesting the superintendent to permit teachers meetings without supervision by school officials.

A committee has also been appointed to go before the board of education urging the return of the teachers meetings.

TRIPLE ALLIANCE MOVE IN BRITAIN STILL DOUBTFUL

Thomas Fights Against Class Unity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, June 10.—The effort to rebuild the fighting power of the old "triple alliance" at the conference begun here Thursday, is temporarily thwarted by the reference of the matter to a committee for consideration. This is being hailed as a victory for the reactionaries by the British newspapers, and a defeat for A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation.

The discussion was held in secret session and the groups attending were the miners, railroad men, transport workers, these three the members of the old triple alliance which fell apart by treachery of Hodges in 1921, on "Black Friday"; but in addition this conference included the engineering trades and shipbuilders.

Federation Enough for Brownlie.

It is understood that Cook made an eloquent appeal for the unity of labor. He was opposed first by J. T. Brownlie, secretary of the Engineers' Union, who insisted that unity could be obtained only thru the antiquated federal body of the British Trades Union Congress. Frank Smith of the shipbuilders stated that his union was discussing wage agreements and he thought the "time is inopportune."

But it remained for J. H. Thomas, member of parliament and leader of the second (socialist) international, to pour out the worst attacks on labor solidarity. He said that the proposal for an alliance would "disturb the atmosphere of peace so laboriously built up in the last few months and bring the country face to face with the gravest possible crisis." He opposed all class struggle ("industrial war" he called it) and said he was content to continue conciliation and collaboration with the employers.

Industrial Union Sectionalism.

Thomas appealed to the sectionalism of the industrial unions by stating that important conferences concerning wages, hours and conditions now going on in the railroad, shipbuilding and engineering industries, might be ended by the employers if the unions united with the miners and transport workers upon a program of militant class struggle.

He could not promise that the present conferences would bring them any success in getting their demands, but he counseled "moderation, industrial peace and concerted action by capital and labor to work together for a revival of sorely crippled British industry."

A committee of two from each union will consider the question further and report back.

The Four Power Pact

The new security pact agreed to by Britain, France and Belgium, a copy of which has been forwarded to the German government, is not clearly described in the dispatches we have seen, but that it does not specifically guarantee the German frontiers of Poland and other French vassal states is indicated by the strenuous denials by French diplomats that they have in any way jeopardized the territorial integrity of the little buffer nations in hock to French banks.

One dispatch states that "the British have clung to important reservations on the question of assisting France in military operations where these operations are concerned entirely with the protection of France's allies in eastern Europe."

There are other reservations connected with these reservations apparently, but the real joker seems to be that the necessary decisions and interpretations are to be made by the council of the league of nations.

The dispatch quoted goes on to say:

> The French feel that they cannot quarrel with the reservations for the time being, even tho Poland and Czecho-Slovakia may perceive such reservations as a separation of their interests from those of their most powerful ally and a weakening of the security pact insofar as they are concerned.

The above comment would indicate that France has been forced by British pressure, on the franc principally, to ease up the pressure on Germany from the east and southeast for a guarantee of security on her German frontier.

The Versailles treaty is probably going to undergo some revision, but the extent of this cannot be estimated until the full text of the new document, which still awaits Germany's signature, is made public. Connected with it are doubtless a number of secret "understandings," probably one between Great Britain and Germany, that will not be given to the press.

The British dominions have expressed bitter hostility towards an agreement by Great Britain that would pledge military aid to France in case her vassal states get into war with either Germany or Russia and it is hardly possible that Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, has agreed to arrangements that would further strain inter-empire relations.

The principal danger in this new alignment, if it is accepted by all four powers, is that Germany will be brought into a western European bloc against Soviet Russia. But in that case Poland would be one of the allies and the German government has so far resisted the demand of France that French troops be allowed free passage across her territory in the event France wants to come to the aid of Poland. This provision seems to have been left out of the proposed pact because of British opposition undoubtedly based on the known attitude of the dominions.

In our opinion the acceptance of the proposed pact will mark the beginning of a cleavage between France and her eastern European allies and insofar as this is true it marks a triumph of British diplomacy over the French and the beginning of a loss of French prestige in Europe.

Picking the Fruit of Compromise

The Barr cossack bill is before the Illinois legislature again. It has passed the senate with only 8 dissenting votes.

The history of this vicious measure is very instructive in that it shows how not to get results for labor unions and the working class.

Following their policy of compromise with the republican state government the state federation of labor officialdom accepted a substitute for the Barr bill called the Dunlap bill which differed from the Barr bill—urged by the employers' association—in that it called the state police "highway police" and made their appointment the prerogative of the governor.

Governor Small was said by the labor fakers to support the Dunlap bill and another wonderful "victory for labor" was on the cards. But the bosses got busy with the result cited above. The unions have to make their fight all over again with good prospects of having a copper-riveted state constabulary bill put over on them.

Just as in the case of the anti-injunction bill, from which all the teeth have been extracted by the skilled dentistry of the employers' association lobbyists, the compromise tactics of the state federation legislative committee have not only defeated labor's purposes, but demoralized its forces. Yet these individuals, who are fools when they are not crooks, have the crust to strut around and confer the title of "labor leader" on themselves.

It is very bad to be defeated. It breaks down the morale of the working class and much work has to done over again, but it is a thousand times worse to be defeated without a fight. The result of such tactics is not only demoralizing but destructive. The confidence of the workers in their organizations sinks to a low level and the bosses always take advantage of such situations to put the screws on a little tighter.

Class collaboration of the particularly vicious kind practiced by Illinois fakerdom must be replaced by class struggle. The state police bill could have been utilized by even a very small legislative fraction elected on a labor party itcket to stir up a tremendous agitation all over Illinois and even tho the Barr bill had been passed without a single restrictive amendment the union membership would have been in the frame of mind to go out and begin mass resistance to it.

The unions have to choose whether they will fight or surrender.

The faker policy is to surrender after a sham battle.

The left wing policy is to win or go down fighting. This militant attitude quite often turns expected defeat into victory.

At the worst it never demoralizes labor's forces.

The Enslavement of China

By Wm. F. Dunne

ARTICLE IV.

WE have seen that Japan had become the first power in China—Germany, her closest rival, with Great Britain enjoying an equally favored position while the United States, France and Russia trailed along in the order named.

The world war gave Japan the opportunity to get rid of Germany. In 1894, Japan had by war on China seized Formosa, occupied Fukien province and made herself a contender for supremacy. In 1904-05 she had made war on Russia, whipped and taken Russia's place in Manchuria. In 1914—notice the ten-year periods into which the chronicle falls naturally—in conjunction with her ally, Great Britain, she made war on Germany with the same ruthless disregard of China's neutrality and territorial rights that she had shown in the Russo-Japanese war.

OF all the great powers with spheres of influence in China, Germany had shown the Chinese the most consideration. She had carried out her agreements to the letter and the German port of Tsingtao was "the model city of the Far East."

Says S. K. Hornbeck, a University of Wisconsin professor who taught in the Chinese government college, speaking of German enterprise in her treaty port:

> Before long a substantial breakwater, granite docks with complete equipment and a floating dock capable of handling vessels of 16,000 tons displacement had been installed. At Tsingtao there soon appeared a modern German city, carefully planned, artistically and substantially built. Forts, shops, military departments and well-equipped barracks gave the character of a fortified base; but Kiaochow (situated inland from the port of Tsingtao. W. F. D.) was never given the military equipment or aspects of a Port Arthur or a Vladivostok—as comparative ease with which it was taken (in 1914) shows. ("Contemporary Politics in the Far East," Page 296.)

ALL writers on Far Eastern questions are practically unanimous in comparing this German base to the ports of the other imperialist nations to the credit of the former. Putnam Weale, writing in 1904 said:

> As has already been stated, this town of Tsingtao, on which part of the Berlin millions have been spent, is excellently well laid out. The streets are broad and admirable, and provided with sidewalks of noble dimensions. Electricity lights all the town, and a complete water-supply system has been installed. There are good hotels and passable shops, a splendid parade ground and fine military roads darting everywhere into the country. Tsingtao is an unique creation in the Far East. ("The Re-Shaping of the Far East," Page 346.)

THE Germans had allowed the Chinese government to establish its customs depot at Tsingtao instead of at Kiaochow, the boundary of the German-leased territory. Joint stock companies composed of Chinese and German investors had been formed to carry on the enterprises which German capital conducted. Germany had gone farther than any other power in making concessions to China as a national entity and the treaty ceding Kiaochow to Germany contains this clause not found in the treaties between China and the other powers:

> Should Germany at some future time express the wish to return Kiaochow to China before the expiration of the lease, China engages to refund to Germany the expenditure she has incurred at Kiaochow and to cede to Germany a more suitable place. Germany engages at no time to sublet the territory leased from China to another power.

A small sop enough to Chinese pride but more than the other powers had seen fit to make!

BUT the growing influence of Germany in China was attributable to something else than her better treatment of the Chinese and her scrupulous keeping of commercial agreements.

The fortified German base of Tsingtao was constructed not only for the defense of German interests, but as A PART OF THE FORCE OF THE CHINESE NATION. In other words, Germany and China had at least a semi-military alliance. Speaking of this phase of the agreement Gilbert Reid, in "China, Captive or Free?" says:

> Article I outlines two intentions in the mind of the Chinese emperor, the one "to strengthen the friendly relations between China and Germany" and the other "to increase the military readiness of the Chinese Empire." This particular feature of the contract has been overlooked by most war critics. Tsingtao was never meant by either party as a menace to China (tho possibly it might be construed as a menace to Japan) but as an auxiliary agency in the Chinese plans for national defense. Hence not only German troops were to be allowed "free passage" in the leased zone, but Chinese troops were to be allowed to be stationed within that zone.

ONE glance at a map of China with Shangtung peninsula and the fortified base of Tsingtao at its tip, pointing like a sword straight northwest at the heart of the Japanese protectorate of Korea, and the reason for the extension of the world war to Asia by Japan, acting as an ally of Great Britain, is clear.

It was not only the German competition and German territorial rights that worried Japan, but the fact that Tsingtoa, with Chinese troops allowed to gaze longingly across the bay towards Korea and Liaotung—Japan's loot in two wars—together with the revival of Chinese national spirit following the revolutions of 1911 and 1913, constituted a threat her imperialistic ambition could not brook.

CHINA must be brought to heel and so much the better if two birds could be killed with one stone—Germany in China obliterated with the help of Great Britain and Korea and Manchuria freed from the menace of Chinese nationalism.

The bringing of the war to Asia thru the British-Japanese attack on Tsingtao is as coldblooded an example of the might is right policy of imperialism as history furnishes. That it was done in violation of China's formal neutrality in the war and in spite also of her desire that her friendly relations with Germany be not endangered is testimony to the efficient manner in which she had been weakened and cowed.

GREAT BRITAIN and Japan had not the excuse that Germany's Chinese policy was an agressive one or that she was in any way infringing on their spheres of influence and deliberately jeopardizing "peace in the Far East." On the contrary, the manner in which Germany attended to her own business and kept wtihin her sphere is one of the wonders of the history of imperialism in China. Professor Hornbeck, in the work already quoted, says of this phenomenon:

> Since the original seizure of Kiaochow the Germans had made no additional attempt to extend their territorial holdings or special privileges in China. They had not undertaken to extend their ADMINISTRATION over Shangtung—or even over the railway zone. The Shangtung Railway company had never attempted to assume a political status and perform political functions. The German government had not sought to stretch the terms of the convention of 1898. There had been no creating of issues and demanding of immediate settlement such as had characterized the progress of the Japanese in Manchuria. German subjects had not exceeded their stipulated rights; they had not invaded the interior; they had not become engaged in personal and police conflicts with the Chinese. There was in the later years of German presence in Shangtung little of which from the point of view of the open door policy, complaint could be made. For ten years past the Germans had done prcatically nothing calculated to complicate the politics of the Far East, and, except commercially, they disturbed no peace in the Far East but the peace of mind of Japanese expansionists. Judged upon the basis of substantial accomplsihment, successful and just administration and real social welfare to the economic and social welfare of the people who fell within the range of their influence, none of the powers holding bases on the China coast can offer better justification for its presence than could the Germans. (Emphasis in the original.)

BUT German commrecialism and German diplomacy had been too successful. Both Japan and Great Britain were determined to wipe out this rival outpost.

In spite of the offer of the Chinese government to neutralise all the ports held by the great powers, the Japanese press insisted on action. "The war in Europe gives wings to the tiger," they stated.

Germany consented to the Chinese proposal and preparations were being made by the German minister, when this plan was refused by the allied imperialist governments, to place Kiaochow completely under Chinese control.

This was the one thing that, altho assuring peace in the Far East, Great Britain and Japan did not want. Had Germany ceded Kiaochow to China BEFORE the allies could strike, it would have belonged to China and if taken by either nation would have involved a still more brazen disregrad of Chinese rights than did the opening of hostilities against Tsingtao.

ON August 15, 1914, Japan sent the German government an ultimatum which contained these clauses:

> First—To withdraw immediately from Japanese and Chinese waters German-men-of-war and armed vessels of all kinds, and to disarm at once those that cannot be withdrawn.
> Second—To deliver on a date not later than September 15 to the imperial Japanese authorities, without condition or compensation, the entire leased territory of Kiaochow, with a view of the eventual restoration of the same to China.

IN view of the fact that the Germans were trying to give Kiaochow to China at the very moment this ultimatum was delivered, the purpose of the demand is quite clear—not to expedite the redemption of Kiaochow, but to prevent it.

The rapid interchange of communications between Great Britain and Japan in this period is one of the most interesting studies in ways that are dark in all the annals of imperialist diplomacy.

The disputed question of whether Great Britain or Japan was to blame in bringing the war to China and for the long and thorny path the Chinese were forced to tread subsequently will be treated in another article.

TWIN CITY REDS TO MAKE MERRY ON NEXT SUNDAY

Several Good Speakers on the Program

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 10.— The Twin Cities section of the Trade Union Educational League will hold the first labor picnic of the season at West River Road and 34th Ave. South, Minneapolis, on Sunday, June 14.

The fine program of speakers, games and other amusements which has been arranged, together with the fine picnic site so easily accessible from both cities make assurance of a huge crowd of workers and their families.

All kinds of refreshments and lunches will be served on the grounds beginning at 11, in the forenoon.

The principle speaker will be Otto H. Wangerin, who has recently returned from Europe where he studied the organized labor movement. He will speak on the subject of "European Trade Unionism." This leader of progressive unionism has a message that workers will want to hear.

Julius F. Emme, of the Machinists' Union, known for his progressive leadership thruout the labor movement of Minnesota, will speak on "What Has Happened to the American Unions."

"Future Trade Union Policy" will be the subject of a speech by Dan W. Stevens. Stevens is a well-known fighter in the labor movement of Minneapolis, was for seventeen years secretary of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, recently expelled from that body because he became too progressive, and candidate for mayor of Minneapolis in the last election, on the Communist ticket.

A novel program of games has been planned. It includes such attractions as a pie eating contest, fat men's race, needle race, potato race, wheelbarrow race, three-legged race, and other amusements and numerous games for younger people and children. Pie eaters and specialists in other games had better go into training now.

Members of the working class of the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis "pack up your troubles in the old kit bag" for a day and let's play. There'll be "no place but" West River Road on June 14.

YELLOW CAB COMPANY PLAYS OLD "CONTEST" GAME TO SPEED UP DRIVERS AND CUT COMMISSIONS

"Did you see that Yellow Cab driver steal a load from another Yellow? Did you notice his eyes, all bloodshot and staring? What is the matter with him?"

"That one? Oh, that's another of those hungry, suckers out to win the Chevrolet. The driver who 'books' the most money for the month of June without breaking any of the rules, like killing somebody, for instance, gets the lovely 'low-cost' transportation. Keep out of his way, for he has been working twenty hours a day for five days now."

The Yellow Cab Co. of Chicago is running this month, a contest open to all drivers who are able to stand the pace. The winner will receive a touring car and one week off, with pay, to rest up. Seventy-five other prizes are offered as bait including some "needle-point" chairs, the usefulness of which in any workers' home not being mentioned. Those who only "show" will have to rest up at their own expense.

No driver will be allowed to work more than sixteen hours per day, according to the rules, but it is well known among the drivers that the winner will have to drive about twenty hours each day for a month.

One near casualty has been unofficially reported. A driver speeding east on Lawrence avenue, asleep at the wheel, was only saved from a watery grave by the high curb on Clarendon avenue. The experience, strangely enuf, did not turn him from his desire to win the car.

Drivers have been discussing the amount the company can expect to clear from this lottery. It was generally agreed that the boss will pocket $10,000 in increased profits for this month.

It is also generally understood by the drivers that the winner will have invested several hundred dollars in turned in fares, to make up for time lost when he can find no passengers. With many close running contestants freely spending their own money for riding imaginary passengers, the company stands to win not only their usual share of the receipts, but the drivers commission, too.

Morgan Loan Unused

PARIS, June 10.—It was learned today that Finance Minister Caillaux assured the senate finance commission at a secret session that the $100,000,000 Morgan loan is still unused.

The recent rise in the franc, Caillaux said, was entirely without governmental intervention, "except for the moral value of the threat to use the Morgan loan."

No Temporary Shoals Lease

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Any temporary lease by the war department of power at Muscle Schoals is opposed by the Muscle Shoals commission, according to an announcement made today by chairman McKenzie.

A SPOUTING MAJOR GENERAL

NEW YORK.—Major General Summerall, commander of the second corps area, at a meeting of the state chamber of commerce in this city, declared that that body "will do everything in their power to make defense day on July 4 a nation-wide success." The brave general declared that "business cannot prosper from the unsettled conditions resulting from war."

The general went further. "The citizens must be the army and the army must have the sympathetic support, co-operation and understanding of businessmen all over the country."

In the meantime injunctions against the miners in West Virginia, which completely shut their mouths, deportation bills for the alien workers and naturalized workers in this country

Family Searches Gold

TORONTO, Ont., June 10.—Armed with an "Electric Car" William John Beach, his wife and five year old child left here today aboard a 26 foot craft enroute to Cocos Island where they will search for $20,000,000 in pirate gold, said by legend to be there. Cocos Island is located 500 miles from the Pacific end of the Panama Canal.

Italy Makes Bid to Berlin.

ROME, June 10—Italy should not join Great Britain in the security pact to protect France's western borders because the Alpian border is excluded from the pact, the newspaper Messagero said today.

Italy is making direct overtures to Germany, Messagero declared, for a security agreement covering the Alpian border.

2,100 COTTON MILL STRIKERS EVICTED FROM COMPANY HOUSES

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., June 10.—The 2,100 strikers at the American Thread company's plant here will be thrown out of their homes into the streets they learned today in a notice they received from the company. Because they dared to go on strike the homes that they have slaved for will be taken away from them. The houses of course, belong to the company.

Tents are being put up as rapidly as possible to take care of the strikers' families when they are dumped out into the streets.

Five thousand subs for Red Week.

DETROIT CARPENTERS REFUSE TO SIGN YELLOW DOG CONTRACT OF HUTCHESON; PROGRESSIVE FIGHT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., June 11.—Hutcheson has at last succeeded in what has apparently been his design ever since last January, namely, the wrecking of the carpenters' movement in Detroit. Starting with the illegal expulsion of William Reynolds, vice-president of the district council, and continuing with the use of plug-uglies, police violence, and injunctions, Hutcheson has kept the union in constant turmoil and rendered it incapable of functioning. As a result, the carpenters of Detroit are working for $1.15 per hour instead of $1.25 as voted for by the membership.

There has been no district council functioning for the last three months, and during the last two months four locals have been in a state of temporary or permanent suspension for refusal to bow to the will of czar Hutcheson. As the carpenters locally must pay for this fight in terms of working conditions and wages while Hutcheson sits back and fights the rank and file at $7,500 per plus expensse, they had decided to accept Hutcheson's bullying terms and the trouble was on the verge of being settled, when Hutcheson came forward with a proposition that every member of the four suspended local unions must sign a "yellow dog pledge," which for bullying arrogance beats anything that the blackest open shoppers have ever tried to cram down the throats of unorganized workers.

No "Free Will" About It.

In spite of the wording of the pledge, that one signed of his own "free will and accord," the members of these four suspended local unions

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE revelations of the queen of Roumania are a keen disappointment, if the first article can be taken as an example of what is to follow. Even Elinor Glyn's advice to the lovelorn manages to stow away a livelier kick. The queen is getting money under false pretenses. When the onetime Mrs. Peck, who won for Woodrow Wilson the title of "Peck's Bad Boy" turned herself loose in the pages of a popular magazine, the babbitry expected a treat. But the gastric juices conjured up by visions of a salacious feast, had nothing to digest. Mrs. Peck simply did not deliver the goods, neither did she remove a lively doubt created in the public mind that she had a good story to tell.

IT looks as if our present-day Madame Pompadours are playing the confidence game in a new and original manner. But let them not go too far. There is a limit to public patience and while our rotary population may stand for a lot of inconvenience in getting their liquor, they will insist on getting their sex stuff served up the necessary wire netting for the sake of their morals. But there must be something inside the screen besides stern virtue. The queen had better look out.

THE Irish Free State government has let the feline out of the sack. While that government has appropriated money for famine relief, it still denies that there is a famine. What's the big idea? One of the reasons was given by Patrick McGilligan, Irish minister of commerce, when he told newspaper reporters that stories of Irish famine circulated in America were injuring the tourist trade. Hotel owners and resort keepers called on the minister and gave him instructions to counter the famine propaganda. He did. But at the same time his government appropriated nearly half a million dollars for famine relief. This shows how little credence can be placed in the statements of capitalist governments.

ALEXANDER P. MOORE, United States ambassador to Spain, gave a dinner and ball in Madrid in honor of King Alfonso and the royal family. This is the ambassador that William R. Hearst is conducting a campaign in behalf of keeping him in Madrid. Some Pennsylvania politicians want to recall Moore. Mrs. Hearst staged a gypsy dance recently in a New York hotel in honor of Moore's return to Spain. Moore is a great admirer of Alfonso and of the fascist dictator Primo de Rivera. So is Hearst. Both are typical fascists.

FRUNZE, SOVIET RED ARMY CHIEF, REPORTS TO RUSSIAN CONGRESS

M. V. FRUNZE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW.—At the Third All-Russian Congress of the Soviets which just closed its sessions in Moscow, Comrade M. V. Frunze, head of the military forces of the Soviet Union, gave a report on the red army. Answering the accusations of the enemies of the Soviets on the so-called "red imperialism," he brought up some interesting figures and comparisons. For instance:

For every 10,000 people in the Soviet Union there are 41 soldiers. In Roumania and Poland there are 108 soldiers, and in France (without the colonies) 200 soldiers for every 10,000 of the population. In some of the western European countries the armies are proportionately between three and five times bigger than in the Soviet Union.

There are now 552,000 soldiers in the Soviet Union instead of 1,129,000 of the pre-war czarist army. The countries of the victors who won the war "to end all wars" have increased their armies by 1,183,000 since the war.

The upkeep of a soldier in the Soviet Union costs every citizen less than three rubles. In the Baltic states up to seven rubles, in Poland up to 11 rubles and in France up to 14 rubles.

DUMMY WORKMEN HIRED BY ST. PAUL OPEN SHOP CONCERN TO FOOL CUSTOMERS AT FETE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, June 11—On Friday evening, June 5, the United States Bedding company of St. Paul, one of the largest manufacturers of bedding supplies in the country, held a concert and banquet in order to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the founding of the company and to advertise its business. It was also the 60th anniversary of Samuel Broustein, who is the founder of the company. Broustein has associated with him his four sons in the business. All of them act in official capacity, as president, superintendent and managers.

At this affair, the sales force and many of those who have done business with the company were present. Great stress was laid on the wonder-

Mighty Nation Is Breaking Shackles of Imperialists

GENERAL STRIKE TO FORCE ALL FOREIGN POWERS TO WITHDRAW ARMED FORCES FROM SHANGHAI

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, June 11.—China, the vast nation of the Orient with its 400,000,000 population, is seething with revolt against foreign imperialism and is gathering its forces to strike off its shackles of foreign domination and assert its right to determine its own destiny.

This was shown by the sharp demands of the Chinese government today upon the foreign powers to withdraw their armed forces from Shanghai, the expected arrival here of 2,000 Chinese troops, the seamen's strike here spreading to Hong Kong and the threat of a great national strike unless all Chinese demands are granted by next Sunday.

The Oppressed Nation Demands

PEKING, June 11.—The Chinese foreign office, in a strong note to the powers today demanded that the Shanghai authorities spontaneously lift martial law, reembark foreign marines, disarm the foreign regular and volunteer police, and release the rioting students from jail.

The note asserted that the Chinese government can not share the foreign view as to the shooting of ten students in the street demonstrations that preceded the present general strike. The note insisted that responsibility for the shooting falls on those foreigners in authority in the international concession.

The Imperialist Nation Tries to Reject

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Regardless of the Chinese demands made to foreign diplomats at Peking, American military forces will not be withdrawn from Shanghai and Canton so long as state and navy department representatives in the Far East believe they are needed for the "protection of American lives and interests," it was learned here this afternoon.

Disaster to German Industry Looms as Bankruptcy of Big Firms Threatens Dawes Plan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, June 11.—The menacing clouds of economic and industrial disruption hung over the Ruhr today, threatening disaster not only in that rich basin but all industrial Germany. The infamous Dawes plan is proving to be full of large and dangerous defects.

It was announced 165,000 workers and miners and 800 office employes of one of the most important industrial concerns in the Ruhr would be dismissed June 15.

The industrial storm has been brewing for weeks. It was foreshadowed a fortnight before the international feud, reorganization and division of the Stinnes interests, pointed to a possible disintegration of the great structure reared by the late Hugo Stinnes. The development today indicated that Germany is in the midst of one of the most serious crisis she has faced since occupation of the Ruhr.

According to reliable information, the Stinnes liabilities total 155,000,000 gold marks ($31,000,000), of which 110,000,000 marks are due July 1.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the Reichsbank and by private banks to "sanitate" the Stinnes structure to prevent further partial breakdowns.

May Cause Catastrophic Ruin.

Further trouble in this huge chain of industries would rock the already shaky German industrial world.

Less than a week ago the Stinnes reorganization was made public. Three days later it was reported the situation at the Thyssen works was critical, threatening at least a partial shut-down.

The great Krupp works previously had announced the dismissal of 9,000 workers July 1 and wage cuts for those remaining on the payroll.

Even Socialists Howl.

BERLIN.—Socialist trade unions at Essen, one of Germany's chief industrial cities, today urged the central committee of the unions to enter a protest with the allies against the disarmament note, especially against the destruction of machinery which would, the unions declared, cause additional unemployment and misery.

NO MOBILIZATION FOR IMPERIALISM! JUNE 29 TO JULY 4 IS ANTI-IMPERIALIST WEEK! DEMONSTRATE! AGITATE!

PROCLAMATION OF THE ALL-AMERICAN ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE.

THE president of the United States has issued the call for a nation-wide mobilization of military forces on July 4.

This "defense test," as President Coolidge chooses to call it, follows close upon the heels of the big demonstration of the American fleet in Far Eastern waters. It is to be a festival of American militarism, dramatizing on a much more tremendous scale the chauvinistic style of "flag day," and the hosts of similar "days" which are being staged in the United States with increasing frequency.

Two days before President Coolidge's proclamation of a general mobilization for July 4, the American secretary of state made a public confession of faith in "the two fundamentals of American foreign policy: the Monroe doctrine in Latin-America and the "open door" policy in the Far East. If the secretary had mentioned a third "fundamental"—the Dawes plan in Europe —his analysis would have been complete.

This is the foreign policy which American mobilization is to guarantee. It is a policy of flagrant imperialism. With measured cynism, the date selected for mobilization is none other than the anniversary of American independence from Great Britain.

July 4, the historic independence day of the United States, has become a threat to the independence of every other nation in the western world.

The United States government talks in terms of "defense," but this has always been its method. Who in Latin America does not remember that the Monroe doctrine itself was "to defend Latin-American territory against European aggression?" But Europe does not threaten, and the Monroe doctrine serves to hinder any outside help against agression by the United States.

In the name of the Monroe doctrine, the United States has assumed control of customs houses, appointed "financial advisers," and by systematic application of the many subtle devices of imperialism has worked itself into a dominant position in the affairs of Latin-America.

Cuba has been bound hand and foot to the American sugar kings, tobacco lords and shipping trust magnates, under the guise of the so-called Platt amendment.

Colombia has been robbed and the "independent" Republic of Panama turned into a satrapy of American naval lieutenants.

Haiti and Santo Domingo have been gutted.

Mexico has been assaulted again and again.

All Central America has been reduced to abject slavery, for plunder by the United Fruit company and the National City Bank of New York.

These are only the more obvious outrages of American imperialism. Sometimes the American financial oligarchy has set one Latin-American nation against another, as in the case of Chile and Peru. Sometimes bribery and cajolery have been resorted to. Where it suits the interests of Wall Street, the f student demonstrators is obtained from the municipal council f Shanghai before Sunday, June 14, was voiced in a resolution dopted at a mass meeting of at least 50,00 students and strikng workers here this afternoon.

The meeting was orderly, but was marked by extreme antiritish speeches and the distribution of vast quantities of antimperialist literature. One of the circulars showing the deterination of the Chinese said in part: "We shall die if we do not ct immediately. We are willing to fight unto death, if must e, without yielding." Part of the strike handbills include Ameruca and American firms among foreign agencies to be struck nd boycotted.

Harbor Strike Hits British Shipping

TWENTY-TWO steamers—twenty of which are British and two Japanese—are now tied up here, stranded by the waterside strike. Many other ships are temporarily eliminating Shanghai as a port of call or anchoring at the mouth of the Yangtze River and lightering their cargoes to shore.

The strike, however, is not considered large enough to affect trans-pacific liners.

The China Merchants' Steamship company, Chinese owned, has suspended its sailings indefinitely. Some other steamship companies are instructing their vessels now at outside ports not to return to Shanghai at present. The China Merchants' Steam Navigation company operates thirty coastwise and river steamships.

Shipping Is Paralyzed

Virtually all river and coast-wise shipping is patalyzed here as a result of the spreading seamen's strike. In addition, messages from Honk Konk indicate that the Seamen's Union there is planning a sympathetic strike.

The general situation remains unchanged but the foreigners are worried over a report that Chang Hsueh Liang, son of Chang Tso-lin the Manchurian war lord, is arriving tonight from Nanking with 2,000 Fengtien troops.

Missionaries Testify for Students

J. W. Cline and S. R. Anderson, two American methodist missionaries, in spite of the reprimand sent them a few days ago by the American legation at Peking, who said their interest in getting justice for the murder of Chinese students was "inexpedient," yesterday took the witness stand in the mixed court trial and testified that they considered the firing by the police on the students on May 30 as unjustified. They accused Police Inspector Everson in charge of the brutal Sikh police troops of responsibility.

It is now proven that the Chinese were murdered by the British troops outside the area of the foreign settlement in the territory where the British armed forces or any other foreigners have not the slightest authority, even by the many treaties of violence forced upon China by the powers. The foreign troops have authority under such treaties only in the foreign concessions wrung from China by force.

In Shanghai these concessions have a population of approximately 180,000 Chinese, with about 20,000 foreigners, including British, Americans, French Italians, Japanese, Malays and Hindus. They are, however, governed by a Municipal council elected by the 20,000 foreigners, although taxes are levied without discrimination on the Chinese who own or occupy most of the property, as well as the foreigners.

Discrimination Charged

It is charged by the Chinese and admitted by many foreigners that the Chinese in Shanghai and others of the numerous foreign concesions in China are treated as a subject class and have no show of justice in the courts and that the conduct of the police and foreign citizens of the concessions toward them is one of contempt and brutality.

Demonstrated For a Free Press

The first of the series of massacres by foreign troops resulting from the cotton mill strike came on Saturday, May 30, when 3,000 Chinese students marched in a parade protesting against jail sentences imposed by the concession courts on editors of Chinese newspapers who had supported the demands of the cotton mill strikers for higher pay. The mills are under Japanese ownership.

The students had arrived in front of the gate of the Louza police substation in Chinese territory and not in the foreign settlement and it was asserted by the police officials that their conduct was "menacing." A volley by the Sikh police, who had no authority in this section of the city killed six instantly, wounded eight probably mortally and eight others "seriously."

Four More Killed

The students, in spite of the shooting, returned unarmed to take part in another demonstration Sunday and again Monday. On Monday afternoon they were again fired upon by the Sikh police and four were killed, bringing the deaths up to that time to sixteen. There were other shootings of Chinese strikers and sympathisers during the week.
